Mr. Johnston, in his reply, summed up his opponents argument by saying they argued the question from the standpoint of whether unions were beneficial to themselves. He declared that labor unions disregarded all rights of everybody else, and gave illustrations. He showed the decline in the ship building industry, caused by the labor unions, and that the most powerful company had moved its plant to Germany for existence. Growing enthusiastic, he stated that the negative had failed to deny a single statement of the affirmative, and "sirs, your silence in these answers has been eloquent." He said only twenty per cent. of American laborers are members of unions, while eighty per cent. are non union men.

Mr. Patterson in his rejoinder continued to show the advantage of labor unions in the output of finished products, class of labor, and insurance to capitalists. He said that labor unions worked hardships to non union men only. He said the unions favored arbitration and conciliation, and that they were growing in popular favor with the general public.

Each speaker was allowed twenty five minutes in which to make both speeches, and each consumed his full time.

A Timely Knock.

The University is full of college spirit. It ought to be, none of it gets out. Our hearts swell with pride at the great numbers that go out every afternoon to witness the practice games of base ball. It must be encouraging to the team to know that fifteen men feel an interest in its improvement. Perhaps notices should be put in conspicuous places to let the student body know that although we had a few secret foot ball practices last fall, base ball is not a sub-rosa institution. If the entire student body is working for one grand Phi. D., there is some excuse for the missing links, but is it? Last fall our foot ball team started in by losing as many games as possible, then came a mass meeting, then—

A man usually becomes what is expected of him, this generalization applies equally as well to a collection of men with some particular object in view. We may as well expect a North African savage to do figure skating on the Sahara Desert, as to expect our team to do its best with the backing it now gets from the students.

We have a good team, a team that should win the majority of games it plays. Everybody knows this, but we don't show it. The students have not lost confidence in the team, they feel that all will be right when the final test comes; but if that feeling would evidence itself in motion towards the athletic field at the practice games and vocalization during matches held here, more would be accomplished.

Lung exercise in the open air will not hurt anyone.

If your new white vest is too tight, let it out in the back and you will still look like a sport.

If the cheerers cannot see the game and lead yells at the same time, it would be well for them to get setbackscopes—five a copy.

A FAST GAME.

Cornell Wins from Carolina by the Narrow Margin of 3 to 2 in the 10th Inning.

Carolina and Cornell played one of the fastest games of the season in Raleigh on last Friday afternoon. The teams were about evenly matched and the result of the game was doubtful until the last man had been retired in the tenth inning.

That the game was lost is no fault of Oldham, G., who twirled the sphere for Carolina, or in fact of the whole Carolina team. The team played together as one man and would have won the game if it had been played on a decent diamond. Cornell scored a home run in the fourth inning, sending in two runs upon what was hardly a decent single. The ball, hit to right field, was lost in a deep gulley and before it could be found two men had walked around. Cornell scored one more run in the tenth inning, thus winning the game. Carolina's scores were made in the eighth inning.

The features of the game were the pitching of Oldham and a spectacular catch of a high fly behind third base by Worth.

The game in detail was as follows: Carolina goes to bat first. Hart is safe on a wild throw from third to first, but is caught a moment later stealing second base; Cheshire safe on error of second baseman; Oldham W. flies out to center field; Donnelly out on fly to left field. Cornell; Brewster fans, Costello goes out via Oldham G. and Mowen; Rice beats the air three times in a vain effort to locate the sphere.

Second inning: Worth walks, Hobgood and Mowen both fly out to center field; Noble is safe on center fielder's error, but Worth is put out at home by catcher in an attempt to come in. Cornell; Wiley is safe on a fumble by short stop, Martello fans, Umstead hits to Cheshire and on a lightning double Wiley and Martello are retired via Hart and Mowen.

Oldham G. is presented with a free pass, but is out a moment later on an attempt to steal second; Hart also walks, but suffers the same fate as Oldham; Cheshire pops up a high fly to second base. Cornell; Bramen fans; Welch gets hit over first base; Welch dies on base, as Longey fans and Brewster goes out on a long fly to left field.

Fourth inning: Donnelly goes out second to first; Worth suffers the same fate; Hobgood fans. Cornell; Costello safe on Mowen's fumble; Rice hits to Hart and on fielder's choice is safe at first Costello being put out via Hart to Cheshire; Rice steals second; Wiley pops up a little fly which Mowen takes care of; Martello hits safe to right field, ball is lost in the bushes and clay of the —for Carolina—(Un)—Fair grounds and he gets a home run, sending Rice across the pan ahead of him. Umstead, next up, goes out short to first.

Fifth inning: Mowen places one in center fielder's hands and thus dies; Noble pops up a little bingle which the catcher easily takes care of; Oldham, G. out on a sky ball to third base. Cornell; Bramen strikes out; Welch out second to first; Longey goes down from short to first.

Sixth inning: Hart safe, error second base; Cheshire flies out to centerfield; Oldham, W. hits to shortstop and on fielder's choice Hart is out at second base; Donnelly out to third. Cornell; Brewster goes out pitcher to first; Costello flies out to Donnelly; Rice out, Hobgood to Mowen.

Seventh inning: Worth is retired from second to first; Hobgood is safe on third baseman's error; Mowen flies out to right field. Noble hits a sizzler to short who fields it cleanly and throws "Hobbie" out at second. Cornell; Wiley is out on a line drive to Hart. Marletto gets a three bagger in deep right center. Umstead drives a hot one at Hart who fields it prettily and by good head work holds Mantello close on third before he throws Umstead out at first; Brumen drives a terrific bouncer at Hart who handles it clearly and shoots it to first thus destroying Cornell's chance to score in this inning. This inning was marked by magnificent playing on Hart's part.

Eighth inning: Oldham, G., is safe on second baseman's error. Hart lines out to third base. Oldham takes second base on a wild throw from third to first in attempting to make a double. Cheshire hits safely, advancing Oldham on third baseman's error, who throws wild to first. First makes a beautiful stop of ball preventing one or two scores. Donnelly nails a pretty single to right center sending Oldham, G. across the pan. Worth makes a nice sacrifice to first base, scoring Cheshire. Hobgood ends the inning by striking out. Cornell; Welch and flies out to Hart. Longey walks. Brewster hits to right field and on fielder's choice Longey is out at second base. Costello flies out to Worth.

Ninth inning: Mowen walks. Noble is safe on the pitcher's error and takes second. Oldham, G. beats the ozone three times and Hart ends the spasm by flying out to first base. Cornell; Rice gets first on a fumble by short stop; Wiley is out at first on fielder's choice, Rice going to second. Martello hits a fly behind third and Worth makes a spectacular catch, doubling Rice at second.

Tenth inning: Cheshire is retired from second to first. Oldham, W. is out at first. Donnelly is hit by pitched ball. Worth flies out to second. Cornell; Umstead gets first on Worth's error. Bremen bunts safely, advancing Umstead to second. Oldham, G., throws to second base to catch Umstead but throw is wild and Umstead crosses the home plate with the winning run. Score: Cornell 3; Carolina 2.

The batting order of the two teams was as follows: Carolina: Hart, ss; Cheshire, 2b; Oldham, W., cf; Donnelly, lf, Worth, 3b; Hobgood, rf; Mowen, 1b; Noble, c; Oldham, G., p. Cornell: Brewster, lf; Costello, cf; Rice, 2b; Wiley, ss; Martello, 3b; Umstead, rf; Bremen, 1b; Welch, c; Longey, p.

A. and M. 9; U. N. C. 2.

The taste of the snappy game against Cornell was taken out next day when A. and M. won over Carolina for the first time in its history. The Varsity was not up to the form of the day before and lacked ginger. Hart pitched good ball considering that it was his first game this season. A. and M. succeeded in getting several singles off him in the 7th inning and these with Carolina's errors, netted them 6 runs and the game was lost. A. and M. has tried long and faithfully to win from "the University" and we should not grudge them this victory. For Carolina Donnelly played his usual cool, steady game. Cheshire's work at second was neat and Engle got half the hits. A. and M.'s men exerted themselves to the utmost and deservedly won the game. It is scarcely to be hoped that they will come up to the Hill for the second game, since their two best men leave this week to join the Jacksonville professional team; but if they do, we prophesy a different score. The following detailed account is taken from the News and Observer:

The University took the field and Miller is up first for A. and M. He reaches first on a slow hit to third. Asbury followed with a pretty sacrifice. Howle, on bunt and wild throw to first was safe at first and went to second, while Miller scored. Hadley and Springs fanned.

Hart was retired via third to first. Cheshire goes by the same route, and Oldham fanned.

Second inning: Knox got a pretty hit over second base. Brockwell sacrificed McLaurin fanned, and Harris flew out to left field.

Donnelly reached first on a fumble of short stop. Worth is safe on first, while Donnelly was cut off at second. Engle singled and scored Worth. Mowen was hit by pitcher, and Harris and Noble were unable to reach first.

In the third inning Miller was safe at first by error of catcher. Asbury flew out to left field. Howle placed a pretty single through short stop, and stole second before Hadley fanned.

In Carolina's half, Hart was retired, pitcher to first, and Cheshire in the same manner. Oldham is safe at first on error of second baseman. Donnelly hits for two bags and scored Oldham. Worth is out on fly to left field.

The fourth inning began with Springs going out on foul fly to catcher. Knox was unable to find the ball. Brockwell reached first on error of short stop. McLaurin singled to left field. Harris is retired from third to first.

Engle and Mowen fanned. Harris was safe on error, but Noble fanned the wind.

The fifth opened up with Miller, who singled, and on a wild throw went to second. Asbury sacrificed, and so did Howle, scoring Miller. Hadley singled to left field, but Springs was retired on a hit to first who cut him off.

Hart went out via pitcher to first. Cheshire was safe on a fumbled fly by Asbury. Oldham is out on a fly to Knox. Donnelly retired Cheshire on a hit to second base.

In the sixth inning, Knox went out from second to first. Brockwell was safe on error of pitcher. McLaurin hit and reached first safely, though Brockwell was cut off at second. Harris was thrown out from second to first.

Worth walked. Engle reached first on error of first baseman. Mowen was put out by Springs and McLaurin. Harris reached first safely, but Worth was caught at the home plate. Noble fanned.

The seventh inning began with Miller leading off and being retired on a fly to Donnelly. Asbury was given a free pass. Howle got safe to first. Hadley singled and scored Asbury. Springs reached first safely on error. Knox hit to left field and scored Howle and Hadley. Brockwell singled to center, scoring Springs and Knox. McLaurin flew out to third. Harris was given a free pass. Miller singled and scored Brockwell. Asbury fanned.

Hart singled to right. Cheshire was thrown out from short stop to first. Oldham and Donnelly were both retired on fly to center field.

In the eighth inning, Howle singled and Hadley, also, while Springs and Knox were retired on flies. Brockwell singled to right field and scored Howle. McLaurin was retired from second to first.

Worth went out from pitcher to first. Engle singled to left field while Mowen and Harris were retired without reaching first.

The ninth inning was a blank for both. Harris for A. and M. flew out to short stop. Miller singled to right field. Asbury was out on fly to pitcher. Howle was out on a slow fly to pitcher.

Noble went out via pitcher to first, while Hart and Cheshire hit flies to Knox.—News and Observer.

The news of Dr. Baskerville's latest triumph is received with gratification by the entire University. Never before has it been given an American to discover a chemical element and now a Southerner and a University man comes along and adds two to the list at one pop. Dr. Baskerville deserves all the more credit for his work when the fact is taken into consideration that he has had to labor with crude apparatus and an ill-equipped laboratory, the Legislature not seeing fit to give us a new, up-to-date building. The University is proud of Dr. Baskerville and the able assistants who have aided him in his labors

We trust our ball team will not listen to the voice of the croaker just now, notwithstanding our numerous defeats. There are some men in college who seem to take a positive pleasure in a defeat for Carolina, but they are in the minority and their voices are not to be heeded. The spirit of things around college now is at very low ebb and affairs are getting critical. The base ball team plays with no life in its practice games, the student body does not get behind it, the track team is about to disband, and the Hill is getting to be a dull place generally. Let's get together and make this a snappy game this afternoon. The Virginia contest comes very shortly now and the chief cheerer and assistants ought to have some practice.

Dr. Smith's Paper.

The March number of The School Review, edited by the School of Education of the University of Chicago, contains the most interesting and sensible article, "Memory Work in Literature", read by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith at the annual meeting of the Association of Colleges and Preparatory Schools of the Southern States, Trinity College, Durham. Dr. Smith makes an able plea for more memorizing of verse and prose in the study of literature. The points he makes are three in number.

1. The first advantage to be conferred by memorizing prose or verse is in the broadening and enriching of the students' vocabulary.

2. Memorized passages act as a safeguard against bad grammar and as a preparation for appreciating the rules and distinctions of grammar.

3. Memorized passages are of the greatest value in the study of rhetoric and the higher forms of constructive English.

The paper merits the attention of all our schools and colleges.

North Carolina Wins.

Over the wires from Chapel Hill comes the message that North Carolina won the intercollegiate debate of last Friday evening, and while this message means that Georgia has lost, still the student body of this University feels she could not have lost to a more worthy opponent.

Georgia's representatives who have gone to North Carolina to wage the battles of the "Red and Black" have always returned, whether in victory or defeat, to speak in words of highest praise of their treatment at the hands of Carolina. Carolina's reception of our representatives has always been such as to convince them that the greatest aim of intercollegiate contests is not the winning of victories but the promotion of a spirit of brotherhood.

One of North Carolina's representatives, speaking from our chapel stage, said that while North Carolina rejoiced in her victories over Georgia, she was always sorry Georgia had to lose and that when North Carolina lost to Georgia, while regretting her defeat, she always rejoiced at Georgia's victory.

While Georgia regrets this her defeat at the hands of North Carolina, still she knows of no more generous opponents to whom she might have lost, and if Georgia must lose she is glad it is North Carolina who has won.—Red and Black.

Virginia 6; Lafayette 0.

Under threatening skies and in a drizzling rain, Virginia defeated Lafayette by the above score. Under the circumstances it was particularly good to see the team rub it in to Lafayette, and rub it in hard for has not Lafayette beaten Carolina two successive games. Hard experience has taught us the fallacious reasoning of comparative scores, but we will none the less pin our faith to Cracraft and Pollard, and trust to the rest of the team to put it to the Tar Heels.—College Topics.

LOCAL NOTES.

Dr. Alexander is spending today in Raleigh.

Mr. L. R. Wilson went to Raleigh Friday, on business connected with the Library.

Messrs. Latta and Gilmer went to Raleigh Friday afternoon.

Messrs. E. P. Holt and Bob Lassiter were on the Hill several days this week.

The Faculty base ball team will play that of the Law Class at 3 o'clock next Saturday afternoon. Ladies free.

Dr. Venable went to Raleigh Tuesday evening to be present at the examination of the applicants for the Rhodes scholarship. The applicants from the University are Messrs. J. H. Winston, I. C. Wright and A. R. Berkeley, a graduate of the University.

R. O. Wins Salisbury.

Prof. Reuben Oscar Eyrett, a brother of Principal S. J. Everett, of the Salisbury Graded School, was here Saturday and Sunday on a visit. Mr. R. O. Eyrett is a teacher in the Durham school. He is every inch the brilliant young man he showed himself to be when he walked off with the honors of debate with Johns Hopkins University. He won Salisbury in his recent stay here.—Salisbury Globe.

Concerning the Track Team

Some years ago Mr. Lake saw fit to present the University with a cinder track. This track is now a sea of trouble. Enough men will not come out. There are over six hundred men in this institution, some which when hard pressed can doubtless make good time over a dirt road. There are also men here that could not make a hundred yards in a hundred years. But if both classes came out there would be something doing, something done. Track work is not a bore. Some men may be violently opposed to taking a bath every afternoon, but it is not so bad after a week or so. The track is not a form contest. If both your foot handles would not fill a pair of fashionably cut trousers, don't feel bad about it, but come out and try to develop them. You won't have to wear goggles to keep the cinders out of your eyes if you don't get too far behind; still if you do you can look indifferent and say the pace bores you; you are afraid of running over some one.

If you want to feel like a king and several members of Parliament, come out every afternoon and drop cigarettes. The track is better than a spring tonic—makes you feel springy all over. Occasionally you will have to wear lead in your pockets to keep on the earth, but if you forget it, you can grasp a telephone wire and call for the fire department.

If you cannot afford to buy a pair of track shoes, drive some spikes in an old pair, or wear tennis slippers.

Will twelve kind men please come out during the week so we can keep one meet? The one coming out first may get a free ticket to the Honolulu Automobile Show in 1912.

"A university is a great social engine whose purpose is to conserve to augment and to scatter abroad knowledge to the end that both the quality and power of life may be increased; it has for its 'raison d'etre' the functions of preparing men and women for directive leadership in society, of engineering the public will and conscience, of making the application of trained power to life, and of exalting righteousness, virtue and truth."—Dr. Alderman in last Founders' Day Speech.

The Green Room of Journalism.

The lecture on Thursday night by Mr. Frank W. Mack, Superintendent of the Associated Press, was one of especial interest. It dealt with the inner side of newspaper work, the devices and stratagems to which the correspondent must resort to obtain news before the other fellow. This was a subject which, though known to few, is of interest to all. The speaker's humor in telling his experiences added a pleasant flavor to his talk.

"You often see," said Mr. Mack, "a short article in a paper and pass it by after a mere glance. But if you knew the way that article came there you would be more than interested. The experience of the news getter is much more dramatic than the piece of news he gives you. When the American troops were charging up San Juan hill, there was a squad of correspondents behind them, exposing themselves to the fire of the enemy, running here and there to a wounded or dying soldier, getting from him his name, that their papers might be the first to tell the loss. The papers told a dramatic story of that charge, but said nothing of the heroic work of these reckless newspaper men. That was something behind the printed page, in the Green Room of Journalism."

The speaker, continuing, told some of his own experiences in newspaper work. He told of the various devices and plans for getting the news of General Grant's death from his home, and sending it down to Printing House Square before the other papers learned of it. His description of the way in which he got news of the actions of the Spanish-American Peace Commission, sitting in Paris in 1898, was especially interesting and amusing. The members of the Commission were sworn to secrecy and would tell nothing directly. It was only by a combination of bluff, caution and device that news was obtained from them. The speaker closed by telling of how, as a newspaper man, he had helped to start the ex-convict Michael Dunn on his work of saving other ex-convicts from new crime. This man took these men he had known in prison and gave them a home and work, and in this way instituted a work that has meant much for several of the large cities of the United States.

THREE STRAIGHT VICTORIES.

Carolina Wakes up and Shakes off Her Hoodoo, Winning Two Games From St. Albans and Defeating Randolph-Macon With Ease.

Carolina played ball last week and played good ball as the scores of the several games plainly tell. The hoodoo that has so persistently hung over our team was broken and they took three successive games, each game being characterized by the pretty fielding and the hard and continuous hitting of the locals.

The first game was played with St. Albans last Thursday afternoon. This game was interesting from start to finish, and all the more so because with it Carolina broke the losing streak that had followed her so continuously, winning the game by the decisive score of twelve to six. Sitton, St. Albans' pitcher, demonstrated himself a slab artist of the very highest order, but Carolina got together and the result of the game was never in doubt after the second inning. Carolina scored two runs in the first inning, six in the second, one in the sixth, two in the eighth and one in the ninth inning. St. Albans scored two in the first, two in the eighth, and one in the ninth. Among the features of the game were sensational one-hand catches by Worth and Donnelly for Carolina, and the batting of Holt and Sitton for St. Albans. Earl Holt, our last year's crack first baseman, held down the receiving end for the Virginians, and it is needless to say that "Slats" acquitted himself in masterly style. Batteries—Carolina: Oldham, G., and Noble; St. Albans: Sitton and Holt.

Summary: bases stolen, by Carolina 4; by St. Albans 2; two base hits, Carolina 3; by St. Albans 3; home runs, by Carolina 0; by St. Albans 2; bases on balls, by Oldham 1; by Sitton 2; struck out by Oldham 5; by Sitton 6; umpire, Cox.

The second game with this team was played on Friday afternoon, and our boys swamped the visitors by the overwhelming score of twenty to seven. This was the easiest thing we have struck yet. And it causes batting averages to go up higher than prices on cotton. Every fellow had his batting clothes on and the exercise given by them to the entire St. Albans team in chasing the balls from one corner of the lot to the other was of a most beneficial nature.

The game was slow from beginning to end, the visitors being clearly outclassed. Carolina scored one in the first inning, one in the second, three in the fourth, four in the fifth, six in the sixth, three in the seventh, and two in the ninth. St. Albans scored three in the second inning, one in the third and three in the ninth, Hobgood forcing in these last on account of a wet ball. "Hobbie" pitched a very good game except for a little lack of control at certain stages. Fourteen strikeouts, twenty-one hits, twenty runs and four errors were made by Carolina, while St. Albans made four strike-outs, five hits, seven runs and seven errors. Batteries—Carolina, Hobgood and Noble; St. Albans: Hall and Holt.

Randolph-Macon was served from the same dish as her luckless predecessor, St. Albans. Our boys went after them in the early stages of the game, and in the first two innings piled up a total of nine runs. Just at this point the visitors changed pitchers, Trevellian, a south-paw, being sent in to relieve Blackney, and after the change the game had quite a good deal of snap and vigor about it. Trevellian pitched a very good game indeed, allowing only four scores and six hits in the seven innings in which he officiated.

The locals scored five runs in the first inning, four in the second, two in the third, one in the fifth, and one in the seventh. Randolph-Macon scored one run in the third inning, one in the sixth and one in the eighth. Summarized briefly, Carolina made twelve hits, seven errors, three bases on balls, and six strike outs. Among the features of the game were: a spectacular one hand catch by Worth, for Carolina, the playing of Lipscomb at short and the home run of Mills for the visitors.

Batteries—Carolina: Harris and Noble; Randolph-Macon: Blakeney, Trevellian and Cross.

Summer Ball Playing.

The following rule was adopted by the Faculty on Monday afternoon:

"A student who has played on a summer base ball team prior to 1904 and has received no compensation whatever except transportation, board and lodging is eligible. But no student who, during 1904, or thereafter, has played on a baseball team which is a member of a baseball league shall be eligible; and no student who has played on any team (except that representing the town where he has been a resident for at least one year and is still a resident) shall be eligible if he has received any compensation whatever—even board and transportation. If he plays on his home team (as above defined) he may receive his necessary expenses for board, lodging and transportation, provided said team is not a member of any league."

This rule, it will be seen, does not prevent men now matriculated who have played "summer" ball from playing with our team next year. Its purpose is to keep our teams clear of the taint of professionalism that playing on "summer" teams necessarily gives. The rule is in essentials the rule that governs in the Virginia association, and in the Southern Association. In details it is not altogether as strict as the rules governing in Eastern collegiate athletics. As the rule stands, however, it is believed that without working any hardships to any individual it will prove helpful in keeping unquestionably pure the athletics of the college.

Conflagration.

The peaceful quiet of our little village was rudely broken into yesterday afternoon by loud cries of "Fire!" and the sound of bombs bursting in air. The streets were soon filled with an eager throng hurrying to the scene of the conflagration. The city fire department was seen playing streams of water upon the Klutz block and out of Doc's shoe store issued forth clouds of smoke while in the rear the fire works stored there were raising merry Cain. Skyrockets whizzed and gleamed while an occasional cannon-cracker went off with a sullen roar. The strident commands of Doc Klutz, mingled with the sharp, staccato shrieks of Willie B. Sorrel, were heard far above the tumult. However, the blaze was soon extinguished and no great damage was done except by water, which was spread on in copious streams. Many theories were advanced as to the origin of the fire; one being that it arose from spontaneous combustion among Doc Klutz's straw hats, which are of the vintage of 1609. Another theory, which had able supporters, was that Willie B. was rubbing his head, and a spark emitted therefrom ignited Doc Klutz's store of fireworks, which broke loose with a rattling crash and much rough house.

Those most prominent in extinguishing the conflagration were Messrs John Archibald Parker, '06, and Marshall Renfro Glenn, '03. Mr. Parker in particular bore himself nobly throughout the excitement and deserves great credit for his heroic efforts. Mr. Glenn said with some show of feeling that "if they had let me and Hester have our way we would have put the fire out at first." Mr. Glenn has the sympathy of the entire community—someone is always butting in and interfering with cooler heads.

The Track Meet.

Last Friday the Advisory Committee had a meeting where, upon the advice of Coach Brown, they reconsidered their action of the Monday before, and decided to send a relay team, a hundred yard dash man and a hurdle man to the Intercollegiate meet to be held in Philadelphia on next Saturday. The University will probably enter first class in the 100 yard dash and hurdle, and about fifth class in the relay races, running against Pennsylvania State College, Johns Hopkins, Carlisle Indians and several other colleges of the northeast. The relay race in this class was won last year in about 3:44. The University team is now doing the stunt in 3:40. On a good track this ought to be lowered to 3:35, making a first or second place assured.

All communications for this paper should be in the hands of the Editor-in-Chief by Monday at noon to insure publication the same week. We shall be glad to publish pertinent discussions of college topics. The Tar Heel will welcome news items, and hopes the whole college will aid it along this line.

When the TAR HEEL appears again it will be to chronicle two of the series of games between Carolina and our old-time enemy and rival, Virginia. Shall the headlines be, "Hard Luck" or "Carolina Forever." It is not for us to say here. We can only attend the games and await the results with anxious hearts; the rest we leave to the members of the team, confident that whatever else may be told concerning them, it cannot be said that they did not try. Virginia comes down this time with more confidence than they have had in some years past. The teams we have lost to, they have defeated. According to comparative scores, victory looks certain for them. But how bitterly have the Virginians learned the fact that comparative scores go for naught when they go up against the White and Blue.

About the rooting we have nothing to say; this is one game when there is always plenty of it. About "college spirit" likewise we have nothing to say. We have tried to use the term as little as possible in these columns, though sometimes it did creep in when there was nothing else to talk about. We are sick of the expression. College spirit cannot be created by a lot of guff and hot air; it is a thing that grows. It cannot be measured by noise, though sometimes it can be measured by the pocket-book. One of our professors said the other day that you could talk about your "Yale spirit" and your "college spirit," but the old, reliable Tar Heel had as much spirit as anybody when he was once waked up. We hope and pray then that the old Tar Heel spirit may be fully aroused during the coming contests. We must have these games.

The Charlotte Observer in its Monday issue talks entertainingly of three members of our faculty and we reprint the clippings here. We have been criticized for putting so many newspaper clippings in our columns; but as long as we think they will be of interest to our readers we propose to keep it up. The identity of "Erskine Steele" is becoming known, but as long as he desires to keep his real name a secret, it is not for us to give him away; however, we will say that he is a University man and a member of our faculty.

"Dr. Walter H. Page will have to modify his lecture on the forgotten man. He said that no college in North Carolina had produced a man in a hundred years eminent in his profession. Dr. Baskerville is a bright and shining light in the world of science. The University—the State—is, and has cause to be, proud of him. Although a young man, his name is written high in the ranks of successful men."

"Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, of the University, will deliver the address at the commencement of the Charlotte graded schools on May 19th. Prof. Alexander Graham had a letter from Dr. Smith yesterday saying that he would accept the invitation to come.

"Dr. Smith is one of the best equipped men in the South. He is an accomplished English scholar, forceful writer and an every day good fellow. Prof. Graham could not have secured a better man for the chief address, and the Charlotte people may expect something out of the ordinary from Dr. Smith. He has charge of the English department at the University."

"Dr. Kingsbury, without knowing who he is, gave warm, just approbation, yesterday, to "Erskine Steele," whose work adorns, regularly, the pages of the Sunday Observer and expressed interest as to his identity. It is a matter of regret that the writer in question prefers to conceal himself under a pseudonym—though this is in part a family name; but it is allowable for the paper to say that he is a young man, a North Carolinian, as his forbears have been; that they have borne honorable part in the history of the State from all time, and that if we should disclose the name Dr. Kingsbury nor any one else would be in the least surprised at the manifestation of his intellectual gifts, his scholarly accomplishments or his fine literary taste."

The Ideal College Professor.

The other day President Harper delivered a lecture in which he gave his idea of what a college president should be. His specifications were these:

1. He should be married.
2. He should be a church member.
3. He should mix with his students outside the class rooms.
4. He should have a doctor's degree.
5. He should be willing to work hard 11 months in the year.
6. He should be in sympathy with the public, and take an active interest in public affairs.—Ex.

LOCAL NOTES.

Mr. A. R. Berkeley spent several days here last week with his brother, Mr. Green Berkeley.

Mr. R. M. Harper went to Guilford College Saturday, returning Monday.

Mr. Otho Ross, who has been away from the University for a week, returned Tuesday night. He attended the marriage of his brother at Winston while away.

Prof Rankin is confined to his room with the mumps.

In the declamation contest in the Di society Friday night Mr. P. E. Seagle won the ten-dollar prize.

On account of the contest in the Di society Friday night, there was no meeting of that society on Saturday night.

The query discussed in the Phi society was: "Resolved, That the people should instruct their representatives." The negative side won and Mr. Dameron was reported best debater.

Mr. H. Rountree of New York is visiting his brothers, Messrs. J. R. and L. G. Rountree this week.

Mr. Eben Alexander, Jr., class of 1901, who was for two years a student in the medical department, has won an appointment on the house staff of Mount Sinai Hospital, New York. There were sixty-nine candidates, and Mr. Alexander's appointment reflects great credit upon him. He will graduate from Jefferson Medical College in May.

The TAR HEEL is behind one day this week on account of delay in getting some matter that had to be printed.

Messrs. J. H. Winston, '04, I. C. Wright, '04, and A. R. Berkeley, '00, stood the Cecil Rhodes scholarship examination at Raleigh last week.

The TAR HEEL announces that Mr. R. R. Brown, Dartmouth, will coach the North Carolina Varsity football team next fall. For the past two seasons Mr. Brown has acted as one of our coaches, and has won for himself a host of friends and admirers who will regret to see him leave the V. P. I. The 'Tech feels sure that Mr. Brown's many friends will join with us in wishing him great success in his new field. — V. P. I. 'Tech.

Just so the boys get together and beat the Tarheels, the memory of the unpleasantness inflicted on them and on us at Easter will be forgiven and forgotten.—College Topics.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY MEDICAL COLLEGE

NEW YORK CITY.

The course covering four years begins during the first week in October and continues until June.

A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage.

All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction.

Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations.

The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised.

The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

Historical Society.

The Historical Society met in the History room Monday evening at seven thirty. The meeting was well attended by the members of the Society and students of the University. Talks were made by Drs. Battle and Raper and Mr. Sawyer. Dr. Battle spoke of "Slavery in North Carolina Just Prior to and During the Civil War." He spoke of the kind treatment of the slaves who did not try to rise against the women and children. He spoke of legislation in North Carolina concerning slaves before the war, and the friendly relations between the whites and the negroes. Dr. Raper spoke on "The Influence of Quakers on Slavery in Middle North Carolina." He discussed briefly the anti-slavery movement in North Carolina, particularly among the Quakers of Guilford county. Dr. Raper's address was exceedingly interesting and instructive.

Mr. E. L. Sawyer made the third and last address and gave some biographical sketches of some of the North Carolina members of the Confederate Congress. Mr. Sawyer's address was very entertaining. This was the last meeting of the Historical Society for this term.

Questions and Replies.

(On Ethics).—Prof. Williams—What do you think about it, Mr. Newton?

Newton (waking up)—Ah—er—no, sir [wrathfully]. Now, professor, these fellows that are laughing so big think I was asleep, but I was listening to every word you said.

Johnston, A. H.—Dr. Alexander, how is it that you blow those rings so nice. I don't see how you do it.

Dr. Alexander—Well, you do it with your cheek—and you have plenty of that, you know, Mr. Johnston.

Bohannon—Dr. Zerban, do you Germans drink beer before or after meals?

Dr. Zerban—Beer? Beer? Oh—ach—vy, all der time; yah, all der time.

Spring Tennis Tournament.

The Spring tennis tournament will begin next Monday. Those who are not members of the Association will be allowed to play by paying fifty cents to Mr. Wilson at the Library. Hand your names to him before Saturday at dinner, as the schedule will be made out then. As usual Spalding's best racket will be given to the winner. A match will consist of two out of three sets and balls will be furnished free of charge. The admission fee to the association is $2.00 and this gives you entrance to the Tournament. The contract for three good courts is in the hands of Long Bill Jones and nobody but members can play on these courts.

Mr. Weatherford Coming.

Mr. W. D. Weatherford, of New York City, will address the University students next Tuesday evening at 7:15. His subject will be "The Universal College Sin." Mr. Weatherford is pleasantly remembered here, having spoken before the student body last Fall.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

CAROLINA VERSUS VIRGINIA.

Carolina Meets Her Old Foe on Two Different Fields on Friday and Saturday and Loses Each Time.

For the first five innings it looked as if we were to treat Virginia to the same dose we did last year. Our boys were playing fine ball and seemed to be determined to down Virginia. What a difference the sixth inning made in our bright prospects. The whole team went to pieces completely and the Virginians simply romped around the bases. When the dust cleared away finally the eyes of all were dazed by the sight of seven runs chalked up to the credit of the visitors. After such a balloon ascension as that it was clearly impossible for our boys to win the game, although they made a magnificent rally in the ninth inning, scoring three runs and making the final score ten to seven in favor of the orange and black.

Hobgood for Carolina pitched a beautiful game and with proper support would have won his game easily. Virginia was unable to hit him, securing only five hits during the entire game.

A large crowd of visitors were on the Hill to witness the game, among them being a good many old University students. The game in detail was as follows:

First inning: Virginia takes the field. Hart, the first man up for Carolina, is given a free ticket to first base. Cheshire nails a hot one to second baseman and is safe on fielder's choice, Hart being put out at second base. Oldham drives a three bagger to deep right field, scoring Cheshire. Donnelly hits to second baseman who makes error, Oldham scoring on this play, and Donnelly rests safe on first bag. Donnelly dies a moment later, however, on a vain attempt to purloin second base. Worth walks to first but dies there, as Mowen is out second to first.

Pollard places a line drive against left field fence for two bags and a moment later steals third. Stearnes balloons out to short stop. Mason drives out a single, scoring Pollard. Daniels bangs out a long fly which Oldham takes care of. Daniels goes out, trying to steal second via Noble to Cheshire. Score: Carolina 2; Virginia 1.

Second inning: Stem walks. Noble places a nice sacrifice hit down the first base line and is out, advancing "Freddie" to the second station. Hobgood drives a hot one through third base for two bags, scoring Stem. Hart goes out from third to first, advancing Hobgood to third. Cheshire ends the inning by going out via second to first.

Stucky fans the air three times in a vain attempt to locate the sphere. Cracraft is given base on balls, and a moment later is caught napping by Hobgood, but he reaches second safely on error of Cheshire. Crawford strikes out. Chadwick flies out to center field.

Third inning: Oldham is out via second to first. Donnelly fans and Worth does likewise.

Munger is given a free pass to the first corner. Pollard sacrifices out pitcher to first, Munger going to second. Stearnes perishes on good play of Hart to Mowen. Mason going down from second to first.

Fourth inning: Mowen is out, third to first. Stem pops a high fly in the second baseman's hands, and Noble places a high fly in the centerfielder's glove.

Daniels is out on a beautiful play from Hart to Mowen. Stucky pops out to second base. Cracraft gives Stem a high one in right field, and it is needless to state that "Freddie" takes care of it. Score: Carolina 3; Virginia 1.

Fifth inning: Hobgood is out short to first. Hart perishes via the same route. Cheshire lines out to center field.

Crawford gets first on four wild ones. Chadwick goes out third to first, Crawford going to second on the play, and a moment later to the third station on a wild pitch. Munger has the same luck that Crawford had. Pollard fans the ozone three times and then goes way back. Stearnes is safe at first on pitcher's error, and in the confusion resulting from the play, Crawford and Munger cross the rubber. Stearnes retires the side by trying to steal second, Noble making a nice throw and catching his man by a good margin.

Sixth inning: Oldham expires by way of pitcher to first. Donnelly ambles to first on four wild ones. Worth is safe at first on short stop's error, Donnelly taking second on the play. Mowen is safe on first on fielder's choice. Worth is out from short to first. Donnelly crosses the pan on the play. Stem makes three mighty swipes in a vain effort to locate the elusive missile.

Carolina goes to pieces in this inning and Virginia clinches the game in this wise: Mason's tender sensibilities are jarred by being hit by a pitched ball. Daniels is out from pitcher to first, Mason going to second corner on the play. Stucky is safe on Hart's error on a difficult chance, and goes to second. Cracraft taps one to Mowen who throws home to catch runners, and two men ramble into port on catcher's error. Crawford lines over screamer for one bag, and goes to second a moment later. Chadwick drives one at Cheshire, who makes a costly error, two more men scoring on the play. Chadwick goes to second on a passed ball. Munger is presented with a complimentary ticket to the initial sack. Pollard slams a single to left center and one scores. Stearnes bingles one to catcher. Mason nests one on the proboscis for a single scoring a man. Noble lets one of "Hobbie's" cannon balls pass him allowing another runner to ramble across the cornerstone. Daniels ends the agony by smashing a screamer at Oldham who eats it up.

Seventh inning: Noble is out from pitcher to first. Hobgood drives a hot spot at shortstop who fields it prettily and lines to first, putting runner out. Hart ascensions out to right field.

Stuckey slaps a vicious one at Cheshire, who makes a beautiful stop and tosses the ball to his friend Mowen, retiring runner. Cracraft suffers the same fate as his predecessor. Crawford smashes out a terrific liner to right field which Stem takes care of after a hard run. This was a sensational catch.

Chadwick's hopes of reaching first were blasted by Stem, who as usual freezes on to the spheroid. Munger is ambled to first by the free pass method, but "Hobbie" catches him napping a moment later and rudely disturbs any dreams he may have had of reaching second. Pollard retires the side by tapping a grass cutter in the direction of of third, who nabs it and hands it to first in time to catch the runner.

Ninth inning: Carolina made a last desperate rally in this inning, but the odds against her were too great. Mowen slams out a pretty single, and a moment later perches on the second roost on a nice hit by Stem. Noble keeps up the good work by slamming one at second, who fumbles, allowing Mowen to score, while Noble sings the first line of Chicago University's song, "Praise John from whom oil blessings flow." from his safe retreat on base. "Hobbie" straightens out a bender for a clean single, scoring Stem. Noble is caught taking a siesta between the bases and is sent sadly back to the bench, wondering how it all happened, Hart sky balls out to second. Cheshire drives out a two-bagger, scoring Hobgood, but in a frantic endeavor to make it a three bagger is subtly slain at the third post. This ends the game, the final score being ten to seven in favor of Virginia.

The teams lined up as follows: Carolina: Hart, ss; Cheshire, 2b; Oldham, cf; Donnelly, 1f; Worth, 3b; Mowen, 1b; Stem, rf; Noble, c; Hobgood, p.

Virginia: Pollard, cf; Stearnes, 2b; Mason, 3b; Daniels, 1b; Stuckey, ss; Cracraft, p; Crawford, 1f; Chadwick, c; Munger, rf. Umpire, "Bill D." Legrand.

SECOND GAME.

The second game with Virginia which came off at Greensboro, was one that discouraged the hearts of the stoutest Carolina supporter. The game was lost in the first inning. Oldham had not settled down and a few hits coupled with bad throws and worse muffs netted the enemy six runs. It looked so entirely unnecessary to throw away the game in the first inning that a kind of damper was thrown on team and rooters. After this, however, the locals settled down and each team scored only two runs apiece, the fielding of Donnelly, Oldham, W., and Stem cutting off many a long drive. Pollard's left-handed curves were too many for the Tar Heels and they were able to connect with him only five times. The Virginians played the game for all it was worth; when they saw an opportunity they made good use of it. We are not knocking on the Varsity; we believe they did the best they could—Virginia played ball for nine innings, Carolina for eight—that is the whole story.

The crowd at Greensboro was the most ill-managed aggregation we ever saw; spectators repeatedly crowded on the diamond, delaying the games for several minutes at a time.

The one consoling thing about the game is the memorable flag fight. The Virginia rooters had a large banner which they flaunted in the faces of the Carolina supporters. They tried to repeat the performance but the flag was seized by the Tar Heels and torn to shreds before the Virginians could say "Jack Robinson." They struggled manfully to retain the trophy, but it was a case of too much Tar Heel. Several mix-ups resulted from the little incident before the rooters finally became quiet. The Virginians managed to secure a fragment of the flag pole and banner, and marched sadly back to their quarters, keeping time to the victorious strains of "We're Tar Heels born and we're Tar Heels bred," sung by the jubilant Carolina backers.

University Sermon.

Rev. Egbert Smith, pastor of the first Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, spoke to the students here in Gerrard Hall last Sunday night, being the University preacher for this month. He used for his subject "The power and possibilities of man with God as his guide." He gave examples of the work and the result of many men and women who had built their foundation on the solid rock. Mr. Smith was forceful and impressive throughout his whole discourse and proved himself to be the orator that he is said to be. His sermon was one of the best that has been delivered here to the University students.

Mr. Bennett Penry returned Monday morning from Raleigh.

Mr. Jesse M. Oldham, an old Varsity man and an alumnus of the University, spent several days here last week.

It takes defeats like our last two to make us realize how close our athletic teams are to and what a great part of our student life they are. Notwithstanding our numerous defeats this season, we all had hopes of beating Virginia and of course the disappointment is bitter; all the more so too, when we think over the fact that we lost in a single inning in each game. We still say what we said some time ago—we have the material for a first class team. Let us remember that we have some hard struggles ahead of us yet; this is no time to lose heart and become discouraged. The darkest hour is just before day. We all remember how gloomy the prospects were for our foot ball team toward the latter part of the fall and yet the close of the season was most glorious. We look for our ball team to do the same.

This is the last issue of the TAR HEEL for the regular term. It is one day late again on account of the absence of the editor-in-chief during the first part of the week. A special Commencement edition will be gotten out after the end of the term. Those desiring copies will please see the Business Manager.

The Adulteration of Food.

Dr. A. S. Wheeler delivered the regular faculty lecture in Gerrard Hall last Thursday evening. He spoke as follows:

There is still considerable suspicion abroad that the outcry against adulterated food is much ado about nothing. Now it is stated to be a fact that eight hundred millions of dollars are paid out in the United States for foods which are not properly labeled. What a vast sum of pure genuine food is forced out of our markets! Of course the injury to honest industry is only one phase of the question. The damage to life and health is something of vital importance to every individual. The Pure Food Bill before Congress has not yet been passed, but most of the states have laws dealing with adulterated foods. Each state employs a Pure Food Commission and a chemist. The adulteration of food is not a sin of modern times. In London eighty-five years ago grocers sold tea made of thorn leaves, dried on copper and colored with wood and verdigris. The recent bulletin of the North Carolina Board of Health reports that 76 per cent of the jellies and jams bought on the open market were adulterated and every single sample of apple butter, catsups and sauces.

Milk is most liable to fraud of all the different kinds of foods because the chief adulterant is water which costs nothing. The use of formaldehyde to preserve it should be condemned. Blue milk is given a yellow color with annatto, which is harmless. Substitutes for eggs are now on the market, but the composition resembles the white of the egg only. Coffee is extensively adulterated. Coffee berries are made of a paste of chicory, starch, pea meal, caramel and molasses, moulded into the proper shape by machinery and dried. Ground coffee contains peas, chicory, wheat, rye and bean hulls. Tea is adulterated with soapstone, gypsum, iron dust, sand, lie tea, exhausted tea leaves, and leaves of the beech, willow, elm, rose and wistaria. Green tea is faced with Prussian blue and indigo tea with plumbago or black lead. Soda water may consist of sugar dissolved in water, flavored by artificial flavoring material, colored with artificial coloring matter and possibly containing soapbark to produce a fine foam. Artificial extracts made to imitate strawberry and raspberry are especially obnoxious and give rise to indigestion. Jellies made in factories are nearly always wholly artificial. Gelatine, glucose, a coloring matter and flavoring extract will make current jelly, grape jelly or any kind whatsoever. Honey in the comb cannot be adulterated because the bee has a monopoly on capping the cells. We hope the bee does not indulge in the adulteration business. Strained honey is mighty apt to consist simply of glucose with pieces of honeycomb floating in it. The adulteration of spices, cocoa, maple sugar and other foods was also described. The importance of labels was indicated and the deception practiced in labelling was shown by a number of examples.

The strangest frauds are perpetrated in Paris and the methods employed in making artificial snails, fresh rooster combs, spoiled fish as fresh as if just caught and improving crabs and fresh oysters were described. Finally a description was given of the important experiments being conducted in Washington to determine the extent of the danger of food preservatives.

Gen. W. R. Cox visited his son, Mr. A. L. Cox who confined with the mumps, last Saturday and Sunday.

LOCAL NOTES.

Quite a number of old students and friends of the University witnessed the Virginia-Carolina game Friday.

About 150 students went to Greensboro on the special train Saturday to see the game.

Mr. G. H. Andrews, '03, of Raleigh, spent several days here last week.

Mr. W. B. Owen spent several days this week at Liberty.

Mr. R. W. Herring has returned to continue his law course, after an absence of several weeks on business.

Mr. Dorman Thompson, '01, of Statesville, was on the Hill Monday.

Messrs. H. W. Winstead and Mr. B. Self went to Durham Saturday afternoon.

Those who owe their subscriptions to this paper will please pay it or send it to the Business Manager at once, as the manager is compelled to settle up the debts of the paper. Men who owe their spring subscription should remember that it was due in the fall. Those few little men who look upon their subscription indebtedness as a joke are not expected of course to consider this notice for a moment. Of these young men we shall speak later. But to the men who yet owe a small balance on their year's subscription we should like to say that such balances amount to a considerable sum when added together and some one has them to account for, and lose if they are neglected being paid.

The annual Fresh-Soph debate will be held next Wednesday night in the Phi hall. The query is, "Resolved, That the United States Should Reform Her Tariff and Place it on a Revenue Basis," the affirmative being defended by the representatives of the Phi and the negative by those of the Di.

Mr. W. D. Weatherford spoke to 200 students in the Chapel Tuesday night on the "The Universal College Sin," which was selfishness. Mr. Weatherford is student secretary of the Young Men's Christian Associations of the South. His close touch with college life, with the varied problems confronting the college student made his address thoroughly practical.

He was especially strong in showing how selfishness in athletics and any other phase of college life is not the natural thing, not the thing which places a man's life on a higher plane.

Mr. Weatherford spent the following day here in the interest of the Southern Student Conference.

Dr. Hume has recently been invited to deliver a liberal course of lectures on "The Literary Study of the Bible" in Knoxville Summer School for 1904. Dr. Hume has made a lifetime study of the Bible, its history and literature. He is therefore able to speak as one having authority on this subject.

The Track Team.

On last Saturday at the tenth annual relay races given under the auspices of the University of Pennsylvania on the celebrated Franklin Field, Carolina made her initial appearance as a contestant in this annual event, thus putting herself in a line of recognition with the large colleges and universities. Carolina was represented by Jacocks, our star quarter-back, in the 100-yards dash, and by a relay team consisting of Wilson (captain), Siford, Berkeley and Newton. We were placed in a class with Syracuse, Georgetown and Columbia, thus being placed ahead of Virginia, and only a step from the championship class. Our team attended these races with the fixed purpose of beating Virginia, and it was a sore disappointment when it was refused the request to enter her class. As it was we were outclassed. However, there was only one thing to do—stick and do the best we could.

There was no chance of Carolina taking first place, though we did expect to win second. When the race was called, only Syracuse and Carolina showed up, so Carolina was forced into second place. Thus we were given what we had hoped and determined to win—we had laurels without victory. However, if Columbia was scared out of the race it is no fault of ours; the honor is ours just the same. As a reward for second place each man on Carolina's relay team was presented with a beautiful silver cup.

In the 100-yards dash, owing to the soft condition of the track, Jacocks stumbled and lost his chance of winning this event.

The track team is now training to meet Virginia in Charlottesville. So that we may do our best against our old rivals, it is urged that as many become candidates as possible.

The Thomas Hume Prize.

Mr. W. G. Peckham, of New York, who offers this notable prize, has defined his wishes in the matter. He still desires that it be called The Thomas Hume Prize for special work in the Old Ballads, Shakespeare or Milton with the requirement that a thesis or dissertation of high character is presented at or near Commencement period. It is offered for 1904-5 and 1905-6 and if the work shall justify it for a longer period.

The University appreciates gratefully the generous interest of Mr. Peckham and the graceful tribute thus paid to the important work done for many years by Dr. Thomas Hume, Professor of English Literature in the University. Dr. Hume was among the very first professors to introduce the study of Shakespeare into Southern colleges and his class in English 5 and Shakespeare club have been features of University life for many years. It is only fitting that this Prize should be named for Dr. Hume, and it will doubtless serve to stimulate the study of English Literature under Dr. Hume and it will doubtless serve to stimulate the study of English Literature under Dr. Hume to an unprecedented extent.

NEW SPRING SUITS.

Our Mr. L. B. Markham will call in a few days to represent us, and this time, as usual, showing SUITS in all the up-to-date weaves and colorings. COMMENCEMENT EXERCISES

The One Hundred and Ninth Annual Commencement.

GRADUATING CLASS OF FIFTY-SEVEN.

Commencement Address by John Huston Finley, Ph.D., LL.D., of New York—Sermon by Rev. James I. Vance, D.D., of New Jersey—Alumni Address by F. D. Winston.

Commencement Exercises for the year 1904 began at 11 A. M. Sunday, May 29th, with the annual baccalaureate sermon delivered in Gerrard Hall by the Rev. James I. Vance, D.D., pastor of the Dutch Reformed church, of Newark, N. J. Dr. Vance is a Southern man, having been pastor of the First Presbyterian church in Nashville, Tennessee for several years. He is well known throughout the South and the University was fortunate in securing him.

At 11 o'clock the college bell ceased to ring. The Senior class preceded by Dr. Venable, Prof. Williams, Rev. Dr. Vance, and Rev. Mr. Moss, led by Chief Marshall Haywood, marched up the long aisles of the Hall, and were seated in a group just in front of the rostrum. The morning prayer was offered by Prof. Williams. Dr. Venable then presented Dr. Vance. Dr. Vance preached such a sermon as one seldom hears and its effect was added to by the fine presence and voice of the speaker. It was a great effort and made a distinct impression.

Text: "A man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest, as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land."

My theme is "A Man". Not society but a man; not a nation, but a man; not a church but a man; not a poet or a scholar or a jurist or a statesman or a preacher, but a man; "A man shall be as an hiding place from the wind, and a covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place; as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." Such is the prophet's ideal and on this field gathers the loftiest spirits of the race.

The text is a philosophy, a portrait, a prophesy, a promise and a plea.

It is a philosophy of life, and that philosophy is that the development and control of the world are in the hands of its best men. The key to the situation is not a machine, or a constitution, or an organization, or a dogma, but a man. The man is more important than his tools. It is the man that makes the age, rather than the age the man. Back of all else stands the man, the original force dowered with intelligence, and as goes the man, so goes the world. The prime and constant need of the world is not for more men, but for more man.

Great men are not all of the world, but they make life possible for little men. They lift the race on their shoulders. They are like the rock that stands between the drifting sands and the oasis sheltered behind it. They stop the drift and conquer the desert. Here and there a great man has stood, rock-like in his principles and convictions, sheltering smaller and weaker lives, and on him, the storm meant for them and which would have destroyed them, has broken and spent itself.

Thus it comes about that it is possible to write human history with the names of men. This is the true philosophy of events. God is in the business of making a man. Primarily, he is not forming governments and founding schools and leading armies and thrusting out reformations. He packs himself into a man and the man does the rest. The glory of a nation is not its laws, its trade, its institutions, its resources, but its people; and a college education that does not make a student more a man is a curriculum of wind.

My text is also a portrait of the world's best man. What is he like? Suppose you were asked to paint the picture, what face would it be. Would you paint the face of a scholar, a discoverer, a statesman, an orator, a scientist? Isaiah names no calling or age. His ideal is not a provincial. He is a true cosmopolitan, a citizen of the world at large, and his greatness does not depend on locality or dates. Two things characterize him. He is self resourceful, and he uses what he is and has for others. His glory is not in repression, but in expression of his great powers.

He has the strength of the granite. The winds blow, the storms rage, the suns beat, but he is unmoved and immovable. But he is as gentle as he is strong, and as considerate as he is resourceful. He uses his great strength, not to glorify himself, but to bless those whom he may help. The weak lean on him, the frightened flee to him, the weary lie down in his presence and rest, the thirsty are refreshed, the hungry are fed. Such is the ideal man. He has learned the divinity of service. Life has been consecrated with the sacrament of ministering. He is an hiding place from the wind, a covert from the tempest, a fountain of refreshment to the thirsty, and to the tired the shadow of a great rock in a weary land.

The text is a prophesy as well as a portrait. It is a declaration of what shall come to pass. It is the announcement of a man that shall appear. The world shall look upon his face and be blessed. He shall stand among his fellows and realize the ideal. This is no fancy sketch, but a picture of real life. The man will arrive, the prophesy will come to pass. The man has arrived, and the prophesy has been fulfilled. It was fulfilled in Jesus of Nazareth. Christ was the human life of God. When God was about to do his best for our world he became a man. Instead of taking some august throne in this celestial world, and summoning the seraphic and angelic court, God became a man. Does the sublime significance of that fact break on us? It is enough to fire stupidity with the soul of genius. It is enough to pulse a clod with inspiration and stir life beneath the ribs of death.

It looks as if God envied man his opportunity and would say: "Let me stand in your place for awhile; let me live your life, and have your chance." Since the day God became a man in order to do his best work, how can any man think life stale or life's opportunity tame? The topless heavens are at your very door, and eternity invites you to adventure yourself.

The kind of man Christ became is related in the text. It is the biography of Jesus. He was an hiding place from the wind and a covert from the tempest. He stood where the currents are strongest and checked the drifts. The most dangerous drift in human life is sin, and Christ at Calvary was the "Rock of Ages," checking the sin-drift and making possible the redemption of mankind.

The text is also a promise. It is a promise of what a man shall be. It is a divine commission for the common, average life. Just an ordinary man shall rise up out of littleness and parsimony and mediocrity into the grandeur and glory of the portrait. Jesus is a revelation of the higher and finer possibilities there are for every man who trusts him. Man never knew how high he could climb until Christ came. Jesus has scaled the heights of character and service for humanity, and he is calling us up the heights. To be saved is to become Christ-like. Salvation is vastly more than a scheme to keep out of the medieval gehenna or to get into a mechanical paradise. To be saved is to become like the man Christ Jesus. The mission of the gospel is to produce men and women made in the image of Christ, armed with his mind, permeated with his spirit.

Such are to be the Saviors of the world. The World's best man is a Christian man; not in the narrow dogmatic sense, not in the silly ritualistic sense, not in the bigoted, ecclesiastical sense, but in the large and glorious Christ-like sense. To become such is possible for every man.

Finally my text is a plea. It is a plea that you become what it portrays. Your best clamors for recognition. It is thundering at the door of your life and saying, "Let me in." You have no right to be a worse man than the very best man you can possibly be. The world's need pleads for men on whose strength it may lean, in whose integrity it may rely, by whose sympathy it may live, and in whose labors it may hope. It needs good men to make faith in goodness possible, and men in truth to make truth currency.

It is within your power to call up this text from the cold type of the printed page and make it instinct with the life-best of your own purpose. There is a chance for you to call back the historic Christ from the gospel story and reincarnate him in the life of the modern world. The fact that you may plead that you do. With such a sublime station possible, what shame to live a lower life!

If in the years that are to come, you shall exploit through the calling of your choice and in the community where you live the measures of a real man, the University will never rue the day it sends you out with its name on your forehead and God will not disown you in the day of life's finals.

SUNDAY NIGHT.

At 8 P. M. the annual sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association was preached by the Rev. G. H. Detwiler, D.D., presiding elder of the Charlotte District of the Methodist Church. Gerrard Hall was again full and the audience listened with the closest attention. Dr. Detwiler came with a reputation behind him and lived up to it fully in his impressive sermon on "The Function of True Manhood."

Text: "He that believeth on me, as the scripture hath said, out of his inner being shall flow rivers of living water."

Personality is one of the fundamental facts of Divine revelation. The opening statement of the record is, "In the beginning God created," and the closing statement, "I am Alpha and Omega." The lowest level of Divine inspiration

Commencement for 1904, though not as largely attended as in the past few years, was entirely successful all the way through. The sermons on Sunday were of an unusually high order and left distinct impressions. The joint society banquet passed off in a way that will doubtless make it one of the leading features of commencements in the future. Dr. Charles D. McIver was at his best on his great central idea—the education of the people—and the toast responses were all good. The Senior exercises Tuesday morning were interesting and entertaining. Dr. Hume's prayer and short talk at 9:30 were full of feeling and wise words of counsel. The day was broken into by a heavy rain which kept away the usual large attendance at the afternoon exercises, but all passed off smoothly. The debate at night was very close, all the speakers doing well. The President's reception was unusually well attended. Old classmates and acquaintances shook hands enthusiastically while the mothers of the departing Seniors embraced with a feeling of a common bond. The concluding exercises in Memorial Hall were attended by the usual huge crowd which listened with the best attention.

Commencement is a big thing; the alumni are gradually realizing it and are coming back to the Hill at this time in larger numbers every year. But the fact remains that the great part of the undergraduate body does not stay over through Commencement and it is very greatly to be regretted. Appeals and reminders seem to do no good. It is hard to convince the average undergraduate that it is his duty to stay over to listen to what he thinks is nothing but a series of long-winded speeches when wood and pond and farm are calling him home after five long months of weary grind concluding with an exhausting examination period. After examinations a man feels that he needs a rest and unless he is of a serious turn of mind he frequently doesn't feel like staying through a lot of speech-making that is, to him, boring.

To hold the members of the student body on the Hill there must be more exercises of an entertaining nature. Baseball games, musical entertainments, or something of the kind could be worked in during the intervals and the students would stay over for them. Until something like this is done, the students are not going to stay over, and the college might as well face the problem. No one denies that they ought to stay. The student cannot realize how big this University is, how vital a part it is of the state, and how far reaching its influence, unless he attends Commencement; and more than half the men who matriculate leave college before they finish their fourth year and thus do not see a Commencement even as Seniors. Something must be done to keep the undergraduate body here. The Society banquet has helped considerably, but it is not enough. Other features must be introduced. The student body ought to stay for Commencement; then a way must be found to hold them.

ALUMNI ADDRESS.

Judge Francis D. Winston Delivers An Address Full of Humorous Reminiscences and Valuable Thought.

There is no more loyal alumnus of the University than Judge Francis D. Winston, of Windsor. He entered the University at its reopening in 1875, and graduated in 1879.

The Alumni Association could have found no better man to address them. The speaker was presented by Col. J. S. Cunningham. The address was one largely of reminiscences, not the kind that tires, but the kind that by their humor or their attractive sentiment, hold the hearer and make him feel that he is better for having heard. The address, we are safe in saying, was enjoyed, appreciated and admired by all who heard it. Judge Winston said:

"I am here today not to argue or to convince; to pull down no school of metaphysics, nor get up any system of Latin pronunciation. Today I care not whether the Temple of Jupiter was on the north peak or the South peak of the Mons Capitoline; whether Scipio Africanus, Minor, was the son, the adopted son, or the son-in-law of Scipio Africanus Major; whether the pious Aeneas on the banks of the Styx in the realm of Pluto, really attempted flirtation with the sad pale ghost of Dido.

"Today I can only open the flood gates of memory and let flow the past as it ripples or rushes through my heart.

"Mr. President, the class of 1879 is with you today. Twenty-five years ago we graduated. I recall the stern command which one of your predecessors gave us on that occasion: 'Go forth, win honors and fame, and bring them back to your Alma Mater.' I met him today on the campus and spoke to him of the circumstance. The tone of my voice invited a welcome but he said in a voice of despair, 'Well, I see you have got back.' It reminded me of the New England father who sent his son out of the house one night to bring in an armful of wood. The son left the family circle, decided to abandon the farm, kept on to the public road, went to a distant State, gained fame and fortune, was gone for twenty-five years and one night walked in on the family group. The stern New Englander greeted him with 'Well you've come back have you? And darn me if he haint forgot the wood.'

"Mr. President, the class of 1879 was born the same day, the same hour, the same second as the new University. If this does not make us twins I am no judge of such matters. Looking back now Sir, we see that there was born on that memorable day not only the class of 1879 and the new University, but in reality a new North Carolina.

"When our little band of students gathered together that September day in Gerrard Hall to perform the simple yet solemn and sacred ceremony of thankfulness to Almighty God for rekindling the fires of learning upon these ancient altars, the University had been closed and abandoned for seven years. To many it seemed forever closed. But for it there was and is no death.

"Here Gaston and Hooper had spoken. Polk, Pettigrew, Ransom, Benton and King had studied; Olmstead, Andrews, Hawks, Swain, Phillips, had taught. Here for nearly a hundred years, love and beauty and virtue, courage, and courtesy and honor, all the graces of queenly womanhood, and all the strength of heroic manhood had exhaled the fragrance of the finest civilization of earth. For such there is no death.

"Mr. President, I shall not minutely detail the work of those who revived our Alma Mater. It came again to life, happy mingling of old forces with new. There was a recall of some who had gone to complete their education in universities in other States, Grandy, Graves, and Winston, who became in the University the ideals and exponents of modern methods and modern learning. With them came Hooper and Kimberly and Phillips of the old school. Of these Phillips alone was on guard when Reconstruction closed on the old institution. He with Winston and Graves, those Sophomores, had stood seven years before, in mourning garments amid the ruin and desolation attending the death of the old University. It was fitting that they should assist in the new birth.

"I need not call the roll of those who laid these enduring foundations. Some are still here, laboring with zeal, fidelity and modesty; others elsewhere are upholding lofty ideals of life and rearing other temples of culture. Many have finished their trials of life, and returned their talents to their Master."

Judge Winston told of many student pranks at the University, and among them we note the following:

"After Prof. Winston was married he lived in the house now occupied by President Venable. It was his custom to run up to the campus occasionally when disorder was on to ascertain the cause. His well known figure coming up the walk from the Episcopal church was the signal for a general disappearance of all offenders. On one occasion he was out of town and his absence was taken advantage of by the merrily inclined students. The campus was wild with yells. Your speaker, just the size and figure of his professor brother, stepping out of the South Building, ran around the library, around the New East, and suddenly appeared at the corner of the Old East. A student in the scheme yelled 'Wincie's coming,' and away went the offenders.

"Your speaker was a swift runner, and the race began between him and E. J. Hill. I crowded him to the throat latch when he ran to the rock wall, and leaped over, falling heavily on a pile of rocks. I heard his groans and saw him rise and knew no bones were broken. I retreated and went at once to his room and wrote this doggerel on a slip of paper and left it on his table:

There is a man whose name is Hill
He's run enough to get his fill,
Why he should run and leap the wall,
And on the stony pile should fall
Can be explained, by Scripture, too,
The wicked flee when none pursue.

In ten minutes he was in my room with the couplet, and pledged me to a secrecy which it has taken this occasion to break.

"The reopened University found itself practically without scientific apparatus. Its scarcity caused a conflict between two members of the faculty. The institution owned a dilapidated air pump, which was claimed by two departments—Chemistry and Physics. The professor of Physics, a man of few words and quick to a t, took it to his room in the end of the Old West. In his absence the professor of chemistry had it taken to Person Hall by the college servant. Professor Graves arrived on the scene just as it reached the door. He seized it and had it returned. Professor Reed interfered and they came "mighty nigh fighting" with chemistry worsted. And this was in the days of a struggling college, over an instrument which Dr. Elisha Mitchell had condemned as useless in 1856 and which had not exhausted air in a quarter of a century. The morning after this occurrence there was seen over the rostrum in the chapel, a large drawing in flaming colors, of two engines approaching each other on the same track. They were labeled Chemistry and Physics. Another scene told the story. Chemistry was derailed and demolished. Every student was at prayers that morning. The interest was manifest. Dr. Phillips was conducting chapel prayers that week. When he entered the door he took in the situation at a glance. When near the bull pen he broke into a quick run. He was applauded. He rushed up the steps to the hanging cartoons, but he failed to reach them, and he tried again and again. He was not without sympathy in the student body. How well do I recall their efforts of help and encouragement, when with his hand within an inch of the paper some one would cry: "Just a little more, oop-a-doop, a little higher." But it was beyond his reach and he sat down. Wilson Caldwell, the college servant was sent for and the papers removed and prayers were said. The next morning the artist put the incident into another form by having a game cock labeled Physics after a crestfallen, retreating rooster named Chemistry. The crowd was expectant. The good doctor saw the cartoons as he entered the door. He went to the desk with measured step. He appeared not to notice it. In the lesson that he read occurred this verse:

"Watch ye therefore, for ye know not when the master of the house cometh, at even or at midnight, and here he paused, 'or at the cock crowing in the morning, lest coming suddenly he might find you sleeping.'

"And I can see now the merry twinkle which for a moment seemed to gladden his face at the passing thought that most of us would be caught napping. But it passed as a cloud passes, and he prayed for the salvation of us all, that the Master would hold us safe in the hollow of his hand, and for our country, North, South, East and West."

Judge Winston closed his address with an eloquent farewell to his classmates and an expression of love for their Alma Mater.

sounds a higher note on the personality of God than the highest point of Pagan Philosophy. On Mars Hill, Paul declared, "Him whom ye ignorantly worship, declare I unto you." The faith of Israel is assured by the positive statement, Thy God, oh Israel, is one Lord, and the heart of Israel is ever consoled with the statement, "The Eternal God is our refuge and underneath us are the everlasting arms." On the human side this declaration is equally positive. The literature of the Hebrew Nation is emphatically the history of great personalities. In the fulness of time the Divine personality on the one side and the human on the other, meet and blend in Jesus Christ, and from Him onward, the evolution of Christianity hinges upon the influence of great men.

The product of personality under the influence of the Divine Spirit is character. Teaching of the ten words enunciated by Moses is strictly ethical.

The activity of the Divine Spirit expends itself in the painful and patient effort through the long ages to develop the human personality into this ideal character. That which we call the atonement is but the expression of this effort. What we call the remedial side of the atonement, has for its objective point, this goal. Happiness is simply one of the results of character rather than the object aimed at through the suffering and death of Christ. Our happiness, according to the teachings of Christ, depends not so much on where we are as what we are. Hell is not so much a place as a condition. Milton's Satan cries, "I myself am Hell." Longfellow puts into the mouth of the German Mystic these words, "What Hell is I know not, but this I know, better with fire walled Hell with Him than Golden Gated Paradise without."

The unknown writer of Hebrews informs us that the Captain of our salvation was made perfect through suffering. He treats the humiliation of Jesus without apology and asserts that it was of itself inherently glorious; that which was to the Jew a stumbling-block, to the Greek foolishness, and to the early disciple a perplexity, he sets forth as the glory of the Divine process. The joy that was set before Jesus which enabled him to endure the Cross and despise the shame, was not a compensation but a result. Through it as a cause, he saw the travail of his soul in redeeming humanity and was satisfied. This same writer applies this principle on the human side. He calls the roll of heroes of the church and shows that their great accomplishments were wrought out amidst tears and blood.

The product then of personality in the divine process is character and the function of character is service. The ideal society is not the product of great institutions nor of philosophy, but the human and divine personalities co-working in the upbuilding of personal character. The individual who surrenders himself to this divine process is the Christian and the result in his own personal character is true manhood.

The personal goal towards which he presses with unflagging zeal, is perfection. The function of such manhood, is the service in which he cooperates with his Divine Master for the building up of an ideal society. This service is two fold in character. It is first of all a defensive service, "A man shall be as a hiding place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land." Christian manhood is a reservoir into which God pours a rich and varied inheritance; and He has so ordered that to be of largest value to him who received it, it must be dispensed abroad, "As rivers of water in a dry and thirsty land." The river is not made to fill the Sea but to water the land. Man best glorifies God by falling into harmony with the Divine process and pouring forth his life in fruitful streams of service. The dignity of man is his personality; the glory of man is his perfect character; the mission of man, which assures his immortality and enduring glory, is the service rendered to humanity in sympathy and harmony with the eternal law of service.

TUESDAY.

Tuesday was Senior Class Day. At nine-thirty the Senior class marched into the Chapel for its Commencement prayer by Dr. Thos. Hume.

PRESIDENT'S ADDRESS.

An hour later the Class Day exercises were begun. The president of the class, Mr. S. S. Robins, opened the exercises with an address of welcome to the trustees, alumni and visitors. Mr. Robins, always a forceful and earnest speaker, was at his best. After a few words of welcome, the president spoke of the duty of the class of 1904 to itself. It must always hold fond memories of the associations and community of interest and aim, which have grown up among its members in the last four years. But the class has another duty, that to its Alma Mater. Each member of the class must always hold a love for the University and keep alive the deepest gratitude for the care and development she has given him. "We cannot pass out of the life of this institution tomorrow, nor forget the nature of our debt to it. Its spirit has grown into us. We cannot pass out of its life; but must go rather to join that band of untiring and faithful alumni who have ever been the University's bulwark."

But there is a more vital duty than either of these, that to the State. "As college men the question which at the present step in life most simply concerns us is the public duty of educated men." In the South and in North Carolina as much as anywhere else, political questions have been obscured by social ones, and by the prejudices they have created. Politics has not received the attention of our best men. Today many of social problems are becoming settled, and we may hope for better men in politics, and better attention to political things. This is the great duty of the educated man; not all to become politicians, but all to think and to know enough of politics to keep them from becoming corrupt.

This is the duty with the University man, the one which the man of the class of 1904 should keep constantly before him.

CLASS HISTORY.

The class history was read by Mr. W. E. Pharr, the historian of the class.

Mr. Pharr told of the strenuous life the class of '04 led from its insignificant, hazy, Freshman days to the mighty power of Seniority. Mr. Pharr spoke with much feeling and was listened to with the closest attention.

CLASS PROPHECY.

The prophecy of a graduating class is always a humorous affair. This year, the prophet C. P. Russell, with his usual talent in that direction, read a prophecy which was by no means an exception to the rule. He begins with a gorgeous picture of rings of curling smoke of iridescent colors rising from his meerschaum—or corn-cob we know not which. In his pipe dream appears the spirit of the University, who opens to him the veil of prophecy. She gives him glimpses of his classmates, in their various walks of life, from Hall Johnston, walking up to slap on the backs President Roosevelt and Kaiser William, asking "What are you two fellows talking about anyway?"—from him to the one yclept "Jack" Frost walking down a more modest by-path under the watchful eye of a maiden of some forty summers, who captures and marries him before he can get word to Major Cain. Between these two are others who become policemen, pugilists, preachers and other things.

PRESENTATION OF CLASS GIFT.

For years it has been the custom for each graduating class to make some gift to its Alma Mater. These gifts have usually been statuary. '04, however, had as its gift a handsome lecturn for the chapel. At the conclusion of the class day exercises this gift was presented by Mr. E. S. W. Dameron with a few well chosen and very appropriate remarks. He referred to former gifts, and said that unlike them, the gift of 1904 did not call up any ideas of heroic mythology or of modern statesmanship. "But it stands for the deepest fact in human life," he continued, "that of religion. Though the lyceum lecturer and the intercollegiate debater may find it a place for their manuscript; but by far its greater use will be as a resting place for the old University Bible, that book which tells of him who was the Word made flesh."

Col. T. S. Kenan, president of the Alumni Association, accepted the gift in a graceful manner.

WILL AND TESTAMENT.

After the prophecy the last will and testament of the class was read by Mr. N. R. Graham.

Mr. Graham assigned several possessions and appurtenances of the class, including Jack Frost's portrait of Po' Bo's mental anguish, to succeeding generations.

As this paper closed the class exercises, the meeting was given over to Col. Thos. S. Kenan, that most loyal alumnus, and president of the Alumni Association. Col. Kenan announced that the speaker of the day would be presented by Col. Jno. S. Cunningham. Col. Cunningham then introduced Judge Winston who delivered the alumni address. A synopsis of the address is given in another column.

ALUMNI LUNCHEON.

At 1:30 the Alumni Association held its annual banquet in Commons Hall. Over two hundred alumni were present, including the class of 1904. The banquet was opened by Col. Kenan, who gave way to Judge Fred Phillips, the toastmaster. Speeches were made by Dr. Venable, Judge Phillips, Dr. Geo. T. Winston, Col. Robt. Bingham and Dr. Charles D. McIver. The committee appointed at the last Commencement, composed of John Sprunt Hill, Dr. Chas. D. McIver, Dr. F. P. Venable, Supt. J. Y. Joyner and Hon. S. M. Gattis, to look into the needs of the University, was continued for the purpose of memorializing the Legislature to secure the needed changes.

EXERCISES AROUND DAVIE POPLAR

Around the historic Davie Poplar, around which so many University traditions cluster, the Senior Class met for the last time, to smoke the pipe of peace and to take a last farewell. Of all the exercises held in the University, none is more beautiful or more filled with sentiment than this last meeting of a class which for four years has bound its members to herself and to their Alma Mater.

The class statistics were read by A. H. Johnston, the statistician.

Tallest man—J. H. Winston; 6 ft. 3 in.

Lowest man—S. G. Haigh; 5 ft. 4 inches.

Heaviest man—J. S. Newton; 180 pounds.

Lightest man; S. G. Haigh; 126 1-2 pounds.

Average Shoe, size 7.

Best Cusser, V. C. Daniels.

The most popular man—A. W. Haywood, Jr., seconded by Kenan.

Best all round athlete—Newton and Jacocks tie, Cox being next.

In the race for hardest student Po Bo distinguishes himself and wins over Randolph by 6 votes.

For best speaker A. H. Johnston wins over Robins by two votes.

The wittiest man's medal goes to the gentleman from Wilkes, Mr. Pharr—Council loses by two votes.

Best all around man—Jacocks, Neal Graham and Cox deserve honorable mention.

Most intellectual man is Robins almost unanimously.

The race for the most handsome man was hotly contested. However, Fisher fought the good fight and won over Dameron by 5 votes.

For the greatest ladiesman Dunn and Staton ran well, but for some reason, looks presumably, Staton won by a small majority.

Best business man—McIver.

Faculty Pet—W. McKim Marriott, almost unanimously.

For most modest man the contest is again warm. Lockhart, Randolph and Hickerson all get the same number of votes, but Willie Rankin wins by one vote.

Greatest Smoker—McIver. Morrison and Haigh deserve honorable mention.

Best Politician—Council wins over Winston in a hard race.

Man with greatest executive ability—A. H. Johnston, Cox being second.

Man with the greatest literary ability—Russell, unanimously.

After the awarding of the medals President Robins lighted the peace pipe, which was passed around the circle. The class then gathered at the tree, sang "Hail, Carolina!" and gave both the college yells and "rahs" for their president.

INTER-SOCIETY DEBATE.

The fifth annual commencement debate was held in Gerrard Hall at 8:30 p. m. Tuesday. The query was: "Resolved, That the national government should compel the settlement of all labor troubles of national importance through a board of arbitration."

The Dialectic society was represented by C. W. Miller and C. C. Barnhardt, who debated the affirmative. The Philanthropic society had the negative and was represented by H. S. Lewis and J. Kenyon Wilson. Dr. Geo. T. Winston presided over the debate, with Hamilton C. Jones as secretary. The judges were Hons. Fred Phillips, John Sprunt Hill and Francis D. Winston.

On Wednesday it was announced that the Philanthropic society had won, and that Mr. H. S. Lewis had won the Bingham Medal, for the best speech on the winning side. J. K. Wilson won the society prize.

While we cannot give the speeches in full, we print a synopsis of each.

Mr. Miller said in outline: Government is organized social life. Its whole purpose is to make and maintain equitable conditions for social development. Government can do this only by compelling all the factors that compose society to work in harmony and for the good of society. Industry is a vital part of our organized life, and government should do what its conditions demand. The conditions demand that labor and capital work together continuously and harmoniously. Our government should therefore remove all hindrance to this working.

Mr. Lewis said: Labor troubles are violations of the law of harmony. This harmony is a universal law and controls everything animate and inanimate. It applies equally to industry. To stop labor troubles there must be harmonious action between employer and employee; they must become friendly. But a law that is opposed to the American idea cannot produce this harmony. Compulsory arbitration violates the three principles of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness, which underlie our political structure. It prevents trial by jury, it permits of no appeal to the supreme court, it confuses legislative and judicial functions, and puts undue restraint on individual initiative in industry. It could not therefore produce harmony nor settle labor troubles.

Mr. Barnhardt showed the effect labor troubles are having on our industries, citing several instances. He argued that when our welfare is threatened in any way, government has always stepped in and settled the trouble in the courts. There are no courts to deal with labor troubles, and the government should establish them. All other disputes are settled by some form of arbitration, and labor disputes should be settled by the same means.

Mr. Wilson showed that our industrial life is a dynamic one, subject to changing conditions. Rules or policies of business must be adjustable to these changes. But the awards of an arbitration board must be unalterable. They could not therefore bring harmony between employer and laborer. This has been found to be the case in voluntary arbitration. Moreover, neither party could be imprisoned for failure to abide by the awards. Only the employer could be reached by civil process. The law could not be enforced against laborers. Such class legislation could never bring the harmony that is essential to industrial peace.

FACULTY RECEPTION.

Immediately after the debate, the audience adjourned to Commons Hall, where an informal reception was held by the president and faculty. There was a large number present, all of whom enjoyed the occasion. Refreshments were served and constituted an enjoyable feature of the reception.

COMMENCEMENT DAY.

The closing exercises of the one hundred and ninth Commencement were held in Memorial Hall Wednesday morning. At 10:30 the academic procession, consisting of the graduating class, the faculty and the trustees, formed in front of Alumni Hall and marched past the Caldwell monument and South Building to Memorial Hall. The large auditorium was almost filled with visitors. The members of the graduating class, the faculty and distinguished alumni were seated upon the rostrum.

After music by the band, the services were opened with prayer by Rev. H. H. Meade. The subjects of theses by candidates for degrees were then read by Dr. Venable.

The next exercises on the program were the Senior orations, delivered in competition for the Willie P. Mangum Medal. The first speaker was Mr. E. A. Daniels, his subject being, "The Origin of Law." He was followed by Mr. J. H. Winston, on, "Race Destiny; A Southern View." Next came Mr. L. E. Rudisell, whose subject was, "A Just Conservatism." Fourth and last came the winning speech by Mr. E. S. W. Dameron entitled, "America in World Politics." All the speeches showed wide knowledge and skilful handling of the subjects and were delivered in a forcible manner. The committee decided that Mr. Dameron delivered the best oration and was hence entitled to the Mangum Medal.

DR. FINLEY'S ADDRESS.

"When I was invited by your president, through your very able ambassador, Prof. Alexander, a few months ago to speak on this occasion, it was not then known to your president or to your ambassador that I lacked the eloquence which is characteristic of the Southern men, even in their youth. I wish to say in my own defense that I was persuaded by your ambassador to think that I might make a speech worthy of this occasion, though I now know that I cannot, and in defense of my taking away one of your professors, I wish to say that the temptation was exceedingly strong. I had been seeking such an one in this country, and finding the best of the lot here, I was tempted to take him away from you, and I have ventured to come into the State at this time, even at the peril of being arrested. You have in this part of the country, I am told, and I now believe, rarer earths than we have at the North, and you grow, therefore, rarer men; and if we cannot grow them ourselves, of course we must go where they do grow. I wish to say to your president, who is now, I suppose, in search of chemists, that I have a very long list. Perhaps it may help him. We have some chemists at the North that we shall be glad to send down here. At any rate, I bring you the greetings of the College of the City of New York and its greetings, thanks for what you have promised us in giving us one of your men. I am here with my face toward you, but with my thoughts toward the graduating class, and what I shall say will be addressed to them through you.

"Having no veritable love of the sea myself, except as I behold it from the land, I have but little liking for that figure of speech which is in constant use at this time of the year, which describes a commencement as a launching of the graduates upon the sea of life or upon that greatest of oceans upon which they venture to some far port from which no traveller has ever returned to give us the latitude or longitude, and of whose depth we have no soundings. I prefer to think of these young men as those who have come from some far shore, who have crossed the ocean together, and have just landed on a continent, with all its opportunities, and I am as one who has come to greet them, with you, at their disembarkment. I greet you not with marvellous tales of this continent into which you have come, of the wealth of silver and gold, and of the honors of graduates of schools nor laboratories, but simply as an emigrant myself, who has spent some few years in this continent, and who has come to give you welcome into it. I use the word emigrant. I do not spread it in any demeaning sense. I know when we speak of an emigrant we think of a steerage passenger, but, after all, we must remember that we have been all emigrants, as the children of emigrants, for all the people of this country are emigrants, with the exception of the Indians, and they are as a rule not citizens; and so, to be an American citizen is to be an emigrant, and to be an emigrant with the love of truth in one's heart, the love of struggle and independence, is to be an emigrant worthy to be put by the side of those fathers of ours who dared the perils of the sea and settled this inhospitable shore. Some years ago I found a copy of Spenser's 'Fairy Queen' which bore as frontispiece a picture of an old man on the wayside, giving the advice to a knight mounted upon his horse, going to war, and the legend at the bottom of the page said, as I read it: 'Right well, Sir Knight, ye have advised been'. And I thought it was rather strange that this old man of a past century should be giving the advice which is so generally given today. Upon second reading, I found the legend said: 'Right well we have advised been'. You certainly have been right well advised, and if you are to win out you should wisely use the advice that you have been given, and wisely advise others of this advice, for you are to be, each of you, a man of more than ordinary influence in the community into which you go.

"We have just been told in a most eloquent address that this has been called a practical age, and so it is; and there have been some very practical ages back of it. First of all, we had the stone age, the iron, and following that the bronze. We have had the age of the individual, industry, but these have all passed, and we now have come into an age that has been called the age of steel, an age of steel of which all these past ages are met; an age that has discouraged the flint instruments of the stone age man, but which is not wholly civilized over the age preceding. In this age we find children in some places in houses of dwarfing and degraded toil; it is an age which has wrought the hand work of bronze into myriad forms of beauty, and point upward to our ideal; an age which, you will be constantly told, is a selfish age; but if I were to tell you here of my belief in a brighter optimism, it would be but an advertisement of my credulity. Yet we mistake the nature of this age, if we think that competitive selfishness yields to these inflexible laws, is distinguishing the characteristic of this day and age. Selfishness there is, and there has been in all the ages of the world, and it is perhaps most pathetic and more blatant today than it has ever been before."

In conclusion Mr. Finley said: "I hope that every one of you will remember that you represent a constituency much larger than this audience gathered here, for back of you there is a multitude that converges upon each of you. Those who are back of you may push you, but they can do nothing except through you, and so their myriad mouths are stopped with dust; they are crying to you to ask what you are going to do. As Carlyle has said: 'Every man may say that he has waited a whole eternity to be born, and now that he is born, a whole eternity is waiting to see what he is going to do'. But it is not so much our duty to the past that is to give us spirit to do; it is what lies before us. The forces of the past came into our lives as an eternity back of us; but those present share in the joy of our victories, in the shame of our defeats, and though the issue does not rest solely upon the strength of the arm, yet the future, the whole future, does depend upon what you and I do in our day. What you are this moment thinking, what we are today, tomorrow, doing must go on forever. Every minute, every hour, must find its consummation. We may go out then and shout our thoughts to the dewdrops of a wilderness; no one may hear us, but we have indelibly made some impression upon our own lives that cannot be erased. The whole future must be changed for either better or worse by our living, though it may seem in vain. And so members of the graduating class, I congratulate you, with your rich heritage, that you have come upon the shores of such a continent, that, with the equipment of these years' of study you have come into the citizenship of a richer age than the world has ever witnessed, and best of all the past in it. And this is my word to you—that you should be happy in this, in knowing that the world shall not be made perfect without you."

MEDALS AND PRIZES.

Medals, prizes and fellowships were awarded as follows:

- The Hume Medal: C. P. Russell.
- The Harris Prize: R. F. Leinbach.

Rev. Dr. Meade made the speech presenting Bibles to the graduating class.

The next thing in order was the presentation of diplomas and the conferring of degrees. The graduates, with their degrees, are given below:

BACHELORS OF ARTS.

Gray Archer, Clarence Edward Betts, Addison Gorgas Brenizer, Jr., Albert Lyman Cox, Edgar Samuel Williamson Dameron, Erasmus Alston Daniel, Jr., William Wooten Eagles, William Fisher, Jr., Fletcher Harrison Gregory, Severn Green Haigh, Alfred Williams Haywood, Jr., William Picard Jacobs, Graham Kenan, Wade Hampton Mann, Robert Oliver Miller, George Willis Oldham, Edgar Eugene Randolph, Willie Calvin Rankin, Sidney Swaim Robins, Lawrence Erastus Rudisill, Charles Phillips Russell, Marshal Cobb Staton, Theodore King Sutton, James Horner Winston.

BACHELORS OF PHILOSOPHY.

Ernest Franklin Bohannon, Edward

Augustus Council, Virgil Clayton Daniels, William Dunn, Jr., Neil Ray Graham, Ralph Moon Harper, Thomas Felix Hickerson, Rolando Clarence Holton, Andrew Hall Johnston, Albert Whitehead Latta, Luther Bynum Lockhart, Walter Frederick McCannless, Evander McNair McIver, John Sprunt Newton, William Ewell Osborne, Ernest Linwood Sawyer, Ernest Sifford, John Henry Vaughan, William Asbury Whitaker, Jr., Harry Wooding Winstead, Walter Poole Wood.

BACHELORS OF SCIENCE.

Harry Barber Frost, Lawrence Shackelford Holt, Jr., James Preston Irwin, George Anderson Johnston, Williams McKim Marriott, Theodore Davidson Morrison, Wesley Benton Owen, Jr., John Henry Pearson, Jr., Welborn Earl Pharr.

BACHELORS OF LAWS.

Theodore Garfield Britton, Robert Withington Herring, Ph.B., 1903, Joseph Bunn Ramsey.

GRADUATES IN PHARMACY.

Numa Duncan Bitting, John Gustavus Greene, John Thomas Howell, John Bunyan LeGwin.

MASTER OF SCIENCE.

Robert Arthur Lichtenhaeler, S.B., 1902.

MASTERS OF ARTS.

William Stanly Bernard, A.B., 1900, Albert Lyman Cox, William Jones Gordon, A.B., 1903, Joseph Bascomb Huff, A.B., Wake Forest, 1902, Alice Edward Jones, Ph.B., 1900, Marvin Hendrix Stacy, Ph.B., 1902.

DOCTORS OF MEDICINE.

Marshall Crapon Guthrie, Jr., Frank Louis Sharpe, John Haywood Stanly, Jr., Arthur Pender Willis.

After the diplomas were presented, the exercises were closed with the benediction by Rev. Dr. Meade, and the 109th commencement was over.

University Magazine.

The following men have been elected to the Magazine Board for next year: Editor-in-chief, T. B. Higdon, Di; Business Manager, F. McLean, Phi; Associate Editors, S. Klutz, T. G. Miller and C. C. Barnhardt of the Di; and J. R. Cox, J. V. Howard and F. P. Drane, of the Phi. With the coming year the Magazine hopes to enter on a new life. Several of the Southern college Magazines have recently arranged their exchanges in what they consider their order of merit. They agree in putting Virginia's at the head of the list, with North Carolina's second. The new board intends to put ours at the head, to make it the best in the South. To do this the board has secured an office, that there may be better organization and better facilities for work. Not only must the Magazine receive more and better literary contributions, but it must have strong financial support. While it is chiefly from the students that the literary work must come, there is another work that our alumni may do. They should aid the business manager in his efforts to secure subscriptions and advertisements. As our alumni have always stood back of the old University and have toiled and labored for her with untiring efforts, so we believe they will stand behind the Magazine when properly approached. THE TAR HEEL may say "Goispeed" to her sister publication.

Handsome Floral Designs

Our designs are well made, carry well, keep, keep well. They have a distinctiveness unlike all others. They are in just the one class—by themselves. Nothing ordinary, but just the proper thing every time. Not just a conventional design, but something better than the ordinary. Changelessness and sameness for ever in design work is something we have learned to eliminate. Order funeral designs by telegraph or telephone.

WANTED: MEN TO DO ITS BUSINESS-NICE COTRACTS.

JOHN F STOKES, Manager.

Call at Central Hotel, Chapel Hill, N. C.

Southern Student Conference.

Twenty-five men are expected to represent the University at the Southern Student Conference at Waynesville, N. C., June 10-19. Two years ago only three represented the University; last year there were ten directly from U. N. C. and an old U. N. C. citizen, Winston, representing West Point. This year our delegation will probably consist of twenty-five or thirty men.

The Southern colleges this year will nearly double their delegation. The University of Virginia will have over thirty men—twenty have already sent in their registration fees. About three hundred students are expected from all the Southern colleges to be present at this conference.

Every student or member of the faculty of the University is given a cordial invitation to this Conference. The entire expense from Chapel Hill will be about twenty-five dollars—five dollars for registration fee, ten dollars for board and about ten dollars for railroad fare, a special rate of one fare for round trip being given from the principal points in the South. The local agent should be notified in advance so he may order tickets. Where the agent has received no tickets at this special rate, the student should pay the regular fare, taking a receipt for the same. The authorities at Waynesville will then secure them for him at the special rate.

Among the students who are expecting to attend the Conference are: C. C. Barnhardt, O. B. Ross, R. Harper, E. McDonald, L. Briggman, W. Cole, J. V. Howard, F. McLean, K. B. Nixon, T. G. Miller, S. Linn, R. O. Miller, B. H. Perry, A. T. Morrison, D. P. Tilliet, B. Starnes, C. P. Russell, G. L. Paddison, R. S. Stewart, C. O. Abernethy, W. W. Murphy and W. H. L. Mann.

Professor H. H. Williams and Dr. A. S. Wheeler, are two among the faculty who are thinking of going.

Rev. W. T. D. Moss and Mr. J. R. Rountree, of Chapel Hill, will also be present.

Joint Society Banquet.

Perhaps the most enjoyable feature of commencement was the second annual joint banquet of the Di and Phi literary societies held in Commons Hall Monday evening.

The hall was splendidly draped in white and blue, the long banquet tables being artistically decorated with palms and ferns and laden with fruits.

More than a hundred of the societies' most distinguished alumni were present, and the time was very pleasantly spent in reminiscing and greeting the younger fellow members. Everyone seemed in a happy mood and entered into the joy and festivities with hearty good cheer.

After the blessing by Rev. A. D. Betts the toastmaster, Mr. E. S. W. Dameron, welcomed the guests in behalf of the societies. Mr. Dameron as toastmaster presided in a most graceful manner. The menu could have hardly been bettered and the toasts between the courses were especially fitting.

The toast to the Phi society was responded to by Messrs. Albert Cox, Sprunt Newton, and Roach Stewart. The toast to the Di was responded to by Messrs. Alf Haywood, Joseph Ramsey and Hall Johnston. The toast to the class of '54 was responded to by Dr. R. H. Battle and the toast to the class of '79 was responded to by Judge Francis Winston. Maj. Broadnax, of the class of '41 was called on and he made a short and witty response.

The address of the evening was delivered by Dr. Chas. D. McIver of the State Normal College. Dr. McIver was in his usual happy mood and was listened to with great interest. Dr. McIver said in part:

"I congratulate you young men on this, the second annual banquet of the two literary societies, and for the interest you have manifested during the execution of the programme. When I was here in college these two societies, the Dialectic and Philanthropic, were the great force in the University. I am glad to see the societies holding their old time place." In a vivid way he showed how the literary society work has made Aycock the speaker he is. He said that it was a pleasure to mention the purpose of his address, which was the eminent waste of time in the life of the children of the State through inefficient instruction. Inefficiency is due in part to the lack of inducements for men to go into teaching on account of the meagre salaries paid teachers for their services. "I would rather have my children become masterful brick layers, machinists, etc.," he said, "than to have them become incompetent and inefficient, frivolous school teachers." Dr. McIver gave his educational views, which are well known to nearly every person in the State.

At the annual meeting of the trustees of the University last Tuesday evening at five o'clock the following business came up and was disposed of as follows: Dr. Chas. Baskerville having offered his resignation as professor of chemistry to accept the chair in the Department of Chemistry in the College of the City of New York, his resignation was accepted. Dr. Thomas Ruffin having offered his resignation as professor of Law, his resignation was accepted. Mr. J. Ed. Latta was promoted from instructor to the rank of associate professor of physics. Mr. Nathaniel Courtland Curtis, of Southport, N. C., a member of the class of 1900, and who graduated with distinction, was elected as instructor in drawing. Mr. Lucius Polk McGeehee, of Raleigh, a graduate of the University, of the class of 1887, was elected to succeed Dr. Ruffin as professor of Law. Mr. McGeehee was connected with the Law department of the University in 1891 and since then has been employed by the Edward Thompson Company, Newport, R. I., and is at present one of their editors.

One old alumnus, on coming out of the hall after the Mangum medal contest, was heard to remark: "I hate to have to say it, but dinged if I don't believe these fellows speak better than they did in my day. I've tried not to believe it for a long time but I'm forced to admit it at last."

Among the social features of Commencement were three dances given by the Senior Class, the Pi Sigma and Sphinx Germans, and the banquets given in honor of visiting young ladies by the Junior order, Ginghamols, and the Gorgon's Head.

Someone said of Commencement that there's no sadder sight than to see a body of young men graduate. That's true; but there is one thing still sadder—and that is to see them not graduate. We think there are some who will agree with us.

The prospects for a large attendance at the Summer School are flattering.

CORNELL UNIVERSITY MEDICAL COLLEGE

NEW YORK CITY.

The course covering four years begins during the first week in October and continues until June.

A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage.

All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction.

Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations.

The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised.

The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

HAD THE SAME TEXT.

Rev. Dr. Detwiler's Experience—
Dr. Detwiler Took His Text and Many of His Points.

An unwritten chapter of the commencement of the University of North Carolina was made public this morning by Rev. Dr. G. H. Detwiler, presiding elder of this district of the Western North Carolina Conference. Dr. Detwiler was asked by a Sun reporter what he thought of Dr. Vance's baccalaureate sermon.

"Magnificent", he replied, "but I had an embarrassing experience. You will remember that Dr. Vance took his text from Isaiah, 32nd chapter and 2nd verse: 'And a man shall be as a hiding place from the wind and covert from the tempest; as rivers of water in a dry place, as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land'. Well, I had selected exactly the same text for my sermon in the afternoon before the Y. M. C. A. I listened closely to Dr. Vance and you can conceive something of my feelings when I heard him amplify some of the primary points I had prepared from his text. His subject was 'Man' and mine 'The Functions of Man', but the development of many thoughts was similar. Even a quotation from a poem which I had in mind was used by Dr. Vance. But the most discomfiting feature of the affair was the fact that both Dr. Vance and myself had given synopses of our sermons to the press representatives. I resolved, while we were dining with Dr. Venable, to change my text and do as best I could, and the press representatives to cut out the synopsis of my sermon."

A gentleman who came in from Chapel Hill yesterday stated that Dr. Detwiler's sermon was one of the most impressive ever heard at Chapel Hill.—Salisbury Sun.

UNIVERSITY EDITION.

Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

Work Will be Uninterrupted This Summer—Contract Given Mr. Waring, Who is Building the Bynum Gymnasium.

From now on work will be uninterrupted on the Young Men's Christian Association Building until after the roof is put on, and if the present summer plans are successful the interior work after then will not be delayed.

The same contractor, Mr. Waring, of Columbia, S. C., who is building the Bynum gymnasium, has also been given the contract for the Association building. From now on the two buildings will vie with each other to see which can get up first. The brick for both buildings are being made west of the depot, near Chapel Hill. The company making the brick was delayed in May in setting up its plant, but for several weeks now it has been turning out a kiln a week, about 75,000 brick per week.

To those who have not been to Chapel Hill during the past year and have had no opportunity of looking over the plans, a short glimpse into the interior of the building will be opportune.

The building as seen in this cut is hardly done justice. No shading could be used, and only the outlines giving an idea of the size, dimensions and style are given. The building will contain two stories, with an auditorium at the rear reaching to the roof. An idea of the auditorium is gained by observing a small section of it on the right hand side of the picture.

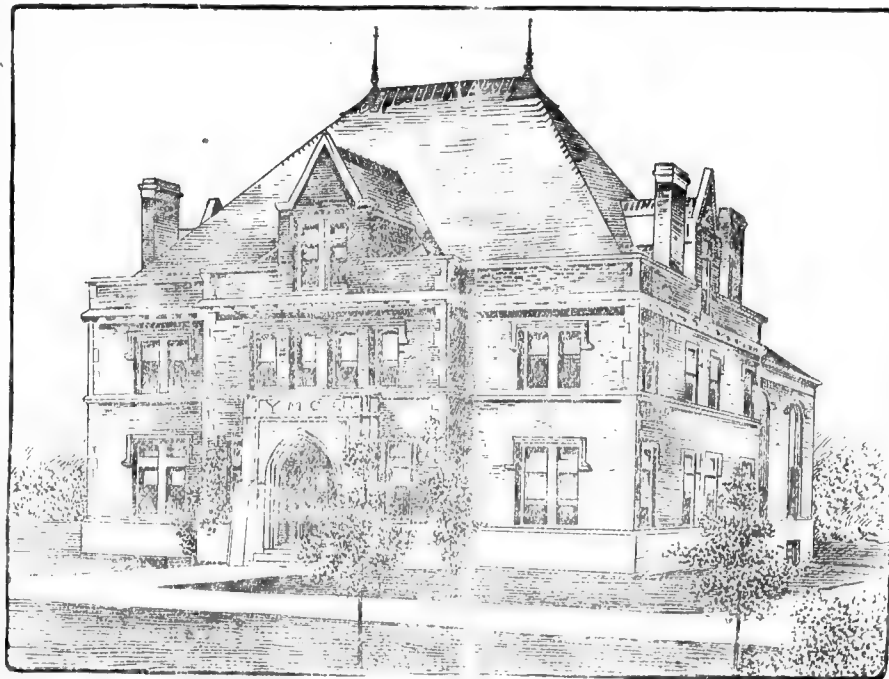

As one goes into the building through the front entrance he enters a short passage on the left side of which is a small cloak room or office, on the right a stairway. This passage leads into a reception hall having two rooms on the right and two on the left. Passing through this reception hall one enters the auditorium. On the second floor are four rooms and a Secretary's office.

The rooms on the floor will be utilized as a parlor, a reading room, a game room, and a clearing house room. These rooms will be supplied with games, with music and with many other forms of healthful recreation imbued with the atmosphere of home and home life. The last named room will be a veritable clearing house, for in this room headquarters will be provided for the University publications such as the Magazine, THE TAR HEEL, and the Yackety Yack. The Press Association and other such organizations will be greatly helped by having a place which will be the center of college life. The convenient location of the building will cause the literary societies, the fraternities, and other such prominent organizations of the University to use the Association rooms for committee meetings and conferences.

All of the first floor will be so arranged that it may be thrown into one whole room for special occasions. Folding chairs will be placed in the auditorium so even this may be used along with the rooms for receptions to men students, or to the student body and the people of Chapel Hill, or to the alumni and friends here at Commencement.

Mr. E. McDonald, '06, who has been chairman of the Building Committee, and who has had charge of the collection of notes for the building, will not return to college next fall. Mr. McDonald's systematic and faithful work in this capacity has been of much service to the University. We were just about to raise our hands in despair on account of the chairman of the Building Committee dropping out of college when Professor J. W. Gore, a member of the committee, offered to take charge of all the work.

THE Y. M. C. A. BUILDING.

Professor Gore has been given a year's leave of absence by the University in order that he may rest his voice. He will not leave Chapel Hill, however. From now until the Y. M. C. A. building is completed, Professor Gore will give the most important part of his time to this work. From the very beginning Professor Gore has been closely identified with this movement. He will now act as chairman of the Building Committee, and will also attend to the collection of the different installments of the notes when due.

The hearty cooperation of the friends of the building movement is especially essential now, since the work which is being done is dependent upon the prompt response of those who have generously made subscriptions.

The contract given Mr. Waring is for all the brick and wood work to be finished and the roof put on. Between now and about October first this work is expected to be done.

As the building will cost about $13,000 when completed, more funds are needed yet. The subscriptions made up to date are enough to finish the work as planned so far. About $11,000, including a special $1000 gift which we shall mention later, has been subscribed up to date. In order that there may be no break in the work an earnest effort will be made this summer to secure in subscriptions the remaining amount.

To this end Mr. Z. V. Judd has responded to our appeal and will devote two months this summer in traveling in the interest of the building. The generous cooperation of University men and all who are interested in this work is especially asked now so that the building may be completed without delay.

An unknown donor, through Mr. W. D. Weatherford, Student Secretary of the Young Men's Christian Association of the South, has agreed to give $1000 toward our building provided we secure $8,000 in cash by October 1st, 1904. This is practically a gift, since we have sufficient subscriptions due between now and that time to bring the cash fund to the required amount. If during this summer those who have already given subscriptions make a prompt response to the notice telling when the first installment is due, we shall have no difficulty in securing this $1000.

SUMMER LAW SCHOOL.

Very Gratifying Opening June 8—Several Prominent Lawyers to be Here This Summer.

The University Law School opened on the 8th under favorable auspices, twenty-five answering to the roll call on the first day—which means a probable attendance of about fifty.

These students hail from Currituck to Clay. Many of them are graduates and many others alumni of the University. Judge MacRae and Dr. Ruffin after a week's rest appear to be in good form, and lectures began on the 9th with increased attendance. These students are very much in earnest, having before them a searching examination by the Supreme Court on the last Monday in August. The hot weather has no terrors for them. Indeed the weather is remarkably fine, the shade of the magnificent oaks of the campus affords pleasant studios, the lecture rooms are commodious and well ventilated, and, in short, every incentive is offered to the making of a busy and successful review of a two years' course. An attractive feature of this summer term is the attendance of members of the bar who seek change of air and at the same time an opportunity to refresh their memories in the first principles of the law.

Judge Geo. H. Moore, Jr., is expected to spend part of the summer in Chapel Hill, and the students hope to hear from him more than once during his stay. Former Superintendent of Public Instruction Mebane expects to be present at this term. A. M. Simmons, Esq., of Currituck, is here for the summer. And Lieutenant S. T. Ansell, one of the instructors in law and history at the Military Academy at West Point, is here attending the lectures for the purpose of acquainting himself with the laws of his native State.

Among the students on the first day are R. B. Chastain, of Clay Co.; J. M. Umstead, of Durham; T. J. Gold, of Shelby; G. M. Patton, of Elon; D. P. Stern, of Halifax; J. D. Mallonee, of Franklin; Harry Skinner, Jr., of Greenville; J. R. and O. A. Barbour, of Johnston; F. S. Hassell, of Williamston; H. S. Boggan, of Anson; E. M. Rollins and D. G. Fowle, of Wake; Harry McMullan, of Pasquotank; T. G. Brown, of Greensboro; W. H. Phillips, of Lexington; T. D. Meares, of Wilmington; Wm. Dunn, of Newbern; S. W. Kluttz, of S. C.; C. E. Taylor, of Brunswick; F. L. Black, of Davidson College; and J. G. Carpenter, of Stanley County.

Summer School.

The Summer School promises to be well attended this summer. More than double the number of rooms of last year have been engaged already by the lady teachers. This year both the Carr and Mary Ann Smith buildings will be utilized for this purpose. A unique course to be given this summer is the library course. This instruction in the essentials for managing a library is perhaps the first of its kind in the South. As the demand is gradually growing in our Southland for trained librarians this kind of instruction must necessarily be pushed to the front. Mr. L. R. Wilson, A.B. has charge of this work here in the Summer School.

One of the last acts of the Class of 1904 was the decision to publish a class record similar to the Class of '99. This '99 class is considered one of the best organized and strongest that has left the University. W. P. Jacocks was elected to get out this publication. A. H. Johnston was elected permanent secretary of the class, and was authorized to call the class together in 1909 for its first reunion.

Dr. Charles Lee Raper.

On Wednesday, June 8th, Miss Henrietta Frost Williams, of Paterson, N. J., and Dr. Charles Lee Raper, of the University faculty, were married at the home of the bride's parents. Miss Williams has a host of friends in Chapel Hill, as she has visited at Dr. Wheeler's. All of Dr. Raper's friends join in giving them a welcome, yea, a thrice welcome to Chapel Hill.

Rhodes Scholarship.

The following students from North Carolina have passed entrance examinations for the Rhodes Scholarship to which North Carolina is entitled: Messrs. Wm. A. Arrowood, Thos. P. Sprunt, Henry Trantham and J. Horner Winston, '04, of the University.

A committee from several of our educational institutions in the State will meet soon to decide which two of these four shall receive the scholarship.

Entered in the Postoffice at Chapel Hill, N. C., as second-class matter.

This five thousand issue of THE TAR HEEL is gotten out primarily to let the alumni and students know of the progress of the Y. M. C. A. building which they are erecting at the University. As this information does not take up all the space we gladly print news of what University men have done, what they are doing this summer, and what they expect to do. We are able also to give a cut of the new gymnasium which is being built along with the Y. M. C. A. building. The same contractor, Mr. Waring, is building both, and will let them vie with each other to see which will get its roof on first.

The gymnasium will cost about $25,000, and is a generous gift from Judge Bynum. The Y. M. C. A. building will cost, when completed, about $13,000. By small subscriptions ranging from five to two hundred and fifty dollars, the alumni and student body are erecting this noble structure. These subscriptions for the most part are payable in four installments. Many of the alumni have already paid the first two installments of their subscriptions. One of the most gratifying features in the work for this building has been the prompt payment of subscriptions which were made one or two years ago.

The first payment of subscriptions, made this last spring by the student body, is due this month, and it is hoped that this response will likewise be just as prompt as that of the alumni. In order now that this work may be pushed to a finish, every available dollar will be needed. It's not only the large subscriptions that are putting up this building; but it is also the five, ten and twenty dollar notes, payable in several installments.

At present we have enough subscriptions, if paid in promptly during this summer and before October 1st, to put the roof on the building. To finish up the building properly three thousand dollars more will be needed.

During this summer Mr. Z. V. Judd, '03, who received such a generous response from the alumni throughout the State last summer for the building, will give his time in the interest of the building. Mr. Judd during the past year has been in the Faculty of the University of Florida, but he has not been so far away as to have lost sight of the endeavor being made by his Alma Mater.

As many of the alumni have not yet made subscriptions our earnest wish is that they will do so this summer.

Is it asking too much to ask that every alumnus make some subscription payable in four installments?

A majority of the alumni of U. N. C. will never be personally asked to take a part in this movement. If during this summer without anything else said, they should do what they can toward this building, the work will be uninterrupted, and the University during the coming year will realize the pleasure of having a center of college life.

The last issue of the University Magazine contains one of the best stories that has appeared in any of the college magazines this past year. It is "The Opal Ring", by Q. S. Mills, '06. Our magazine has printed several articles this year that could well grace the pages of the standard magazines. The pictures of mountain life and mountaineer customs suggested in the characters of Sandy and Dave by H. H. Hughes have been exceedingly refreshing. But there is a serious objection we shall make against our Magazine: it does not come out on time and it does not appear often enough. There is enough love and romance in University life to produce a Magazine each month instead of once every two months. We hope during the coming year this change will be made, namely, that our Magazine shall come out promptly each month during the college year.

THE TAR HEEL and University Magazine have grown to such an extent that it is absolutely necessary for them to have a permanent room for an office at some central place on the campus. As soon as the Y. M. C. A. Building is completed one of the best rooms in it will be turned over to our publications. Practically none of the college papers and college magazines are ever seen by the student body for the simple fact that there is no unity of management. One editor rooms on the campus, the other in Chapel Hill. When these two finish looking over the exchanges there is nothing left. What is needed is a room which the college will look on as the place to meet one of the editors, as a place where one can review the exchanges; in short, as a centre of college happenings.

The embarrassing question which the home folks are now propounding to the college man is, "What are you going to do?" Well, five to one he does not know, but it will never do thus to appear to be drifting aimlessly down life's river, and accordingly some of the time worn professions serve as a temporary excuse.

The last issue of the University Record, describing the work of the chemical department of the University, has been attracting considerable attention throughout the country. It is really wonderful to review the work in this department when one knows of the facilities here infinitely small in comparison with the permanent contributions made by our men to the world of science.

A large part of the expense of this issue is borne by our advertisers, and we shall accordingly ask that those receiving this issue shall carefully note the different companies or businesses herein represented.

FOOTBALL.

In an Interview Coach Brown Tells of the Condition of the Team.

Just at present everybody is thinking of foot ball and what wonderful things Carolina is going to do on the gridiron this fall. Judging from what Coach Brown has said we had better lower our estimation of the team or we are going to be sorely disappointed. In an interview Saturday Coach Brown said:

"Although the outlook is very encouraging because of the large number of candidates who seem to have plenty of sand and determination, the line men, with few exceptions, are too light for a Varsity of this size, due to the fact that the heavy men in college won't come out. "The backs and ends are, for the most part, fast and experienced and will gain on most teams of the South if given proper support by the line. The defense is fairly good for this early date and will greatly improve as soon as the men learn the new system.

"The whole college and the alumni are in error when they make the statement that the team will be the best ever turned out here. A wrong impression is current that should be corrected. To win from Georgetown, V. P. I. and Virginia a faster team than has ever been seen in the South will have to be developed. Most of the Southern teams will be heavier than we and to beat them we will necessarily have to be faster.

"Virginia is making every endeavor to gather men from every prep school and college around in order to make amends for their defeat at North Carolina's hands last fall. In order to retain the position gained last year the men must work with their utmost strength.

"A stronger second team is necessary for improvement by the Varsity and more heavy men should come on the field. The scrubs have an excellent coach in the person of Mr. James McRae, one of Carolina's old stars, who gives them his undivided attention. Consequently the present want for a good second team is material."

Since the first week of college Coach Brown has had the men on the field instructing them on the minor points, and if the prospects are not so bright the student body at any rate has great confidence in our new coach. He is taking a great deal of interest in his team. He coaches each man individually and takes a delight in instructing new men. Coach Brown is very popular among the men and consequently the men are going to do all in their power to make a good team. About twice a week Coach Brown lectures to the Varsity squad and so far these lectures have proved very valuable.

The training table will be begun probably about Saturday. Mr. A. D. Browne has been appointed trainer of the squad and with his services the men should soon be in an excellent condition.

Tennis.

The Tennis Association met in the Chapel Thursday afternoon and elected the following officers for the coming year: President, O. B. Ross; Vice President, H. McR. Jones; Secretary and Treasurer, H. M. Emerson. This Association was established last year and did a great deal toward increasing interest in tennis, considering that it had no courts. Mr. L. R. Wilson, who was secretary and treasurer last year, reported that there was about $3 in the treasury of the Association left from last year after paying for the prizes given in the tournaments and for the grading of two courts. There has been some kicking about these courts being so far from the college buildings. But they are as near the new gymnasium as any on the campus with the exception of one or two. And every one will dress at the gymnasium. But it is a fact that with about 150 men here who play tennis the Association needs more than two courts. So why can't we get together and build two or three more courts on the east side of the old athletic field up near the new gymnasium?

We pride ourselves here that we can do as great things in athletics as Virginia. We have done this in foot ball and in base ball, but in tennis we are away behind Virginia. At the University of Virginia tennis is on an equal with foot ball and base ball. They have a tennis association with 150 members and it costs $3 to join it. Hence they have ten well kept courts. We must have more courts here if tennis is to have its right place in our athletics. Last year we sent two men against Virginia who showed what material we have for tennis players. If we are to beat Virginia this year we must get to work.

The two courts are to be cleaned off. Tournaments will be held this fall and next spring and prizes will be given to the successful players. So it is before the students to say whether tennis shall have its proper place. This can be done only by every man who plays tennis joining the association. And we trust that every one who has not joined the association will at once hand his name to Mr. Emerson. The initiation fee for the new members is $2 and the annual fee for the old members is $1. This gives the right to play on the courts and in tournaments.

Tennis is a game that every one can play. Foot ball and base ball are necessarily limited to a few players. What are the students going to do who don't engage in these games? They may go to the gymnasium, but that does not take the place of out-door exercise, with plenty of fresh air, which every student needs. And then to the men who can win the places there is the tournament with Virginia before them. And to uphold the honors of U. N. C. against Virginia is about as high an honor as a University man gets.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

The TAR HEEL will be published this year on Wednesday. On account of the advertisements having to be set up anew throughout, this issue has been delayed. Hereafter it will appear regularly on Wednesday morning.

All members of the faculty and students are requested to hand news items to the editor-in-chief or one of the associate editors.

Communications for the Knock-er's Column should be given to the editor-in-chief.

Articles for publication must be handed in not later than Monday, noon, in order that they may appear in the paper of the current week.

Every man in the University will receive a copy of the TAR HEEL this week. The purpose of the management is to make the new students acquainted with the paper and to remind the old boys of their duty toward it. The TAR HEEL is the students' newspaper, their own publication. It is the official organ of the Athletic Association, and the Association is the student body. Its aim is to reflect the sentiments and to give the news of the University. Its position in the University is one of extreme importance; in fact, it is absolutely indispensable. Small colleges get along without a newspaper and never feel the need of one. But with the University it is different; the University man cannot hear from his neighbor about everything and what everybody else is doing; our life is too big, too complex for that. We must have a newspaper.

Especially to the new men is the paper commended. They are not acquainted with conditions or persons or practices here. They cannot be in the fullest and truest sense University men until they have this acquaintance. How can they get it better than by reading regularly the paper which is expected and endeavors to represent the spirit and publish the news of the institution?

Upon every student there is one point we wish to urge, that is, the duty to the TAR HEEL as a part of the Athletic Association. Everybody is expected to contribute to this organization, and one of the most convenient and effective ways of doing this is by subscribing to the TAR HEEL. In this way the Association is directly helped in two ways: the efficiency of its organ is assured and its treasury is benefited, the profits of the paper going to the Association.

The business manager will try to see each student personally and solicit his subscription. All are requested, however, to hand in their subscription as early as convenient, without waiting for this visit. If you do not see him, just drop a card to the business manager, requesting that the paper be sent to your address.

Phi Beta Kappa.

For years the members of the Alpha Theta Phi have looked hopefully for the time when they should be in the Phi Beta Kappa. The day has come and only the formalities of installing the new chapter stand between us and the realization of our hopes. The Grand Council of the Phi Beta Kappa considered, at its meeting the early part of this month, the applications of several colleges for chapters and we were one of the fortunate ones who were accepted. Not a single vote was cast against us.

It is impossible to say when the installation of the chapter will take place, but it will no doubt be some time this fall. There is considerable expense connected with it and as the present active members of the Alpha Theta Phi will be the charter members of the new chapter and will have power to admit Alpha Theta Phi men among the alumni, these alumni will be asked to help bear the expense. At any rate, some steps will be taken which will insure our getting the chapter very soon.

A short account of the Phi Beta Kappa may not be uninteresting. Stephen's Encyclopaedia of Fraternities speaks of the order as "the mother of American college fraternities." It was founded at William and Mary College in 1776 by five students: John Heath, Thomas Smith, Richard Booker, Armistead Smith and John Jones. The first meeting was held in the room made famous by Patrick Henry's great speech. The organization was secret and seems to have had a social rather than a scholarly purpose. Incidentally, however, its aim was literary.

In 1778 a movement was begun which resulted in the preservation of the order and the founding of the other numerous fraternities now in our colleges. Chapters were established at various other places. Some of these were at various towns in Virginia, but one was at Yale and another at Harvard. In 1781, when Cornwallis invaded Virginia, the parent chapter went out of existence. The other Virginia chapters also disappeared. Various other ones were established, however, in the leading colleges of the North and some in the South. These continued their existence as secret organizations till the anti-Masonic campaign of 1831, when the Harvard chapter, under pressure of Harvard alumni prominent in Congress, revealed the secrets. Among these alumni were John Quincy Adams and Edward Everett. The former, who had been elected to Congress on the anti-Masonic ticket, said that his alma mater was in danger of ruin from the secrecy of the organization. This shows the prominence which it had obtained at that time.

The abolition of the secrecy of the order marked the beginning of the end of its social character. This was gradually lost and other secret fraternities were organized, beginning with 1832, which made this feature the object of their existence. Gradually the Phi Beta Kappa became a strictly honorary society, to which the best scholars were invariably elected. That is what it is to-day. The privilege of wearing a Phi Beta Kappa pin is a mark of scholarship and is an honor which is much coveted in the leading universities of the country.

There are to-day fifty-five chapters of this society, and the total membership is about 10,000. The chapters are organized into a National Council. Representatives are sent to a meeting of this Council every three years.

The members of our faculty who are Phi Beta Kappas are: Dr. Alexander, Dr. Smith, Dr. Howe, Dr. Coker, and Dr. McBryde.

Looking over the condition of affairs at the University this session one is impressed that there is change and progress everywhere. In this issue are some articles on several phases of our life, and all show progress. It is a fact that here numbers is not by any means considered a synonym of success, but in every college there must be students. Regarding this feature, it is enough to say that the registration is larger than it has ever been at the same time in any previous year. The faculty has lost one man who will be sorely missed, but the renown he won before he left will greatly benefit his department. It should be a matter of true pride that his place could be so easily filled by drawing on the University's own supply of men. One new professorship has been added. All the departments are as strong as ever, and some have increased their strength greatly.

The more material side is keeping pace. Last spring we hoped to be in our new gymnasium this fall. The hope has been disappointed, but it is a pleasure to see that the building is really nearing completion. The Y. M. C. A. building is perhaps more nearly finished than most of us expected it to be. This is certainly cause for gratification, for few buildings on the campus mean more to the life of the larger University.

What the Faculty Has Done This Summer.

The following taught in the University Summer School: Dr. Alexander, Prof. Toy, Prof. Cobb, Dr. Mangum, Prof. Noble, Judge McRae, Dr. Ruffin, Dr. Smith, Dr. Howe, Dr. Wheeler, Dr. Bruner, Prof. Graham, Prof. Latta, Mr. McKee.

The following taught in other schools: Dr. Hume, at Raleigh and at Knoxville; Dr. Mangum, Dr. Smith, and Dr. Henderson at Knoxville.

Dr. Davis spent part of the summer at Leipsic; Prof. Latta did some work at Cornell. Prof. Cobb made some special studies of the Sand Coasts of North Carolina.

Among the honors won are the offer of the Presidency of the University of Tennessee to Dr. Smith, and the degree of Doctor of Science conferred on President Venable by La Fayette College. Dr. Venable made the Commencement address at the latter place.

REMARKS.

The registration to date is 598.

Dr. Smith returned Monday from St. Louis.

The Societies have taken in 117 new men, of whom the Phi. has 56 and the Di. 61.

It is rumored that a certain Senior has become reconciled to his class after three years estrangement.

Mr. B. H. Perry has been elected Business Manager of the Magazine to succeed Mr. Frank McLean, resigned.

Messrs. W. B. Love, J. B. Robertson, E. C. Herring and W. H. Day were the leading lights at a picnic at Rankin's Chapel last Saturday.

Among the old men who are back is Dicey Winston, the famous first baseman. He will play on the team next spring.

Mr. A. T. McLean, of the first year Medical class, went to Atlanta the first of the week to consult a specialist about his eyes.

Officers of the German Club Elected.

The German Club of the University met last Friday evening and elected the following men to be its officers for the coming year:

- L. G. Rountree, President.
- J. R. Moore, Vice President.
- T. P. Cheshire, Secretary.
- A. H. Bohannon, Treasurer.

Graham Kenan was chosen to be the leader of the first german, which will be given on October the fourteenth.

Changes in the Departments of the University.

In the department of Chemistry the loss of Dr. Baskerville was a heavy blow. Dr. Venable, however, has resumed the head of the department and there is no reason at all that it should not be as strong as ever; in fact it is stronger, for Dr. Mills has been added as Associate Professor and Dr. Davis has been recalled from his studies in the German Universities. All of these, in addition to Prof. Wheeler and an exceedingly well trained corps of Assistants, will be in active connection with the department.

Pro. Graham, of the English department, is spending the year at Columbia. His place is filled by Dr. R. T. McBride, who has distinguished himself as a student at Johns Hopkin and in England. Mr. E. D. Broadhurst, formerly Superintendent of the Greensboro City Schools is a valuable addition to this department.

The Physics department is decidedly stronger, for although Prof. Gore is on a leave of absence, he will spend his time in Chapel Hill and will have the general direction of the Department. Prof. C. C. Crawford, who will fill Prof. Gore's place in the class room, is a graduate of the University of New Brunswick and holds the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard. Mr. Latta has been made Associate Professor.

Dr. H. Pratt, of Yale has been added to the Department of Geology, as Professor of Economic Geology. Dr. Pratt has been Instructor both at Yale and Harvard. In the Law Department the place of Prof. Ruffin has been filled by Prof. E. P. McGehee, who has been for some years Editor for the great law book publishers, The Edward Thomson Co.

The title of Dr. H. V. Wilson, Professor of Biology, has been changed to Professor of Zoology.

Mr. N. C. Curtis has been made Instructor of Drawing.

STUDY OF THE BIBLE.

Address by Prof. Plato Durham Sunday Afternoon.

Prof. Plato Durham, of Trinity College, addressed the Young Men's Christian Association Sunday afternoon on the subject of Bible Study. Prof. Durham was listened to with great interest as he always is by this student body.

"It has always been a great wonder to me," said the speaker, "that young men are so far removed from God. That young men know so little of the Book that has been called the greatest Book. One reason for this is that we don't study the Bible as a book. We study the Bible with methods that even the kindergarden has dispensed with. We read a chapter here and a chapter there and say that we are learning the Bible. It would take a man a life time to learn an arithmetic in this manner. This University conducts each study by certain definite methods and never gives you your diploma until you, by following these methods, master the subjects. And yet we, before the great message in the Bible, come to the study the Bible with a process that would lead us to the mastery of no great subject."

"Another reason we don't understand the Bible is that we don't see in it a great gospel. We don't see in it the Divine Life. Students stand in the presence of Tennyson and Browning with more awe than in the presence of this Book.

"There is but one danger connected with the study of the Bible and that is the lack of reverence. The truth has never yet been hurt by honest investigation, except the investigation be done by the irreverent man. If you be reverent, have no fear.

"There are some very important reasons why we should study the Bible. First among these is, I should say, to realize your need of God; a hard thing for the young man to do. But your life fails if it is not deeply rooted in God. If God made man in His own image, doesn't man need God? Your soul can never be at rest except it find it in the companionship of God. God made the world and hence if you are to live in and know the world you must find God. You can't know chemistry in its finest sense without knowing God. The greatest need of man is God.

"Secondly, study the Bible not only because of your need of God but also because of your need of man. The human soul thrives and grows upon the life of men around it. College is built for you to learn and rub up against men. Companionship, what a force it is! Some of the truest and greatest men are in the Bible. Walk through the world with a man like Job and you will be a man to stand for the truth. With Saul of Tarsus and be a world conqueror like Paul.

"Thirdly, because to-day men are paying more attention to theology than to the religion of Christ. The theologian is trying to force some criterion of Christianity on men that is not in Christ's teachings. You need to study the New Testament then to know what it is to be a Christian. Study to be a free man, able to say that this is Christianity and that the teaching of some monk of the fifteenth century. That this is religion and that science. Able to have a belief in Christianity that can't be shaken. To study, and having studied all, to stand.

"Lastly, study the Bible because this world needs men of power. It has enough parasites. It wants men who can carry themselves. It holds out pleading hands for a man, a man that is so saturated with Christianity that he has power. Under this high destiny I invite you to take up this life of study of this great Book."

CAROLINA WINS.

Quakers Fail to Score While Carolina Makes 29.

The first game of the football season with Guilford resulted in a score of 29 to 0 in favor of Carolina. This is fourteen points more than we beat them last year, and yet the score is not as large as it should have been, judging from the scoring in the first half as compared with that in the second. But all of the Varsity squad were put in that the merits of all the men should be tested. Coach Brown gave out the following on the merits of the individual men:

"Stewart's work was good, getting down the field on punts almost as fast as the ends—passing sure—defense strong. Story and Seagle, guards, a little slow but fairly good on defense. Lack aggressiveness.

"Webber at tackle not in good condition yet, but good on both offense and defense. Jones not as powerful as his brother—work but mediocre.

"Parker and Singletary fair on offense, not especially strong on defense.

"Barry and Townsend very good work at end, fast down on punts, tackled well and followed the ball well. Wright and Reynolds not strong on defense. Wilson tackles well.

"Jacocks' work good—handled team well, punted finely, ran in punts well. Bear, Roberson and Newton best of backs. All find their holes well and keep their feet well. Sitton good on open field runs but does not hit the hole in the line.

"Winborne kept his feet well and strong on defense. Gudger and Haywood good defensive men but slow on offense.

"Whole team worked well on defense and at times followed the ball well, pulling the runner along. The line did not open holes as well as they should, though at times the work in this respect was good."

THE GAME.

The game in detail was as follows: Roberson kicks 45 yards and ball is advanced 10 yards. Benbow goes around left end for 2 yards. Benbow thrown back 2 yards on second attempt at end run. Fail to make distance on third attempt and ball goes over. Roberson goes through line for 8 yards. Webber goes for 10 yards. And Bear goes over for touch down after 2 minutes play. Barry fails to kick goal. Score: Carolina 5; Guilford 0.

Guilford kicks 35 yards and Jacocks advances 20. Roberson pushed through the line for 5 yards. Townsend goes around end for 4 yards. Webber hurt. Webber has his wind and goes through the line for 7 yards. On fake kick Bear makes 6 yards through left tackle. Sitton advances the ball 3 yards. Roberson goes through left guard for 2 yards. Sitton makes 2 yards through right tackle. Sitton is given the ball again and with pretty interference makes 10 yards. Then followed several small gains of 4 yards by Bear, 3 yards by Roberson, and two successive gains of 2 and 3 yards by Bear. In the next rush Bear is pushed over for the second touch down. Stewart kicks goal. Score: Carolina 11; Guilford 0.

Carolina lines up to defend the west goal. Guilford kicks the ball 35 yards. Barry receives the kick and advances 20 yards. Barry on end run makes no gain. Jacocks kicks 40 yards and Guilford's quarter advances the ball 3 yards. Guilford's full back makes 2 yards through right guard. Anderson hits left guard for a gain of 1 yard. Hobbs kicks 30 yards. Jacocks receives the ball and by pretty interference and fast running makes 33 yards. Sitton goes through right tackle for 7 yards but gets his ankle hurt and has to leave the game. Newton takes Sitton's place. Newton makes 5 yards through right tackle. Newton again hits the line for 2 yards and fumbles the ball but Carolina falls on it. Bear goes around right end for 2 yards. Roberson hits left guard for 3 yards. He is again given the ball and jumps the line for 7 yards. Webber carries the ball over for the third touch down. Stewart kicks goal. Score: Carolina 17; Guilford 0.

Carolina receives the ball on the east end of the field. Guilford kicks 40 yards. Roberson receives the kick and advances the ball 17 yards. Jacocks kicks and the ball bounds over head of Guilford's quarter, and Townsend getting down the field fast falls on the ball on Guilford's 25 yard line. Jacocks mixes signals and on no one being ready to take the ball he uses good head work and makes long run, skirting left end for 10 yards. Roberson bucks the line for 3 yards. Goes through right tackle for two more. He is again given the ball and jumps the line for 10 yards and a touch down. Barry kicks goal. Score: Carolina 23; Guilford 0.

Carolina receives kick on west end of field. Guilford kicks 35 yards and Jacocks returns the kick 20 yards, but the ball goes out of bound. Guilford's ball. Anderson fails to gain. On next rush ball is fumbled and Roberson falls on it. Newton fails to make gain on pretty tackle by Anderson. Newton makes 5 yards around right end. Jacocks runs for 15 yards. Roberson jumps the line for 5 yards and time is up on Guilford's 30 yard line. Time of first half, 15 minutes.

THE SHAKESPEARE CLUB.

Revival of the Club and an Address by Dr. McBryde.

The Shakespeare Club was revived last Thursday night after a year of inactivity. This organization was for many years an important one, fostering and stimulating interest in the subjects suggested by its name, and bringing the students of these subjects into contact with each other. Last year circumstances made it impossible to hold the meeting of the club and it was allowed to drop out of sight temporarily. This year, however, renewed interest and vigor are expected to restore it to its old-time importance. The President, Dr. Hume, announced that a number of papers would be read during the year by members of the faculty and by students.

The event of the evening was an address by Dr. J. M. McBryde, Jr., on "The Leading Motive in Marlowe's Dramas." The address was especially interesting in that it was the first opportunity many of the students had had of hearing Dr. McBryde. The subject was clearly presented, and facts were given which were of interest and value.

First a brief sketch of Marlowe's life was given and quotations were read from the many glowing tributes paid to the dramatist by his contemporaries, Chapman, Pettowe, Peele, Drayton and Shakespeare. Coming then to the subject of the motive, the speaker said: "Though a dramatist ranking next to Shakespeare himself, Marlowe, unlike Shakespeare, was essentially a subjective poet, and almost every character in his dramas is but the embodiment of its creator's spirit. Into each character he breathes his own restless spirit of insatiable desire, or L'Amour de l'Impossible, the love of unattainable things, desire for the infinite and unattainable."

This was defined as the leading motive of all Marlowe's dramas. Each play was then taken up and the motive was shown running through all. "Tambourlane," said Dr. McBryde, "is the personification of desire for illimitable power. Faustus, 'the hero and martyr of forbidden power,' personifies the longing for infinite knowledge." The main-spring for action in the character of Barabas was shown to be yearning for "infinite riches in a little room." Mortimer in Edward II was described as "like Tambourlane and Faustus, aspiring to inaccessible heights only to fall headlong." The leading characters of the dramas were thus shown to be but the mouthpieces of the dramatist's restless and ambitious spirit, being the personification of thirst for power, thirst for knowledge, or thirst for beauty; in other words, desire for the unattainable.

The poems of Marlowe were then spoken of and the statement made that "in Hero and Leander and The Passionate Shepherd this same spirit of infinite longing is to be seen."

The conclusion was exceedingly interesting to the Browning students, for it was a contrast of Marlowe with Browning.

"Though in Browning we feel the same infinite longing, the effect on his art and his soul was different. With Marlowe this yearning after the infinite was unsettling and unsatisfactory, leading to an attitude of revolt, rebellion and despair. With Browning, on the contrary, this longing for the unattainable is helpful and uplifting. According to Browning, far from bewailing his ineffectual attempts to grasp the fleeting ideal of beauty and perpetuate it on the canvas, the artist should be stimulated by his very failures to new endeavors. Indeed, that artist who feels he has attained his ideal has missed the highest conception of his art.

"Ah, but a man's reach should exceed his grasp, Or what's a heaven for?" Thus Marlowe, though undeniably an artist, a poet, and a dramatist of no inferior rank, never attained to the moral grandeur of Browning or of Shakespeare. If at bottom poetry is, as Matthew Arnold calls it, a criticism of life, Marlowe's 'criticism' will not stand the test of time and does not satisfy our deepest longings."

Was there ever such a game? Not a cheer! Not a sound from the breathless crowd! The sun shone brightly and there should have been the sound of birds on that happy autumn day, but even the peanut boy was still. Over all was silence like that of night, broken only by the dead, dull, powerful sound of the mighty lines rushing together and the occasional shrill whistle of the referee. Of all games it was the strangest.

Perhaps the Chief Cheerer can explain it, but we have our doubts. There is a psychological problem in the affair. There was something wrong with the crowd. The above caricature may be too strong; perhaps it is; but seriously, there was something strange about it. There was a fair sized crowd on the side lines, not a big one to be sure, but enough to have given many a lusty cheer if they had wanted to.

The game was a good one. Of course it was not the Virginia game, but there were several plays that were worthy the appreciation and approval of the onlookers, but if there was any of these commodities, it was of a silent variety.

In all earnestness, gentlemen of the University, this is not the way our team should be treated. Perhaps everybody forgot to cheer. Possibly there were other reasons. But what ever was the trouble, such an affair should not occur again. There will be one more game here, perhaps two more, and let us show our team that we are right there with the yells.

Last week we noted that the registration was the largest it had ever been at a corresponding date. Nobody would have judged this from the crowd that was at the game Saturday. The attendance was nothing like as large as it should have been. For those who stayed away we have the news that they missed a good game; this news, however, fails to bring pleasure to them or gate receipts to the Athletic Association.

There is little probability that there will be more than one more game on the Hill, and the students are urged to back up the team then.

The smallness of the crowd suggests a criticism that has been made of this year's schedule, namely, that there are too few games to be played here. It is to be regretted that there are so few games to be played here; there ought to be more; and there is only one reason why there is not; the games played here are financial losses, and the team has to go away to get money. Suppose every man in College went to the game, circumstances would be very different; instead of our own team going away to play for others, they would play for us, and we could see the work of the teams that oppose us. Of course everybody cannot go to all the games, but nearly everybody can. Whether they go or not is what will decide whether the games will be played here or elsewhere.

That is a rather strange habit the Athletic Association has of waiting till the fall to elect the business manager of the TAR HEEL. It causes the manager himself a lot of inconvenience, and handicaps him in getting advertisements. The result is that the first issue of the paper is a week or two later than it should be. There is a delay that is entirely unnecessary, and that should be avoided. The question is how to avoid it. The best way would undoubtedly be to elect the Manager in the spring. It is hardly practicable to have the election earlier in the fall than it is now held, and there is no objection to having it just before Commencement. We should certainly have some arrangement that would make it possible to begin issuing the paper immediately after the editors are elected in the fall.

WAYNESVILLE ECHOES.

The Southern Student Conference as Seen by Our Representatives.

The Y. M. C. A. was very fortunate in having fifteen men attend the Students' Conference held in Waynesville during the summer. At the meeting Tuesday night Messrs. Ross, Mann, Howard, Barnhardt and Stewart gave brief accounts of the conference as they saw it.

Mr. Ross in speaking of the addresses said that there were two each day given by some of the strongest men in every line of Y. M. C. A. work. In the morning some phase of the young man's life-work was discussed in a clear, concise and thoughtful manner. In the evening just at sundown the entire student body gathered on the lawn where they heard a discussion dealing with the decision by young men with regard to the different fields of work which the association offers.

Mr. Mann discussed conferences briefly in stating that naturally much time was devoted to conference work. Each day began and was ended with a conference. In the presidential conference a careful and detailed study of the association work was taken up and thoroughly discussed. In the conference for "prep" school men the problems of "prep" school association as a distinct branch were considered. In the general conference held at night, the problems of "Bible Study", "Fall Campaigns" and "Christian Work" were studied. In the conferences the men met and talked openly and frankly, gaining thus a broader knowledge of what is being done in Southern colleges.

Mr. Howard spoke of the athletic side of the conference. He said that the entire afternoon was given to athletics of various kinds. Of course Carolina held her place in baseball. The swift curves of Stewart and the star catching of Tillett were the things which defeated every other college team and won the championship for Carolina. Howard says he is still lamenting the fact that he was the only substitute, and that the fair damsels failed to see him when they were bestowing their smiles and flowers upon Stewart and Tillett.

Mr. Barnhardt said that by coming in contact with the clean and pure life there one could but have his spiritual life deepened. The problems discussed were of vital importance, and while living under their influence one must be stronger.

Mr. Stewart spoke in a general way of the conference. He said that it seemed to be a band of men whose lives were pure and clean, and who were devoted to their cause. They were earnest and enthusiastic, dealing with the physical and mental development in order that the spiritual might have its greatest field. The spirit prevalent was to help men now and through their college career. He said that the University of North Carolina men were equal to the men of any institutions represented there. He said further that he believed the Y. M. C. A. would mold the religious thought of the 20th century.

Hearing these men one was impressed that the Student's Conference was really a great institution. It is a pleasure to know that in this great gathering Carolina held her own in every department. The history of the conference indicates a constant growth and there is every hope that we may continue to grow with it and send each year a representation that is worthy of the University.

Remarks.

Mr. R. W. Perry spent Sunday in Greensboro.

Mr. T. J. Gold has gone home for a two weeks' rest.

Several '08 men celebrated their election by having their hair cut.

Prof. Cobb will take the class in economic geology to the Cummock mine Friday.

The family of Dr. Thomas Hume have returned from their summer home in Virginia.

Some members of the Medical School have organized a new fraternity, Sigma Theta.

By mistake of the "make-up" this issue is dated wrongly. It should be Oct. 5th, Vol. 13, No. 2.

Mr. C. M. Byrnes, '01, who is at Johns Hopkins, gave the psychology class a lecture on experimental psychology last week.

Mrs. Pelton, author of "A Tar Heel Baron," is taking special work in literature in the University.

Messrs. J. M. McNider, '06, and J. W. Palmer, '07, have been elected the representatives of the Phi Society in the Soph-Junior debate.

Mr. N. R. Graham, who is Dr. Baskerville's private secretary has been appointed a tutor in Chemistry at the University of the City of New York.

Mr. John Kirkland Ross, commonly known as Jake, is on the Hill this week. He will leave in a few days for Jefferson Medical College, Philadelphia.

Mr. P. O. Hall, assistant in Pharmacy, has been compelled to leave College on account of his father's illness. His successor has not been appointed yet.

The Review of Reviews for this month contains an article by Dr. Baskerville, whom it speaks of as "the brilliant young Southern chemist who has just come to New York." It also publishes a good picture of Dr. Baskerville.

Mr. and Mrs. William C. Wheeler, of Tacoma, Washington, are visiting their son, Dr. A. S. Wheeler. Mr. Wheeler is president of The Wheeler, Osgood Company, the largest manufacturers of sash and doors on the Pacific Coast.

The Professor of Chemistry Not Yet Elected.

An erroneous report has been sent to some of the newspapers that the successor to Dr. Baskerville has been chosen. The report is untrue, for no selection has yet been made.

THE SCRUBS.

Interesting Interview With Coach McRae.

Every one realizes that to have a winning Varsity we must have a good scrub team, and it is impossible to have a good scrub team unless the men come out. It seems that the scrub squad is getting smaller each day and consequently the Varsity does not have to work as they would if our scrub team were stronger.

In an interview with Assistant Coach McRae several days ago he said: "For some reason the scrubs have got it into their heads that they should be fitted out completely with football togs. Well, this is a wrong idea, for the scrubs have never been given uniforms by the management. In the first place, the Athletic Association can't afford to fit them out, and in the second place, it has never been the custom to do so heretofore.

"In the beginning there were something like fifty men out, but now there are only about eighteen men that I can use on the scrubs. It seems that they are dropping out every day until now the squad is very small. We ought to have a better scrub team and we must have. There are plenty of big heavy men in college and they should come out, even if they don't expect to make the Varsity. Every man that plays on the scrubs is doing that much for his college and he deserves just as much credit as the Varsity man.

"There is some good football material on the scrub team and if they keep on trying they will succeed in the end."

Mr. McRae is taking a great deal of interest in the scrub team, and if the men come out there is no reason why the scrubs should not soon be what they ought—a team nearly equal to the Varsity.

THE MUSICAL ASSOCIATION.

The Year is Begun With Bright Prospects—Will Play University Day.

Those who were in college year before last remember with a deal of pleasure the great part played by the musical organizations then. The band, the orchestra, and the glee club were all well trained, and on every public occasion one of them was present; no ball game or celebration would have been complete without music. Unfortunately these organizations last year could not hold their own; they had difficulties to overcome, the college gave them no encouragement, and consequently none except the orchestra held together. Even that was seldom heard. Happily this year promises better things. Mr. Woollen, President of the Musical Association and director of the individual organizations, has more time at his disposal and will give four nights a week to the training of the men. An excellent room is available for practice every night. The piano has been recently tuned. In fact, everything is favorable. Mr. Woollen said in a conversation yesterday:

"The prospects of the Musical Association are brighter than they have been before since I have been connected with the University. More men are applying for membership and the conditions are more enthusiastic than ever. We have now in the band fourteen members and in the orchestra twelve. There are about forty candidates for the glee club. The new men are taking a special interest in the Association, and some of them give remarkable promise of development into valuable additions to the Association. Undoubtedly there are more good musicians in the college now than at any previous time since I have been connected with the University.

"Not only are the men more numerous and more enthusiastic, but I have more time to give them as instructor, and we have better facilities for practice. We have got down to hard work and preparing for some entertainments we hope to give soon. Our first appearance will be on University Day. We need some more voices for this occasion. We intend then to have a chorus of fifty voices with piano and orchestra accompaniment. Everybody who can sing at all is requested to come to the practices and help us then.

"Speaking of the entertainments we will give, some of these will be by local and others will be by the best companies we can get from elsewhere. The Schubert String Quartette will give a concert under the auspices of the Association some time during the year, perhaps in November. This is a high priced company and they are one of the best to be had. In addition to this and other strictly musical concerts, we are planning to have a minstrel show by amateurs some time this fall. For this last we have some unusually good men and we ought to make a creditable appearance.

"That is giving one side of the question, what we hope and expect to do. But there is another side. We must have the backing of the college. In the past we have had but very poor support. The enterprises that were attempted for the benefit of the Association have met with apathetic treatment by the students. Last year we secured an excellent company to give a concert here, and got them at a reduced rate. Instead of yielding money, the venture put us in the hole $25. The Association had no money to pay it and the money came out of an individual's pocket. If we have such experiences this year, we will be unable to do anything.

"We need now several hundred dollars to pay for instruments that are almost indispensable. One of these is a piano for the Chapel. It is absolutely necessary to keep the piano in the practice room, and we, of course, cannot have our practices in the Chapel. On the other hand, we can hardly have an entertainment without a piano. To carry the one we now have from the practice room to the Chapel for each entertainment is out of the question. In short, a piano is badly needed. Besides this, there are other instruments we should have for the band. We have some men who could do fine work if we could only furnish them with instruments. We hope the college will help us out. Collectors will be sent out in a few days to receive subscriptions, and we hope they may have the consideration of the college."

Death of a Promising Young Man.

Mr. Claude Best, an alumnus of the University, died in Chapel Hill early last Friday morning at the home of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. R. R. Best. Mr. Best had been in feeble health for several months and his death was not unexpected, though none the less distressing to his friends.

He was born in Oxford, N. C., 28 years ago, but his parents moved to Chapel Hill, where they still reside, about ten years ago. He was for two years a student in the academic department of the University, and then took two years in law, receiving the degree of Bachelor of Laws in 1899. Three years ago he went to Texas, where his health failed, and he returned home late this summer.

"Bud", as he was affectionately known to home folks and intimate friends, had a sunny, genial nature and the news of his death will bring a pang to the hearts of all who knew him.

In early youth he joined the Baptist Church, of which he remained a consistent and useful member until his death. The funeral services were conducted Saturday afternoon from the Baptist Church by Rev. C. A. Jenkins, assisted by Rev. M. T. Plyler. The burial services were conducted by members of the local order of Knights of Pythias of which he was a member.

WITH NO SCORING.

CAROLINA'S PLAYING OFFSET BY COSTLY FUMBLES,

And by Three Quarter-back Runs by Davidson—A Good Game.

Coach Brown's Comment Concerning the Game.

The student body felt a keen sense of defeat when it heard that Carolina had failed to score on Davidson at the game in Charlotte last Saturday. There is no denying that a different result was expected. But while feeling keenly disappointed the students haven't indulged in the personal criticism that is usual after a game of this kind, but have rather come to realize that they have got to get behind the team if it is to be a victorious one.

Coach Brown when asked to explain why Carolina didn't score said:

"The game was lost by our fumbles which came in almost every instance when we were within easy scoring distance. At the start of the game Newton, Roberson and Bear gained twenty-five yards on the first three plays. Then two fumbles in succession made it imperative to punt. The Davidson man in the back field, tackled by two Carolina men, dropped the ball, which was captured by Barry, putting us within easy scoring distance. Fumbles and a penalty lost us the ball at this time. Davidson could not gain against the strong defense of Carolina and was forced to punt. The play in the entire first half was within Davidson's forty and twenty-yard lines. Davidson gained but one or two first downs by rushing the line, and one gain of ten yards by a clear quarter back run by Wyman, the Davidson coach.

"In the second half Carolina forced Davidson to punt on the third down. By the first consistent team work Carolina carried the ball to within five yards of a touch down when the ball was again lost by fumbles. The second steady march towards Davidson's goal was begun when time was called.

"Rev. Francis Osborne, one of our old backs who umpired the game, said in an interview after the game that the defense of our team was very strong but offense weak because of lack of team work on the part of the backs. Carolina's line got the jump on Davidson throughout the game and opened good holes for the backs.

"The statement that Davidson gained easily around our ends was wrong. Davidson's quarter, who was an especially fast man, gained from ten to twenty yards three times during the game, but attempted to repeat his performance many more times and was thrown for a loss. His average gain was less than that of any of our backs.

"Davidson played more determinedly and handled the ball better on the offense, but does not compare with Carolina as a team. It was the first strong team we have met and brought out our weak points. It was a great disappointment not to have scored, and shows more plainly than ever that in order that the coaches may see where we are weak, a stronger second team is needed. We should learn our weak points in practice and not in games against other colleges.

"The work this week will be to develop the offense where it was weak in the Davidson game. In the game Saturday every man worked hard on the defensive and did not realize until too late the necessity of 'hustling' when we had the ball. Davidson played a hard fierce game and put just about twice as much spirit into their work as we did."

The following is the Observer's account of the game:

A HARD FOUGHT GAME.

To the surprise of every one, the plucky football team from Davidson College held the strong aggregation from the University of North Carolina down to a score of 0-0 yesterday afternoon. The Davidson team hardly expected such a score themselves and last night the streets were full of the exultant supporters of the Red and Black. The University sympathizers were correspondently cast down, but speedily assumed a look of cheer and spoke of better luck next time.

The first team to arrive upon the field in the afternoon was that of the University. They immediately began preliminary practice in catching punts and running through signals. The Davidson team arrived soon after and were greeted by the enthusiastic yells of their sympathizers. The crowd began to pour in steadily till about 500 people were gathered upon the grounds. Landaus, carriages and automobiles, all decorated in the colors of one of the two colleges, helped to swell the size of the assemblage. The college girls were out in force, the Presbyterian College young ladies wearing the colors of Davidson, as a rule. The Carolina men, however, were fully consoled in seeing the White and Blue among the fair ones from Elizabeth.

DETAILED ACCOUNT.

Davidson wins the toss and chooses to defend the south goal. Fetzer kicks off for Davidson and Jacocks catches the ball, advancing it 7 yards. Bear plunges 5 yards through the line and Newton circles an end for a gain of 15 yards. Carolina fails to gain and Jacocks kicks 30 yards. Wyman, who catches the ball, is tackled in his tracks. A fumble and Carolina regains the ball. Carolina starts off and fumbles. Davidson gets the ball and makes a series of short gains, when Wyman, the fast little quarter back, breaks loose and dashes around an end for 10 yards. Davidson loses 15 yards on a penalty, going back to within 10 yards of the Presbyterian goal. Fierce plunges by the Davidson backs fail to gain and McKay makes a short, bounding kick. Jacocks catches it and, darting hither and thither among the swarming players, makes 15 yards before he is downed, and the White and Blue colors run riot.

Carolina loses the ball on a foul and Davidson makes short, steady gains in a series of plunges through right tackle.

At this point, in their eagerness, the spectators crowded upon the field, and, notwithstanding the entreaties of the officials, moved back with extreme reluctance.

Davidson makes good gains and then loses the ball on a fumble. Bear and Roberson hit Davidson's line hard for short gains and then Newton separates himself from the tangled mass of humanity and makes a long run across the field for a gain of ten yards.

Carolina hits Davidson's line heavy and then fumbles. A kick follows and Wyman comes speeding up the field till thrown by a beautiful tackle of Bear. Fetzer then struggles through for 20 yards. McKay fumbles and loses the ball. Newton again skirts left end for a long run of 10 yards. He fumbles and Jacocks recovers the ball in Davidson's territory near the middle of the field. Time is up, with the ball in Davidson's territory, near the middle of the field.

SECOND HALF.

The two teams changed sides at the beginning of the second half and Roberson kicked off. Fetzer advances 15 yards. Davidson makes no gain and kicks. Roberson receives and advances 10 yards.

Story takes Seagle's place at guard.

The University rushes ball within 5 yards of the enemy's goal, when Davidson makes a grand stand. Three line plunges gain nothing and the ball goes over. Davidson makes short gain and then Wyman gets loose on a quarter back spectacular run for 30 yards. Davidson then fails to gain and kicks. Carolina gains steadily on plunges of Bear and Roberson.

Here an unfortunate interruption occurred when the opposing players began to fight among themselves. No one knows who struck the first blow. The policemen were rather hasty in using their clubs at this point.

The game is resumed again and Jacocks goes speeding around an end for a beautiful run of 30 yards.

Time is called and the game is over, with the ball in the possession of Carolina on Davidson's 40-yard line.

Mass Meeting Last Thursday Night.

The first mass meeting of the year was held in the Chapel Thursday night. Though there was a good attendance of old students, there were very few new students present. Consequently the crowd was not nearly so large as it should have been. The president called on Mr. Broadhurst to state the object of the meeting. Mr. Broadhurst made a very clear and earnest statement of the fact, if our team is to win this year the student body must give the players their support by showing interest and enthusiasm in the team. He gave a round scoring to the men who, instead of cheering a good play in the practices, stand on the sidelines, eating peanuts in apathetic silence.

After Mr. Broadhurst's speech, Capt. Stewart and several of the members of the team made short talks. Coach Brown, when called on for a speech, referred to his notes and said that his object in coming South was to coach a foot ball team and not to make speeches. The cheers that greeted him indicated that the men believed he was attaining his object.

Mr. Claiborne Carr offered a motion that the Advisory Committee be empowered to take steps toward Carolina's entering the Virginia League. The motion was passed. The rules of this League are the ones by which our chief rival, Virginia, is governed, and it is very desirable that we should meet her on an equal footing. Two of the most important rules of the League are that there is no one year rule and that a man is not allowed to play on a Varsity more than four years.

At the close of the meeting it was stated that Mr. C. T. Woollen would be unable to act as Chief Cheerer, and his resignation was accepted. Mr. B. H. Bridgers was elected to fill the vacancy.

Orders in the Two Lower Classes to Be Abolished.

The members of the various Sophomore and Freshmen orders have decided not to take in any more men after this year. In other words, these orders will gradually pass out of existence. The reason assigned for this step is that there are too many such organizations in the University, and that they cause useless factions.

Last Saturday's game should be a warning to us against the jingo confidence that is apt to characterize the college that has a good team. Everybody knew last week our team was a good one; everybody knows it now. But there are doubtless some who have been relieved of the delusion that our team is the only one in the South. It is a very opportune time for them to fill the vacancy with a saner view that we have a team which needs development and the support that the students can give it by furnishing enthusiasm, material aid, and a scrub team.

Coach Brown has shown himself to be a man of his word. Repeatedly he requested the men to stay behind the sidelines during the practices. The requests were not heeded and he threatened to close the gates when the team went on the field. The crowd persisted, and, as a result, the gates were closed yesterday. This is a vigorous method, but it seemed to be the only one of doing what was absolutely necessary. Appeals, threats, and running over a few unlucky members of the crowd was of no avail. But we have quit crowding the players now and we have quit seeing the practices. Probably we will see the practices again, and if we do let every man do his best to get in front of everybody else and to interfere with every play he can.

The question of board is undoubtedly one of the most important problems a college community has to deal with. For us Commons Hall has settled one phase of the problem, for, by furnishing board at cost, it has made it cheap. But the solution is not complete. No one can seriously say that Commons is especially satisfactory except from the financial point of view. The fact is, however, that a man looks on his boarding house not as a savings bank, but as a place to get something to eat. The cheaper he can get it the better, but that is not the prime consideration. A very important question is, can Commons give more satisfactory service without sacrificing its claim to being economical?

Last spring Yale started its Commons on a half-European plan, that is, boarders paid at the beginning of the month one-half the amount they had formerly paid for a month's board. This payment covered the cost of a seat in the dining room, service and the more ordinary articles of food which everybody eats. Whatever else a man wanted he paid for as he got it. This last was made convenient by tickets which were purchased for $5, and on which the value of the articles ordered were punched. Thus a man could make his board as expensive as he desired. The result was that students had the advantage of a restaurant and the dining hall had, on account of the tickets sold at the first of the month, its patrons assured as a regular thing.

This plan or some modification of it might be tried here to advantage. It is certain that now some things are served at Commons which nobody ever wants, while many other things are frequently on the table which some want and some do not. As a result of this men either have to eat what they do not want or there is a waste. Very frequently men come away from their meals and go to a store or restaurant to get what they failed to get in the dining room. When they pay the keeper of the store or restaurant they inevitably have a feeling that they are paying twice for one meal. There are now $8, $9 and $10 tables at Commons. The occupants of one are affected as much as those of another by the necessity of paying for what they do not want.

This editorial is not a fault-finder, but simply a suggestion. Perhaps there are few students coming here who are not surprised at the excellent board furnished at Commons for so small a charge. But still it is not as good as many want. One of the best features of Commons now is that there any man can out of so large a crowd find a company of messmates who will be congenial. If it were so that one could get the board he wanted, there would be a big improvement.

THE PHILOLOGICAL CLUB.

Papers by Dr. Smith and Dr. McBryde—Election of Officers.

The Philological Club held its first meeting of the year Tuesday evening. Dr. Smith presented the first paper on the subject, "Has the Infinitive in English a Subject?"

"Grammarians say," said Dr. Smith, "that the subject of the infinitive in English is in the objective case. In support of this statement they quote such sentences as 'He thought me to be wrong,' or 'It is best for me to stay.' This is little less than juggling with words." He proceeded then to show that the transitive verb and the preposition are the real governors of the case in these sentences. Sentences were quoted from Old, Middle and Modern English illustrating the subject. The sentences were in each case compared with typical examples from the classics and were shown to be quite different from the latter. In no English sentence of any period does it appear that the subject of the infinitive was, as determined by the infinitive itself, in the objective case. There were shown to be classes of infinitives where the subject is in the nominative.

After discussion of this paper by the Club, Dr. McBryde read an interesting paper on "Some Old English Choruses." In these choruses there was shown to have been a mixture of Christianity and heathenism and a development and decay of these elements as the people advanced in enlightenment. Dr. McBryde read a number of choruses collected by him in the libraries of English universities. In the discussion the point was brought out that, judging from the rare mention of these in contemporary literature, the use of these choruses must have been confined to the uneducated classes.

At the close of the meeting the following officers were elected for this year: President, Dr. C. A. Smith; Vice President, Dr. George Howe; Secretary, Dr. J. M. McBryde, Jr.

REMARKS.

Mr. J. V. Cannon went to Greensboro Friday.

Dr. R. O. E. Davis spent Sunday in Greensboro.

Mr. A. H. Bahnson spent Sunday at Winston-Salem.

Mrs. E. F. Robinson of Richmond is visiting her mother, Mrs. Archer.

Mr. M. Maffit was called to Charlotte Thursday by the death of relative.

Mrs. Alexander and Miss Alexander are visiting Mrs. Patterson in Athens, Ga.

Prof. and Mrs. Gore left last week for a visit of several weeks to Washington and Virginia.

Messrs. W. L. Mann, 06, and Stahle Linn, 07, have been elected to represent the Di Society in the Soph-Junior debate.

The following men attended the game at Charlotte Saturday: Messrs. O. C. Hoover, M. V. Cannon, T. F. Fry, J. B. Brown and D. G. Fowle.

All the copy for the Directory has been prepared and sent to the printers at Raleigh. The Directory will be ready for distribution in about two weeks.

Dr. J. A. Dimmette, Med. '02, of Louisville, Ky., was married on Oct. 4th to Miss Leila Owen Cheek of Rialto, Chatham county. Dr. Dimmette met Miss Cheek while a student here.

Mr. E. D. Broadhurst has been elected Solicitor of the Moot Court to succeed Mr. T. J. Gold, who will not be in the University this year. Mr. Gold is campaigning in the western part of the State. He will probably go to Columbia soon.

The co-eds were pleasantly entertained at a Russo-Japanese party by Miss Morrison last week. The following were present: Miss Harris, Miss Lambertson, Mrs. Pelton, Mrs. Robinson, Miss Millie Archer, Mrs. Archer, Mrs. Holahan, and Mrs. Henderson.

The contract has been let for a $60,000 building for the Young Men's Christian Association of the University of Virginia. The building is the gift of Mrs. William E. Dodge. It will be called Madison Hall. The endowment fund canvass has so far resulted in securing subscriptions for nineteen thousand dollars.

On account of the German next Friday night there will be a number of lady visitors on the Hill. For their benefit the moot court will be held in Chapel Saturday morning. The following embryo lawyers will entertain the audience: Messrs. Hoffmann, Stewart, Cheshire, Bryan, Bellamy, Wooten, Newton, Simmons, Sherrod, and Patton.

Possibility of a Game With A. and M.

Manager Lassiter is making every effort to arrange for a game with the A. and M. College. No agreement has been made yet and it is impossible to say what will be done. This game, if arranged, will be one of the most interesting of the season. The following is the A. and M. schedule as given by the Red and White:

Sept. 24—Guilford College at Raleigh.

Oct. 1—Open.

Oct. 8 or 10—Davidson at Charlotte.

Oct. 15—University of Virginia at Charlottesville, Va.

Oct. 26—A game at Charlotte.

Nov. 5—South Carolina College at Raleigh.

Nov. 12—V. P. I. at Roanoke, Va.

Nov. 19—Georgia Tech. at Atlanta, or Guilford at Greensboro.

Nov. 24—Clemson College at Raleigh.

In the Societies.

Di. Question: Resolved, That the Watts Law should be repealed. The negative won and Mr. Whitaker made the best speech.

Phi. Question: Resolved, That the salaries of the different United States officers should be increased. The affirmative won and Mr. Highsmith made the best speech.

A Generous Gift.

The members of the Phi Society very generously gave to the Athletic Association last Saturday night the fifty cents rebate on the library fee that was coming to each member. The other fifty cents was given in the spring to the librarian for the purpose of carrying on the cataloguing of the library. Instead of making the gift to the Association a matter for the majority to decide by vote, each individual member gave his part as a personal contribution. There were only seven men in the society who did not join in the movement. The praiseworthy act of the society has helped the Association very much, for the total of the contribution will amount to about seventy-five dollars.

Presentation of Baskerville Cup.

The loving cup which was ordered some time ago to be presented to Dr. Baskerville has come, and the presentation will take place next Saturday evening in the chapel at 8 o'clock. The subscribers to the movement will be delighted to know that the cup is a very beautiful one.

The programme for the occasion has not been definitely arranged. It is known, however, that President Venable will preside over the meeting, and that Prof. Williams, who made the first suggestion of the movement, will make the presentation. Every member of the University is expected to be present. Music will be furnished by the orchestra.

The Moore County Club.

The students from Moore County have organized the Moore County Club. The object of the Club is to make the men acquainted. The officers are: E. M. McIver, President; L. M. Kelly, Vice-President; Secretary, W. R. Clegg; Treasurer, W. A. Ray.

UNIVERSITY DAY.A Great Celebration by University Men Here and Abroad.

We celebrate to-day the most significant anniversary in the University. Happily there promises to be a celebration worthy of the occasion. This morning in the Chapel there will be a meeting of all the faculty and students. This assembly will be addressed by President Venable and Prof. C. Alphonso Smith. Music will be given by the orchestra and the University songs will be sung, with a practiced chorus leading. It will be an occasion to thrill the heart and swell the pride of a loyal son of our alma mater.

The title of the President's address has not been announced. Dr. Smith's will be on the subject "Literature in the South." This is a subject which could not be more interesting to any body of men than to the students of this University. It is one which is vital to them. The treatment of it at Dr. Smith's hands has been widely commented by leading scholars of the country. In addition to these an address was expected to be given by Chancellor Hill, of the University of Georgia. It was impossible, however, for him to be here.

This evening a reception will be given by the faculty to the seniors, graduate students, and the second year men in the professional schools. This reception will be given in Commons Hall and will last from nine until eleven o'clock.

Another feature which, while it is not strictly a part of the celebration, is very opportune on such a holiday, is the football this afternoon. Two games will be played. The Sophomores and Freshmen will play at two o'clock the cheapest game on record. Five cents will be the admission price and a good game is expected. At four o'clock the Varsity will line up against Bingham. This game will, of course, not be a first-class one, in fact, it is a twenty-five cent game. It will, however, be well worth seeing, and will be a good opportunity to take the afternoon off.

So much for the celebration here, where we have always observed the anniversary in various ways. But this year alumni associations throughout the State and in other States will have a special observance. This has not been a custom heretofore, and it is a pleasant sign to see that the alumni are making a start in this direction. It will no doubt add very greatly to the pleasure and usefulness of the associations. These sons who have gone out into the world will feel nearer to the old home as they celebrate in other places the day they used to celebrate here as students.

Those of us who celebrate here to-day the birth day of our alma mater will soon be celebrating as alumni. The enjoyment we get out of to-day and the spirit we put into it will have not a little to do with determining the pleasure these days of the future will bring us. So let us enjoy the anniversary of the birth of the institution that makes us brothers.

The North Carolina Society, of New York City, gives a reception in honor of Dr. Baskerville tonight.

Tributes to General Ransom.

As a mark of respect to the late General Matt Whitaker Ransom, who died last Saturday, no classes were held at the last hour Monday. The bell was tolled during this hour. In the afternoon there was a called meeting of the Philanthropic Society, of which General Ransom was a member, to pay tributes of respect to the distinguished dead. It was ordered to drape the hall in mourning and the following resolutions, presented by a committee previously appointed by the President, were adopted:

The Philanthropic Society having at all times held in great esteem the virtues and greatness of Matt Whitaker Ransom, one of her most distinguished sons, hears with sorrow of his death on Saturday last.

While a student member of the Society he was always active in her work, zealous in the promotion of her usefulness, and devoted to her welfare. Strengthened by her influence, and imbued with her ideals, he entered a life of usefulness to State and country.

Realizing that by his career as soldier, orator and statesman he has reflected honor upon his alma mater, the members of the Philanthropic Society, RESOLVE:

First: That in his death North Carolina loses a favored and distinguished son and the University an alumnus true, scholarly and able.

Second: That the Society mourns the death of a member devoted to her traditions and true to her teachings.

Third: That these resolutions be placed upon the minutes of the Society and be published in the State papers and a copy be sent to the family of our lost member.

Meeting of the Historical Society.

The Historical Society held its first meeting Monday night in the History room.

Dr. Raper gave a brief review of "Osgood's American Colonies in the 17th Century." He regards this book as one of the great landmarks in historical development; and believes that students of the future will find it one of their greatest helps.

Prof. Cobb discussed the condition of the coast of North Carolina as seen by the first survey sent out by the United States Government, and as seen by his recent investigation. He noted the great changes in general, but more especially that of the inlets and harbors. He also referred to the light houses and the wrecks at the capes on the coast.

Dr. Alexander gave a clear and striking description of his visit to the battle field of Marathon. He discussed briefly the different historical references and the probable truthfulness of each statement.

Dr. Battle, the President of the Society, made the interesting statement that the cane in his hand came from the field of Marathon, having been brought from there and presented to him by Dr. Alexander.

"It is fitting," he said, "that this cane should come to Battle." "It is fitting also, Mr. President," said Dr. Alexander, "to remember that the cane was cut from the peaceful olive tree."

UNIVERSITY DAY.

Celebration of the Anniversary of the Founding of the University.

Addresses by President Venable and Dr. Smith—Reception by the Faculty—Future Celebrations to be Much Greater than Those of the Past.

The one hundred and ninth anniversary of the founding of the University was celebrated last Wednesday more fittingly perhaps than ever before. Its celebration was not confined to the students and faculty here; the day was remembered and observed by University men in many places both in and out of the State. The celebration here consisted of two parts: the exercises in the Chapel in the morning, and the reception by the faculty to the students in the evening. The day was one to make a man proud to bear the name, University man.

The morning exercises were opened with prayer by Dr. Thomas Hume. After this the University Hymn was sung by the audience. The Chapel was crowded, and it seemed that everybody was singing. The song was led by a chorus of voices well trained by Mr. Woollen. Following this song were addresses by President Venable and Dr. C. Alphonso Smith. An outline of these addresses is given below. The President told the inspiring story of the progress of the University during the twenty-five years that have elapsed since he first became connected with it. The remark was made by someone after the services that Dr. Venable was certainly at his best that day. Another man said about Dr. Smith's address on "Literature in the South," that "it made you feel like the light of a golden age of poetry is about to break upon us." The meeting was closed with the singing of "Hark! the Sound of Tar Heel Voices." Every voice seemed thrilled with the inspiration of the occasion, and the song was never sung so well before.

Great credit is due to the orchestra, the chorus and to Mr. Woollen for the excellence of the music.

ADDRESS OF PRESIDENT VENABLE.

As this address is to be printed in the next issue of the Record, we do not reproduce much of the text here. An effort is made, however, to give some of the more interesting parts. Dr. Venable stated at the outset that the day marked the beginning of increased significance and importance of University Day. It was hoped, he said, that the movement started this year would result in a celebration of the anniversary each year wherever a half a dozen University men could get together. During the speech a telegram was received from the Wilmington Alumni Association, stating that they were holding their celebration and that they sent greetings to their Alma Mater.

A letter was read which had been mailed to every organization of the Alumni. The following are some extracts from the letter:

"It is with great pleasure that I report to the alumni a prosperous opening of another session of the University. The number of students already enrolled exceeds the total number for any previous session—a total of 621, without duplicates.

"Several new professors have been added to the faculty.

"It is believed that the unification of the courses, all three courses leading to one degree, has strengthened and toned up the work of the University.

"The new gymnasium is approaching completion and is one of the handsomest buildings on the campus. It is well fitted to its purpose and is regarded as one of the best built and most complete gymnasiums in the South.

"The Y. M. C. A. building will soon be under roof, but lack of means will prevent its immediate completion. Eight thousand dollars have been raised to date and four thousand more have been subscribed. One or two thousand dollars must still be raised, however, for its complete furnishing. This building has reading rooms, parlors, etc., and will form the general gathering place of the students in their hours of leisure giving a home-like centre for their life. The building is badly needed and should be pressed to completion.

"While little funds can be spared for the purpose especial care is being taken in beautifying the campus. Vines and many trees are set out annually. The large field to the east will gradually be turned into an arboretum."

Following this is a statement of the pressing needs of the institution: (1) increased income and enlarged faculty; (2) a new library; (3) a chemical laboratory.

The letter closed with the following greeting:

"Your alma mater sends you greetings and hopes for each of her sons prosperity and increased usefulness."

Dr. Venable closed his address with a brief account of the progress made by the University during the twenty-five years since he was called to take charge of the "School of Chemistry." In the interval the number of members of the faculty has doubled several times; the number of students has been increased by 450, and the value of the University equipment has increased $300,000. A high tribute was paid to Dr. Battle for his successful efforts in making the State realize that the institution belonged to the people of the State and is to be supported by them.

DR. SMITH'S ADDRESS.

The speech of Dr. Smith on "Literature in the South," was in part as follows:

"The Old South excelled in oratory and statesmanship, but not in literature. The best poets that wrote in the South before 1870 were Poe, Timrod, Hayne, and Ryan. The Old South produced also seven short poems that are likely to remain a permanent part of American literature. These are 'The Star-Spangled Banner,' by Key; 'A Health,' by Pinkney; 'My Maryland,' by Randall; 'Florence Vane,' by Cooke; 'The Bivouac of the Dead,' by O'Hara; 'My Life is Like the Summer Rose,' by Wilde, and 'Little Giffin,' by Ticknor.

"But why did not the Old South produce as great a literature as New England? Thomas Nelson Page assigns five reasons for the comparative dearth of literature in the South, but his reasons are hardly adequate.

"The renaissance in Southern literature came in the year 1870. The South had failed to respond to the new literary movement in 1830 because at that time her best intellectual energies were needed to defend her cherished institutions; but the war had liberated and nationalized Southern talent, and from 1870 to 1888 the great Northern magazines were almost monopolized by Southern writers.

"Literature in the South needs higher critical standards. We must put away local and provincial standards and must erect universal standards. Whenever a book or a poem is praised simply because it is Southern, critical standards are lowered, false impressions are made, impossible hopes are raised, and literature is wounded in the home of her would-be friends. Patriotism is one thing, literature quite a different thing.

"The most encouraging feature of our literature since 1870 is its fidelity to Southern traditions, Southern ideals, Southern life. Our history is being written in our literature. This is what Scott did for Scotland.

"It is a truth of universal application that literature loves a lost

ANOTHER VICTORY.

South Carolinians Outclassed But Put up a Nerve Battle.

Carolina defeated South Carolina College here Saturday in the snappiest game that has been played here this season. The South Carolina team, although clearly outclassed, went into the game with determination and got within 10 yards of a touch down in the second half. The team work of North Carolina was better than it has been in any game. The features of the game were Winborne's long run of 40 yards for a touch down and Jacocks' pretty drop-kick from the 30-yard line.

It looked at the start as if the Clemson-Carolina slugging match was to be repeated but the players settled down and played a clean game. Bear, of North Carolina, and Foster, of South Carolina, were put out of the game for slugging.

The stars were Webber and Jacocks for the Tar Heels and Foster for the Sandlappers.

The game in detail was as follows:

South Carolina receives kick on west end of field. Roberson kicks ball 50 yards and South Carolina advances it 25. On first rush ball is fumbled but Boyle falls on it. Wyman makes no gain through right tackle. On next rush ball is fumbled and Webber falls on it. Roberson gains 3 yards through left guard. Bear goes around right end for 25 yards; he fumbles but Roberson falls on ball. On next rush signal is missed and Jacocks downs ball. Roberson through left guard for 1 yard. Roberson makes 2 more through right tackle. Ball goes over. South Carolina kicks 25 yards and Roberson advances 10. On the next two attempts signals are missed and Jacocks is downed in his tracks, with no gains. Jacocks pulls out of this hole by kicking a drop kick from the field, which counts 4 points for North Carolina.

South Carolina receives kick on east end of field. Roberson kicks 45 yards and South Carolina advances 10. Oliver makes 2 over left end. Boyle 4 through left tackle. Tries same place with no gain. Boyle again runs with ball but is tackled by Webber for a loss of 2 yards. Wyman is thrown for a loss of 2 yards. North Carolina's ball. Barry around left end for 5 yards. Newton adds 3 through right tackle. Webber 8 through right tackle. Newton 6 through left tackle. Bear is taken out of the game for pulling a man off of Roberson and throwing him against the ground. Winborne takes his place at left half. Roberson makes 2 yards through left guard. Webber 5 through right tackle and runs against goal post but pushes ball over. Barry kicks goal. Score: North Carolina 10; South Carolina 0.

Economics Club.

The Economics Club, of which mention was made a few weeks ago, held its organization meeting Thursday night in the History room. Dr. Raper, to whose efforts the formation of the Club is due, spoke of the purpose of the organization. He said the South is just entering a period of industrialism, which will bring economic problems we have not hitherto had to meet. These can be solved, not by theories, but by a clear understanding of them, largely by actual contact with them. It is the purpose of the Club thoroughly to discuss such questions that its members may get the proper understanding of them, and know something of how to meet them.

Dr. C. L. Raper was elected president, and Mr. J. Kenyon Wilson secretary. The Club is to meet every other Tuesday night for an informal discussion of economic questions. The topic for the next meeting is "The South as the Proper Center for Manufacturing." The membership of the Club is to be composed of advanced students especially interested in economic problems.

The October German.

The first german of the season was given in the Commons Hall last Friday night and it proved a success in every respect. The german was gracefully led by Mr. Graham Kenan with Miss Lois Long of Statesville. Mr. Kenan showed himself to be a very competent leader and introduced many beautiful figures. He was ably assisted by Messrs. John G. Wood and T. H. Haywood. The music was furnished by Professor Levin's orchestra, of Raleigh. Those who attended the dance were as follows:

Graham Kenan with Miss Lois Long, of Statesville; Louis G. Rountree with Miss Millie Archer, of Chapel Hill; Preston Cotton with Miss Boyden, of Salisbury; Edward Hobgood with Miss Venable, of Chapel Hill; Archie Dalton with Miss Bradshaw, of Greensboro; John Wood with Miss Louise McMullan, of Edenton; H. S. C. College Team in Charlotte.

The football team of the South Carolina College passed through the city last evening on their return from Chapel Hill, where it met the strong aggregation of the University. Though defeated by a score of 27 to 0, they are in comparatively good spirits, as they feel that they put up the fight of their life against their sturdy opponents. The team expresses nothing but praise for the University students and were highly pleased with the treatment accorded them.—Charlotte Observer.

Endowment for the Department of the English Literature.

The resources of the department of the English Language have been materially strengthened by the annual donation to the department of $300. This amount will be spent each year solely for the purchase of works for the study of English Philology. This donation was made by Mr. Eugene Armfield, of High Point, a public spirited and loyal alumnus of the University. No other institution in the South and few in the North spend anything like $300 a year on its library for the advanced study of the English language. Dr. Smith sent off last week an order for $115 worth of books from a part of this fund.

LOVING CUP PRESENTED TO DR. BASKERVILLE.

The Faculty and Students Show a Mark of Esteem For Our Former Professor—An Impressing Occasion.

Last Saturday night the faculty, almost every student, a large number of the town's people and quite a number of visiting ladies met in Gerrard Hall to witness the presentation of a silver loving-cup to Dr. Charles Baskerville, recently professor of chemistry here and now professor of chemistry in the College of the City of New York. At the suggestion of Prof. Williams students of the University gave this cup to Dr. Baskerville in recognition of his usefulness and of the credit he is to the University. The meeting was very enthusiastic. Loud and prolonged cheers greeted Dr. Baskerville when he entered the hall.

Dr. Venable presided over the meeting and stated that its purpose was to do honor to one of the University's sons, a son worthy of the highest honor. He did not make a speech, but introduced Prof. Williams to present the cup.

Prof. Williams then arose and stated that Dr. Venable, in a fatherly way, had asked him to stop criticising folks and be happy for once. The Professor admitted he had made some criticisms in his life, but that he had a different word to speak on this occasion, a word which he had a right to speak with emphasis. He thought it an occasion for unrestrained joy; for one of our sons has achieved great things and won for us great honors. "There sits the fountain of his inspiration," he said, pointing to Dr. Venable, "and yonder is the laboratory in which he worked." With feeling he said: "This Southern man, working in a Southern laboratory, under a Southern teacher, by Southern methods, has achieved more than a national reputation."

He then proceeded to mention what this meant for the South. For forty years we have been compelled by force of circumstances to lead a secluded life, but we are now again entering the councils of the nation. We regretted to give up our gifted son, but when we think of it in a broader way we must feel glad; for we have not really given him up, but have sent him to one of the nation's councils where he will play a man's part and with credit to us. We say to the world, "Here is a man, for courage, for brilliancy, for dash, for high-mindedness, match him if you can!"

The South, he said, is entering a new and great area of achievement. The canal will mean more to us than to any other part of the country. All shared Professor Williams' inexpressible feeling at the suggestion that all our activity at present, as great as it is, is only the beginning of greater things. It means work, it means honesty, it means more work; but everything indicates that the South will meet the obligation.

Professor Williams then took the cup, handed it to Dr. Baskerville and said that it was one of the most pleasing events of his life to present him that token on behalf of the students of the University.

The hearty and continued applause of the audience manifested its appreciation of the significance of the event.

At this juncture Capt. Stewart, of the foot ball team, addressed the audience, and said that the distinguished visitor was an athlete and that when he was at the University he was the best friend to the foot-ball team that it has ever had. He then proposed that the team give Dr. Baskerville nine rahs.

After the athletes' loud cheers and as soon as the rest of the audience quieted, Dr. Baskerville addressed it. "Students, Teacher, Scholar, Friends:" and proceeded with his introduction by stating that twelve years ago he was on the Varsity eleven when it first went against Virginia. The team was defeated, whereupon some one asked the young Baskerville where he was from.

"North Carolina," was the reply. "And where's that?" was the next sneering question.

"Well," he said, "Virginia lies just north of it, South Carolina lies just south of it, and they both lie so much about it that I am not surprised that you profess to not know where it is." "They both know where North Carolina is now," Dr. Baskerville added.

He then continued in a forceful way to say that North Carolinians had done things in politics, in manufacturing, in battle, in education, and in many other fields; and they had not done it by scrimping but by spending. For it takes spending to do anything, spending in an economic way as well as in other ways. Just here he directed a timely hint to our Legislature. He said that the legislators of our State must learn that it requires expenditures to accomplish anything, and that spending on this institution is the best paying investment in the State—not only in the State but in the South. The College of the City of New York had been founded, he said, to solve great problems of sociology, to make good citizens of the motley horde of foreigners in the metropolis. The president of that institution in welcoming him expressed gladness at his bringing with him the ideals of the good Old North State.

He then acknowledged his indebtedness to his old teacher, Dr. Venable, and paid a beautiful tribute to him in mentioning what he had done. He told the audience that our President's contributions to knowledge were better known abroad than at home. Only a few days ago a distinguished foreigner said he marvelled at Venable's modesty.

He then proceeded to make a brief suggestion of one of the problems of science, that of transforming the elements, thereby establishing the theory of unity in the field of science. Witness the marvellous activity of radium, he said, and you have reason to believe that the dream of the alchemists will be realized. He showed much enthusiasm in suggesting this great idea.

He closed with Robert E. Lee's advice: "If you want to be missed by your friends, be useful," and with "I thank you from my heart."

Dr. Venable then dismissed the audience.

Bingham vs Carolina.

Carolina met the foot-ball team of Bingham of Mebane here last Wednesday and defeated it by a score of 50 to 0.

The game was somewhat one-sided, although not enough so as not to be interesting. Carolina's work was fast from the start. Most of her gains were from five to ten yards, and there were a number of twenty and thirty yard runs, and one pretty sixty yard run by Jacocks on a fake kick. The work on the defense was good, not allowing Bingham to make first down a single time. The biggest gain that Bingham made was one end run of four and a half yards by LeGrand.

Bingham put up a very sportsmanlike game. Although having no hopes of anything like victory, they went into their plays well and got them off fast. LeGrand and Kuydendall played good ball while they stayed in, but Bingham's star was the plucky little quarter-back, Maffitt, who made several hard tackles. All of Carolina's backs showed up well, especially Newton, Bear, Roberson and Jacocks.

THE FACULTY RECEPTION.

The reception given by the faculty in the evening was a distinct success. The purpose of the reception was to enable the members of the faculty and the advanced students who are not usually brought into contact with each other, to become acquainted. The students invited were the Seniors, second year men in the professional schools, and graduate students. On account of an unfortunate misunderstanding, a number of students were kept away. This would not have been suspected, however, from the size of the crowd present, for many enjoyed the hospitality of the faculty that evening.

Mr. Hayne Davis, of the class of 1890, has written so many valuable articles for The Independent, of New York, that he has received the honor of an invitation to be the guest of the International Parliamentary Conference at St. Louis.

east end of field. South Carolina kicks 45 yards and ball is advanced 15. Newton makes 6 yards through left tackle. Winborne tackled for loss of 2 yards. Jacocks no gain on end run. Jacocks kicks 40 yards and ball is advanced 2 yards. South Carolina man put out of the game for fighting. Wyman gains 5 yards around right end. Townsend is hurt but resumes play. Cogburn 5 over right tackle. Webber breaks through and tackles man for a loss of a yard. Quarter runs with the ball but doesn't go out five yards before turning and North Carolina gets 20 yards. South Carolina kicks 30 and Jacocks advances 5. Newton 20 around left end. Townsend 2 around right end but fumbles and South Carolina gets ball. Cogburn 2 through left guard. Wyman 4 through left tackle. North Carolina off side and is penalized 5 yards. Wyman no gain. Next rush ball is fumbled and Roberson gets it. Roberson over center for 4 yards. Ball hits Jacocks in the face on being passed and he fumbles but regains ball. Winborne 4 through left tackle. Webber 2 through right tackle. Webber hurt but resumes play. Roberson 4 through left guard. Winborne 6 around right end. Barry 1 around left end. Story 3 through left tackle. Winborne 10 through right tackle. Roberson 3 through left guard. Roberson again 3 through left tackle. Story 2 through left tackle. Newton 2 through right tackle. Roberson ends this series of steady gains by going over left guard for a touch down. And Stewart steps back and gracefully kicks goal. Score: North Carolina 16; South Carolina 0.

South Carolina has played a plucky game but is beginning to weaken before the steady rushes of North Carolina's heavier aggregation.

Roberson kicks off 40 yards and ball is advanced 10. On next rush Reed goes around right end for a pretty run of 35 yards and Jacocks stops him. Time is up for first half. Length of half, 20 minutes.

SECOND HALF.

North Carolina receives kick on west end of field. South Carolina kicks 50 and Roberson advances 10. Newton around left end for 10, but ball is brought back and South Carolina given 15 for holding in the line. Jacocks kicks 40 and ball goes over quarter's head for 15 more. Boyle 1 yard through right tackle. Wyman 1 yard through left tackle. Ball is fumbled and Webber falls on it. Winborne makes long run of 40 yards around right end for a touch down. Barry kicks goal. Score: North Carolina 22; South Carolina 0.

South Carolina receives kick on west end of field. Roberson kicks 40 yards and no advance, quick tackle by Townsend. McGee goes over right end for 3 yards. Oliver 3 over left end. Boyle tackled by Webber for loss of 4 yards. Webber tackles Wyman on next rush for loss of 2 yards. South Carolina punts and Winborne gets ball. Newton makes 6 yards around right end. Jacocks adds 1 around left end. Newton hurt but goes back in game. Roberson gains 4 yards

Wright takes Townsend's place at left end. Roberson kicks off 45 yards and ball is advanced 10. Boyle goes through left tackle for 3 yards. Wyman 4 through right tackle. Reed goes 1 over right end. Boyle makes 2 around right end. McGee adds four around right end. Cogburn over center for 1 yard. Boyle 3 over right tackle. McGee 1 over left end and fumbles but South Carolina gets ball and advances 3 more. Gudger takes Newton's place. McGee around right end for 3 yards. Again around right end for 15 yards. Oliver loses 1 yard through left tackle. Boyle goes over right tackle for 12 yards. Singletary takes Webber's place at left tackle. Wyman 5 through right tackle. Reed goes over left tackle for 3 yards. Boyle tackled back of line for loss of 3 yards by Wright. On next rush the ball is fumbled and North Carolina gets it on their 10-yard line. Roberson 3 through right guard. Jacocks around right end for 10 yards. Jacocks fumbles ball but falls on it. Jacocks punts 40 yards. Oliver 2 through right tackle. Boyle 1 through right tackle. McGee 2 through right tackle but didn't go out five yards before turning and South Carolina is penalized 15 yards. South Carolina kicks 30 and Roberson advances 8. Jacocks goes around left end for 20, but North Carolina is penalized 15 yards for holding in the line. Jacocks punts 35 yards and time is up. Time of second half, 17½ minutes. Final score: North Carolina 27; South Carolina 0.

No. 5.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR US.

The Norfolk Athletic Association no Match for the Brawny Tar Heels.

While the interest in last Saturday's game was not very great because we were not playing a college team, everybody is very glad we won, for the result is a new evidence of the prowess of Carolina's team. The following is what Coach Brown has to say of the game:

"From the first it was evident that the Norfolk team was outclassed. In but two instances was it able to hold the North Carolina team for downs and when it had the ball could not gain consistently. Walsh, the old V. P. I. guard, opened a hole once through which a Norfolk back gained five or six yards. Gill, the Norfolk quarter, another V. P. I. man, gained twenty yards on a fake kick. He also carried the ball back on the kick-off for twenty yards. The Norfolk team could gain in no other attempts.

"The backs who started the game, Carpenter, Roberson and Newton, rarely failed to gain easily. Webber and Story also carried the ball well. Jacocks used better judgment in picking the weak points in the opponents' defence and his work in carrying the ball was fine.

"Stewart and Seagle had an easy time with their men and repeatedly broke through and stopped plays behind the line, but Maness had a harder time with his more experienced opponent.

"The team work has improved since the South Carolina game. The linemen and backs pulled and carried the runner better than in any previous game. The backs picked their men, forming some strong interference.

"Altogether the work of the team was very good. The play was fast and smooth in the first half but slow in the second because of the time taken out by the Norfolk team."

Special to Charlotte Observer.

GREENSBORO, Oct. 22.—The University of North Carolina met the Norfolk Athletic Association football team here this afternoon at Cone Athletic Park and simply demolished them by a score of 41 to 0. The annihilation of the Virginians began from the time the referee's whistle blew and continued, with brief interruptions, until the time-keepers yelled, "Time-out." The Tar Heels excelled the boys from Norfolk in every department, in attack, in defence, in team work, in kicking and individually. So speedy were the Tar Heels' assaults, concentrated with such rapidity of execution, and so varied were they that the boys from Norfolk were not only at sea in trying to stop them when they did gauge them, but were baffled in trying to fathom the attack. Carolina's tremendous strength in the rush line, a remarkable fleetness of foot on the part of the backs, mechanical team play, coupled with electrical snap and dash and physical condition, produced by Coach Brown, that was above the usual, served to carry the day for the White and Blue. Carolina fumbled less than any time this season and her team work was superb. The Norfolk aggregation has heavy and fast material, but is sadly in need of good coaching and training. They showed up miserably, both offensively and defensively. They appeared to want staying strength. Carpenter and Newton played the game for the Tar Heels, but the whole White and Blue team showed up remarkably well.

GAME IN DETAIL.

Carpenter kicked off for Carolina and Webber went over in less than two minutes for the first touch down. Barry kicked goal, 6 to 0. Carpenter kicked off, ball advanced two yards, Norfolk loses on downs on 38-yard mark. Carpenter pushes Jacocks through the line like a battering ram for a touch down. Stewart misses goal, score 11 to 0. Carpenter kicks pig skin 20 yards beyond Norfolk's goal. Ball brought to 25-yard line. Virginia fumbles; Carpenter carries ball 40 yards, Webber 15 yards and Carpenter, after skirting Norfolk's left wing, goes over for touch down. Barry kicks goal. Score, 17 to 0. Carpenter kicks 10 yards beyond goal line, leather brought to the 25-yard mark. Norfolk loses on downs. Newton bucks line for 25 yards. Carolina loses on downs. Carpenter pushes Norfolk man back for loss of 15 yards. Carpenter pulls Roberson down the lot for 35 yards for a touch down. Barry kicks goal, score 23 to 0.

The second half opened up with Bear in Carpenter's place, no other change. Norfolk kicked off to Carolina's 25-yard mark, Jacocks advances ball 42 yards, Newton hurdles the line for 15 yards, Story skirts left end for a gain, and Roberson goes over for a touch down. Barry kicks goal, score 35 to 0. Norfolk kicks off. Jacocks advanced over 40 yards. Carolina penalized 10 yards for off-side. Jacocks run 45 yards for a touch down. Barry kicked goal. Final score, 41 to 0.

NORFOLK COULD NOT SCORE IN CAROLINA.

The Norfolk Landmark has the following to say about the game: Owing to the coaching of Brown, who helped to bring out the crack V. P. I. team last year, and lack of training by the visitors, the University of North Carolina team defeated the Norfolk football eleven in a well played game at Cone Athletic Park, Greensboro, this afternoon by a score of 41 to 0. The spirited, plucky game put up by the visitors proved to be quite a surprise to the Carolinians, who, as soon as they saw what they were up against, got down to work, and in a game, which showed plainly their splendid football form, outplayed their opponents, who, but for lack of training and team work, would have made a much better showing.

Though Carolina scored heavily against them, this is no discredit to the Norfolkians, who made several excellent plays, the work of Barry and Webber being remarkably clever and able. Carpenter and Bear at half, for the Carolinians, played a fast, snappy game, as did Stewart at center and Newton, who hurdled several times, but was downed after having gained many yards. Gill, quarterback; Woodward, full back; Walsh, guard, and Upsher, end, of the Norfolk team, were in the game from start to finish, and executed a number of good plays which showed that they are no novices at the business.

Carolina had her crack team in the field, and considering this and the fact that the Norfolkians lacked the necessary training that comes from long, steady practice, their showing is all the more creditable.

The Norfolk boys are more than satisfied with their trip. They left for home to-night, having had a very enjoyable visit, and expressed themselves delighted with the cordial treatment which they received here.

North Carolina and Georgetown will meet on the gridiron at LaFayette Park, Norfolk, Saturday, November 5th. The North Carolinians expect to carry a large crowd of rooters from "Down Home" for this game, who, with the large contingent of Carolinians resident there, will cheer them on to victory.

President Venable and Professor C. Alphonso Smith addressed the State Historical Society at its meeting in Raleigh on October 15. Dr. Venable spoke on "The University in its Relation to the History of Carolina." The subject of Dr. Smith's address was "The Average American." The speeches were reproduced in full by the Raleigh papers. Dr. Smith was the retiring president of the society.

A KICK.

The following letter was received a few days ago:

Fairfield, Fla.,
Oct. 19, 1904.

To the Editors of THE TAR HEEL:

As an alumnus of the University of North Carolina I still take a great deal of interest in the well-fare of my Alma Mater, and, though no longer a resident of North Carolina, my college enthusiasm has not waned in the least. Feeling that I am not alone in my position I will take liberty of making a general kick at the way some matters are carried on in reference to the Alumni, non-resident, I mean.

Although the law requires that a child shall respect and obey its parent, it also requires that the parent shall have some interest in its offspring. The laws of human nature are to some extent based on affection between mother and child, even though the child may become weaned, and live many miles distant from its parent. Now while I am not in any shape to be of any financial assistance to my Alma Mater, still in every way that is possible I try to be of some service to her yet, though my suckling days are over, i. e. in trying to get boys of ability and purpose to go there, and supporting her causes wherever possible, often I regret to say to my loss. Not that the loss is intrinsically much but a fellow hates to be downed.

The kick I wish to make is this—why is it necessary for a non-resident alumnus to have to renew by special letter his subscription to THE TAR HEEL, when his name has been on the list of subscribers for seven years, or the Magazine, when he would be glad to subscribe to same if he ever had a notification of its beginning publication? Again why is it necessary for him to have to literally beg on bended knee for a copy of the annual, and then be refused for reasons unknown? It of course may not be true that other non-residents may have had this experience, but there is certainly one who only gets information from his Alma Mater by a process something like extracting eye-teeth.

A Non-resident Alumnus.

The "kick" is a very reasonable one; it is, moreover, against a condition which we hope to alter. There are two circumstances responsible for this state of affairs: first, lack of continuity in the management of the paper, and second, the little interest shown by the students in the TAR HEEL. Each of these points is worth considering.

The "Kicker" asks that his name be put on the list of subscribers with a note that it is to stay there forever. This can be done easily but there is not much guarantee that the list and note will be seen two years from now. The paper has no centre, no base which is permanent. The accounts as kept are largely in the nature of personal

THE STUDENT who goes from one college to another has to occupy a rather delicate position; he has to be true to the one he attended first and he cannot be a traitor to the second one. Of course, if he left the first one without any affection to connect him with it or perhaps because his associations there were unpleasant, the difficulty does not exist for him. But the average emigrating student is not that way; in the first college he attends, he forms friendships and associations which affect greatly his after life. When he has to leave that institution on account of the inadequate advantages offered him he takes with him the recollection of those associations as he goes to form others. Sometimes he has difficulty in mixing them. When he gets on the sidelines to whooping it up for his new team he can do it heartily—unless it is opposed to his old team. Then, as a man of this class said, he has to stay on the fence.

The mass of students are too regardless of the feelings of these men. Some thoughtless ones expect them to transfer their interest in a body when they change their place of residence. Such thoughtlessness is not very creditable. There are others, however, who are led far astray by an equal lack of consideration; they unhesitatingly criticize harshly an opposing team perhaps in the very presence of a man who has played on that team. This is enough to make any new comer homesick. An incident of this kind occurred here recently. A number of men were discussing what was spoken of as a disgraceful act on the part of an opposing team. A man who was standing near said in a tone of feeling: "They had some provocation for so doing. They are not in the habit of doing such things without a cause." The speaker, a professional student, was a graduate of the institution represented by the criticised team and had played on that team for two years. These incidents ought not to occur.

THE custom of promiscuously wearing U. N. C. caps is a harmful one to the University and should be stopped. Many men who make some pretensions to athletics go away from here wearing caps or hats with the monogram and are looked upon by the village baseball enthusiasts as representatives of the Varsity. Perhaps the truth of the business is that the average cap wearer of this kind has never worn a foot ball or base ball suit here. The result is that a false impression is created in the State regarding our athletes.

Not only is this false impression created abroad, but the value of the monogram is cheapened here. If the caps were made a mark of honor and distinction second to the sweater it could be made very effective as a part of our athletic system. This could be easily done by allowing only the best scrubs, the members of the winning class teams, and of course, the Varsity men, to wear caps. At present a scrub has the honor to distinguish him as one of the men who helped to make the team. He leads a hard life, and on the campus and elsewhere he has nothing to distinguish him from the man who sits on the side lines watching the practice and eating peanuts in well-dressed and indolent complacency. This is a clear case of injustice. Scrubs should feel that they have something to work for besides spasmodic spells of gratitude that break out in mass meetings and apparently soon pass off. How to furnish this incentive to the scrubs has been a difficult question. The cap is suggestive as an answer. The class team moreover would play much harder if they had the assurance that the winning team would have the privilege of wearing a mark of distinction. The class teams develop scrubs and Varsity players, and everything possible should be done to increase healthy rivalry among them.

As for the Freshmen who go the Fair wearing U. N. C. caps—most of them do it,—it is enough to say that they will soon learn that University men do not advertise themselves.

REMARKS.

Mr. A. R. Berkley, '01, is on the Hill.

Mr. Tillet went to Greensboro Saturday.

The Seniors will have a smoker at Pick's tonight.

Mr. W. L. Mann spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

Mr. Graham Kenan went to the Greensboro game Saturday.

The Geology 4 class went to the gold mine Saturday afternoon.

Mr. C. H. Mebane went home for a few days' visit last week.

The hour for supper at Commons has been changed to six o'clock.

Dudley Pierce spent several days at the fair in Raleigh last week.

Mr. R. R. Reynolds has been elected captain of the scrub football team.

Messrs. B. J. and William Boylan spent several days in Raleigh last week.

Foot-ball practice begins now at 3:30 o'clock every afternoon instead of 4 o'clock.

Rev. C. H. Detwiler, of Charlotte, will preach the University sermon next month.

Little Bully Jones was away on a visit to the eastern part of the State last week.

Mr. J. K. Wilson spent several days in the country surveying the first of the week.

Mr. Dalton, of Greensboro, was here on a visit to his son, Mr. Archie Dalton, last week.

Mr. E. D. Sallenger, of Durham, gave a theatre party in honor of the foot ball team last night.

There will probably be another game between the all-class team and the scrubs next week.

Messrs. Nixon, Weill and Henry report a glorious trip to Raleigh. Mr. Brigman does likewise.

Hon. Ike London has announced his intention of going to Durham. He will take pleasure in giving further information.

The gates of the foot-ball field will be closed all this week on account of the crowd running on the field and interfering with the practice game.

In Chapel this morning the President requested that the students refrain from making unnecessary noise near the infirmary on account of the illness of a patient there.

The students from Buncombe County are thinking of forming a society for the purpose of becoming better acquainted with each other. There are about twenty-five Buncombe men here.

The Geological Journal Club had an unusually interesting meeting last Tuesday evening. Professor Collier Cobb gave an account of Some Recent Changes in Cape Cod. Mr. Geo. S. McNider gave analyses of Alkali Deposits in Wyoming, with some discussion of their origin; and Mr. A. W. Mangum, '97, gave an account of the work of the U. S. Soil Survey in the Alkali lands of the Southwest in which he has been engaged. This Survey now has among its experts eleven U. N. C.

men, and recently the U. S. Geological Survey has asked that some of them be transferred to its irrigation service.

Scrub-All Class Game.

In a game between the scrubs and an all-class team Saturday afternoon neither side succeeded in crossing their opponents' goal line. Fifteen and ten-minute halves were played. The scrubs won the toss and chose to kick off.

Cheshire booted the ball for fifty yards and it was returned by Thompson ten yards. Gudger fumbled several times, but each time succeeded in carrying the ball through the scrubs' line for about three yards. The scrubs held their opponents for downs twice, forcing them to kick. Both kicks were blocked by the scrub tackles. Thompson, the big full back made all the gains for the all-class eleven.

In the second half Thompson and Gudger were ruled out for wearing base-ball spikes on their shoes.

Yokley started the second half by kicking the ball fifty yards to the scrubs. It was returned fifteen yards by Cheshire. The ball was kept in the middle of the field during most of the game. Raper played a splendid game for the scrubs and every time the ball was given him he hit the all-class line hard with his 160 pounds of muscle. The game was characterized by lack of interest on both teams. The scrubs can without doubt put up a better game almost any time than they did Saturday.

The officials were Coach McRae and Mr. Jenkins. Mr. Scroggs acted as time keeper.

Ginghoul Reception.

The Ginghoul's gave a most enjoyable reception Friday night, Oct. 14th., just previous to the german Music was furnished by Levin's orchestra, and the delicious refreshments were served by Dughi, of Raleigh.

The members of the order were present with guests as follows:

W. S. Bernard with Miss Millie Archer, H. McR. Jones with Miss Louise Bellamy, Preston Cotton with Miss Lois Long, Harry McMullan with Miss Lillie Ferral, Francis Cox with Miss May Hume, Edward S. Burwell with Miss Louise McMullan, A. H. Bahnson with Miss Bradshaw, Graham Kenan with Miss Boyden, J. W. Winborne with Miss Louise Venable, T. Grier Miller with Miss Andrews, Hal Worth with Miss Nell Flinn, Claiborne Carr with Miss Ray Flinn, T. P. Cheshire with Miss Young, Albert Cox with Mrs. Geo. Howe, Burke Bridgers with Mrs. Lawrence McRae, J. R. Moore with Miss Dora McRae, Professor Howell with Mrs. Vance.

Changes in Football Rules This Year.

Mr. Walter Camp has a very interesting short article in the last issue of the Yale Alumni Weekly on "Effect of Rule Changes on Football Games." The following is one paragraph from the article:

"Briefly, the alterations for this season consist of the extension, over all parts of the field, of the rule limiting the number of men in the scrimmage to six, and the admission of the quarterback run also to all parts of the field; the use of a horn by the umpire to distinguish his call from that of the referee; the reduction of the value of a field kick goal from five points to four, a more distinct classification of penalties and the alteration, one of considerable importance, of the penalty for offside in the scrimmage to five yards instead of ten or formerly, two years ago, the loss of the ball; and of holding in the line to fifteen yards instead of twenty. The privilege of retaining possession of the ball by retreating twenty yards has also been done away with."

Mr. Camp is of the opinion that the change in values of the field kick will not affect the playing. The quarterback, run, he says, promises development. This play is to be used more this year than last, but as it is comparatively new, there must be time for the plays in which it is to be used to be perfected. The new rules regarding the number of men in the line make it easier than formerly to block kicks.

Rhodes' Scholarship Examination.

The examination for the Rhodes scholarship will be held about the middle of January. All those who wish to stand this examination must file their application with the chairman of the State committee at Chapel Hill, by December 1st. President Venable, it will be remembered, is chairman.

A Correction.

In the account of the Philological Club in last week's paper, this sentence occurred: "Dr McBryde read a number of choruses collected by him in the libraries of the English universities." The use of the word "choruses" was an error of the printer. The sentence should have read: "Dr. McBryde read a number of charms," etc.

Rev. A. C. Phillips to Preach the University Sermon Next Sunday.

Rev. A. C. Phillips, Secretary of the Presbyterian Publication Committee, Richmond, Va., will visit the University and address the Y. M. C. A. on Friday and Saturday evenings, Oct. 28-29. On Sunday evening Oct. 30, he will preach the University sermon for October.

Dr. Phillips is a distinguished alumnus of this University. He was graduated in 1880. He is a son of the late Dr. Charles Phillips, professor of mathematics, U. N. C. Dr. Phillips will be the guest of President Venable.

accounts of the business manager. No office is provided for him and no facilities for preserving his correspondence or records in such a way that his successor may learn from them and profit by them. The permanency of any of the records is very largely a matter of chance, with the chances strongly against preservation. Not only is this true from the business standpoint, but the editorial department suffers also from having no place where the board of editors can meet and discuss the policy of the paper, do their work, and read the exchanges. The long and the short of the matter is, the TAR HEEL needs an office. Until it gets one no department of the paper can reach its best growth and until then subscribers will be in danger of having their names lost with the subscription lists that are discarded and made out anew each year.

As to the patronage given by the student body to the paper, that is nothing short of a disgrace to the University. The number of students who are subscribers is not more than one-third as great as it should be. The aim of a college newspaper is, of course, to keep up with everybody, to keep everybody informed of what is doing, and to reflect the sentiment of the college. The TAR HEEL, it must be admitted, receives but poor encouragement in efforts in this direction. The lack of interest shown by the men while they are students here must be taken as an indication of the interest they will take in it afterwards. This criterion does not point out a very marked desire to keep up with the paper and the University on the part of a large percentage of University men. We regret that this should be so, and especially we deplore that any loyal alumnus should ever feel on this account that he is being slighted or forgotten. We hope that such cases will not occur in the future.

V. P. I. FAILS TO SCORE.

Carolina Does up Her Old Rival in Handsome Style by a Score of 6 to 0—Great Team Work by the Tar Heel Artists.

In defeating V. P. I. Saturday North Carolina made amends for her defeat of last year. The V. P. I. team was a surprise to us, as few people outside of the cadets at Blacksburg knew how strong the team was, for coaches, students and supporters of the team had kept everything a secret. In all her preliminary games V. P. I. had intentionally kept the score down and had sent out most discouraging reports of the team's progress.

Every man played good ball and our victory was deserved. In the first half the play was entirely in V. P. I.'s territory and but for a bad decision of the referee, we would have scored easily. V. P. I. kicked off to us. Jacocks was instructed to play a kicking game and on the second down punted 45 yards. V. P. I. was forced to return the ball by the same method as she could make little impression on our line. Jacocks and Roberson returned the ball at least ten yards every time they kicked while Barry and Townsend invariably downed the backs who received the kicks in their tracks. V. P. I.'s backs handled punts so poorly that we gained many yards on every exchange. On Jake's second punt we regained the ball as V. P. I. fumbled. On two punts and a few line plays, all within three minutes, we carried the ball the entire length of the field and had it on their three yard line. The referee here made a miserable decision, giving the ball to V. P. I., who immediately kicked out of danger. Webber broke through for thirty yards, almost passing the last man, who, fortunately for V. P. I., tripped our tackle. Soon after Story made twenty-five yards around the other side. Here the referee penalized us five yards because some spectator, unknown to us, called out: "Hold them, Carolina!" Time was called for the first half with the ball in V. P. I.'s territory.

At the beginning of the second half we kicked off to V. P. I., who advanced the ball 5 yards. After a series of line plays they advanced the ball about 20 yards, when we held them for downs, forcing them to kick. We advanced the ball about 15 yards when we kicked. V. P. I. then, after a series of quarterback runs, brought the ball to our 35 yard line when another guard back run was attempted. Webber broke through and tackled Harris so fiercely that he fumbled. Townsend was on it like a flash and was down the field for a touch down, and before V. P. I. realized it they were scored on. Barry kicked easy goal.

V. P. I. then kicked off, the ball going over the goal line. We brought the ball out to the 25-yard line when Jake punted 45 yards. It was here that V. P. I. made a desperate effort to score, but were disappointed by the fierce defense put up by Carolina.

The game ended with the ball on Carolina's 35-yard line in the possession of V. P. I.

University Sermon.

The University sermon for October was preached by Dr. A. L. Phillips, of Richmond, Virginia, in Gerrard Hall Sunday night. Dr. Phillips's father and grandfather both lived in Chapel Hill and he is an alumnus of the University. He spoke with much feeling to the students and town people who gathered in the Chapel to hear him.

His subject was "Christ's Aid as a Man to Men." He based his remarks on Mark's account of Christ's temptation in the wilderness. The speaker said: "These temptations of Jesus were the testing of Him as a man. Many centuries have been spent working out the Divinity of Christ. To-day this is virtually accepted as true and the study that is done along this line tends to strengthen Christ's Divinity. But men are now turning to the humanity of Christ. To see in what respect He was a man. Because men want the sympathy of a God-man. Christ was a God always and a man always.

"The humanity of Christ was shown in His temptations. Christ went in the wilderness at the beginning of His work as the Messiah for three reasons: first, to work out His own character; second, that He might clearly define His work as the Messiah, and lastly, that He might meet Satan who pretended that he was the master of this world. Satan's purpose in meeting Christ at this time was to tempt Him to come into His Messiahship by a short cut. He appealed to Christ on three sides to get Him to make this short cut. The first was through the material or sensual, secondly, through presumption, and thirdly, through His ambition. At each thrust Christ met him with the Bible and overcome him.

"These temptations mean to each man that Christ will help him because He has been tempted in the same point. Christ came to help a man be a man and His life as a man means victory over sin to the one who learns the lesson and relies upon Him."

THE SENIOR SMOKER.

An Innovation that Proved a Great Success.

The Senior class had a smoker at Pickard's hotel last Wednesday night which was a delightful affair. Fifty-nine of the sixty-two members of the class were present, and everybody had a good time. Dr. Howe and Professor Williams were the guests of the class.

The affair was an innovation and had for its purpose the bringing of classmates closer together. President Townsend said in his address that it was a great fault of University life that men leave here and never know the members of their own class. "The class of nineteen-five proposes to correct this evil, and where can we begin better than here around this festive board?" After this address a well-appointed menu was served.

Over the coffee cups and with the cigars came addresses by the guests and responses by the members of the class. Dr. Howe spoke first and gave an interesting account of student life and class organizations at his alma mater, Princeton. His talk made every student there feel that a great loss has come to us from the needless and senseless divisions that exist here between classmates. Dr. Howe was responded to by Mr. Carr and Mr. Barnhardt who expressed their belief in the uselessness and banefulness of divisions and in the hope that they will not longer be.

Professor Williams said that the occasion was one for which he had hoped and worked for many years, for it marked the breaking down of artificial barriers which keep men from the enjoyment and accomplishment of their fullest rights and development as University men. He was responded to by Mr. Wilson and Mr. Shore in short, earnest talks.

After these addresses everybody pushed back from the table and spent the remainder of the evening in singing and in listening to informal speeches by members of the class. Several men were called on and responded in happy remarks. The company dispersed only when the lights blinked, and going away some one made the remark: "The only trouble was it was not two hours longer."

Death of Mr. J. W. Lisk.

Mr. J. W. Lisk, of Norwood, N. C., died in the infirmary here Friday, Oct. 18, at twelve-fifty p. m. Mr. Lisk entered the University last September, and had been here only a few weeks when he was taken ill and went home. He returned to the University after an absence of a week, apparently recovered, but was soon taken ill again, this time with typhoid fever, from which he died. Although Mr. Lisk had been at the University but a short time, his upright character and pleasant disposition had won for him the friendship and respect of all who met him and his death cast a gloom over the entire college community.

The body was taken to Durham Friday night and from there to Norwood where the interment took place Sunday. Messrs. A. H. King, C. C. Barnhardt, W. B. Love and J. L. Hathcock as a committee from the Di Society accompanied the body as far as Durham, and Messrs. F. W. Dunlap, representing the Di Society, and D. M. Umstead, representing the Freshman class, went on to Norwood to attend the funeral.

At a call meeting of the Freshman Class Saturday morning, October 29, 1904, the following resolutions were adopted:

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from us our friend and fellow classman, John W. Lisk, of Norwood, Stanley county, N. C., to a brighter home above; and whereas, he was a promising member of our class, therefore, be it resolved:

First: That we, the members of the Freshman Class, feel the loss of our comrade; and.

Second: That we tender to his bereaved loved ones our sincere sympathy and commend them to Him Who doeth all things well.

Third: That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the TAR HEEL, University Magazine, to each of his county papers, the State papers, and also a copy to his sorrowing family.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our fellow member, J. W. Lisk; therefore be it resolved:

1. That we, the members of the Dialectic Society, while bowing in humble submission to the Divine decree, cannot but deeply realize and regret our loss.

2. That in his death this Society has lost an earnest and faithful member.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the bereaved family.

4. That these resolutions be spread on the minutes of this Society, and copies furnished the family of the deceased, the TAR HEEL, and the University Magazine.

WHAT about a man who takes a seat because he knows a co-ed is going to take the one next to it?

It is a mystery how V. P. I. can get along without continuous reports. The best thing in the world, next to a good game, is a good report.

The Senior smoker last week was the first step in a great movement, the thorough organization of the classes. Our classes have not heretofore had an efficient organization, and the effect has been harmful to the development of individuals and to the influence that the classes should exert. Some of the graduating classes have formed permanent organizations and thus help their Alma Mater and themselves. The fact is, though, that organization is delayed too long to permit its being perfected. Men who were not together when they lived in the same college community cannot by meeting just before commencement and electing officers get very close together. If they were not brought into contact with each other when they lived near to each other and under the direct influences of their Alma Mater they will not associate when they live far apart and are in the struggles of life in the world. The time to get together is when they have an opportunity to see the personal side of the men with whom they should form an association that will be a power in the State and nation.

One thing which would have a great effect in increasing the class feeling and thereby feeling for the Alma Mater is a more marked distinction between the classes, a difference in the privileges which they are to enjoy. At present the only privilege which is peculiar to the Senior is that of wearing a cap and gown at commencement. The Junior has none at all except exemption from Chapel attendance. The only man who has increased privileges to look forward to is the Freshman. There is practically nothing to make classmates feel that they have a community of interest, to draw them into association with each other. If a Senior felt that there was one place which was the peculiar property of his own class, a common meeting ground for him and his fifty or sixty comrades, he would go there and be with those comrades often. The men of the other classes, each enjoying the peculiar privileges of his own class, would look forward with longing to the time when he would be a Senior. And when that time came he would feel that the men who had run the race with him were worthy comrades.

MASS MEETING MONDAY NIGHT.

A Splendid Welcome to the Team Returning from their Victory

The most enthusiastic mass-meeting of the year was held Monday night to welcome the team on their return from their victorious trip to Blacksburg. Everybody realized that Saturday's game was a worthy one, gained by magnificent work of our team. And the cheering showed that the team has a student body behind it.

A bon-fire was built in front of the South building, and the crowd gathered there cheering for the team, the coach, and the scrubs. When the fire,—which by the way saved the gym builder the trouble of disposing of his barrels,—was at its height, everybody went to the Chapel to finish the ceremony. The Chapel was crowded when the team came in borne on the shoulders of enthusiastic students and cheered lustily by the happy crowd. Captain Stewart was called on for a speech, and responding he told "how they did it". Coach Brown helped him tell the tale. Several other players made speeches under great difficulties, for the cheering crowd gave speakers mighty little show. Professor Noble was called on for a speech, and, as usual, was equal to the occasion. He closed his happy talk by offering a sweater to the scrub who made the most improvement during the remainder of the season.

After the speaking Mr. Cotton gave a new song which he has composed, and which was greatly liked by the crowd. Several other songs were sung before the meeting adjourned to attend the Shakespeare Club.

REMARKS.

Bully Jones went to Raleigh Saturday.

Mr. C. T. Woollen is visiting in Virginia this week.

Dr. Smith returned from a visit to Greensboro Monday.

Messrs. H. F. Fry and Claiborne Carr spent Sunday in Greensboro.

Washington and Lee will give cross-country running a place in her athletics this year.

Dr. Alexander returned Saturday from Atlanta where he attended the marriage of Mr. John L. Latta, '95, and Miss Margaret Newman. The bride is Dr. Alexander's niece.

The charter of the Phi Beta Kappa has come. The work of installing the chapter will soon be done. Some inaugural exercises with an address by a prominent member of the society will take place some time later.

One of the stars on the Freshman team was ordering a sweater the other day. "How much extra will it cost to have the letters put on it like Stewart's and the other fellows? That's the way I want it," was part of the orders.

A continuous report of the Virginia-Indian game was received in the Chapel Saturday. A good crowd was present. The telegraph instrument was a little too fast for the operator, but he caught enough to let us know that Virginia has a mighty good team.

The Marvelous Michigan Team.

Everybody is talking this year about the great team Michigan has. Many believe it is the best team in the country. Columbia has cancelled her game with them, giving as an excuse that her games with the Eastern colleges makes her schedule heavy enough. The Michigan men do not hesitate to say that Columbia is afraid of them. These Western wonders did the work for West Virginia, and this is what the latter's paper, the Athenaeum, has to say about it:

Like travelers returning from a country of which none of the neighbors know anything, the West Virginia University football team has been telling most marvelous tales of their journey to Michigan. The tales told vary only in the amount of the marvelous inserted. This much, however, is common to all: Michigan is a land of giants and swift movements. Here again reports differ, some contending that the smallest man weighed only three hundred pounds, while others place him at at least a ton. Here is the story of the game as told by one of the players:

"West Virginia lined up along the side lines and drew lots to see who would venture out in the field to kick off. The unlucky fellow crept warily out to the center of the field, drew back his shuddering leg, gave the oval a gentle boost and then scudded for the side lines and safety. A good sized Woolverine of two hundred and fifty pounds caught the ball and while he was going down for a touch down the other ten came up at full speed for the hapless West Virginian. They jumped on him and left him on the field for dead. Then the West Virginia lads lined up behind the goal posts and tried to keep the Michigan full back from making two touch downs. He was too fast, however, and slipped in before they could see him. We knew nothing more till the game was over. They said that Michigan beat us, and I think they did."

The following information has been obtained: None of the Michigan players were on horseback. The Michigan papers said West Virginia played a good game. The quarterback did not score twice on the same play. None of the Woolverines were hurt. Only fourteen of Michigan's seventy plays were tried. Michigan lined up with the reserves after the game for a little practice. Big men can run fast if they are on Yost's team. It is not true that the Michigan center eats a whole cow every day; as a matter of fact, it takes him nearly three days.

Meeting of the Shakespeare Club

The Shakespeare Club held its second meeting last Monday night and completed its organization. The officers are Dr. Thomas Hume, President; Dr. J. M. McBryde, Vice President; Mr. I. C. Wright, Secretary. Mr. N. A. Townsend represents the Senior Class and Mr. C. H. Sloan the Junior Class on the Executive Committee. Mr. I. C. Wright read an interesting paper on "The Comedy of Errors" as illustrating the transition from the older comedy to the finer Shakespearean type.

Dr. Hume in an instructive and lively paper defined the evolution of the asinoria festa and other travesties in connection with the dramatic features of the older liturgical series.

The Club will hold its regular meeting on the third Tuesday night in the month.

Schubert String Quartette to be Here Next Week.

The Music Association will offer a rare treat to the music lovers of the University next week. They have engaged the Schubert String Quartette to play on the evening of the ninth. This quartette is one of the best musical organizations in the country and the Association has to pay a high price to get them. We hope that no one will neglect the opportunity to hear so good a performance for such occasions are very unusual for us.

The quartette, in addition to its performance here, give only three others in the South, namely, one at Raleigh, one at Winston-Salem, and one at Augusta. The date at Raleigh has already been filed and the following comments were taken from the Raleigh papers:

The recital was truly one of the most delightful ever heard in Raleigh, sustaining fully the excellent reputation of the Company.—Morning Post.

The quartette played their way at once into the good graces of the audience and even with the heavy classical program rendered the audience followed with the closest attention.

Rarely do the musical people of Raleigh have the pleasure of listening to chamber music of such a high order. It can support such organizations.

The playing of the quartette in the different numbers showed a beautiful ensemble and their purity and beauty of tone shading were that of real artists. The middle group of the program was composed of three lighter numbers. The program beginning with a Hayden Quartette and ending with Mendelssohn's Quartette in E minor. The Bach Air on the G string for violin and the Chopin Etude in C sharp minor for violincello showed Mr. Loud and Mr. Blair to be soloists of mature training. The ever popular Brecherini Minuet was played with a charming delicacy rarely equalled.

From an artistic standpoint the concert was a great success and on leaving the hall expressions of extravagant praise could be heard from every one on the work of the artists.—News and Observer.

Mr. W. A. Pettus, of New York City, Speaks to the Students.

Mr. W. A. Pettus, of New York City, conducted the Mission Study Rally of the Y. M. C. A. October 23rd in the Chapel. Mr. Pettus is traveling in the interest of The Student Volunteer Movement which has for its work the banding together of the college men who expect to become foreign missionaries, and also to increase the interest in missions among the colleges. The speaker based his remarks on the passage in John where Christ after having asked Peter three times if he loved Him, told him to feed his sheep. This was the way Peter was to show his love for the Master, and it is still the way man has to show his love. The speaker then showed the great need in the foreign field. He then presented the question of the study of missions and about twenty men enrolled in the classes. But afterwards a canvass of the College was made and the enrollment reached 120. There are to be four classes studying missions in Japan, two classes studying the lives of some of the prominent missionaries, and two classes of medical students studying medical missions.

SCRUBS DEFEATED.

Welch Neck High School has the Best of a 12-6 Game.

In a game Saturday at Hartsville, S. C., the scrubs were defeated by Welch Neck High School by a score of 12-6. The halves were 20 and 25 minutes. The scrubs won the toss and received the kick which was advanced for fifteen yards by Cheshire. Both sides lost the ball several times on fumbles during the first half, and during the latter part of the half Welch's backs crossed the scrub line, but were forced back fifteen yards for off-side play. Thompson was laid out about the fourth rush and was forced to retire from the game while Mann was substituted in his place. In the first half the scrubs held together and played good ball, but in the second half they didn't do so well. Score end of first half, 0-0.

In the second half the Welch Neck boys took a brace and with kicks and guard back plays they succeeded in making the first touchdown. They failed to kick goal.

When the ball was on scrubs' twenty yard line Welch Neck fumbled and Pitman got the ball and ran almost the entire length of the field for a touchdown. Reynolds kicked goal making the score 6-5.

This time the scrubs received the kick and, finding it unable to make their distance, Heide dropped back for a kick, but Edminson threw the ball three feet over his head. Heide recovered the ball and kicked out of bounds, giving Welch Neck a touch back. With another touchdown for Welch Neck boys, the score at the end of the second half stood 12-6.

Cheshire played a good game for the scrubs. The scrub interference was poor while that of Welch Neck was perfect.

In the backs the scrubs were out-classed. The scrubs were on the defensive most of the time.

The line up was as follows:

The scrubs will probably go to Charlotte next Saturday where they will play the Charlotte artillery.

The scrub team will probably go out a little earlier this week than usual in order to get into condition for the Charlotte game.

OUR FIRST DEFEAT.

Carolina Played a Fine Game But Lost to Georgetown's Stronger Team—A Good Crowd, a Good Game, and Some Hard Luck for the White and Blue.

SIXTEEN TO NOTHING.

Before the game we expected a different result. At the end of the first half we thought our expectation was justified. But the second half did the work. Georgetown simply had a stronger team. Carolina had some of her best men out of condition, or the result might have been different.

Carolina had the ball at the first of the game and worked it rapidly toward Georgetown's goal. The crowd in the Chapel, listening to the report, went wild with enthusiasm, and the operator could hardly hear the telegraph instrument for the cheering. With every report came a new outburst and there was almost a continual yell. "Carolina has the ball on Georgetown's 40-yard line." An instant later, "Carolina loses the ball on a fumble." That was the time when the crowd in the Chapel saw that Georgetown could carry the ball too, for the Washington men carried it back just about as it had been carried down over them. Time was called while this was going on. The interest in the game was shown by the men not leaving the Chapel during the intermission; a large crowd was present and practically everybody was too anxious for news to run the risk of losing any.

The second half showed the handicap of a lighter line. Carolina did everything that spirit and good playing can do. Every now and then she would do some brilliant work, and through it all she played a steady, good game. Every man who heard the report believed to the very last that we would score, but Georgetown's weight was too much.

FIRST HALF.

Carolina won the toss and Carpenter kicked off, the ball going beyond bounds and brought back 25 yards. Carroll punted and Jacocks received the ball. Bear whooped things up at the start with a quick dash around the right end for 15 yards. Roberson went through Georgetown's center for five yards. Carpenter failed to advance. Jacocks tried goal from the field and Georgetown blocked the ball and got hold of it. Several unsuccessful attempts were made to buck Carolina's line. North Carolina showed up in splendid form and was playing some good football. They held Georgetown back to a finish. Finally, Larkin, Martell and McCarthy wiggled their way through the left guard for two, four and two yards, leaving the ball on the 40-yard line, and by failure to make necessary advances, surrendering the pigskin to the other team.

It was Carpenter, Carpenter, Carpenter for a time now. The star half butted through the line and around the ends for five successive gains. Roberson got in a 2-yard advance and Carolina stopped. They gave up the ball on failure to move further. Twice Georgetown threw the whole strength of their heavy line against their lighter opponents and hurled them back toward their own end of the field.

It was at this stage of the game, with the ball on Carolina's 50-yard line, that the spectators witnessed some of the hardest playing of the game. Back and forth the heavy mass of humanity struggled and surged. In many mass plays no gains of consequence were made. Carolina still held her own valiantly. Georgetown eventually tried a placement kick from the 40-yard line, Carpenter receiving the ball and returning five yards. It was at this time that Givens, the 235-pound center on Georgetown's team, fell upon Carpenter's shoulders while the latter was on the ball, and gave the Carolina right half a jolt that came very nearly putting him on the retired list. With a mouthful of sponge-water, Carpenter arose and continued.

Story advanced twenty yards around the end assisted by Full Back Roberson. Story dragged both teams ten yards and finally went down with twenty-one men on top of him. When they dug him out he came up smiling and grimy. Carpenter followed Story's play with a 10 yard gain around Georgetown's right tackle. Carolina got five yards on an off-side play on the part of Georgetown. It was now Carolina's ball on the 25-yard line, with both teams in good form and eager for the fray. Slowly, but steadily, Carolina forged across the field, with short, but decided, gains. Both elevens were struggling hard and some scrappy football was interjected into the contest about this time. Finally Carolina fought her way to a point within three yards of Georgetown's goal. The crowd were beginning to feel like putting a little more money on the Tar Heels. Georgetown's rooters got busy, so did Carolina's. It was a critical point in the game, and, as afterward turned out, the critical point for Chapel Hill, for it was the closest they ever got to a touch down.

Through some mistaken signal or misplay, or something of the kind, Carolina made a disastrous fumble and the ball went to Georgetown.

This was where Georgetown proceeded to get in the Old Cattleman's sinful line bucking. Down across the gridiron they pushed, in 2, 3 and 5-yard gains, working Carroll over time, as did Carolina Carpenter, from start to finish. When Carroll got tired Martell took the ball and tore his way through Carolina's line for for fifteen yards over right guard.

Time was called at the end of the first half, with no score. In this half Martell, Carroll and Mahoney played Georgetown's game, while Carpenter and Jacocks constituted the whole of the North Carolina show. An expert would have given Carolina a little the better of this half.

SECOND HALF.

The tide changed in the second half. There was more hard playing and some pretty groggy players before the finish, though no one sustained serious injuries. Georgetown's furious line bucking and hyking were the wonder of the on-lookers. It was during this half that Carpenter took Story's place at North Carolina's right tackle, Newton going to right half in Carpenter's place, and the North Carolina captain had Full Back Roberson to give way to Winborne. Georgetown made the following substitutions: Le Mat for Neill at right guard, Lux for Hart at right half, McGuire for Givens at center and Richmond for Larkin at left half.

Mahoney kicked for Georgetown, Bear returning the ball ten yards. Carpenter and Roberson made a few short gains of two and three yards, round end playing, Carolina losing the ball on failure to advance. Georgetown got busy with more line bucking at this juncture, ploughing through the Carolina support almost at will. First it was Mahoney for three yards, then Martel for five and Larkin for four, and so on until the ball was pushed to Carolina's 35-yard line. For a brief period Carolina pulled herself together and held her ground, but later gave way as Georgetown, with repeated onslaughts on her opponent's lighter and weaker line, pushed on through to goal, Mahoney scoring the first touch down of the game, amid the cheers of the rooters from Washington. Mahoney kicked goal. Score: 6 to 0 in favor of Georgetown University.

When the teams lined up again Carpenter was at right tackle in lieu of Story. Newton going to right half.

Georgetown kicked to Carpenter, who returned the ball fifteen yards. Carpenter next made his 40-yard run around Georgetown's left end and was downed by McGettigan, when the goal was all but clear in front. Jacocks and Bear kept Georgetown tacklers off in splendid style. Carpenter, though badly jarred in this play by Givens, wormed his way through the line again for five yards. Losing on line plays, Jacocks was forced to kick. He sent the pig skin sailing over the field forty yards, the ball being brought back twenty-five yards. This was where Martell, George-town's full back, dashed clear through Carolina's line and on to the goal, easily the play of the game. The big fellow crawled along with a score of players tugging away at him, finally shaking them off and hurrying on to the goal, with the giant Givens at his side. Mahoney missed the goal. Score: 11 to 0 in favor of Georgetown.

At this juncture Le Mat took Neill's place at right guard and Lux went into Hart's at right half.

Things were beginning to look squally for Chapel Hill. The team was weakening rapidly, while Georgetown's form showed no perceptible change since the beginning.

Mahoney kicked to Jacocks, who returned the ball 5 yards. Carpenter performed a brilliant 25-yard run around the end, advancing from the 15-yard line. Carolina lost again on a block kick, giving the ball to Georgetown. Carroll was pushed through the line for five yards. Carolina put Winborne in to relieve Roberson at full back.

The ball was now on Carolina's 10-yard line. It was comparatively easy for Larkin to push his way over for a touch down. Richmond was then put in to relieve Larkin and Givens taken out for McGuire. Again Mahoney failed to kick goal. Score: 16 to 0 in favor of Georgetown.

When Mahoney kicked Carpenter got hold of the ball and threw it over the fence. With only a few more seconds to play, the game was resumed after a brief delay and was quickly concluded.

The Directory.

The Directory has been received from the printers. It is a very neat booklet and is a credit to the Y. M. C. A. and to the committee which prepared the book and supervised publication. It contains a production of the map of Chapel Hill made by Mr. Curtis, the instructor in drawing. This feature adds a great deal to the convenience and usefulness of the book. Besides the name and address of every member of the faculty and of the student body, a schedule of the lecture course for this year, a list of the licentiates, and a weekly schedule of the Y. M. C. A. work are given. The book is a great convenience and is an improvement on the one published last year, being much neater in appearance and handier to use.

We have the pleasure of entertaining our friends from Raleigh next Wednesday.

College Topics warns Carolina against over-confidence. "It takes," she says, "more than one Carpenter to make a team." Incidentally it might be remarked that the general opinion in this part of the country is that Virginia must hold more than one Council to win this year.

We met our first defeat last Saturday but the loss was no more than a cause for regret. We played against worthy rivals and were outplayed in a good game. The trouble was we went up against a stronger team, and we were ourselves somewhat out of condition. But Carolina played a fine game and the whole college is proud of the team.

Next Wednesday we have one of our best games. The A. & M. has a good team and she will make her supreme effort against us. So, while no man here doubts that the game is ours, we shall have to do some playing to win. Of course, our team can do it, but we must show them that the student body is with them and will do any thing that can be done on the side lines. The whole college never had a better opportunity to show that they are a unit for the team. Every man in college should be on the side lines next Wednesday and he should have his voice in perfect condition.

As Virginia Sees Us.

The University of North Carolina seems to have a team of equal strength to that of last season. The Tar Heels are always slow in developing, and they made a very discouraging start this year. Although they piled up 29 points against Guilford, they were held to a 0-0 game with Davidson a week later. It was hoped by the coaches of Carolina's team that her offense would be especially strong this year, and for a while she gave a great promise in this respect. For this reason the Davidson game was a sore disappointment. There must have been a shake-up at Chapel Hill, for three days later South Carolina was crushed by a score of 27-0. Last Saturday the Tar Heels played their first important game, and won from V. P. I. 6-0. It will be seen that the Carolinians are improving steadily, and will undoubtedly give a good account of themselves Thanksgiving Day.—College Topics.

REMARKS.

Professor Gore has returned home.

Dr. Coker is visiting in South Carolina.

Don't forget the Schubert String Quartette tonight.

Mr. E. D. Broadhurst is spending some days in Greensboro.

Dr. Howe was visited last week by his brother from New York.

Messrs. J. B. Robertson and M. L. Mann went home Tuesday to vote.

Messrs. J. R. Hoffman and W. J. Barker spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

Mr. C. C. Buchanan has been absent from the "Hill" for the last few days visiting Chatham County.

Dr. Venable was absent several days last week. His classes were met during his absence by Dr. Mills.

On account of the A. & M. game next Wednesday, THE TAR HEEL will not come out till Thursday next week.

Two hours and twenty minutes from the end of the car line at Durham to Chapel Hill is pretty good walking. Some of the Y. M. C. A. men say they did it Sunday night.

The Sophomore class held a meeting Monday evening and decided to have a banquet in the near future. A committee was appointed to collect funds and make all necessary arrangements.

Dr. M. C. Guthrie, of last year's medical class stood a civil service examination in Washington recently for a position in the government hospital service, and topped the list of those who passed successfully. Dr. Guthrie, it will be remembered made the highest mark before the State Board of Medical Examiners last summer.

The following gentlemen attended the Y. M. C. A. Conference at Trinity College last Friday, Saturday and Sunday: Messrs. W. M. Upchurch, R. T. Scott, W. B. Love, G. L. Paddison, G. F. Leonard, T. G. Miller, J. R. Shall, R. C. Day, E. C. Herring, B. O. Shannon, O. B. Ross, C. C. Barnhardt, V. Williams, E. G. Weaver, W. R. Claytor, L. W. Matthews, J. W. Curtis and P. H. Rogers.

Elisha Mitchell Society.

A meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was held in the Chemical lecture room, Tuesday, Nov. 8. The following was the program:

Molecular Attraction.—Mr. J. E. Mills.

Experiments on the Development of the Skeleton in Sponge Larvae.—Mr. H. V. Wilson.

The Theories of Dyeing with special Reference to the Constitution of Cellulose.—A. S. Wheeler.

The Journal Club.

The Chemical Journal Club held its 34th meeting Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 1st., with nineteen members present. Dr. Wheeler, the leader, spoke on "Some Present Problems of Organic Chemistry"; Mr. Marriott on "Electrolysis and Catalysis"; and Mr. Jordan on "The Hydrolytic Products of Cane Sugar Fibre."

TENNIS.Tournament With Virginia: College Tournament.

Last year we sent two men to Virginia to play a tournament against a team from that University. This was the first time the two Universities had met on the tennis court. Virginia has written here this year wishing to continue these tournaments, having one this fall and one next spring. And as our representatives went to Charlottesville last year, they want to come here this fall. They wish to make this arrangement as near permanent as possible, that there shall be two tournaments each year, one in the fall and one in the spring, and that these tournaments shall alternate between Chapel Hill and Charlottesville.

A committee has been appointed from the Tennis association to look into the advisability of having two representatives from Virginia come here this fall for a tournament. There is plenty of material in College for a good team of tennis players and there is no reason why we should not play Virginia.

But although we do not play Virginia, which is very probable, there will be a tournament held by the Tennis Association this fall to decide the championship of College. This tournament will be started in a few days. No one will be allowed to enter this tournament except members of the Tennis Association, and it is hoped that every one who wishes to enter will hand his name to Mr. H. M. Emerson at once. It is probable that the winner of this tournament and the next best will compose the team to play against Virginia.

Co-Ed Difficulties.

The upper-classmen of the University of Minnesota recently formed an Anti-Hat-Lifting League, the members agreeing not to remove their hats to co-eds. They gave as a reason that it was a nuisance; that there was danger in exposing one's head to the cold. We thought then it would be a good idea for them to go where they could learn some manners. The "dear girls" have it in for them, however. The following is from an exchange:

"In opposition to the 'anti-hat-lifting league' of the men at Minnesota, the girls have formed an 'anti-smile association'. The girls say that smiling causes wrinkles, and that in cold weather they can not waste heat in warm smiles. According to the girls, their aim is 'brains without manners'. The 'anti-lifting' movement, however, goes peacefully and successfully on."

The Philological Club.

The Philological Club met Thursday night of last week. Papers were read by Prof. Toy and Dr. C. Alphonso Smith.

A rather unique feature of the annual class rush at Butler University was the presence in the crowd of two women of the University who were so carried away by enthusiasm that they jumped from places of safety into the middle of the fray. Several students were badly scratched and bruised, among them the doughty women.—Ex.

On Saturday, October 15, Professor Baskerville attended a reception given to him by his former students at the University of North Carolina. A handsome loving cup was presented to him as an expression of their cherished gratitude for their former teacher.—Columbia College Mercury.

To Our Exchanges.

We owe our exchanges a profound apology. Not until after last week's issue had been printed did we learn that the paper had not been sent to them each week. A very unfortunate mistake of the editor and business-manager was responsible.

Don't Break Any More Lights.

President Venable announced Monday morning in Chapel that when window lights are broken in the future they will not be paid for out of the general damage fund, but must be replaced by the occupants of the rooms. The reason for this action is that a few men do nearly all the breaking while playing ball near the buildings, and it is thought unfair that the whole college should pay for what a few individuals do.

MODERN LITERATURE CLUB.

An Organization Offering Much Promise to Literary Life and Effort in the University and in the State.

Several faculty members and advanced students have organized the Modern Literature Club. The purpose of the club is to encourage interest in contemporary literature and to give the members a clearer knowledge of what is going on in the world of letters. Monthly meetings will be held at which papers will be presented and discussed, and, besides, the club will also occasionally invite men of other parts of the State who are interested in its work to give addresses here. The club will, as a representative of the University, extend to these men from abroad a friendly hand, and the result will be a connecting link between the two which will be of mutual advantage.

The following are extracts from the constitution:

"The club shall be composed of such members of the faculty of the University of North Carolina, graduate students in the departments of language and literature, and other persons interested in literature and literary work as shall apply for admission.

"Its primary aim shall be the cultivation of a broader interest in contemporary American, English and Continental literature. Other literary studies, bearing particularly on modern life, shall not be excluded. It shall be the aim of the club to encourage original literary effort in the University and in the State of North Carolina. For this purpose it shall endeavor to associate with itself persons who are connected with or interested in current movements in the affairs of letters.

"Any member of the faculty shall on application be admitted to membership in the club. Applications for membership from students in the University and residents in the town and from all other persons desiring admission shall be submitted to a membership committee of five who shall decide upon such applications and shall report their decision to the club. On the adoption of this report, these applicants recommended by the committee shall be declared members of the club.

"The sessions of the club shall be open to members only except when otherwise arranged.

The membership committee consists of Messrs. L. R. Wilson, E. D. Broadhurst, W. S. Bernard, T. B. Higdon and J. H. Vaughn. The President, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, is ex officio chairman of the committee.

The officers of the club are: President, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith; Vice-President, Mr. T. B. Higdon; Secretary and Treasurer, Mr. Frank McLean.

A TIE GAME.

Carolina Plays a Weakened Team and meets an Unexpectedly Strong one from the A. & M.—Some Good Playing—Frequent Fumbling.

SIX TO SIX.

There are just about three parts to the story: Carolina did not have Carpenter; A. & M. had Wilson; Carolina had conceded too much for the sake of getting the game; both teams played good ball. The game started with a rush, and before it had fairly begun Carolina had scored. This seemed to throw the Carolinians off and make them too eager. At any rate when A. & M. started toward the goal line, their rushes were not met and stopped. Roberson made a fine play in one of these rushes; from the side line it looked as if he was holding a half-dozen men. It seemed impossible for the team, however, to hold the visitors. The A. & M. made a touchdown and kicked a clear goal, and there was no more scoring. The remainder of the half showed better playing by Carolina.

In the second half the game was pretty evenly divided. Carolina had the best of it except for some costly fumbles. A. & M. did not hold back much better. Neither side played a steady game. The features of the game were a double pass by A. & M. and a great run by Winborne. Near the close Captain Stewart rallied his men with wonderful effect. It was then that Winborne's run was made. There was determination in Carolina that meant business, but time was called. An A. & M. substitute was heard to remark, coming off the field, "I was so God—glad when time was up, I didn't know what to do."

Captain Stewart said after the game, "I am perfectly satisfied with the work of the team except during about five minutes when the defense was poor." Jacocks was not up to his average on kicking. Townsend, Webber, Roberson and Barry played a splendid game. The A. & M. stars were Wilson and Abernethy. The A. & M. made a series of gains on a tandem play that gave her a touchdown.

The crowd was good and the cheering enthusiastic. A large number of A. & M. rooters came on a special train from Raleigh. The treatment of the players by the crowd was perfect. The officials knew their business, and there was no squabbling.

DETAILED REPORT.

A. & M. received the kick off on the west end of the field. Roberson kicks and ball rolls on ground for 50 yards and Abernethy, left tackle for A. & M., falls on it. On first rush A. & M. fumbles the ball and a Carolina man falls on it. Webber is given ball and goes over Gardner at right tackle for 4 yards. Bear is next given the ball and goes through the same place for 15 yards. He gets free of the line and Sadler, quarter back for A. & M., stops him. Newton is next pushed through right tackle for 4 yards. Carolina is playing snappy ball and pushing well. The ball is on the 10-yard line. Townsend goes over Gardner and is thrown with a gain of only 1 yard but the team pulls him up and pushes him over for a touch down. The ball has been in play just one minute. Barry kicks goal. And Carolina has made her only score of the game. Score: Carolina 6; A. & M. 0.

A. & M. receives the kick on east end of field. Roberson kicks 53 yards and H. Wilson advances 10 yards, but Townsend is off side and Carolina has to bring ball back and kick again. Roberson kicks 35 yards and ball is advanced 10 by H. Wilson but he fumbles when tackled and Carolina man falls on it on 30-yard line. Newton makes 2 yards through right tackle. Newton is again given the ball but fumbles and A. & M. falls on ball but fumbles on attempting to advance and Barry falls on it. Newton adds 6 yards around right end. Bear goes through left tackle for 5 yards. Story makes three through the same place. Ball is on A. & M.'s 14-yard line. Webber over left tackle for 2 yards. On next rush ball is fumbled but Barry falls on it, losing two yards. Jacocks prepares to try for drop kick but ball is thrown over his head and A. & M. man gets it. H. Wilson makes 3 yards over right tackle. H. Wilson adds 1½ over left tackle. A. Wilson goes over right tackle for 2 yards. H. Wilson makes 4 yards over left tackle. A. Wilson makes ½ yard over right tackle. He again takes ball for 2½ yards over same place. On third down and 3 yards to make A. Wilson punts 35 yards. Roberson catches ball and passes it to Jacocks just as he is tackled and Jacocks advances 12 yards. Barry takes ball around left end and on attempt to pass it to Newton throws it over his head and A. & M. man falls on it. Hadley gains 8 yards through left tackle on tackle back formation but is called back and Carolina given 5 yards because there were too many men in formation. Hadley is again given ball and makes 7 yards. A. & M. here begins to play the tackle back formation by which they gradually push the ball down the field for a touch down. Abernethy makes a series of rushes over left tackle for successive gains of 5, 4 and ½ yards. On next rush Abernethy fumbles ball but A. & M. regains it. He again takes ball for gains of 3 and 5 yards over same place. On next attempt he makes no gain at same place. Then in one more rush he adds 8 yards, placing the ball on Carolina's 3-yard line. H. Wilson makes 2 yards through right tackle.

On next rush A. Wilson goes over for touch down. T. Lykes kicks goal. This tied the score and ended the scoring for both sides.

Carolina receives kick off on east end of field. A. & M. kicks over goal line and have to kick over, on account of an off-side play. Next time A. & M. kicks 40 yards and Carolina returns ball 3 yards. Bear makes 3 through left tackle. Bear hurdles line for 2 yards. Jacocks on attempt at quarter-back run loses 3 yards. Newton pushes and twists through the line for 18 yards. Bear gains 1 yard through right tackle. Carolina off side and A. & M. given 5 yards. With second down and 9 yards to make Newton goes through left tackle for 4 yards. Jacocks punts 30 yards and ball goes out of bounds. Wilson goes around right end for no gain because of a pretty tackle by Townsend. He smashed through the interference and got his man. A. Wilson fails to make gain through left tackle. A. Wilson punts 30 yards and Jacocks receives ball on bounce and returns it 10, but is brought back on some technicality. Story makes ½ yard through left tackle. Newton hits right tackle but fumbles ball and A. & M. falls on it. A. Wilson makes no gain around left end, because of a pretty tackle by Story. Wilson kicks 30 yards and Jacocks is downed in his tracks on Carolina's 20 yard line. Bear makes 2 yards around right end. Webber adds 1½ through right tackle. Jacocks kicks 30 yards and ball goes out of bounds. Time is up for first half with ball in middle of field. Time of play 25 minutes. Score, Carolina 6, A. & M. 6.

After an intermission of ten minutes play was begun on the second half. Carolina received kick off on west end of field. A. & M. kicks 52 yards and Bear advances 15. Newton goes around left end for 6 yards aided by good pushing. He next hits left tackle for 3½ yards. A. & M. man hurt. Bear goes over left tackle for 2 yards. Story repeats the dose for 4 yards. Roberson hits left guard for 7 yards. Story makes ½ yard through left tackle. Bear to break the monotony goes around right end for 27 yards. Newton loses 1 yard around left end. On fake kick Roberson makes 5 through line. Newton fails to make gain through right tackle and ball goes over. A. & M. works the tackle back tandem play and makes the following gains: Abernethy 20 yards around left end, A. Wilson 3 yards through line, Abernethy 1 yard through left tackle, Abernethy 2 through left tackle, H. Wilson 1½ through left tackle. With ½ yard to make Wilson is thrown back on attempt at right tackle and ball goes over on third down. On first rush A. & M. is off side and is penalized 5 yards. Roberson bucks left guard for 2 yards. Bear goes over left tackle for 1 yard. Bear goes over the same place for 2 yards, just making first place for 2 yards, just making first down. Barry goes around left end for 12 yards on fake play of Roberson through the line. Townsend hurt but resumes play. Story makes 3 yards through left tackle. Same place again for 2½ yards. Roberson goes over right guard for 2 yards. Webber goes 1 yard through right tackle but Carolina is penalized for holding in line and A. & M. given 10 yards. Newton goes around left end for 2 yards. Jacocks punts 25 yards and Barry downs man in his tracks. Hadley gains 2 yards through right tackle. Webber hurt but resumes play. A. Wilson goes 20 yards around left end. Abernethy gains 3 yards through right tackle. Winborne takes Bear's place at left half. Abernethy makes no gain. Wilson kicks but Roberson breaks up kick and Story catches ball. Carolina's ball on her 43-yard line. Roberson hurt but resumes play. Jacocks, on attempt of Newton around left end, throws ball over Newton's head and it goes back 12 yards but Barry falls on it. Webber makes 11 yards through right tackle. Jacocks punts 30 yards and it rolls 5 more. Townsend downs man in his tracks. A. & M. gain 1 yard through right tackle. On the next rush Webber breaks through and tackles the man for a loss of 2 yards. Wilson punts 30 yards and Jacocks advances 5. The umpire gave the ball to A. & M. here on a foul by Barry tripping a man. H. Wilson goes over right tackle for 4 yards. He hits the same place for 4 yards more. A. Wilson makes 15 yards by a double pass around left end. Things were beginning to look serious here for Carolina with ball on her 25-yard line. But they rallied well and on the next rush Roberson tackles A. Wilson for a loss of 6 yards. Abernethy is held for no gain. A. Wilson kicks 20 yards and Jacocks is downed in his tracks on Carolina's 13-yard line. Newton gains 2 yards through right tackle. Roberson 3 through right guard. Winborne 1 through right tackle. Winborne 4 through left tackle. Barry circles left end for 15 yards. Roberson makes 2 yards over right guard. Roberson 2½ yards over the same place. Newton hits right tackle and is pushed for 15 yards. Ball is fumbled on next rush but Jacocks falls on it. Winborne gains 3 yards through left tackle. Newton makes 4 through right tackle and is hurt but continues play. Winborne is given the ball and by pretty interference makes the sensational run of the game. He circled right end for 40 yards and was stopped by Sadler on the 16 yard line. Carolina rooters began to wake up then but there was time for but a few more rushes. Story gains 2 yards over left tackle. But Newton fails to gain and time is up with the ball on A. & M.'s 14-yard line. Time of half, 25 minutes. Score of game: Carolina 6; A. & M. 6.

A KICK.

A very gentle kick is made against ladies' wearing such monster hats to the shows in the chapel. There is no question raised about the beauty of the hats; for the street and campus they may be all right. But Gerrard Hall is not the place for them.

People pay their money to go there and see shows, not hats. A man eleven feet high could not have seen over some of the hats that were in the chapel last week; and as for seeing around them, that was out of the question; you could not miss one without running into a dozen more.

THE Sophomores showed a fine spirit of sacrifice and class devotion last week. By voluntarily relinquishing what every Sophomore considers his "rights" they saved half a dozen of their classmates from a position that was, to say the very least, exceedingly perilous. They are worthy of high commendation for their action. They showed the spirit our classes need.

LAST week's excitement doubtless means the end of hazing in the University. Fortunately the custom has been passing for the last few years very rapidly and nothing could be more efficacious in abolishing it than the voluntary action of the ones who more often than any others are guilty of it. Faculty committees and committees of upper classmen cannot do it, but when a Sophomore class, early in the year, by its voluntary action, promises its influence in opposition to the practice, the days of hazing are over. Our Alma Mater is to be congratulated on this result. There is no denying, however, that there have been times before when hazing was regarded as something the University would not see again. After a long period of inactivity and seeming liveness it would break out again with violence. Invariably the Freshmen were the cause of it. When they ceased to feel the influence of overpowering physical force they forgot the traditions of this institution, forgot that there are natural distinctions between men who have grown into University life and men who know nothing about it. When a Freshman forgets this there is an almost inevitable reminder coming for him. Freshmen, remember that you are FRESHMEN.

The Historical Society.

The Historical Society held its regular meeting in the History room Tuesday night. In the absence of the secretary Prof. Noble read the minutes of the last meeting.

Mr. J. K. Wilson then read a very interesting and instructive review of "Myrtle Leaves", a book written by the late Dr. Adolphus Mangum.

Prof. Noble then spoke briefly of the "Early Internal Improvements in North Carolina". He said that North Carolina had a way of being the first to begin great things. He then took up the organization of the Dismal Swamp Canal Company and gave some very interesting incidents. The influences which caused the digging of the canal and its results were clearly brought out.

Mr. J. H. Vaughan, who was to give an account of his investigations during the summer, was not able to be present on account of sickness. Dr. Battle, however, spent the remainder of the hour very profitably in reviewing some recent publications which contain some interesting facts in regard to the early history of North Carolina.

REMARKS.

Mr. E. M. McIver was in Raleigh Tuesday.

Mr. E. D. Broadhurst spent Sunday in Goldsboro.

Mr. J. J. Bennett spent part of last week at his home.

Mr. Preston Cotton left Monday for Chicago. He will be gone about ten days.

The worst of it all was the T. N. E.'s had to reveal the secrets of their initiation ceremonies.

Dr. G. L. McMillan, of Red Springs, an old University man, was on the Hill Tuesday. He was accompanied by his young son.

On account of his duties as editor-in-chief of the Yackety Yack, Mr. Howard was compelled to resign his position on the Magazine board. Mr. Wright was elected to fill the vacancy.

Professor Howell entertained a party at supper after the concert Wednesday night. The following were present: Mrs. Klutz, Miss Archer, Miss Hume, Miss Morrison, Miss Venable, and Messrs. Moss, Bernard, Coker, and Mills.

In the Societies.

On the account of not having any lights the Di Society failed to have a meeting Saturday night.

In the Phi Society the question for discussion was, Resolved, That North Carolina should establish a Greater University including the A. & M. College and the State Normal and Industrial College. The negative won and Mr. Rand made the best speech.

The Journal Club.

The Chemical Journal Club met Tuesday afternoon, Nov. 15, at 2:30 p. m. The program was as follows:

The Theory of Plating, by Dr. R. O. E. Davis.

The Methoxyl Determination, by Mr. Frank P. Drane.

A New Magnesia Cupel, by Mr. Ernest Sifford.

A New Method of Halogen Determination in Organic Substances, by Dr. A. S. Wheeler.

Last Week's Scores.

The University and the Library Convention.

The University was rather prominent at the convention of the State Library Association last week. Addresses were made by Dr. Alexander and Mr. L. R. Wilson. The subject of Dr. Alexander was "The College Library". The following is from the Charlotte papers' account of his address:

"The crying need now is for buildings better adapted for use as homes of books. Our University library is housed in a building marked by 'harmony of proportion, refinement of line'—the most graceful building in the State, I think, but is not more suitable for a library than this room is for a circus."

Mr. Wilson was elected secretary and treasurer of the Association and was also made a member of the Executive Committee. Dr. C. Alphonso Smith and Mr. Wilson were appointed on a committee to confer with the State Superintendent of Public Instruction with regard to the status of rural libraries.

A vote of thanks was given to Dr. Alexander for his cooperation with the Association.

Return of an Old Friend.

"Sug" Pritchard came into the city editor's office yesterday to talk awhile. He had just come back from a five-years' trip to the great Southwest and Mexico, and is on his way to his home in Chapel Hill.

Hundreds of old University men will recall with pleasure "Sug" Pritchard, son of Mr. W. N. Pritchard, who was postmaster at Chapel Hill for many years and "Sug" was assistant. Somehow pretty nearly the first memory one has of the sleepy old University town centers about "Sug", for one remembers so well the first time one stood, a miserable freshman, in front of the little delivery window and asked in a trembling voice if there were any letters. You see, it was a time a fellow wanted letters very badly—letters which were meant to cheer the heart of a proud but homesick "University man", away for the first time in all his life from the home-ties; and though the heart beat high for the yearning to be a man and to get knowledge for the battle of life—well, most of the "men" were so very small.

And that is why it is with a University man, now an old grad., when he sets eyes upon the former assistant postmaster, that there comes to him the thought of that first ride up from the railroad station, up the broad street with its great oaks and elms on either side sweeping their lofty branches to meet, as clasped hands, in a benediction for the young fellows who come under their shades.

But anyhow, it's welcome back to North Carolina for "Sug". And there's not a town or hamlet in the State where he won't find acquaintances. Yet, he says, it's a sad thing to see the changes five years have brought. "And I'm almost afraid to go back to Chapel Hill," said he. "There's new buildings and new fellows. I shall not get any pleasure out of that."

SCHUBERT STRING QUARTETTE.

These Musicians Give a Splendid Entertainment in the Chapel.

Music lovers in the University have a woful lack of opportunity for hearing good music. Last Wednesday night they had one of their rarest opportunities in a concert by the Schubert String Quartette of Boston. Unfortunately the crowd was not large but those who were present spent a delightful evening. The programme was thoroughly classical but even the untrained ear enjoyed it. The concert was a remarkable exhibition of the union of sweetness and power which a string quartette can produce. The musicians were all artists and combined wonderfully the delicate sweetness of the violin, the tender melody of the viola, and the strong notes of the cello. The last piece on the programme was from Grieg. The audience showed their appreciation of the quartette's rendering of this "classical" composure by repeated encores.

Although the concert was such an artistic success, it was a financial failure. The Musical Association engaged the quartette and came out $23 behind on the deal. This is exceedingly unfortunate, for it not only causes financial embarrassment to the Association, but discourages the prospect of having such concerts in the future. If there is any place where there should be good music it is at the University. And if there is any organization in college that gives pleasure to everybody it is the Musical Association. They ought to receive more encouragement from the student body.

THE SOPH-MED AFFAIR.

A Serious Dissension Between the Classes Adjusted.

The Sophomores and the first year Medical Class had a difficulty last week which threatened to be very serious. The medical students claimed that certain Sophomores had insulted one of their class. By a vote of 37 to 11 they demanded the expulsion of the offenders. This riled the Sophomores, who claimed that the whole affair was the result of a mistake and that the Meds had made too much of a small affair. The Meds refused to take any apology or explanation. The Meds had in the meantime carried their complaint to the faculty and simply demanded that the offending Sophomores be dismissed from the University. The Sophomores, seeing that there was no possibility of arbitration, requested the Golden Fleece to use their efforts toward getting the affair settled. The latter agreed to do this on condition that the Sophomores promise not to engage in or countenance hazing. The promise was made, and the Golden Fleece presented the case to the executive committee of the faculty. As a result the executive committee decided that the matter should be dropped. The result was announced to the Sophomores and there was great rejoicing.

A member of the Golden Fleece has requested the TAR HEEL to state that the order does not intend to act as arbitrator in college affairs but took the action it did in this case simply to avert what might have been a great division in University life, and also to induce the Sophomores to abolish hazing.

Washington Boy Honored.

The many friends of Mr. Edward Latham Stewart, the son of Mayor E. T. Stewart, will be delighted to know that he has achieved additional honors, this time at the chief institution of learning in North Carolina, the University. A few nights ago there was a society debate in the Philanthropic Society, of which Mr. Stewart is a member, the query being high and low tariff and the trusts. There were ten students engaged in the contest, five being on a side. The contestants consisted of seniors, juniors, and sophomores, young Stewart being the only freshman in the contest. The judges decided unanimously in favor of the side which young Stewart was on, and not only did his side win with hands down, but this promising young man was presented with the medal for making the best argument of the evening. Prof. Smith, who holds the chair of English, said that if Parker and Davis had twenty men to make speeches for them like Mr. Stewart made in this debate he would prophecy their election. After the debate a banquet was served and young Stewart made the principal speech. This good news will be hailed all over our city, where this young man is best known and admired most. Ever since he first entered school he has been climbing the rungs as a debater and speaker and he bids fair to reflect high and coveted honor upon his native heath. The Gazette-Messenger always takes pride in publishing the gifts of our young men, and we know of none who has been promised a brighter future. We congratulate Master Edward upon his success; he deserves it all.—Gazette-Messenger.

THE JUNIOR BANQUET.

An Enjoyable Social Event at Pickard's Hotel Saturday Night.

The members of the Junior Class held a banquet last Saturday night at Pickard's Hotel and it was a great success. The object of the occasion, which was to draw the members more closely together and to pave the way for a more thorough and effective class organization, was fully realized.

Two members of the faculty, Messrs. M. H. Stacy and W. S. Bernard, were guests and addressed the class. The banquet was gracefully presided over by Mr. A. H. Bahnson, who opened it with a few appropriate remarks. Mr. Stacy who spoke first on "The Relation of the Class to the University," was at his best. He showed that the class could play the part it should play in University life only by concerted and harmonious action, and pointed out the advantages which would accrue to the University as a result of such action. The need of an effective organization, he said, had been deeply felt by preceding classes and it was a matter for congratulation that a movement was on foot to secure it. Messrs. W. T. Gore and V. L. Stephenson responded. Mr. Gore expressed his approval of the movement and pledged the hearty co-operation of the class. Mr. Stephenson showed the importance of the movement, made clear to the class its duty in the premises, and urged every man not to falter until success was attained.

The next speech of the evening was by Mr. Bernard, whose subject, "Harmony," was treated in an interesting and forceful manner. He showed that perfect harmony should prevail in a class, and perfect sympathy between its members. He made the point that sympathy is not a feeling for, but a feeling with each other. "Harmony and sympathy in the class," he said, "should be so perfect that what hurts one member hurts all." Mr. W. B. Love, of the class, responded to this speech. He dwelt on the need and value of genuine comradeship between members of the class as an aid in college and as an impetus to success in after life. Mr. J. W. Winborne who was also on the programme for a reply, was necessarily absent, being a member of the football team.

After the programme was finished all formality was thrown aside and many interesting, extemporaneous talks were made by various members of the class. These constituted one of the most enjoyable features of the occasion. Various means for establishing customs and differentiating the members of the class from others were proposed but definite action was postponed until a regular meeting of the class. At 1 o'clock the lights failed, and the company reluctantly dispersed, enthusiastically agreed that the Junior banquet was a splendid success.

Fire Places in the Old Buildings to be Closed.

President Venable announced in Chapel Friday that the fire places in the Old East, Old West and South buildings would be bricked up at once. He gave as a reason for this that several fires had occurred in these buildings this year caused by the students having fire in their rooms. He said that a very low rate of insurance had been obtained on the buildings as a result of the college having a central heating plant and he feared that if one of the buildings should be destroyed by fire the fact of the students having fire in their rooms would make the insurance contract void. He thought that when the fire places were stopped up the rooms would be warm enough without fire, for the large open fire places make it almost an impossibility now to heat the rooms.

Freshmen, Toe the Mark.

Copies of the following notice were found posted in several conspicuous places about the campus Saturday morning:

FRESHMEN!

READ, MARK, DIGEST.

1. Show respect to upper classmen.
2. Bear in mind the difference between an honored "Senior" at a prep school and a freshman at the University.
3. Beware of monopolizing the Postoffice and drug stores.

BE SEEN AND NOT HEARD.

Nobody claims the honor of putting up the posters but the general opinion is that the Sophomores are responsible. The upper classes have endorsed the action of the Sophomores in the following resolutions:

SENIOR RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, that the Senior Class uphold the Sophomores in any reasonable action they take for keeping the Freshmen in their places; provided, their action does not take the form of hazing.

JUNIOR RESOLUTIONS.

Resolved, that we, the Junior Class, do hereby endorse the action of the Sophomore Class in the matter of abolishing hazing; and further that the Junior Class endorses the sentiment contained in the placards recently posted. It is also the sentiment of the Class that not only does the preservation of University traditions and the final banishment of hazing call for the observance of these rules, but that such observance will redound to the benefit of the Freshmen Class.

Mr. R. W. Perry left the University on last Friday for Memphis, Tenn. He goes to accept an excellent position as assistant chemist to Mr. Edwin Lehman Johnston, a well known expert in the cottonseed oil industry. Mr. Perry may return next commencement to receive his degree.

UNIVERSITY SERMON.

Strong Sermon by Rev. G. H. Detwiler on "The Larger Outlook."

The University Sermon for November was preached by Rev. G. H. Detwiler. Mr. Detwiler preached the sermon before the Y. M. C. A. last commencement and the students remembering him from that time gave him a large audience in the Chapel Sunday night.

Mr. Detwiler's theme was "The Larger Outlook." He based his remarks on God's command to Abraham where He tells him to look north, south, east and west and all the land that he beholds shall be his and his children's. The whole sermon was an appeal to the student to search in every direction for the truth.

The speaker said in part: "We have two types of men, the provincial man and the cosmopolitan man. The provincial man is the man of one locality, his interest doesn't go out to all subjects, but he narrows himself down to one section. But some say that when you take an interest in the whole world you lose your patriotism for one locality. This is not true because the broader a man gets the deeper he goes unless his breadth is mere superficiality.

"The cosmopolitan man is the man with the wide outlook. He is interested in the whole universe and takes the truth wherever it may come from. There are three aspects of this wider outlook of which I should like to speak.

"The first of these aspects is that it should be geographical. We want to begin right at the bottom in this broadening of the outlook and look at it as it applies to the physical world. It is a fact that a man makes his geographical world, that is, none of the physical world exists for him except that which he knows about. I once heard a preacher say that he had preached all over the United States, but when I looked into it I found that he had preached only in a few counties in the Western part of this State. That was the whole United States to him. A man must get an idea of the universe as a whole to get the broadest outlook.

"And then this outlook must be historical. By historical I do not mean that this wider outlook must take in the mere chronicle of events. But I mean the real life of the world that lies behind the chronicle of events. It is the sympathetic aspect of the fights that have gone on in history. It is the searching through the history of past ages and taking the truths wherever they may come from. It is the spirit of searching everything that comes to one and if true accepting it. Doubt is necessary to all progressive thought. It is the sentinel of the mind that tests every truth. I remember well the feeling that came over me when I told my congregation one day that I would follow the truths of the Bible anywhere; that if it required it I would even discard the book itself. Doubt does not lead to heresy. It isn't more of the traditional faith that we want, but more faith that comes through honest doubt. There is nothing dangerous in historical search for truth.

"The third aspect of this wider outlook is that it must be reverent. I said there was nothing dangerous in historical search for truth, but I would add: if this search be conducted by reverent minds, minds that have a respect for the truth. The only danger is that a man may enter this search in a careless, flip-pant way, desirous of the startling rather than of the truth. Higher criticism is not wrong if the higher critic has a reverence for the truth. The difference between the irreverent searcher is seen in Voltaire and Calvin. Voltaire was careless and flippant and paved the way for the French Revolution. Calvin was reverent and worked out the principles upon which our government was founded."

University of Virginia Musical Clubs' Concert at Richmond.

The University of Virginia Musical Clubs will play in Richmond on the night of the twenty-third at the Academy of Music. The concert will be for the benefit of the Home for Needy Confederate Women, and will be given under the auspices of Mrs. Andrew J. Montague, the wife of Governor Montague, and of the most prominent women of the city. The football teams from both Universities will be present in the boxes which will be decorated in the colors of the teams.

Owing to the fact that the desirable seats in the house are fast being sold, the management of the Clubs has decided to reserve a limited number for the students from both Universities. And if any of the Carolina students wish seats kept for them, by sending their names to Mr. W. M. James, University of Virginia, their seats will be held until eight o'clock of the night of the concert. The cost of reserved seats is a dollar. There will be a few seats at seventy-five cents.

The management of the Clubs would be glad to have as many of the Carolina men to attend the concert as can come, as it is for a worthy purpose. The seats can be paid for at the box office, where they will be held, as has been stated, until eight o'clock.

A Fire Saturday Night Cuts Off the Water Supply.

The pumping station was destroyed by fire Saturday night and as a result the water supply was cut off. Fortunately, there was a good supply of water in the reservoir and standpipe. The pipes supplying water to the dormitories and the village were closed and all the water was saved to be used in keeping the lights and heat going. The damage to the pumps was repaired Monday and no serious inconvenience was caused by the accident.

HATS off to the ladies! The TAR HEEL wishes to express the appreciation of the student body for the consideration the ladies showed in removing their hats at the lecture.

LAST week we reprinted an article from the Washington Gazette-Messenger which was unbelievably absurd. Our comment conveyed the impression that it was inspired by the person referred to in it. There was no intention that we should be understood as accusing the gentleman of writing the article or having it written. We simply thought that he had—the editor did not know him, by the way—written home perhaps boastfully of what is an honor but is yet one frequently won by freshmen. Since the paper was issued we have been convinced that the gentleman was quite innocent of the affair. We regret that an injustice has been done.

Men in the old dormitories will be sorry that the fire places are to be closed. They have done service many a time when the radiators failed to do what they were paid to do. Perhaps it is best that they should be closed as a safeguard, but the authorities should not forget that the radiators will have to bear the whole burden alone now. A good many nights last year the rooms were so cold that men would leave their own rooms and go to other rooms to get near a fire. Especially was the case last spring when cool, damp days would follow a period of warm weather and the heat would not be turned on. A deal of sickness was the result. It is a great pleasure to say, however, that this fall those in charge of the heating plant have been a lot more thoughtful.

A Mistake in the Directory.

President Miller, of the Y. M. C. A., has a serious proposition on his hands. It was all caused by an error in the Directory published by the Y. M. C. A. Mr. Miller was accosted a few days ago by a stranger whose countenance showed great perturbation of mind. "I just wanted to tell you," said the stranger, "that you made a mistake in the Directory. My name is

You put me down as a first year medical student and I am a second year man." There was a look of expectancy on the injured man's face. President Miller assured him that everything possible would be done to correct the error. There is strong probability that a new edition of the Directory will be issued without delay.

CHORUS TO "GOODBYE TO MY BLUE BELL."

All hail Carolina, three cheers for thee,
Soon we'll be singing of your victory.
Your line men charging, your back field fast
Will lick Virginia as they've done in the past.

Play ball Ca'lina, you're bound to win,
Break through Virginia's line and down her men.

Va. can't score today, that must not be,
Three cheers for the team that comes from old N. C.

Good-bye, Virginia; farewell to you!
Sing one last song for poor old Orange and Blue!

Furl all your banners, bid hope adieu;
Hear all the chorus yelling N. C. U.!

Hail Carolina, noble and true;
All up and sing a song for White and Blue!

You've seen Virginia vanquished today—
Hail Carolina—down with U. V. A.

Mr. J. F. Yokley went home Saturday to attend the marriage of his sister.

Mr. O. B. Ross left yesterday to spend Thanksgiving at his home in Charlotte.

Rev. C. H. Detwiler, who preached the University sermon Sunday, was the guest of Professor Toy while here.

The article in last week's TAR HEEL entitled "The Return of an Old Friend", should have been credited to The Charlotte Observer.

Mr. Worth Yancey has gone to Jacksonville, Fla., to accept a paying business position. He will be a great loss to the team.—College Topics.

The Sigma Nu tennis court near the Alumni Building has been removed and the ground it occupied is being turfed. The Sigma Nu will make another court near that of the Zeta Psi.

The Seniors held a meeting Saturday night and agreed upon the design for the class pin. It was decided to allow those who prefer a ring to a pin to wear the former. The design of the pin is the University seal stamped in class colors on a gold badge of diamond shape. The rings are to have the University seal in colors.

Kappa Alpha Reception.

Prof. and Mrs. J. W. Gore gave a seven o'clock tea to the members of the Kappa Alpha last evening at their residence on Cameron Avenue. This tea was one of the most pleasing social events given in Chapel Hill this fall. The parlor and dining room were artistically and attractively decorated with orange and old gold, the colors of the fraternity. A number of Kappa Alpha and Carolina pennants were draped around the walls of the rooms with very pleasing effect.

A number of the young ladies of the town were the guests of honor. All present enjoyed the delightful hospitality of Prof. and Mrs. Gore to the fullest extent and were genuinely sorry when the delightful affair came to an end.

The members of the fraternity and the young ladies present were as follows:

Frank Gillam with Miss Millie Archer, F. P. Gatlin with Miss Margaret Alexander, L. T. Moore with Miss Nellie Roberson, W. T. Gore with Miss Cantie Venable, W. McKim Marriott with Miss Louise Venable, H. P. Gibson with Miss Louise Huske, Messrs. V. S. Gudger, A. S. Peace, J. K. Dixon, Jr., W. P. Jacobs, F. Roberson and L. T. West.

Whoop it Up, Carolina!

Tomorrow decides whether the season of 1904 is to be recorded as a success or failure. Everything looks bright for Carolina: she has a splendid team, in perfect condition; the team has every incentive to do its best; and Virginia has not the strength she expected. On the other hand, Virginia has last year's crushing defeat to overcome, and she will undoubtedly make the hardest struggle she can. Carolina, though, has the same victory to repeat. One report is that the betting in Richmond is 3 to 1 on Carolina.

One advantage that Virginia naturally has is the number of rooters; the game is played where most of the people are Virginians. But experience has shown repeatedly that one Tar Heel can drown out five Virginians on the sidelines. Now is the time of all others when we need to do our best in yelling. College Topics says Virginia expects to have 1500 hundred rooters at the game. Of these 500 will be students and 1000 alumni. We have never had more than 300 students to go to Richmond, but we ought to send the biggest crowd this year than we ever have. North Carolinians will be there to see us: excursions are scheduled to be run from several parts of the State. Let us show North Carolina what her Varsity can do, how her team can play and how they are backed up.

Go to Richmond and yell and sing as only a Tar Heel can. When the team gets on the field tomorrow remind them that they have a college behind them, and a college that believes they will win.

DAVID HARUM.

An Adaptation of the Novel Presented by Mr. E. P. Elliott.

The first number of the Star Course was given in the Chapel Friday night of last week by Mr. E. P. Elliott. Mr. Elliott presents original adaptations of the most popular comedies. His subject for the evening was the drama founded on Mr. Westcott's popular novel, David Harum. Mr. Elliott interested his audience for an hour and a half by his fine delineation of the character of the shrewd but kind hearted banker and horse trader, David Harum, and of the other characters of the book. The plot differed a little from that in the book. The presentation was divided into three acts.

The first act was taken up mostly with an introduction to the characters of the play, David Harum, John Lennox, who has just been left with very little money by the sudden death of his father and who now comes to the village of Homeville to take a place in Harum's bank, and Mary Blake who wishes to be independent and so has come to Homeville as the school mistress. In the book Mary Blake is not located in Homeville but remains in New York. This is about the only difference between the book and the play.

The second act depicts David Harum as the sharp horse trader, hard and grasping, the "modern Shylock" as he was termed. David Harum has just bought a balking horse. And since he has a grudge against Deacon Perkins for having outdone him in a horse trade, he sets out to sell this horse to him. Mr. Elliott showed admirably the joy which he experienced in being able thus to outdo the deacon.

The third act shows up the kind hearted side of David Harum. It gives his gentle dealing with an old widow upon whose farm he held two mortgages. This act closes with the scene around the Christmas dinner table. He has just made the widow happy and now he sees John Lennox and Mary Blake who, in David Harum's words were "the hardest pair to drive ever put under harness," on a fair road to happiness.

PHI BETA KAPPA.

Local Alpha Theta Phi men become Phi Beta Kappas.

The last meeting of Alpha Theta Phi was held in Dr. Alexander's study a few nights ago. One of the last acts of the society was to elect President Venable a member. He and Chancellor Kirkland, of Vanderbilt, are the only honorary members ever admitted to the society, with the exception of members of Phi Beta Kappa, who were by virtue of their membership in the latter society, also members of Alpha Theta Phi.

Dr. Alexander announced that the charter for the Phi Beta Kappa chapter had been sent to the members of the latter Society in the faculty; namely, Dr. Alexander, Dr. Smith, Dr. Howe, Dr. Coker, and Dr. McBryde. These gentlemen were empowered by the charter to admit new members. They voted to receive the members of the Alpha Theta Phi who were present, and the other members who have complied with the requirements. The constitution and by-laws adopted for the new organization resemble that of the old, but differ in some important respects. The officers are a president, a secretary, and a treasurer. The first two of the offices are to be occupied by the men standing first and second in each class. The treasurer is a permanent officer and is to be elected from the faculty members. The following are extracts from the by-laws:

"All students of the University of North Carolina shall be eligible to membership when they have attained an average grade of not less than 2, as hereafter provided for in this article:

"No work required for entrance to the course leading to the applicant's degree, whether taken in college or not, shall count in the required number of hours. All work taken in college except that required for entrance to the course leading to his degree shall be included in the general average.

"There shall be one period for the admission of undergraduates, namely, at the end of the Junior year.

"Each candidate shall have to his credit ninety half hours, of which at least sixty must have been taken in this University. In each candidate's credit must be included all the required work of the Freshman and Sophomore years in one of the courses leading to the bachelor's degree.

"If a candidate is credited on the University books with work done at another institution, this work shall be counted as a grade of 4, unless the candidate makes a better grade by standing an examination on the subject in the University.

"Doctors of Philosophy of this University whose work was done at an institution at which there was not a chapter of Phi Beta Kappa while they were students there, may become eligible to membership on the recommendation of the members of the chapter who are also members of the faculty of this University."

Rev. Lacy Little, an old University man, preached at the Presbyterian Church Sunday morning.

VIRGINIA WINS

IN THE GREATEST GAME EVER PLAYED IN THE SOUTH.

Carolina Loses by a Single Point—Luck Decides a Hard Fought Game by the Close Margin of Eleven to Twelve—An Immense Crowd, Curious, Gay and Restless.

The game was the greatest ever played by Southern teams. Two strong teams played before the greatest crowd that ever saw a football game in the South, and they played the game that was the most important of the year to both of them. Both teams were in splendid condition and were nearly equal in weight; Carolina was much lighter in the line but had heavier backs. There were but two fumbles in the game, and it is not too much to say that each team did its best. Carolina carried the ball much farther in rushes and kicked farther. But she lost. And luck decided the game. The press dispatches said it was the "irony of fate that a Carolina man gave Virginia the point that decided the game." Coach Brown said that he never saw before an incident like Webber's knocking the ball over the cross bar. Perhaps it was luck, perhaps it wasn't, that made Barry fail for the first time this year to kick a goal.

There was individual starring in the game and splendid team work. Carpenter played a wonderful game. Townsend showed what he has in other games this year, that there is not a better end in the South. Jacocks and Barry were stars. Stewart was great. For Virginia Council, Lankford and the Johnsons were the stars.

Usually the continuous report is used in making up the detailed account of the game. The telegraph connection broke just after the opening of the second half, and we were unable to get it. We take the following account from the Richmond News Leader:

THE GAME.

Virginia—Warren kicks 40 yards to Carpenter, who returns it 17 yards. Carolina ball on 27-yard line. Carpenter, on delayed pass, loses 3 yards. Jacocks kicks over Pollard's head and ball goes over goal line. Virginia brings it out 25 yards and kicks. Council kicks to Jacocks on center of field who fumbles but regains ball. Carpenter around end 3 yards. Jacocks, through Cooke, for 5 yards. Carpenter, on delayed pass, makes 3 yards. Carpenter, on ends over cross buck, makes 7 yards. Roberson into line for 2½ yards. Ball on Virginia 40-yard line. Carpenter into line and fumbles and Murphy secures it for Virginia. Virginia around end no gain. Virginia kicks for 7 yards. Virginia tries line and Carolina is off side. Carolina is again off side. Virginia ball on Carolina 50-yard line. Carpenter hurt but returns to play. Council has been hiked for two beautiful gains. Council tries line for four yards and Carolina is again off side; line is too quick. Virginia makes 5 yards over line. Council makes only 2 yards. Ball on Carolina 32-yard line. Council tries line; no gain over Stewart. Estimated 3,000 on the field. Game has been called.

The crowd is still pouring on the field. Both teams and the police are trying to move the crowd back.

The crowd is now estimated at about 9,000, and about 4,000 on the field.

A request has been sent the city for police force and a squad of police has arrived to clear the field.

Game will start in a few minutes.

Mayor McCarthy has ordered every available police man to come to the field.

CAPTAIN STEWART.

A line has been staked off for the crowd, and the game will be resumed in a few minutes now.

The crowd is becoming more orderly.

The teams have played ten minutes. The crowd is simply taking the field and stopped the game for fifteen minutes. The crowd is all over the field on both sides and behind the goals. Teams going off the field until something is done. They have gotten some rope, but I am afraid it won't do much good.

The crowd has been gotten off the field and the game is about to be resumed at 2:40 P. M.

Carolina ball on Carolina 35-yard line. Webber is called back and Bear fumbles, and ball goes out of bounds, but Carolina gets same on play. Carolina fumbles again but Stewart gets ball. Carpenter, on fake kick, goes around end; makes 7 yards. Council missed his tackle. Jacocks, on tackles, makes 3 yards. Roberson plunges into line for 3 yards. Roberson on tackle formation; no gain. Carpenter plunges into line for 3 yards. Third down, 2 yards to make. On fake kick Roberson gets 3 yards and first down. Virginia man hurt. Ball on Virginia 50-yard line. Carpenter skirts end for 10 yards. Carolina penalized for holding and Virginia given 20 yards. Barry, on delayed pass, makes 5 yards. Carpenter kicks to Pollard, who catches it on Virginia's 10-yard line and returns it to 25-yard line. Gray downed by Townsend. Pollard, on guard tackle run, loses 10 yards, being tackled by Carpenter. Council kicks 20 yards and Carpenter catches it, and is downed in his tracks. Ball on Virginia 45-yard line. Randolph is hurt and Lankford goes to right half back, Paul going to full back. Story makes 2 yards on ends over formation. Carpenter makes 2½ yards. Jacocks makes 2 yards on tackle back formation. Carpenter, through line, led by Bear, gains 5 yards. Carpenter, over tackle, gains 2 yards. Carpenter, over through Council, gains 1 yard. Third down, two yards to go. Virginia off side. Carolina gets 5 yards; ball on 22-yard line. Jacocks around end for 4 yards. Carpenter no gain. Jacocks makes three-quarters of a yard and Virginia gets ball. Carolina lacked about 3 inches for first down. Pollard loses 1 yard. Council kicked to Carpenter, who caught it on Virginia's 41-yard line. Webber went into line for gain. Carpenter went around end for 1 yard. Jacocks tries drop kick from 40-yard line, but fails. Pollard catches it on goal line and gains 5 yards. Council made no gain. Council makes 2 yards. Ball on Virginia's 10-yard line. Johnson around Barry's end; no gain. Council tries line; no gain over Story. Carolina off side and Virginia gets 5 yards. Council plunges into Seagle for 1½ yards. Cooke bucked beautifully for 2 yards. Cooke again takes ball; no gain. Virginia off side and Carolina gets 5 yards. Ball carried back as Carolina also off side on cross buck. Virginia, no gain. Council kicks 40 yards. Jacocks returns it 15 yards. Ball in center of field. Carpenter goes around end, led by Bear and Webber, for 35 yards. Jacocks loses 3 yards. Webber into line, no gain. Ball on 10-yard line, and Jacocks tries drop, but fails, and Pollard fumbles it. Ball goes over the goal line and Townsend, the fast little end, by a beautiful dive, gets ball and scores first touch down. Barry tries goal and ball hits cross bar and does not go over.

Carolina kicks to Virginia 5-yard line and Virginia returns it 22 yards. Johnson goes around end for 3 yards. Paul, at fullback, tries Stewart for no gain. Council kicks about 65 yards and Carpenter returns it 9 yards. Carolina's ball on Carolina's 20-yard. With one second to play, the crowd again takes the field, but the police succeeded in getting them back. Carpenter around end for 5 yards after throwing off three men. Time is up for first half.

The band is playing and all the people are going wild. Both teams are now receiving rest and coaching.

Virginia has the wind this time and as it is blowing quite hard, it may prove quite an advantage to them.

SECOND HALF.

Carpenter, for Carolina, kicks to Virginia on their 10-yard line, and Pollard returns it to their 25-yard line and is hurt, being tackled by Carpenter. Pollard resumes play. H. Johnson makes 5 yards. Ball gains by going around Carolina's right end. H. Johnson makes 15 yards at same place. Virginia's ball; no gain. Council went into line for 6 yards. Ball on Carolina's 50-yard line. Council, over tackle, gains 5 yards. Paul, for Virginia, fumbles for 40-yard line. Johnson makes 1 yard. Council makes 3 yards. Council makes 2 yards. Council makes 2½ yards. Johnson goes into line for 3 yards. Council over Webber for 12 yards. Ball is now on Carolina's 15-yard line. Lankford goes around end for 10 yards. Roberson is out of game and Winborne takes his place. Council goes over line and takes the ball to Winborne within one foot of goal. Council makes touch down. Warren tries for goal and makes it. Score: Carolina 5; Virginia 6.

Twenty-nine more minutes to play.

Virginia kicks against the wind to Jacocks on Carolina's 25-yard line. Ball goes out of bounds. Virginia kicks again to Jacocks on Carolina 10-yard line and he returns it 20 yards. Third down, 2½ yards to go but fails. Carolina ball. Carpenter goes around end for 4½ yards. Winborne hurdles line for 3 yards. Ball on Carolina 35-yard line. Time out to get crowd off field. Carpenter around end for 25 yards and runs out of bounds. Jacocks tries end but loses 4 yards. Jacocks, on fake kick, makes 5 yards. Third down, four yards to make. Carpenter kicks 60 yards to Pollard, who returns it 5 yards. Ball on Virginia's 7-yard line. Johnson tries Townsend's end for no gain. Townsend is hurt but resumes play. Council kicks 30 yards to Jacocks who makes a fair catch. Carpenter is going to try a place kick. He kicks a beauty, but wind carries to the right too much. Virginia brings it out 25 yards and kicks to Carpenter, who makes another fair catch. He tries another field goal, but fails. Council gets ball and runs it on to Virginia's 25-yard line. Council makes 5 yards in line. Council is thrown. Johnson makes 2 yards and first down. Pollard tried quarter back run for no gain. Townsend broke up interference finely. Townsend, left end, hurt and Wright takes his place.

Sophomore Banquet.

Last Tuesday night the Sophomore Class gave a banquet at Pickard's Hotel, from 9 to 12. The menu was prepared by "Marse Jesse" and was thoroughly enjoyed by all present. The Class had as its guests of honor Dr. Eben Alexander, Dr. C. Alphonso Smith and Prof. M. C. S. Noble. Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr., acted as master of ceremonies. Toasts were proposed by Drs. Alexander and Smith and Prof. Noble, and responses were made by Messrs. J. J. Parker, D. P. Tillett, A. S. Peace and J. C. Carson on behalf of the Class. The banquet proved a success in every respect and all the Sophomores are looking forward to another such next year.

REMARKS.

Mr. F. W. Spruill spent Thursday in Greensboro.

Mr. O. B. Ross returned Monday from his home in Charlotte.

More than three hundred students went to the game Thursday.

Mr. A. W. Haywood, Jr., '04, who is studying law at Columbia University, attended the game last week and was on the Hill Friday and Saturday.

The following members of the faculty attended the game: Dr. Alexander, Dr. Smith, Dr. T. J. Wilson, Dr. R. O. E. Davis, and Messrs. Bernard, Broadhurst and Curtis.

The University Council.

President Venable called a meeting of the class presidents last week and proposed to them that a commission composed of students be formed to dispose of all cases of hazing and violation of the honor system and to arbitrate class differences. Each president called a meeting of his class, and all the classes adopted the suggestion. The commission, which will be known as the University Council, is to consist of seven members: the presidents of the two upper classes and of sophomore class, a second year man from each of the professional schools, each of these to be elected by the entire school; and a senior to be elected by the other six members. The senior elected by the six will preside over the body and will not be entitled to a vote except in case of a tie. All questions will be settled by a majority vote.

There was some opposition to the idea among some of the men who are newcomers in the University. The older men, however, enthusiastically favored it as a thoroughly representative University move. The honor system is a creature of the student body, and is effective only so long as the students realize this. When it is entirely in their hands they are more apt to feel this realization. There is sometimes great need of an inter-class arbiter, and this one seems to fill the bill. A committee of students should certainly be able to deal with a case of alleged hazing more sympathetically and really with more justice than anyone else. They can come nearer deciding whether an accused man is guilty of brutal and harmful hazing or has simply endeavored to maintain an ideal that is valuable to University life. There was need for such a body as the University Council.

The Gorgon's Head Dance.

The Junior Order of the Gorgon's Head gave its regular November german on Friday night in the Commons Hall. This german was one of the most enjoyable ever given here. The hall was beautifully decorated with the colors of the order and with the University colors. The german was gracefully led by Mr. H. M. Emerson, Jr., with Miss Laura Clark, of Wilmington. During the course of the german a number of beautiful and intricate figures were introduced. A pleasing feature of the dance was the presentation of beautiful souvenirs by the members of the order to the young ladies.

The following couples were present:

H. M. Emerson with Miss Laura Clark, H. H. Phillips with Miss Amy Marlowe, W. R. Taliaferro with Miss Sadie Mayer, John Cheshire with Miss Lovie Jones, Albert Latta with Miss Stewart Jones, Bennett Perry with Miss Louise McMullan, J. W. Winborne with Miss Bessie Jacocks, L. G. Rountree with Miss Card Brevard, W. P. Jacocks with Miss C. C. Capehart, A. W. Haywood with Miss Alexander, Edward Hobgood with Miss Mary Outlaw, W. T. Gore with Miss Octavia Hughes, J. G. Wood with Miss Louise McMullan, Branner Gilmer with Miss Mary H. Slocumb, B. K. Lassiter with Miss Mabel Young, J. B. Murphy with Miss Mary Henderson, Wm. McNider with Miss Louise Venable, J. M. Armstrong with Miss Bessie Gore, V. S. Gudger with Miss Emma Hassell, A. D. Browne with Miss Mary Hume, D. G. Fowle with Miss Dora McRae, H. McMullan with Miss Florence Thomas, Foy Roberson with Miss Alice Spruill.

Stags: H. McR. Jones, J. H. Carpenter, H. V. Worth, R. R. Brown, E. S. Burwell, R. E. Calder, A. Nash, Frank Caldwell.

Chaperones: Mrs. J. B. Cranmer, Mrs. R. S. McRae, and Mrs. Cumbers Martin, of Wilmington, N. C.

Resolutions of Respect.

The death of Col. Hamilton C. Jones, which brought pain to all within the wide circle of his acquaintance, has brought pain in a peculiar degree to the hearts of all his fellow-members in the Dialectic Society. No higher type of manhood, no more ardent or more loyal alumnus, no truer or more gallant gentleman was ever sent forth from the halls of the University, or ever exemplified more truly by his outward life the teachings and the traditions of the Society and of his Alma Mater, than Hamilton C. Jones.

Bearing in mind, therefore, his long, honorable and brilliant career in the service of his country, his State and his fellowmen, and appreciating in the highest degree his never wavering interest in the welfare of the Society and his unflagging zeal for the advancement of her interests, the members of the Dialectic Society Resolve:

First, That in the death of Col. Jones, the State has lost an honorable, upright and useful citizen, and the University a distinguished and loyal son.

Second, That while the Society mourns with genuine grief the loss of her departed member, yet she cherishes as a priceless heritage the memory and the inspiration of his upright life, his ardent patriotism, his unselfish devotion to the cause of truth, his unflinching fidelity to the call of duty.

Third, That the Society extends to each member of the bereaved household her most sincere and heartfelt sympathy.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family; a copy to the University publications, and that they be incorporated in the minutes of the Society.

Captain Carpenter.

The team has done itself proud in electing Mr. Carpenter captain. He has played wonderfully, and no man on the team this year has shown a more devoted interest. When he was debarred by a technicality from an important game and had to stay on the sidelines, he was the one who carried water to the players, and there was a look on his face which plainly said, "If I could only get in the game!" This spirit will enable him to organize next year a team that will be an honor to the University.

The Delay in This Week's Paper.

THE TAR HEEL was delayed this week by a difficulty in securing cuts. The cuts came at the last moment, and that of the team was found to be too large for the pages of the paper. Consequently the cut had to be sent to Raleigh to have a supplement printed. This caused a delay of two days more. The delay, though unavoidable, is greatly regretted. We hope to print a sweater picture of the team next week. It would have been given this week but for the fact the picture of the team was not taken till last Monday.

MASS MEETING.

Awarding of Sweaters—Watch Presented to Captain Stewart.

A mass meeting was held in the Chapel Monday night to award sweaters to the men who had won them this year and also for the college to show its appreciation to Captain Stewart for what he has done here in athletics. After a few fitting remarks by Major Cain to the team Mr. H. M. R. Jones presented Mr. Stewart with a gold watch in behalf of the student body.

Mr. Jones said: "I was glad to see the way the student body received this team when it came back from Richmond. It showed a spirit here that we have been wanting for some time. But to-night we want to show to the man who has done more for athletics here than any other man since he has been on the team our appreciation of what he has done for this team as its captain. And so the student body wishes to present this watch to Captain Stewart." In reply Mr. Stewart spoke of how much he appreciated the gift of the watch. He said: "This watch might be bought for money. But the appreciation shown in this gift cannot be measured in money. Every man by his conduct tries to win the praise of his fellowman. If this watch is a token of your praise to me as captain of your team, I am the happiest man in the world to-night. If it is my privilege to be back next year I will do my best to make the very best manager of the football team that I am able, as the Advisory Committee has seen fit to elect me to that position. I do not say that I will treat the team better than any other manager, or that I will get a better schedule of games than any other manager, but I do say that if I come back, I will do all in my power as manager for the team and that is all any man can do. Again I thank you with all of my heart for this watch."

Next Mr. C. M. Carr read out the names of the men who were entitled to wear N. C. sweaters. They were Messrs. Webber, Story, Seagle, Maness, Barry, Bear and Carpenter. Mr. Carr also stated that the Advisory Committee had decided to start a new custom this year in awarding the sweaters: that starting with this year the Advisory Committee would hereafter not only give to the men who played on the Varsity the privilege of wearing the monogram sweater but would present each man with his sweater. This is a new departure and from the applause that it received from the students was a very favorable one with them.

About Luck in the Game. A Few Figures.

Last week College Topics printed the following article under the heading, "Hard Luck Story, They Declare":

"The Carolina students had the most enthusiastic meeting Saturday in Gerrard Hall that has been held here in many years, to welcome the slightly defeated team and learn the name of the captain for 1905," says the Times-Despatch. It was such a magnificent welcome that a triumphal aggregation would have envied it. Though the White and Blue slightly failed to remain for another year the champions of the South by only one point, the whole student body backs them with a spirit which is indeed lovely. That the victory for Virginia was a hard luck story for Carolina is well known. The failure of Carolina to kick the first goal lost the game.

"It was the first goal Barry had missed this fall. In the game Carolina advanced the leather 323 yards by end runs and line plunging, while Virginia carried it only 276 yards. On kicking Carolina booted the ball 504 yards, Virginia 255 yards. Many speeches were made to-night, notably by Coach Brown and Messrs. Stewart, Carpenter, Webber and Barry. Professor J. W. Gore spoke for the faculty.

Captain Stewart announced that the team had unanimously elected C. Hunter Carpenter, Carolina's all-Southern right halfback, as captain of the 1905 football team. This announcement liberated a pandemonium of applause that lasted fully ten minutes. Captain Carpenter made an interesting speech concerning the bright prospects for 1905. The University is more than satisfied at his election.

"The figures given above are entirely incorrect. A careful calculation compiled from several different accounts of the game gives the following figures: By rushing the ball from line-up Virginia covered 236 yards, Carolina 155; in running back kicks Virginia made 98 yards, while the Tar Heels made in this way only 61. Carolina was penalized 40 yards, Virginia 20. Exclusive of several tries for goal, the Tar Heels kicked 388 yards, in 8 attempts, having a strong wind at their back 60 out of the 70 seconds of play. Virginia kicked 409 yards in 11 tries almost all being against the wind.

"The story of the game is told in the following table: Carolina, with the wind and grade made a touchdown in 34 minutes and 20 seconds; Virginia made the next touchdown, having the wind and grade with her, in 5 minutes; Carolina with the wind and grade, made the next touchdown in 25 minutes and 20 seconds; Virginia, with the wind and grade, made the last touchdown in 2 minutes and 40 seconds.

"One of Carolina's scores was the direct result of a fumble, the other an error in judgment. Both of Virginia's came after carrying the ball the entire length of the field, without losing it at all, by straight football. The second time, not once was a third down required. It is hard to see how the Tar Heels figure a hard luck story from this. Undoubtedly Webber's slapping the ball over the bar was lucky, but it only served to place the victory where it belonged."

There is evidently a mistake somewhere; in fact several of them. We have made a careful calculation and summary of the game from figures we have perfect confidence in. College Topics and the correspondent of the Times-Despatch have no doubt an equal confidence in theirs. Here is the result of our calculation:

	CAROLINA	VIRGINIA
Rushes	197	183
Kicks	482	396
Kicks returned	94	102
Thrown for losses	10	11

The TAR HEEL did not publish these figures or the account of the mass meeting in which the opinions of the student body were so clearly expressed. We did not care to lay ourselves open to the accusation of trying to make the world believe we had entirely outplayed the Virginians. We do not believe that our team was the only team in Richmond on Thanksgiving and we do not care for anybody else to believe that it was incomparably superior to Virginia's. Virginia earned every point she won except the decisive one. Carolina earned everything she got. Luck is in the game and must be reckoned with. When a team wins a game by honorable playing and good luck, she is entitled to be hailed as the victor. Virginia has done this and Carolina calls her victor. But the figures stand and Carolina is proud of them.

Dr. Hume will deliver his semi-annual address before the Oxford Shakespeare Club next Saturday evening. His subject will be "Common Sense in Comedy".

THE YACKETY YACK.

Mr. J. V. Howard to be Editor-in-Chief—Important Changes in the Financial Plans.

The societies and fraternities have renewed the Yackety Yack stipulations for this year and have made some important amendments. The experience of four years has shown that the prices charged for the book and for space in it have been too small to make the publication a financial success. On this account it was decided to raise the price of the book to $2.00 and of cuts to $12.50; the charge for printed matter was proportionately increased. It is expected that this will enable the board of editors to make the Yackety Yack a financial success and to get out a better one than has been published heretofore. The stipulations are not to go into effect until two hundred subscriptions, with a cash payment of $1.50 on each, have been made.

There is bright prospect for a good Yackety Yack. Mr. J. V. Howard, who has been elected Editor-in-Chief, has had editorial experience on both the TAR HEEL and Magazine boards. Some of the assistants are also men of experience and ability. With proper support from the student body they will produce a book which will do credit to the University. The following are the assistant editors:

Phi.—Messrs. J. K. Wilson, J. W. Winborne and J. S. Kerr.

Di.—Messrs. F. M. Crawford, R. H. McLean, L. Brigman and K. B. Nixon.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon—Mr. Stahle Linn.

Zeta Psi—Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr.

Kappa Alpha—Mr. W. T. Gore.

Kappa Sigma—Mr. E. H. Farriss.

Delta Kappa Epsilon—Mr. W. M. Bond.

Alpha Tau Omega—Mr. W. H. Hill.

Phi Delta Theta—Mr. Fred. Stem.

Sigma Nu—Mr. J. M. Armstrong.

Beta Theta Pi—Mr. G. M. Pritchard.

Pi Kappa Alpha—Mr. A. J. Moore.

Regarding the cash payment of these subscriptions, it may be said that this is an absolutely necessary step. A man may subscribe and intend certainly to take the book, but he may be broke when they are ready for delivery; an amount that he might have paid easily at Christmas time is a fortune at Commencement.

Stewart and Carpenter. How is that for you?

The football team came out $1600 to the good.

There is a determined effort to have the Thanksgiving game in Norfolk on alternate years instead of in Richmond all the time. The Norfolk people are trying to get the game. A delegation was sent to the University of Virginia a few days ago to confer with the athletic authorities there. Our own manager is corresponding with them. Norfolk offers the advantage of a better ball field and makes a number of other special offers in the way of special advantages to the team if they will go there.

The question is an important one and will have thorough consideration before it is settled. There are several facts which undoubtedly favor the change. The chief of these is the park accommodations. Norfolk has always handled her crowd well. When one goes to see a game there, he can get a seat. In Richmond, on the other hand, such a thing has happened as the crowd not being able to see the game, and in fact they have run the players off the field. In this Norfolk undoubtedly has the best of it. It must be remembered, however, that the crowd in Richmond this year was unprecedented in size, and provision had not been made for them. But it ought to teach the Richmond people a lesson. With regard to the special inducements offered to the team, Norfolk does well. There are some other minor points of advantage which Norfolk can claim.

But as a matter of personal choice, nearly everybody here would rather go to Richmond. There has grown up in three years a strong feeling of real sentiment, almost love, for Richmond. One of the greatest things in the year for the average Carolinian is to stand on the sidelines in Richmond Thanksgiving day and see his team struggle for the championship. Nothing arouses the college spirit of a man to a higher pitch. Nothing stirs in him more deeply feelings of devotion and loyalty. It has become a custom that every man who can raise the money goes to Richmond. Even the poor trains furnished by the Southern have not succeeded in keeping a large crowd from going. We confidently believe that if the game continues to be played in Richmond and the railroad company gives us a train of Pullmans, Chapel Hill will on Thanksgiving day be the most deserted place in North Carolina. We hope that always there will be a game in Richmond to decide whether Carolina or Virginia is to hold the championship of the South. If Richmond offers as much as Norfolk we believe our hope will be realized.

MODERN LITERATURE CLUB.

The First Programme Carried Out With Significant Success.

The Modern Literature Club held its regular meeting in the Economic Seminary Room Thursday night. This was the first of the six meetings of the year in which a literary programme was carried out, and the first regular meeting held by the Club since the completion of its organization. Notice and a deal of talk had led the college community to look forward to the meeting with unusual interest. The Club gave promise of being an influential factor in the University and in the State. Exclusive in its membership and high in ideals, it announced itself as devoted to an important work. The first meeting was awaited as a mark of what the Club would be. Taking that meeting as an earnest, the hopes of the Club are for a great success. The expectations of the members have been splendidly realized. The programme showed how much the work offers as a means of scholarly culture.

The following was the programme:

1. The Poetry of Swinburne—C. Alphonso Smith.
2. The Career of Bernard Shaw—Archibald Henderson.
3. Kipling's Ballad of East and West—J. H. Vaughan.

REMARKS.

Sprunt Newton went to Raleigh Monday.

Mr. E. C. Cole, of Trinity, spent Monday here with his brother.

Mr. Fred H. Lemly, of Washington, spent the first of the week here.

Dr. Raper lectured at Guilford College last week, on "The South and Cotton".

Rev. J. Wm. Jones, of Lee and Jackson fame, will talk in the chapel Friday night.

Little Bully Jones has been elected Graduate Member of the Advisory Committee. This position was held by Mr. T. J. Gold, who left the University some time ago.

Mr. E. M. McIver, of the second year medical class, left last Thursday for Washington, D. C. He has secured by competitive examination a good position in the Government printing office. He will continue his medical studies in George Washington University.

Dr. Mills, Dr. Wheeler, Dr. Davis and Prof. Howell attended a meeting of the North Carolina Section of the American Chemical Society in Raleigh last week. Addresses were made before the Society by Dr. Wheeler and Dr. Mills. Dr. Wheeler was the retiring president of the Section. Dr. Mills was elected vice-president and Prof. Howell reporter for the coming year.

SOCIAL.

RECEPTION BY MISS HUME.

Miss Hume gave a reception Wednesday night of last week to the D. K. E.'s. The following were present: Misses Pattie Lewis, of Raleigh, Mary Henderson, of Salisbury, Caro Brevard, of Charlotte, Octavia Hughes, of Mebane, Mary Morrison, Louise and Cantie Venable, Margaret Alexander, and Louise Huske, of Fayetteville; Messrs. J. E. Hobgood, P. Cotton, E. S. Burwell, A. D. Brown, L. G. Rountree, B. H. Perry, R. R. Brown, T. O'Berry, S. T. Nicholson, J. G. Wood, Jr., W. James, B. K. Lassiter, J. W. Winborne, H. McMullan, W. M. Bond, J. Barry, and F. P. Drane.

MRS. PELTON ENTERTAINS.

Mrs. Pelton entertained the following guests at a chafing dish party Thursday evening:

Misses Caro Brevard, of Charlotte; Octavia Hughes, of Mebane; Mary Henderson, of Salisbury; May Hume, Mary Morrison, Louise Venable, Dr. Charles Alphonso Smith, Dr. Wm. Chambers Coker, Dr. James Edward Mills, Dr. McBryde, Dr. Edward V. Howell, and Dr. and Mrs. Abernethy; Messrs. Walter Gore and Williams McKim Marriott.

SWEATERS.

Different Kinds to be Worn by Each Team.

The Advisory Committee has decided that each department of athletics shall have a distinct sweater to differentiate it from the others. The designs are:

For the football team, the sweater that has been worn by all Varsity men heretofore, that is, a blue sweater with a white monogram

For the base ball team, a white sweater with a blue monogram.

For the track team, a white sweater with a small blue monogram on the left breast.

This change will be a welcome one. At present there is no way of telling from a man's sweater what team he is on. The teams, while they are all representatives of the University, are quite distinct and the official mark of honor for them should be different.

The Journal Club.

The Chemical Journal Club met Tuesday afternoon at 2:30 o'clock. The following papers were given: The Constitution of the Ammonium Compounds—C. W. Miller; The Detection of Cobalt and Nickel—E. E. Randolph; The Absorption and Thermal Evolution of Gases Induced in Charcoal at Low Temperature—J. E. Pogue; Radio-Active Lead, Radio Tellurium and Polonium—W. H. Oldham.

THE PHILOLOGICAL CLUB.

Papers by Dr. Smith and Dr. McBryde.

The Philological Club held its December meeting last night. Dr. Smith read the first paper. His subject was "Remarks on Form and Function in Grammar." He prefaced his remarks by saying that careless use of these words is prevalent, or rather that "form" is used by nearly all grammarians where "function" should be used. The English language is practically without grammatical forms, yet the function of any part of an English sentence is as clear as in Latin. The confused use of the words has led some scholars recently to declare that the objective case of the English noun does not exist. Dr. Smith made the point that not the outward form of a noun determines its case but rather a philological explanation of its relation to the sentence. "To remove the labels from the bottles in a druggist's store," said Dr. Smith, "does not change the contents of the bottles." Dr. Smith has followed this idea in his grammar and is making an effort to correct the habit of misusing the word "form."

The next paper, which was presented by Dr. McBryde, was on the "Davideis of Cowley." It was shown that while this poem had no direct influence on Milton, it occupies a place in the development of the religious epic.

After the reading of this paper Dr. Smith reviewed the recent dissertations, one of them explaining the change of the third singular ending th to s. The change was first made in poetry and was evidently for the sake of rhyme.

An Incident in Richmond.

Thanksgiving night two Virginians, one of them a star on the football team, were talking in the lobby of the Richmond, discussing the game. The one who had watched the game from the side lines remarked about the very few fumbles.

"Yes," said the player, eagerly, "we didn't make a single fumble."

A Carolina player was standing near and smiled. The Virginian had fumbled right on the goal line.

The Carolinian was the man who fell on it, making first touchdown.

Dr. A. S. Wheeler delivered the President's Address at the annual meeting of the North Carolina Section of the American Chemical Society held in Raleigh on Saturday, Dec. 3rd. The subject was "Some Problems in the Cellulose Field". Dr. Wheeler was elected a member of the Council of the American Chemical Society.

THE NEW GYMNASIUM.

To be Opened for Use To-day—A Description of the Splendid Equipment of the Building.

The opening of the new gymnasium will take place to-day. The classes will resume their work then. The building would have been ready for use several weeks ago had it not been for the slow work done by the carpenters and painters employed. The heating has been arranged and the plumbers finished the greater part of their work several days ago. The baths will most probably not be ready for use until March when the main pipes will be connected with the building.

The entire building will be wired for electric lights, but there will not be any classes held at night. The lights will only be for use during special occasions.

The exterior of the building will not likely be finished before April or May as there is yet a great deal of work to be done, such as cementing the steps, painting the window sills and painting the cornice of the building.

This gymnasium when completed will without a doubt be one of the best in the South. There are 200 lockers in the main dressing room besides the 50 which are in the dressing room set aside for the Varsity and scrub men of the athletic teams.

There is one large room on the second floor which is to be called the "faculty room". This room is fitted up with a punching bag, "chinning pole", mats and chest-weights, and only the members of the faculty will be allowed to exercise there.

The gymnasium instructor has for his use three small rooms, one to be used as his main office and the other two connecting to be used as dressing and measuring rooms.

The gymnasium is well equipped with parallel bars, horizontal bars, basket balls and racks, medicine balls, punching bags, spring boards, horses, mats of all kinds, chest-weights, Swedish bar stalls, flying rings, travelling rings, Albany ladders, ropes suspended from the ceiling, and a suspended horizontal bar.

The track which extends around the sides of the walls on the second floor is a canvas one with banked concave corners. Only shoes with rubber bottoms will be allowed on this track.

Classes will be held every afternoon at 4:30 o'clock, and only those wearing rubber bottom shoes will be allowed to enter. The doors of the building will be closed every day at 6 o'clock.

Francis A. Gudger, an alumnus of the University who has been engaged in Panama as sub-consul to his father for several months, has returned to his home in Asheville, where he is engaged in the practise of law.

Washington and Lee Debate.

That we are to have two inter-collegiate debates this year is now a certainty. The question submitted to Washington and Lee some time ago has been accepted. The debate will be held in Gerrard Hall on the second Friday night in April. The question submitted by Carolina is: Resolved, That the time has come when the fact of the solid South is not to the best interest of the progress of the South. Washington and Lee has the negative.

Took His Jokes With Him.

Dr. Charles Baskerville, who recently discovered a new element which he named Carolinium, put up an examination in chemistry at the College of the City of New York a few days ago, relates the New York Times. One of the questions which he asked was:

"Give the uses of ethyl alcohol."

The next evening he examined the papers. The first he chose out of a big pile belonged to a man who was notorious for never having given a correct answer in all his career at the college. But now he broke his record. Here's what Dr. Baskerville saw:

"Give the uses of ethyl alcohol." Answer—"It is often used to excess."

"That was too good," said the scientist to a fellow-teacher the day after. "I gave him a hundred."

The Historical Society.

The Historical Society held its regular meeting Monday night. Rev. Mr. Plyler read a carefully and well prepared paper on "Sherman's March through the Carolinas". His paper was based upon the official reports. He gave a description of the military condition before Sherman entered the State and the difficulty of driving back his forces. He said that taking Sherman at his word, the spirit animating his army was to destroy the country and starve Lee's army. His description of the things done and of the conduct of Sherman during the peace proposal was very striking.

Mr. J. F. Brower gave a splendid account of Mr. T. H. Ely's experiences as a teacher in the Philippines. Mr. Ely is an old student of the University and is one of the 499 men and women who left only a few years ago to enter the American service as a teacher in the islands. He gives a splendid description of the country and houses and also the rules by which the teachers were to be governed. The description of the first reception attended and the dance that followed is very interesting.

Mr. P. E. Seagle's review of "Bain's Letter" was very interesting. The whole book is a collection of letters and meditations. The main point of view is that of the Christian. He holds that national sin is the cause of all calamities. The meeting was most interesting.

The Buncombe County Club.

The Buncombe County Club will hold its regular monthly meeting in the history room next Wednesday night, at which time the club will entertain several members of the faculty at a smoker.

At this meeting a paper concerning the economic conditions in Buncombe county will be presented by Guy Weaver, a member of the club. At the last meeting a paper pertaining to the history of Buncombe county was presented by O. J. Moore.

This club was formed before Christmas by the men here from the western county and for the purpose of making them not only acquainted with each other but causing a healthy fellow feeling to exist between them. The officers of the club are: President, Robert R. Reynolds; vice president, Marshall R. Glenn; secretary and treasurer, John W. Haynes; chairman of the reception committee, George M. Pritchard; members of reception committee, Vanno Gudger and Ralph Weaver.

There are now twenty-five members of the club, four more than there were before Christmas.

The Modern Literature Club.

The second meeting of the Modern Literature Club was held in the Geology room, Thursday evening. The meeting was a repetition of the distinct success of the first one. The following was the programme:

Modern Greek Stories, by Dr. Alexander.

An Analysis of the "Six Best Sellers", by Mrs. Pelton. Stories of Old Japan, by Prof. Collier Cobb.

The papers were all exceedingly interesting. Dr. Alexander gave some general remarks on the Modern Greek short story, and translated one entitled "At the Oculist's." The story was a good one and was much enjoyed by the audience. Mrs. Pelton's paper was a review of the "Six Best Sellers" of the December Bookman. The review had the unusual charm of being the work of a successful novelist. The "Stories of Old Japan" are mainly those learned by Prof. Cobb from his Japanese associates at Harvard and from the natives during his travels in Japan. They were cleverly told and their similarity in several cases to folk tales of other countries was pointed out.

The Club has issued a neat programme of its work during this term. The programme is well arranged and in keeping with the high purpose of the Club.

Philological Club Meets.

The Philological Club met Tuesday night. The following was the programme: A Note on Skeat's "Legend of Good Women", ll. 1336—1340, Mr. C. A. Smith; Decay and Growth of Language, Mr. W. D. Toy; A Review of a Recent Dissertation, Mr. J. M. McBryde, Jr.

PREPARING FOR NORTH CAROLINA.

Ten Men Will Try for Places in the Georgia-North Carolina Debate.

Greater interest is being taken in the preparation for the annual debate with the University of North Carolina than has ever before been displayed in an inter-collegiate debate, and there is now being done a great deal of the serious work which makes debating so valuable and important in college training.

The choice of representatives for Georgia is confined to the Academic Department, and already ten men from the Junior and Senior classes have gone into the race for places. The preliminary contest will be held about the middle of February, the exact date to be announced later. Lack of time was a serious drawback in the preparation for the contest with Sewanee, but abundance of time has been allowed for the present contest as the subject was announced early in December and the debate does not take place until April 7.

The question for debate as submitted by Georgia and accepted by North Carolina is as follows, "Resolved, That the best interests of the United States are opposed to her permanent occupation of territory in the eastern hemisphere, barring coaling stations". The choice of sides was with North Carolina and they took the negative. Last year the debate was held at Chapel Hill; and North Carolina won; this year it will be held in the college chapel here and we hope for a change in the result with the change of place. If we can equal the all-around success of the Sewanee debate, this year's work will have done much toward assuring Georgia an enviable place.—Red and Black.

Elisha Mitchell Society.

The 157th meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was held Tuesday evening in the chemical lecture room. The following program was carried out: The Theory of Metal or Reinforced Concrete Domes, Prof. Wm. Cain; Steel Hardening Metals, Dr. J. H. Pratt; Modes of Infection with Hookworm, Dr. R. H. Whitehead.

Our Chemists.

The Department of Chemistry of the University is continuing its record of sending out trained chemists to important positions. Last month Mr. R. W. Perry left for Memphis, Tenn., to become assistant chemist to Mr. Edwin Lehman Johnson, the cotton oil expert. Mr. W. McKim Marriott, for two years an assistant in the chemical laboratory, has just gone to New York city to accept a position as Research Assistant in the Cornell University Medical College. On January 1st Mr. George McNider assumed his duties as assistant chemist to Dr. Kilgore in the state laboratory in Raleigh.

College Topics says the Virginians have decided that the next Thanksgiving game shall be played in Norfolk. There is an impression down this way that it takes about two teams to make that deal.

It is a pleasure to announce that T. Grier Miller has been added to the Tar Heel staff as assistant editor-in-chief. The Advisory Committee authorized the addition of this office to the Tar Heel organization, and for this they have our gratitude. The need for this has existed for a long time and has been felt. It is expected that there can now be a better organization of the staff.

THAT we are to have another debate is a certainty. The conditions governing the debate, the query, and the other details have been agreed upon and satisfactorily arranged. We congratulate the Debating Union and the University on securing the debate, for Carolina's opponent will prove in every way a worthy one. Washington and Lee occupies an honorable place among Southern colleges, and it is a pleasure to know that we are to meet her in a field where we have so often been successful.

WE publish in another column the base-ball schedule. There is no hesitation in saying that this is the best one ever arranged by any manager. The arrangement of it is largely the work of Manager Carr and great credit is due him. It has been the just criticism of many a schedule in the past that there were not enough games here. In this respect the new schedule is everything that could be desired. Every University student will have an opportunity to see his team play this year. There is a certainty of twelve games to be played on the Hill and an open date making a probability of thirteen. And this has not been secured at the sacrifice of good games or good trips for the team. The trip taking in the Virginia, St. Johns, Georgetown and Navy games is great. And it is not. Considering the rights of the students to have games here, the faculty rule permitting the team to be absent only five school days, and the necessity of making dates satisfactory to the other teams, it must be said that the arrangement of this schedule is a splendid piece of work.

The Knockers' Column has not been extensively patronized this year, but if there was ever need for it there is need now. Since no knocker has shown up, however, we shall take the liberty of calling attention to something everybody would like to see knocked. We refer to the fact that the heating apparatus attached to the baths in the sub has been removed. It is said to have been put in the new gymnasium. It is further said, however, that the baths in the latter will not be ready till March. If this promise is like the others that have been made about things in the gymnasium being ready at certain dates, the baths will be ready next December. During part of the prospective interval we can get along without the hot water, and during the rest of the time we have got to, apparently. We do not know why this is, and fail utterly to see why it should be. During the cool, snappy days of autumn, when people are playing football, a cold stream of water is all right. But in winter when there is no football, and the temperature is often at five above, it is a different case. Perhaps there is no help for it, but there will be many longing desires for summer and "the old swimming hole" before those gym baths are ready.

Y. M. C. A. Notes.

On Tuesday evening, the 10th, Rev. W. T. D. Moss addressed the Young Mens' Christian Association at its regular weekly meeting in Chapel. His subject was "The Glory of the Commonplace." He handled his subject well and gave one of the most interesting and helpful Y. M. C. A. talks of the year.

Mr. C. C. Barnhardt has been elected President of the Y. M. C. A. for the next Association year.

The Marshals.

Mr. P. E. Seagle has been elected by the Junior Class Chief Marshal for Commencement. Mr. Seagle has appointed the following men as Sub-M Marshals; R. T. Scott, R. H. McLain, C. Hassell, J. G. Hannah, H. W. McCain, and J. S. Kerr.

In the Societies.

Di. Question: Resolved, That the present colonial policy of the United States is detrimental to its best interest. The affirmative won and Mr. Whitaker made the best speech.

Phi. Question: Resolved, That the South will at some near future date manufacture all its cotton crop. The negative won and Mr. Herring made the best speech.

Remarks.

The roof of the new Y. M. C. A. building is nearing completion.

Mr. W. A. McAdoo of Greensboro, N. C., is here for a few days.

Mr. A. D. Browne, the gymnasium instructor, has been confined to his bed for several days.

Mr. Louis T. Moore acted as city editor of the Wilmington Dispatch during the holidays.

Again it becomes necessary to deny a report that the professor of chemistry has been elected.

Mr. D. G. Fowle, of the Law class, has been offered a captain's commission in the Chinese army.

About fifteen men from here are seriously contemplating a trip "across the pond" next summer.

Mr. J. A. Lockhart, Law '02, a member of the legislature from Anson county, spent Sunday on the Hill.

Bob Lawson, who has signed up as coach this year, is expected to arrive not later than the middle of February.

The new year brought to the University thirty-two new students thus making the registration more than 660.

Frazier Glenn, an alumnus of the University has been elected to the State legislature from Buncombe county.

Dr. Venable recently returned from Columbia, S. C., where he attended the anniversary exercises of South Carolina College.

Mr. S. S. Heide left during the holidays for Allen's Creek, Tenn., to become chemist for the Tennessee Coal and Iron company.

Thomas B. Peirce, an old Chapel Hill boy who has been attending school at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., stopped here for a few days last week on a visit to his brother, C. Dudley Peirce.

Mr. Claiborne W. Carr has left the University to accept a valuable business position. He has completed the work required for graduation and will return to receive his degree next Commencement. Mr. Carr was manager of the baseball team for the season, and as that position was left open by his departure, Mr. H. McR. Jones has been elected his successor.

University Sermon.

The University Sermon for January was preached Sunday night in the chapel by Rev. F. B. Hale, pastor of the First Baptist Church of Wilmington. Mr. Hale's theme was "The Power of Jesus Christ as a Friend in the Religious Life".

In the beginning of his talk Mr. Hale said that when he was at the University of Alabama as a student he heard a sermon that impressed him greatly. He said, "At the time I was an honest doubter. I did not believe in the Bible as specially revealed. I was what you might call a skeptic. This sermon was based upon the passage, 'If any man believe God's will he shall know of my doctrine, whether it be of God or of man.' That seemed to me to be a face to face challenge, an appeal to my reason to try the thing. I decided to accept the challenge. I said that I would do any thing that appealed to my reason, any thing that was not wrong or hurtful to myself.

"The first thing that I did then was to put myself under the leadership of Christ. Christ told me to repent of my sins.

"But I wanted to go at the thing rationally. And so Christ told me that sin was hurtful to myself, to my neighbor and displeasing to God. It is displeasing to God because it is a violation of his law.

"I saw that his proposition commended itself to my reason, and so I accepted it. I said that here and now I will give up my sin if God will show me what sin is. I will put myself on the God side of every moral issue. The cause of many men's skepticism is their unwillingness to give up sin.

"I found when I started out to study what sin was that Christ was the best friend of human life. I found that he was the best friend of the physical body. I found that he was the best friend of the human mind. I found that Christ was the best moral teacher. The man that enjoys Christ's friendship is the best man in thought, word and deed. I found also, that Christ gives a spiritual benefit not found anywhere else. I said that I would follow Christ's teachings about the physical, mental, moral and spiritual world. When I did this I was led to study the Bible for myself.

"I learned to distinguish between the teachings of the Bible and the dogmas, creeds, commentaries and teachings of men. I found that there was no contradiction between God's teachings in the Book and God's teachings in nature. I found that I must distinguish between the teachings of men on the Book and the teachings of the Book itself. Christ led me to study that Book just as I would any other book with Christ as my teacher. I have never understood why men do not let Christ as a friend be their teacher and not some German professor.

"As I took Christ as my friend and teacher I began to ask what was his mission. It was to change the whole world. He was to accomplish this through fishermen and not through the learned and wealthy. When I get this idea of the greatness of Christ's kingdom I am persuaded to stand with him. Christ has never deceived me, and I recommend him to you in your University course."

A CASE OF SMALLPOX.

Mr. W. D. James Has It and is Quarantined—The Situation.

There was little less than a sensation last Wednesday when it was announced that there was a case of smallpox in college. That afternoon, Mr. W. D. James, of the first year medical class, was found to have the disease. Steps were immediately taken to isolate him and prevent the spread of the contagion. He was confined to his room in the D. K. E. house, and everyone who had been with him within twenty-four hours was quarantined in the house also. The yellow flags were about the first intimation the student body had of the affair. This shows the promptness with which the precautionary steps were taken. Practically before anybody had time to hear of the case it had been quarantined. Several, when they saw the signal colors, thought it was simply some occasion the fraternity was celebrating; so unsuspecting was the college. But in an hour everybody knew what was doing and the D. K. E. house has been given a wide berth since.

The next morning a compulsory vaccination order was published, and since then drug store stock has gone down by a good many points. Dr. Mangum, the college physician, has been a busy man. He has a list of all who have been vaccinated and of all who have not. Those who have not been successfully vaccinated within the last two years must be at once, or they will be required to leave the school for at least two weeks.

Dr. Mangum, when asked about the situation, said that Mr. James certainly had a well defined case of smallpox. His condition, however, is very favorable. Dr. Mangum does not expect another case to develop; but if one should develop, it will necessarily be slight on account of the general vaccination. The vaccination will have the effect of preventing the disease entirely or at least of making the attack very light. As stated, all who had been exposed to Mr. James within twenty-four hours before he was found to be sick, were quarantined. There are about a dozen of these men. Although they are in the house with the sick man, they are quite apart from him and are in no danger at all of being infected from him now. When last heard from they were quite happy.

It is believed that Mr. James caught the disease while he was in Scotland county Christmas. There have been a great number of cases there this winter.

The Professor of Chemistry.

Last week we noted briefly that the newspaper report that the professor of chemistry had been elected was untrue. President Venable, when asked about it, said that the report was absolutely untrue. There has, in fact, been no meeting of the board of trustees, by whom the election must be made. A meeting of that body will be held to-day and the election will probably be made at this meeting.

The following article, which is rather interesting in connection with the above, appeared in last week's Red and Black:

"DR. HERTY ACCEPTS POSITION AT NORTH CAROLINA.

"Dr. Chas. H. Herty, who was adjunct professor of chemistry in the University until 1902, has been elected professor of chemistry at the University of North Carolina and will accept the position on July 1. Dr. Herty is well known personally to the faculty, alumni, and some of the students, and by reputation to all who have been interested in the University during the past fifteen years. He graduated from the University of Georgia in 1889 and, after taking the degree of Ph.D. at Johns Hopkins, returned as assistant in chemistry. In 1889, when adjunct professor of chemistry, he resigned and has since been connected with the U. S. Department of Forestry. During his connection with the University, Dr. Herty was a strong supporter of athletics and his work did a great deal to raise them to their present plane. As a student he was a member of the Varsity baseball team and afterwards was Athletic Director for several years. He issued the call in 1894 for the conference in Atlanta at which the S. I. A. A. was organized, and it was through his efforts that the athletic field which bears his name was built.

Important Work to be Done by Dr. Raper.

Dr. C. L. Raper has been asked by the Carnegie Institution at Washington, to write or direct the writing of The Financial History of North Carolina; and also to write The History and Influence of Money and Banking in North Carolina. It will be remembered that Dr. Raper read a paper before the American Institution for the Advancement of Science, at the Philosophical meeting, Dec. 28-30, on the subject, "Can the South Manufacture Her Own Cotton?"

The Legislative Committee Visits Us.

The committee from the legislature to visit the various State schools and colleges paid us a visit last Monday. The committee was composed of the following gentlemen: Zeb V. Long, W. F. Sledge, W. F. Pearson, E. A. Howes, Jr.; W. W. Boddie, Stephen I. Bragaw, A. M. Scales, E. F. McCulloch, J. D. Murphy, B. M. Ballard, F. R. McNinch, J. R. Gordon, R. E. Sentelle, J. C. B. Ehringhaus, H. D. Williams and T. D. Warren.

Dr. McBryde and Mr. McKie have not been able to attend their classes this week on account of sickness.

The annual Soph.-Junior debate between the Philanthropic and Dialectic Societies was held in the college chapel Friday night. The question for debate was, Resolved, That the legal system of the United States should be changed so as to provide for trial by a committee of judges instead of by a jury. The affirmative was defended by Messrs. J. B. Palmer and J. S. McNider of the Philanthropic Society against Messrs. Stable Linn and W. L. Mann of the Dialectic Society. The Judges were Dr. Howe, Prof. Noble, and Prof. Toy. The debate was lively from start to finish. The decision was given to the affirmative. A summary of the speeches is given below.

Mr. Palmer was the first speaker on the affirmative. His speech was as follows:

"All institutions and relations present to us one continual round of change. All social, religious and ethical relations have changed as a change in the ideas of the people have called for them, so with a change in the conditions and surroundings comes a change in systems, institutions and customs. This truth is shown in the relations between the white elements after the civil war. In religion, the same truth asserts itself. With a change in educations, ideas and circumstances came the Protestant religion.

Anything, therefore, is what it is by virtue of its relations. You must fit the institutions to the ideas of the people and the age; you cannot fit the ideas of the people and the age to the institutions. An institution must be fitted to a nation as the coat to the individual.

Only by strict obedience to this law of relation can harmony be maintained. The Divine law and the laws of nature are characterized by this law.

Another fundamental law that is linked with and subservient to this law of relation is the law of progress. When one institution or system does not conform to its accompanying institutions and to the ideas of the people, then the progress and welfare of the whole are hindered and checked.

Now this law of harmonious relations has controlled the workings of past institutions and systems. This jury institution since it presents the same characteristics presented to former ages has not conformed to this law.

It has not conformed to this law because it is in the first place inconsistent with our ideas of government, and in the second place our present stage of development conflicts with its successful operation.

It must obey this law. Change and progress must ever be present. "The great world must spin forever down the ringing grooves of change."

LINN:

"The institution of trial by jury has for its underlying principle the 39th section of the Magna Charta: "No free man shall be taken or imprisoned or disseised or outlawed or exiled or anyways; nor will we go upon him except by the lawful judgment of his peers." It is the principle of a man's right to be tried by his co-equals alone; it is the principle of the people's right to govern and conduct their own affairs. Upon these two principles depends the jury system and upon the jury depends to a great extent the whole government. Why? Because the jury is the bulwark of personal liberty and because it represents as does no other branch of the government the one characteristic feature of American government, that is, popular sovereignty. The jury is a body of men separate and distinct from any idea of being the servant of the government; it is the servant of the people. It is only in keeping with a democratic government for in the American government is embodied every principle of democracy and freedom. We believe in a government which places the power in the hands of the people, which entrusts the public safety to their keeping and which leaves in their care the honor and the fair name of American citizenship.

To attack the jury then is but to attack democracy. To strike at the jury is but to strike at the liberty of the people; to substitute a committee of judges is only to take from the people the right to conduct their own affairs and to leave them in the hands of a tribunal. Such a principle is in direct contrast with American government, a government which has given the people this institution not alone because of its value as a heritage but as a safeguard to our lives, our liberties and our possessions.

MCNIDER.

The institution of trial by a committee of judges is constituted in obedience to this universal principle of Harmonious Relation. It conforms to the American idea of representative government. It shall be composed of men of special qualification, trained by a long period of legal practise, representing the whole people and responsible to the people in the performance of their duties.

It is upon this system of representation that all American institutions are founded and developed. It operates in the political, religious, educational, and industrial institutions. Then from an American point of view, it is the function of the people's duly elected and qualified representative to direct the development of their institutions, and it is the function of the people to control their representatives. Any violation of the principle is inimical to our industrial as is illustrated in the industrial

WE ARE informed by President Venable that the reason for moving the heating apparatus from the sub to the gymnasium before the latter was finished was that it saved the University at least $100. The apparatus which the contractors were to put in the gymnasium was found to be entirely inadequate. This discovery was made only when they were about to put it in. To wait to order another one meant a delay that would be very expensive, for the plumber, who was already engaged, would be delayed and would add a cost to his bill.

The fact that the Shakespeare Club while holding a special meeting in the Law room last week, was compelled by the disgraceful conduct of some of the students attending to adjourn in the midst of the reading of a paper by a professor, is enough to make every true University student ashamed. That there are in the University students who will go out to such meetings just to create a disturbance was not to be expected. It certainly showed little respect to the professor who was interrupted, to the president of the Club and to the other members of the faculty present, much less to certain distinguished outside visitors who had been specially invited. We hope these visitors did not go away from Chapel Hill feeling that that was a true indication of the spirit of our University. We fear, however, that they must. How can they do otherwise? They were here for a day and the conduct of those men was what they saw. The harm that can be done to the University's reputation by such an affair is impossible to estimate. The harm that comes to our own life from such rowdiness by members of our own student body is a great deal more serious.

The writer of this is not a member of the Shakespeare Club, hence he is not speaking as a partisan and does not pass on the merit of the organization. Let its own record stand for that. But I do speak for fair play. Liberal thought and liberal conduct is at the base of University life. We say that we live and let live. The conduct we have spoken of is at utter variance with this principle, and the sooner we have no more of such conduct the better.

THE societies have decided to go back to the old plan of choosing intercollegiate debaters; that is, instead of having a general debate, there will be one man from each society and he will be chosen simply according to the merit of his prepared speech. The debating feature will not enter into the contest at all. Thus a scheme which was much cherished and which was adopted after a deal of work by its advocates has been rejected. When the debate method of contest was proposed last year, its friends said the time had come for us to step to higher things and that the selection of our debaters by debate must be the first step. Practically all the Seniors and post-graduates then in the University favored it and secured its adoption. This year's Seniors have rejected it. When they were Juniors they fought the change and were beaten. When they became Seniors and had no one to oppose them they fought the battle over again and won. This suggests to us two points.

First, the Seniors did not seem to us to have done the fair thing. The plan they opposed appears quite impracticable. Theoretically it certainly is. But it had a right to a trial. Some of the men who have done most for us in debate were hearty supporters of the measure and believed in it thoroughly. Their opinions, especially after being approved by the societies once, were entitled to an opportunity to show their worth.

The second point is a suggestion we would make to the Seniors and Juniors. When the Seniors last year championed and adopted the change, there was no longer any chance for them to be affected by it; their debating days here were over. The Juniors, the ones immediately affected by it, saw no feasibility in the plan and opposed it. The Seniors took the heroic method of cramming it down their opponents' throats. The result should perhaps have been foreseen. The next time there is to be a change made a less arbitrary plan of campaign had better be carried out. Practically everybody admits that we need a different method in our selection of debaters. Our present one is, to say the least, extremely illogical. Carolina never won or tried to win a debate by oratory, and yet she chooses her debaters according to their excellence in a contest that is simply oratorical. The fallacy in this is absurdly plain. But in escaping the fallacy do not let us run into something worse. The situation is one that calls for the best thought we have, the best of all of us. Seniors, Juniors, devote yourselves to it. If any one has a plan let him bring it up and discuss it freely with the other debaters. Let others pick the flaws in it, and when an objection is offered give it the serious consideration it deserves. The result will be, we believe, a solution of the difficulty.

Remarks.

Dr. Howe is visiting in Columbia. T. Weaver, Law '04, was here last week.

Dr. Smith lectured in Concord Friday night.

Dr. Alexander spent last Thursday in Raleigh.

Graham Kenan is confined to his bed with the grip.

Mr. W. T. Whitaker was in Greensboro Thursday.

W. W. Green is able to be out after a few days' illness.

The roof of the new Y. M. C. A. building has been completed.

Mr. L. W. Matthews spent Thursday and Friday in Raleigh.

The painting of the new gymnasium has about been completed.

John Cheshire and James Barry spent a day in Greensboro last week.

Archie Dalton was confined to his bed for a few days last week with the grip.

J. C. Exum, '05, visited Chapel Hill Sunday. He was returning from a trip to Illinois.

The walk that was built some time ago between the chapel and Commons Hall is now hardening and is very serviceable during wet weather.

Ike London, ex-'06, was here for a few days last week on a visit to friends. Mr. London will be engaged this spring with a railroad surveying squad in South Carolina.

Mr. Thomas J. Moore, '05, is here for a few days on a visit to his brother, Ajax Moore. Before returning to his home in Greenville, he will go to Danville, Va., where he has legal business to attend to.

Messrs. Stewart, '08, and Highsmith, '07, of the Phi Society, and Messrs. Holt, '08, and Day, '07, of the Di. Society, have been elected to represent their respective societies in the Fresh-Soph debate.

Baxter Boone is acting as gymnasium instructor while Mr. A. D. Browne is confined to his room. Mr. Boone is an excellent gymnast and was assistant instructor in the Trinity College gymnasium at one time.

Mr. A. H. Bahnson has been elected assistant manager of the foot ball team. Manager Stewart will not return to the University until April, and the Advisory Committee thought it necessary to have an assistant on the Hill.

First Phi Beta Kappa Address.

Dr. James W. Bright, Professor of English in John Hopkins University will deliver the first address before the Phi Beta Kappa Society in the chapel Friday evening at 8 o'clock. Dr. Bright is recognized as perhaps the most scholarly in the country in his particular field. This is the first visit South and the Society feels very much honored at securing him. Everybody is invited to attend and hear this scholarly address.

Journal Club.

The Geological Journal Club held its regular semi-monthly meeting last Tuesday night week at 7 o'clock in the geology room. Interesting talks were made by Dr. Pratt and Prof. Collier Cobb. Dr. Pratt's paper was on Some Copper Ore Occurrences in Arizona; Prof. Cobb gave a review of Van Hise's Treatise on Metamorphism.

The next meeting of the club will be held Tuesday night, January 31st, at 7 o'clock.

service by the poorly organized industries; and in the protective service by the operation of the State militia, and in the developmental service where the average citizen is compelled to work the public highway; and in the judicial service where the average citizen is pressed into the performance of jury duties. And as a result of this violation, that phase of our industrial life never reaches its highest possible development; the militia is unreliable in battle; those public highways are in bad condition, and the jury tribunal is unhonored.

It is the function of the established tribunal to settle all questions of justice, yet people avoid the jury by the method of compromise and by that of arbitration.

All those institutions that obey this principle of representation are highly honored, and eagerly sought. We should so constitute our tribunal that it should be sought in the same spirit and with the same readiness.

The principle underlying arbitration is the same as that underlying a committee of judges. Hence the people themselves have adopted this principle. We need only to incorporate the institution. Then the efficiency of our tribunal will be proportioned to the degree of civilization.

Justice will be cheap to the injured party because the training of this committee will enable it to adhere to the principle involved. There will be fewer appeals.

Justice shall be certain because the committee of judges shall be more from the people. It will become natural to them to convict the guilty and enforce the law.

Justice shall be less affected by the modern methods of corruption because of the station in life of this committee and by their American environment, and American ideas of government.

We have the principal incorporated in all our higher courts, and judges act alone in cases of equity and admiralty jurisdiction.

For the benefit of the oppressed and for the advantage of society, we should have a most nearly perfect tribunal at the beginning of litigation.

MANN.

Among other faults and objections, trial by a committee of judges is new and untried, it would be a tendency toward aristocracy and centralized government, it would be subject to partisan corruption. The leading jurists of the country say it is impracticable. It would be a reversal of the very fundamental principles of democracy and such a system cannot exist in a democratic nation.

The jury system could be made to fill the present needs by making higher qualifications, excusing fewer men from jury service, and paying jurors larger salaries. By this means we would have the very best men of the country serving on our juries.

The jury system seems to be advancing in goodness and virtue rather than declining into disfavor. It is the duty of every American to maintain it, and to guard it jealously against its enemies, for it is his undoubted birth-right, his best inheritance.

While having shown the jury system to be of long-standing and to be based upon a fundamental democratic principle, we will admit that it is not infallible. No human institution is perfect. The faults of the jury system, however, are not really faults of the system but faults of the administration of the system. A committee of judges will not remedy the situation for it would be subject to many more faults than the jury system. The remedy is to be found by reforming the jury system.

Jurors are charged with being ignorant and incompetent, prejudiced and partial, obstinate and corrupt. There are qualifications laid down in the Constitution which if carried out would exclude men subject to the charges named above, so the fault is in the administration of the system and not in the system itself.

PHI BETA KAPPA.

Installation of the Alpha Chapter. Dr. Bright's Address.

The exercises incident to the installation of the Alpha Chapter of the Phi Beta Kappa Society were conducted in the College Chapel Friday night at eight o'clock. The address of the occasion was delivered by Dr. Bright, professor of English at Johns Hopkins University. The meeting was presided over by Mr. T. B. Higdon, the first president of the Alpha Chapter.

In opening the exercises Dr. Alexander, through whose efforts mainly the University was enabled to get this chapter, spoke on the life of the Alpha Theta Phi Society here, and then gave a brief history of the Phi Beta Kappa Society and its aims and work.

Dr. Smith then introduced Dr. Bright, who spoke on the study of the vernacular. Dr. Bright's address was a scholarly presentation of the claims of the vernacular in any thorough course in philology. He showed that even in the study of Latin and Greek, the laws of language find their clearest expression and their most adequate interpretation in the student's native speech.

He began by a well-reasoned discrimination between college work and university work. He congratulated the University on its reputation as a centre of truly graduate work. He expressed his pleasure at the graduate work now being done in the English language, and paid a beautiful and deserved tribute to Mr. Eugene Morehead Armfield, of High Point, whose donation to the graduate department of the English language would be a blessing to students for all time to come.

Altogether, the lecture was in keeping with Dr. Bright's reputation as an original thinker and with the academic association of the Phi Beta Kappa.

Dr. Bright in closing said that the cause of the great influence of the German literature was to be found in their great universities. He predicted that great things were to come to the "New South" when her universities should carry on this higher work as it is beginning to do. He closed with the following poem to the New South:

MERIDES, OR THE NEW SOUTH.

I
Oppressive woes forgot, as if new-born,
Resilient, brave, and spirit all unworn,
Merides fair now springs to life.
A country large, united, battle-ried,
Repledges troth to her, the nation's pride,
In joyous note of ended strife.

II
No neutral heaven is her sky of peace,
But set with promise of the soul's release
From childish fears of cloudy night.
No clamorous jargon fills the mind with awe,
But humble science re-expounds the law:
It is not might but love makes right.

III
Sweet garden of the earth, and heaven for roof,
And wisdom of the ages for reproof,
A goodly heritage and wide;
And eyes to see God's secrets manifold,
And hearts to feel more than to ear be told,
Philosophy the while her guide.

The Virginia Foot-Ball Game.

The University of Virginia Athletic Association Advisory Committee has accepted Norfolk's proposition and made a contract that the game with Carolina shall be played there next year. The Richmond alumni were much incensed at this and protested vigorously, but without avail. The students at Virginia were apparently not entirely satisfied with the decision, as is shown in a communication from one of them in College Topics. The following are some extracts from the letter:

"The recent action of of the Advisory board of the G. A. A. in changing the place of the Thanksgiving game from Richmond to Norfolk has been criticised and criticised justly. It has been criticised not only by the alumni but also by the students.

"In the first place the students were not considered for one moment and no attempt whatever was made to find out how they stood in the question. In fact the proposed change was left in the background so completely that a large portion of the student body knew nothing at all about it until they saw it in the Topics last week that the change had been agreed upon. If the students had been consulted, there is every reason to believe that the majority of them would have given a decisive answer to the proposed change. But instead of consulting them, their wishes were entirely ignored.

"To prove that the students' wishes exerted very little influence on the decision, it is sufficient to say that the game has been put out of the reach of most of them. With no idea of going to the game, the interest is apt to flag, and will not this lack of interest affect in a way the players themselves? And the Thanksgiving game, the game of all games, to be thus put out of reach, without rhyme or reason, is more than most of them can realize.

"In days gone by the big games were arranged partly for the benefit of the students whose team it really is, but now all this seems to be changed. The commercial spirit, the desire for the "Almighty Dollar", has shoved what the students desire into the background of oblivion, and the student must suffer accordingly without murmuring or letting it be known that the team would not exist except for himself. As the time for the game approaches the "Almighty Dollar" will cry out, "Show your college spirit," but how can college spirit exist when its ideals are trampled under foot by the spirit of commercialism?"

"From the standpoint of a student the action of the Board was hasty and ill advised, and should be reconsidered. If the students were considered the action of the Board would be revoked and the game awarded to Richmond where it rightfully belongs."

The name signed to the letter appears prominently in the directory.

The next issue of the Topics contained an editorial in reply, upholding the action of the Advisory Committee. It had rather the note of an apology.

The proposition made by Norfolk is, in effect: (1) railroad facilities and rates equal to those enjoyed by Richmond; (2) accommodations for both teams while in Norfolk; (3) railroad expenses of the Virginia team to and from Norfolk; (4) a field containing 5000 reserved seats and "unlimited standing room". Richmond offered to spend $25,000 in equipping her park, on condition that the game be given her for three years. Norfolk wanted a contract for one year, and she got it.

The situation now is that Virginia has signed up to play her next Thanksgiving game in Norfolk. If Carolina plays her she must play her there. Thus passes the hope of many that the South might have an annual Thanksgiving game that would be to the South what the Yale-Harvard game is to New England and the North, a game where the students, Alumni and friends of the two great Southern Universities would gather and see a splendid contest. The promise of a suitable park in Richmond was a pledge of this. Richmond is accessible to everybody and everybody likes to go there, Carolinians and Virginians. A splendid Thanksgiving day, a good park, and a game such as North Carolina and Virginia should play. That would never fail to draw a loyal crowd to Richmond. But to have this game in Norfolk means leaving out the under graduates, who have first claim on the teams that are playing for the championship. If Carolina plays Virginia in Norfolk most of the students will witness the game through a telegraphic report. And a game where the under graduate is not on the side lines to back his team is only a part of a game. We can never have the Great Southern Game at Norfolk.

The following from the Richmond News-Leader is of interest in this connection:

"Between the action of her Athletic Association in agreeing to play the annual foot ball game for three years in Norfolk, and the generalship of her athletic rivals of the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, it begins to look serious for the foot ball future of the State University.

"Fearing that their University of Virginia rivals would reconsider their action and get out of the Norfolk deal, which they have been warred threatens the ruin of their athletic future, Virginia Polytechnic Institute men in Richmond and Blacksburg did some quick thinking and exchanging of ideas, and on Saturday Woodson P. Waddey, Virginia Polytechnic Institute '95, closed a lease which he had been negotiating with the Broad-Street Park Company (Messrs. Bradley and Donati) for Thanksgiving day for three years. This morning Mr. Waddey transferred his lease to the Virginia Polytechnic Institute Athletic Association.

"The Virginia Polytechnic Institute men say they will get a game for Richmond for Thanksgiving day equally as attractive as the Virginia-North Carolina contest. This seems quite possible, for there are old rivals, the Virginia Military Institute, with many friends in Richmond; the Carlisle Indian eleven, the Georgetown and other teams to draw on.

"This blocks any retreat of the University men from Norfolk to Richmond, and is calculated to cripple the attendance from Richmond at the Virginia-North Carolina game Thanksgiving day in Norfolk.

"There is the glee of successful rivalry at Blacksburg to-day. The Virginia Polytechnic Institute alumni in Richmond, headed by Woodson Waddey, and the Polytechnic athletic committee feel that they have outgeneraled the "University crowd", have burned its bridges behind it, and have forced it into a quicksand at Norfolk into which it will slowly sink, leaving the Virginia Polytechnic Institute first in Virginia football, rivaling North Carolina for the leadership of the South.

"Bradley and Donati, the Broad-Street Park Company, are making arrangements to tear down the present seating arrangements in the park and make the place over new, and up-to-date and better than the LaFayette Field in Norfolk.

"It is very probable, by the way, that the annual North Carolina-Virginia Polytechnic game, played alternately at Blacksburg and Chapel Hill, will be brought to Richmond a week or two before Thanksgiving day."

Dr. Smith's Book to be Used at the Naval Academy.

The authorities of the Naval Academy, Annapolis, have adopted Dr. Smith's "English-German Conversation Book", written in collaboration with Dr. Kruger of Berlin, and published by D. C. Heath & Company, for use in their German classes. The students at the Academy are taught the modern languages by the phonograph method. The book has been put into phonograph plates and will be used in this way.

A New Prize.

Mr. George P. Brett, the accomplished president of the MacMillan Company, the great publishers of New York, together with his wife, visited the University last week. It is with grateful appreciation that we hear of his offer of a prize, of the value of twenty-five dollars, of his best publications, for best work in "The Literary Study of the Bible," a course of exceptional interest conducted by Dr. Hume.

Knockers' Column.

Mr. Editor:

It seems to me that there are two things in relation to the management of college affairs about which a kick would be in order.

In the first place I think that the weather is cold enough now to admit of a little heat in our rooms without making them too warm to be comfortable. If there should happen to be anyone who is too sensitive to heat to be able to stand it, he might open his windows and let in some of this bracing February air. Mr. Editor, it is February, even though the sun does shine some days. The days may feel rather pleasant if you are out taking violent exercise; but if you have some studying to do in your room, especially if your room is on the shaded side of the building, it is not pleasant to sit there without any heat at all. Last Sunday, for instance, the radiators might well have been called refrigerators. Not only on Sunday but almost every afternoon the heat is entirely shut off. They have closed our fireplaces and there is nothing left for us to do, as I see it, but to depend on the so-called radiators until they get so cold we can't stand it, and then to kick.

In the second place, I can't see any necessity for so much dust in our rooms. With a very little more trouble the floors could be sprinkled before they are swept. This would, I think, prevent a great deal of the unnecessary dust and perhaps in the end keep some of from dying of consumption. The dust is even worse than the lack of heat, for a fellow can get in the sunshine when it is clear and go down to Kluttz's store and sit by his stove when it is cloudy; but there is no way to escape the dust if a fellow comes in contact with anything in his room, for they send a servant around to raise a dust every morning and this dust settles on everything.

Yours

For more heat and less dust.
KNOCKER.

Elected at Last.

There have been various untrue reports to the effect that Dr. Baskerville's successor had been elected. Several times we denied them. Last week we reprinted from the Red and Black and interesting one, giving an account of the alleged professor-elect. It was a little too premature, but no less interesting; the trustees met the day after THE TAR HEEL was published, and elected the Red and Black's man, Dr. Charles H. Herty. We are glad the selection has been made. It will be remembered that our Georgia contemporary spoke very highly of Dr. Herty. A number of other papers have congratulated the University on securing him. The indications are that he will be a strong addition to the faculty.

Buncombe County Club.

The Buncombe County Club held its regular monthly meeting in the History room Wednesday night, January 18, when the club entertained a few invited guests at a smoker.

Dr. Battle made a talk on the history of Buncombe county. He also told of some rare experiences that he had had in Buncombe during the summer vacation of his Junior year at the University. Besides, he told something of the lives of the great men of the county who had done most for its progress and development from the earliest times to the present. Among those he mentioned were: Buncombe, after whom the county received its name, Smith, the first white child born west of the Blue Ridge, and the great Vance. Dr. Battle said that when he first saw him, Vance was eighteen years of age and showed himself to be well up on Scott's novels, the Bible and Shakespeare.

Smith was the first white child born west of the Blue Ridge mountains and to-day the old flint-lock gun, measuring over six feet in length, which he most probably killed tens of Indians with is preserved by his descendants.

A short talk was also made by Mr. Stacy, an honorary member of the club, and a graduate of Weaverville College, which is situated in Buncombe. Short talks were also made by Mr. John A. Parker, a guest, and Messrs. Terrell, Ford, and Hill, members from Buncombe who recently entered the University.

A very interesting and well prepared paper on the economic conditions of Buncombe county was presented by Mr. Guy Weaver.

There are now about twenty-seven members of the club.

Remarks.

Another case of small pox is reported in Chapel Hill.

Dr. Pratt has left the Hill for a several days' stay in Washington.

Prof. Coffey, of Washington, D. C., is here to give a course in soils.

John Cheshire bagged thirteen birds and three rabbits in a hunt Saturday afternoon.

It is said that some thirty candidates will try for the Varsity base ball team this spring.

Mr. George Butler, of Goldsboro, formerly a student at Davidson, is now registered at this University.

On account of the severe weather of late some of the students have enjoyed some good sport with the skates.

The little wooden house used for tools and the like, which stood near the new gymnasium was torn down yesterday.

The Ball Managers.

Mr. H. McR. Jones has been elected Chief Ball Manager. He has appointed the following assistants: Messrs. W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr., R. E. Calder, F. A. Cox, J. G. Wood, E. S. Burwell, and H. L. Fry, Jr.

A Dinner in Honor of Miss Lewis.

Dr. and Mrs. Klutz entertained at dinner Monday evening in honor of Miss Lewis of Raleigh. Those present were: Miss Lewis with Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, Miss Louise Venable with Prof. E. Vernon Howell, Miss Margaret Alexander with Dr. Mills, Miss Nellie Robertson with Dr. Coker, and Prof. Noble.

The Smallpox Situation.

There have been no new cases of smallpox, and the indications are that the prompt action of the authorities in quarantining the first case will be effective. Practically everybody has been vaccinated and many a left arm is enjoying the peaceful repose furnished by a sling.

The fear of smallpox has quite given away to the prevalent evils of vaccination and grip. As a continuation they are keeping Dr. Mangum busy.

A villager living near the depot was reported as having the disease the first of the week. The town authorities at once passed an ordinance requiring everybody to be vaccinated. There is no alarm felt over the case, for it is remembered that this is not the first case that Chapel Hill has had. The compulsory vaccination order recalls the similar one which was made last spring, when Chapel Hill declared a quarantine against Durham. The town marshal and two of the board of aldermen declared that Chapel Hill would no longer have any charms for them if they had to be vaccinated, that they and their families would forsake its classic shades rather than submit to the law.

The Summer School.

There has been a number of reports that the University will not have a summer school next summer. The reports are untrue. The expectations are for a larger and better one than has ever been held before.

The Geological Journal Club Meets.

The 49th meeting of the Geological Journal Club was held in the Geology lecture room Tuesday evening at 7 o'clock.

Prof. Collier Cobb illustrated the closing up of glacial lakes and their conversion into peat bogs by the growth of plants in a series of lantern slides from photographs taken in the Adirondacks and in Finland.

Mr. George Nelson Coffey, 1900, U. S. Government expert in charge of the soil survey, gave an interesting account of the aims and methods of work of the Bureau of Soils. Mr. Coffey has been detailed by the Bureau to give a course to the students in the Geological department on the origin and nature of soils.

Prof. Cobb presented chemical, mechanical and mineralogical analyses of some sands and sandy soils from eastern North Carolina, pointing out the superior importance of the mineral analysis and the total lack of value of the ignition method of determining organic matter, as combined water is by this process driven off from minerals composing soils. Mr. Coffey agreed with this view, and brought to the attention of the club certain clay subsoils which showed a larger percentage of organic matter according to this method than black swamp soils from the eastern part of this State.

Quite a number were present and the evening was thoroughly enjoyed by all.

Phi Hall, Jan. 28, 1905.

Whereas, in His infinite wisdom, Almighty God has seen fit to take from us our esteemed fellow member, Judge Fred Phillips, and,

Whereas, Judge Phillips has ever been a true and loyal son of the University, an honored and influential citizen of the State, and in every walk of life has reflected credit on the Society and its Alma Mater, Therefore, be it resolved:

First, That in the death of Judge Phillips, the Society loses an honored member and suffers an irremediable loss.

Second, That the Society Hall be draped in his honor.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of the deceased with the tenderest sympathy of every member of the Philanthropic Society.

Fourth, That these resolutions be recorded in the minutes of the Society, and that copies be furnished the University Magazine, THE TAR HEEL and the State papers.

WINSTON AT OXFORD.

Horner Winston Writes Interestingly to the News and Observer of his Life as a Rhodes Scholar.

Sunday's News and Observer contains a letter from J. Horner Winston regarding his life at Oxford. The letter is exceedingly interesting, especially to University men, as the writer spent his American college life in this University. Hence we have taken the liberty to reprint some of it here. Those who recall Mr. Winston's article in the Charlotte Observer early last fall, will observe that there is a considerable difference between the tones of the two letters.

MR. WINSTON'S LETTER.

"The Rhodes scholars have completed their first term at Oxford and spent their 'vac' of six weeks scattered in all parts of the country. Ten went to Paris, ten to Germany, some stayed in London, two studied at Stratford-on-the-Avon and two went back to God's country. Europe has had amazing exhibition of American habits and American disregard of any fixed kind of custom.

"It is now a week before Hilary term begins, but every train is bringing back to Oxford some straggling Rhodes scholar, and by this time they are nearly all here, not with any over-zealous desire to get back to work, but for the simple reason that they 'ain't got no happy home to leave,' and they can live on credit at Oxford. Nor should we be unduly censured for our 'busted' condition, for nobody will contend that there is any pleasure to stay in an eight floor dark attic and watch your fire burn six weeks; but to do otherwise means money. Well, the Rhodes scholars were out to see the sights and have the fun, and the result has been that, after they had borrowed and reborrowed from one another, until they had nothing left, they had to deposit their watches in London in order to buy a railway ticket back to Oxford. And we were not extravagant in our tastes, either. I believe what Brooks, of Georgia, said one day in Paris, best described our financial attitude. We were sitting in a restaurant and I was looking over the 'bill of fare.' I said, 'Brooks, do you want some 'bifteck and pommes de terre'?' He replied no, that he didn't like 'em very much, and besides they cost eighty centimes. It is needless to say that the last was his main reason of refusal. To an American, who is accustomed to American college life, the yearly benefit of $1,500 seems an ample allowance, but the Rhodes scholar vision of luxurious trips upon the continent, fades into 'rustication' in rural England, when his term's 'Battels' are presented. It costs about as much to live one term at Oxford as it does to live a year at the University of North Carolina. Our actual college expenses, presented as a college bill, for the two months of Michaelmas term, just passed, amounted to two hundred and fifty dollars, and of course outside expenses were correspondingly high. There are three such terms, which cover twenty-four weeks of the year, and that leaves twenty-eight weeks in which we have to live somewhere. Don't let anybody fool themselves that 300 is extravagance at Oxford.

"Well, Michaelmas term passed off without any undue commotion. Englishmen continue to smile at American roughness; Americans at English softness.—good-naturedly, though, for they understand that we don't mean any harm by talking loud, and we are beginning to be reconciled to their not speaking to us on the street, for it is Oxford custom. But for a man who doesn't understand such things, it takes very close study and much patience to endure the Oxford man's way of doing, and at first it went very much against the grain not to be recognized by the man who the day before had invited you to breakfast. Men of the same college never speak to each other, when they pass in 'Quado' or in the street. For instance, I was introduced to the most prominent undergraduate of Brasenose College, in the room of my friend Brooks. When that fellow passes Brooks on the street, though they are quite intimate, he doesn't notice him; when he passes me, though we are but acquaintances, I am cordially greeted. He and Brooks are in the same college, he and I are in different colleges, and that's Oxford custom.

"To the matter-of-fact Oxford merchant and store-keeper, these wild talking Americans are still an awfully unknown quantity, and they apparently meet with no success in locating our category. Keiffer, from Maryland, went with me the other day to buy a clock. I was looking over the fellow's display, and picking up one I asked him, 'What sort of clock that was?' 'That's a very good clock, sir,' he said, but I couldn't recommend it as a time-keeper.' Keiffer and I laughed, and he said to the fellow, 'Would it be good to milk a sow with?' The clerk looked puzzled for a moment, and with all solemnity replied, 'No, sir, I don't think it would do to milk with.'

"We find that the ordinary Oxford man is a student of world politics and is thoroughly conversant upon any problem of the day. The outward demeanor of these fellows, which at first we thought indicative of childishness and effeminacy, now discover to be the result of habitual good health and even temper. To begin with, every Englishman is a first-class animal, with a large frame and healthy body. In addition to that they consider exercise indispensable, and every afternoon, rain or shine, men, women and children, old and young alike go to their game of some kind. It is not at all unfamiliar to see and old woman with gray hair, scampering across the field after a golf ball.

"In athletics, every Englishman is too good a participant to make a spectator at a match game, and that accounts for the small attendance. For instance, when Exeter College of Oxford University, plays Trinity College of Cambridge University, there are scarcely a hundred spectators to see the game. Everybody else has got a game of his own; he is off somewhere on the river or at another field playing 'Rugger' or 'Socer' or else following the 'Beagles'.

"At the recent great match in the city of London, between Oxford and Cambridge Universities in which Oxford was defeated 15 to 10, there were only about six thousand to see the game, and very little enthusiasm was displayed. Occasionally somebody would yell out 'Cambridge' and that was the extent of the cheering.

Mr. Winston here states that all but ten of the Oxford scholars have to take straight Freshmen work. Half the time is vacation, but this time must be spent largely at work. There are no intermediate examinations; everything is stood off at the end of the three years' course.

There are great tales told by these Rhodes scholars of what they did and saw Christmas; but they all say that they are glad to get back to Oxford, for it seems at least like a step-mother home, after having been in lands of foreign language. Indeed it is queer how one's sympathies broaden the further he gets from home. If you are traveling alone up about Boston and learn that your neighbor on the train is from North Carolina, that's introduction enough and you are friends on the spot. If you are sitting in a restaurant over here in London and hear somebody remark that he is an American, you feel like he is home folks, even if he lives in Utah. But if you get in Paris, all you want to know is that he speaks English and you are immediately ready to fall on his neck. Several of us Americans were standing in the Louvre Art Gallery one day looking out across the Seine, while the guide was jabbering along in French, explaining the pictures. We were close to a bunch of ladies who were speaking English and we all made up our minds to meet them. We got up a bet as to whether they were English or American and I was appointed to find out. After apologizing to one of the girls for being forward I asked her if she would be so kind as to tell me whether we were on this side of the other side of the river. She didn't know, she said, but she would ask her mother.

The other fellows heard what she said and I could tell from their faces that they were fully convinced that she wasn't American.

By this time the Rhodes scholars have fully gotten their bearings at Oxford; they have been refreshed by a six weeks' holiday, they realize the necessity for earnest work and during the coming term they may be expected to buckle to it.

Christ Church, Oxford, England.

University Magazine.

The latest number of the Magazine contains eighty pages filled with a variety of matter. "The Necessity of Compulsory Arbitration in Labor Troubles" is urged in well wrought argument, based on the two propositions: "In the first place, that present conditions demand a settlement of the labor troubles, because they grievously impair the continuous and harmonious work of these agents, and thereby injure our whole organized life; and, in the second place, that the best and only way to settle these troubles is by compulsory arbitration." "Across the Atlantic on a Cattle Ship" is a realistic narrative by one faithful, both to the cattle and to the demands of Neptune. It is well done, and smacks of the voyage.

There are several stories. The best is "Bill Ken and Evelyn". It is the old story of unrequited love. The meeting of Bill Ken with Evelyn, after the ten years of hobo-life, is fearfully intense on Bill's part. Evelyn is a strange woman. Bill's birth into the meaning of manhood is certainly an unexpected turn. Here an unusual type of man and woman met, without either making a sacrifice in the true meaning of the term. The story is of sustained interest throughout.

The poetry is rather dull, but that will be apt to improve with the return of spring—the frost must give way to the flowers.

The editorials are written with point and vigor. They are live. But it must be admitted, that there is hardly that dignity and tone expected of a literary magazine. A certain college journal is scored heavily and justly for the "familiar, free-and-easy appellation" in referring to Teddy Roosevelt. Yet, the editor falls into the same style and tone before he gets through with the aforesaid offending brother. The editor of the other departments seem to have taken hold with a firm hand, and the Magazine is still in the vigor of life.

Lemmert Coming.

Mr. Schellhase, representing Lemmert, the tailor, will be here on Feb. 9th, 10th and 11th. Students are asked to remember that the Athletic Association gets a commission on all the work done here by Mr. Lemmert. He has shown great interest in athletics here, and not only presented the Lemmert Cup, but continues to share with the Association his profits.

Several fellows went to Greensboro last week to see "The Chorus Girl".

PROBABLY there never was a college where there was not a spirit of vandalism in some of the students. It is as natural for some men to want to destroy everything in sight as it is for them to breathe. When they were children they tried their knives on everything in sight and a pencil was to them something to make a mark with, if they could find anything that was not already marked. When they grow up it is the same apparently—but perhaps they are still only children. That such individuals are here and have been, only a Ph.D. in space at any building or any class, Victim on the campus will be sufficient proof. They will always be here and as long as they are here they will keep up their noble work of disfigurement. We are too well convinced of the inevitableness of this to ask or hope for anything else.

But there is one thing we are rash enough to ask for, and that is that the Ancient and Renowned Order of Vandals limit their sphere of operations. Let them stick to the old buildings. There they will find room enough and material in plenty. Among the classic traditions of these aged buildings there is none more completely theirs than their unimpeachable right to bear the marks of pencils and knives deftly wielded by the skilful hands of ambitious Sophomores and insolent Freshmen. These buildings would not readily give up their rights. But all of our buildings are not old. Some are new and they make no tardy claims to this ancient right.

The gymnasium is one of these new buildings. And there is not a more beautiful one on the campus. A devoted friend of the University—not an alumnus, by the way—gave us this building. Money has been freely spent in making it beautiful, modern and in every way, serviceable. Its equipment is complete. Can we not keep it so? Any man who defaces that building or its equipment insults the friend who gave it, injures the University, and robs others who are here now and will come in after years, of what Judge Bynum has given them.

"The Boys."

A club called "The Boys" has just been organized here by several fellows who are contemplating a trip to Europe next summer on a cattle boat. It is the purpose of the club to make a study of the different countries which they will visit on their European tour. The admission requirements are John L. Stoddard's Lectures in full. The club will hold its meetings semi-monthly at which time papers will be read by members appointed for the occasion. Lessons will be given the cattle-boat class by some of the experienced members, such as exercises in carrying buildings, swimming, and rising every morning at 3 o'clock is recommended by the instructor to those who are going to cross the pond on a cattle-boat.

The charter members of the club are Townsend, Winston, Barry, Reynolds, Gudger, Wilson, Armstrong, Gilmer, Hampton, and Buchanan.

Tried the Supreme Court.

The following law students stood the examination for license before the Supreme Court Monday: Messrs. Broadhurst, Cotton, McMullen, Clegg, Mebane, Chastain, Patton, and Faison. Judge MacRae entertained these gentlemen at dinner a few evenings before they left.

Positions for College Men.

We are beginning our annual search for capable College, University and Technical School graduates to supply to a large number of the 12,000 employers whom we serve. If you will be ready for work next June or before, write us today, stating what position you feel qualified to fill, and we will tell you if we have the right opportunity. It is none too early to be getting in line for a good place, especially if you want one that will prove permanent and offer chance for advancement. Our system is endorsed by leading college presidents, as well as by thousands of young graduates whom we have satisfactorily placed.

Remarks.

Mr. James MacRae, Jr., spent two days off the Hill last week.

Foy Roberson has been elected Captain of the football team for 1905.

Prof. Collier Cobb has been confined to his home several days with the grip.

Lewis T. Moore spent Friday of last week at Trinity College in Durham.

Coffey, '00, is spending a few weeks on the Hill, working for the U. S. Soil Survey.

Dr. Pratt has returned to Chapel Hill after having spent several days in Washington, D. C.

Claud Rankin spent Saturday and Sunday of last week at his home in Fayetteville.

Laurant & Co., the magicians, successors of Hermann, will appear in the Chapel Feb. 20.

The rooms in college have been very much better heated since the last kick in the knockers' column.

President Venable attended the banquet of the Southern Manufacturers' Club at High Point this week.

The Buncombe County Club will hold its regular monthly meeting the last Wednesday in February in the history room.

The painting on the interior of the gymnasium has been completed and classes are now being held every afternoon at 4:30 o'clock.

Claud Rowe, formerly of the University, left several days ago for Washington, D. C., where he will attend the Columbian law school. Sam Klutz is also there.

If the bad weather continues the base-ball squad will be rather late in getting into their togs. The coach will arrive about the fifteenth of this month.

The cold waves which have visited the Hill so frequently of late are affording the lovers of skating plenty of merry sport on the ice of the ponds in the neighborhood. The skating was very fine last week until Sunday's snow came.

Mr. Emmet C. Gudger, an alumnus of this University who is now Past Assistant Paymaster of the United States Navy, arrived in San Francisco, Cal., from the Philippines several days ago enroute for his home in Asheville, N. C., on a furlough for 20 days.

The Philological Club.

The monthly meeting of the Philological Club was held Tuesday night. Dr. Alexander gave a translation of Christopoulos' "Nightingale", pointing out some striking instances of resemblance of this poem to the "Swallow Song" in the Princess. He also noted several points of philological interest, comparing the Greek of Christopoulos (lived 1772-1842) with that of the classic period.

Mr. L. R. Wilson reviewed a dissertation entitled "A History of the Relative Pronouns in English." As the name indicates, the dissertation endeavors to trace the growth of the use of the relatives. A point of interest to students of German is that the author states that the use of the transposed order in the English dependent sentence gave way to the French influence during the period of 1250 to 1600.

Roberson Elected Captain of the Football Team.

At a meeting of the Varsity football team Friday Mr. Foy Roberson was elected Captain of the football team for the season of '05.

After the Virginia-Carolina game in Richmond last Thanksgiving Hunter Carpenter was elected Captain of the team but he has since resigned and it was necessary to elect some one in his stead.

Before entering this University Roberson played star ball on the A. & M. gridiron and when he came to Carolina the A. & M. boys realized their loss.

In 1903 Roberson played a good half on the team which licked Virginia at Richmond, and last year he was without a doubt one of the stars of the team.

His build is suited for a quick active full back and in all of the games last season he proved himself to be equal to the occasion. His fort lies principally in hurdling the line.

As to the loss of Carpenter, of course it will be great; no team could lose such a player and not be injured. But it is by no means irreparable. His successor is a splendid player and popular man, and has shown a natural aptitude for leadership.

The Ring Tau Phi has this to say of Carpenter's leaving:

"The following clipping indicates that the Tar Heels have suffered the same misfortune as V. P. I. and have lost their star player and captain for the season of 1905.

'Chapel Hill, Jan. 15.—Special to the State.

'There is much distress over the fact that Carpenter, our last year's star football player and next year's captain, has not returned to college, but instead had decided to retire from the football world, get married, and go into some more profitable business.'

'Our sincere condolences are extended to the Tar Heels on the loss of so excellent a player as Mr. Carpenter has shown himself to be. We hope the 'other more profitable business' will be as successful as his football career.'—College Topics.

Fifty Thousand Yearly Appropriation—A Laboratory.

Hon. J. Crawford Biggs has introduced into the legislature a bill appropriating $50,000 yearly to the maintenance of the University and a like amount for building a new chemical laboratory. There is much difference between having a bill introduced and having it passed, but there is great hope that the bill will pass. Mr. Biggs is thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the University, and besides his ability he will have to aid him in presenting these needs to the legislature the thorough conviction born of knowledge. It will be a pleasure to the friends of the University to know that her claims are presented by so able a man.

Yackety Yack.

The management of the Yackety Yack was fortunate this year to increase its resources. The increase in prices for cuts, and for the book, was necessary to meet the expense of the publication. The increase in price will assure better work in the way of binding, cuts, halftones, etc. The general appearance will thus be greatly improved. This alone does not mean a successful annual. There must be plenty of material handed in.

No matter how much money is expended in an effort to produce a publication creditable to the University, it must be a failure unless the students lend a helping hand. The editors are doing their part in striving to make the contents of the book an improvement over former publications. There are men in college with special talent in certain lines let them come forward and help make the annual a credit to the University and to themselves.

It is only about two weeks before material must be sent in to the publishers, but very little material, in the way of poetry, stories, or jokes, has been contributed. Put in a joke or drag, and if it's worthy of publication, it will go in, and the editors will bear the responsibility.

To encourage contributions from outsiders, the board decided to offer as a premium an annual to the student who contributes the best college song, the best poem, the best short story, one each for the two best full page drawings, and the wittiest fictitious club.

The following editors are chairmen of these different committees and will be glad to see any one in regard to the premiums offered: Poetry and fiction, S. Lynn; drawing, F. M. Crawford; jokes and drags, J. K. Wilson. Don't be afraid your work will be turned down. Do your best and the best will go in.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

VIRGINIA GAME TO BE PLAYED IN NORFOLK.

The Virginia game will be played in Norfolk next fall. The last word was said on the subject as far as the managers are concerned when Virginia accepted Assistant Manager Bahnson's proposal to have the game there. Perhaps it would be better to say no more of it anywhere but we feel it our duty to say that the students here who know the circumstances feel that the Virginia athletic committee insulted North Carolina and that our own committee did themselves and this University but little credit when they accepted Norfolk's proposition.

As to the first of these opinions, we have held that for some time, but circumstances made it impossible for us to express it. Manager Stewart has been detained at his home this spring and we were unable to find out exactly what correspondence he had with the Virginia authorities. We now know that the executive committee of the Virginia Athletic Association made an agreement with the Norfolk authorities to play Carolina there without consulting Carolina. In other words, they ignored the rival that gives Virginia her most important game. At first it was difficult to believe that the Virginians could be guilty of such discourtesy. Even when we became convinced of it we waited to learn positively that it was true before saying anything of it. There is no doubt of its truth and we repeat that the students here feel that this committee has insulted a rival who is entitled by what she has done on more than one football field to all the courtesy that a true Virginian is capable of.

A prominent member of the Advisory Committee said that Carolina should be congratulated on the fact that she had overlooked the discourtesy. That is not our opinion. Where the virtue of taking an insult lies we fail to see. It is certainly not the kind of virtue that football is supposed to foster. As long as a rival shows the civility that is due from gentlemen to gentlemen, good. But when that civility no longer exists and is no longer shown, the time for passiveness is gone.

It is difficult to believe that the Virginia student body can sanction the discourteous act of their committee. For our part we do not believe it. The students here will certainly not give their own committee great honor for ignoring the insult.

Too little attention has been paid to the students throughout this matter anyway. It is evident that the Virginia committee made its decision contrary to the wishes of very many of the students there. The protest against their action which recently appeared in Topics was a clear, manly statement of a student's position. Here there was still less desire to go to Norfolk. The Advisory Committee knew this and disregarded it simply because of the arrogant action of Virginia—the very fact which, as much as anything else, should have made them refuse to play. It is not the purpose of this article to discuss the merits of Richmond and of Norfolk as claimants for the game. That is of secondary importance. The real question is, why did the committees act as they did. Virginia gives as her reason for going to Norfolk the statement that she was under obligations to that city. What reason does she give for ignoring her rival? None at all, so far as we have been able to find out. It would be unable to give any. Why did our own committee take no notice of the insult? An answer to this would be quite interesting. The only explanation apparent is that Norfolk played a sharp game of politics and won.

The situation was this: Norfolk wanted the game; Richmond had the advantage of location and of being a better football city. How were these advantages to be overcome? By a very clever scheme—by offering special inducements to one of the teams, getting them to agree to go to Norfolk, leaving nothing for the other team to do but play there or not at all. She threw the bait to Virginia and offered to pay the expenses of her team to Norfolk, taking care to inform the Virginians that this inducement would not be offered the Carolinians—that it was a "special". The Virginia committee took the bait and made the contract. The Carolina committee instead of making a vigorous and manly protest, refusing if necessary to play the game, allowed themselves to be hoodwinked and duped. Carolina is thus placed in a position that little becomes her dignity.

Football

Captain Foye Roberson has already gone to work on the football team, and if he continues his good work Carolina will have a winning team next fall. It is his intention to get all the scrubs and Varsity football men on the track this spring so that next fall they will be able to handle the pigskin swiftly and roughly.

An excellent schedule is being arranged for next season and there will most probably be some hot practice games on the Chapel Hill gridiron, and some hot-shots for the respective places on the team. As yet the coach for next year has not been selected.

In the Societies.

Resolved, That the Solid South is detrimental to the South's best interest, was the question discussed in each of the Societies Saturday night. In the Di the affirmative won and Mr. Reynolds made the best speech, while in the Phi the negative won and Mr. Jenkins made the best speech.

A TROLLEY LINE TO DURHAM.

This Much Talked of Project Comes to the Front Again.

Monday evening Mr. Richard Wright, president of the Durham Trolley Company, accompanied by his attorney, Mr. Jones Manning, came over from Durham to see about the proposed Chapel Hill-Durham trolley line. He met a number of the leading citizens and business men of Chapel Hill at Dr. Venable's residence Monday night and proposed to them that, if they would get the people of Chapel Hill to petition the legislature to grant the Southern Railway Co. a permit to tear up the road between Chapel Hill and University Station, he would promise to build a full gauge road from Durham to Chapel Hill, suitable for operating both electric and steam cars. He promised that, if the legislature should grant this permit, he would build the proposed road and operate it for ninety days as an experiment before asking the Southern Railway to tear up their road from here to University Station.

Mr. Wright is enthusiastic over the project and proposes to expend one hundred and fifty thousand dollars in the construction of the road. He does not ask the Chapel Hill or Durham people to contribute a cent toward it. He promises to give the people of Chapel Hill a station near the business part of town and also one where the Southern depot now is. We understand that Col. Anderson, vice-president of the Southern, said that the Southern will be glad to tear up the road from Chapel Hill to University Station, since of late it has been operated at an annual cost of several thousand dollars.

This trolley line has been talked of since the time of the oldest college inhabitant—the faculty perhaps excepted,—and it is welcome news that we may now have it completed. Chapel Hill is the most completely side-tracked town in North Carolina. Why the road should have been built from University Station instead of from Durham is a mystery that has puzzled many. Another thing that is hard to understand is the fact that the station is a mile from town. With a trolley line to Durham and a station where we can get to it, we will not feel so entirely out of the world.

As to the business side of the proposition the promoters have of course looked into that and must be convinced of the profitability of the venture. To an outsider the plan appears to have promise of a much more profitable nature than the present Chapel Hill-University Station track. Now it is impossible for anyone to go to Durham to a show without hiring a horse and buggy and riding over a bad road on a cold night or spending a whole day and night practically away from the Hill. If it were so that one could go and come between here and Durham on a quicker and more certain schedule, there would be much more travelling than there is.

Enlargement of the Athletic Field.

Ever since the new athletic field has been used there has been a sore need for more room. Each year the need becomes more urgent, and only lack of money has prevented the enlargement. Fortunately the last football season was a financial success and left a balance in the treasury of the Athletic Association. This money will be used to make the improvements in the field.

As stated, one of the improvements will be to enlarge the space that is now enclosed. It is an unpleasant fact that we are not able now to accommodate a large crowd—such a crowd as the Virginia baseball game always draws, or as came to see the A. & M. football game last fall. In the future everybody can get in, and arrangements will be made for everybody to see. One who has watched a game over the heads of fifty men taller than himself, or from a fence that was constantly threatening to break, can appreciate the change. When the work on the new field has been finished there will be no excuse for the spectators to crawl under the side fence or ropes, causing delay and vexation to the players.

The field will not only be enlarged, but will be made something more than simply a place to play baseball and football. It will be made large enough to contain a race track, ample ground for track team work and several tennis courts. Heretofore it has been impossible to have an intercollegiate track meet here, because we had no enclosed space in which to have it. The Lake track has done good service, but it does not fill our needs now. The natural place to have a State track meet would be here. There is a strong probability that there will be such meets this year and afterward, and we must be prepared for them. Not only will this need be satisfied, but the opportunity to have a tennis tournament with the other colleges here will be offered. At present there is not a single enclosed court on the campus. The opportunity afforded by the new courts will doubtless cause a greatly increased interest in the Tennis Association and bring us some good tournaments.

A thorough system of underdrainage will be put in, so that the ground will never be too wet for use. With this and the thorough grading that will be done there will be nothing to keep us from having as fine a field as there is in the South.

As to when the work will be done it is impossible to say exactly. The contractor would be at work on it now if the bad weather had not prevented. There is danger that if the ground were torn up now it would not be in condition soon enough for the ball team. It is certain however, that the work will be done by next year.

The following clipping is from the Gastonia News:

"The A. & M. College at Raleigh has offered Will Bentley his tuition and all expenses to play ball with their team this summer."

Better double his pay and make him keep quiet about it.

THE faculty has abolished all mid-term final examinations, and thus many a man, who would under the former system have felt a comfortable certainty in his prospects on chemistry, physics, or geology is very sensible that he is menaced by a five. The change is a very important one, and it certainly means that the course will be much more difficult. The faculty of course know their business and have doubtless done right. But there would hardly be a unanimous indorsement of this by the students interested. There are two sides to it. First one would naturally say that if a student is not to remember enough of a study to be able to pass it after a few months have gone by, there is not much use in his taking it. And that is about correct. If you cannot remember a three hour course three months, spending three months in college would very likely be a waste. On the other hand, however, a student constantly studying different subjects has a lot to make him forget; he is always taking up something new and and different. The main trouble is that some of the course embrace studies which, though grouped under the same name and course, are quite dissimilar. There is about as much difference between the two parts of the spring term of first chemistry, oxids and sulphids, and organic chemistry, as there would be between a study of Catulus and of Browning. The result is that a man has to pass off two quite different courses in the same examination. The value of an examination in causing a man to look at a study as a whole and to concentrate himself on it thus is, to a great extent, lost. It is at the end of the course, in preparation for the examinations that a student can look over his work and systematize it, throwing aside the unimportant and emphasizing more valuable parts. Whoever has to prepare two examinations at one and stand them together cannot realize fully this good.

THE TARHEEL would be ashamed to announce the result of a canvass which was made in the interest of the baseball team recently. Any prep school in the State should be ashamed to make such a showing. It is a fact that one of the classes gave three times as much to its own team last fall. Such a thing is a disgrace to the student body. A few weeks ago we published an article setting forth the condition under which the team must start out this year. All last year's uniforms have been destroyed, and the team must begin without anything at all. In view of this fact the students were asked to make contributions. They have not made them. To say that it is discouraging is a mild statement and a useless one. It may be of more profit, though, to ask why more interest has not been shown.

One man was heard to remark after the manager had been to see him that the Athletic association had plenty of money, that subscriptions were asked for the football team last fall and then it came out ahead, showing that there was no need for the subscriptions. It would be the same way this spring, he said. Several answers might be made to this man. First, last fall was an exceptional one; football as a financial business is a game of chance; the stakes are high and one or two rainy days can make you lose. Second, football is more of a money game than baseball; as the stakes are higher, so is the chance of winning correspondingly great. But in baseball you don't have a few big games; people don't pay money to see baseball games like they do football. And besides there is another one quite as important--the money that was made in football is needed for something else. This last is referred to in another column. These facts should be enough to answer the kicker. But kicking or answering kickers is not raising money for the team. University men, your team needs equipment. Experience has shown that niggardliness toward a baseball team will not pay. If we are to have a team the players must have something to play with. Now they have nothing.

Remarks.

Claiborne Carr spent Sunday here.

Birt Gillam went to Durham Saturday.

Mr. J. K. Wilson spent several days in Raleigh last week.

John Cheshire bagged seventeen birds and two rabbits in a hunt last week.

Vonno Gudger has been confined to his room several days with la grippe.

W. D. James, of smallpox fame, is out and appears little the worse for his experience.

Mr. T. B. Wilson of Elizabeth City visited his son J. Kenyon Wilson last Wednesday.

Dr. Pratt has returned to the Hill after having spent two weeks in Washington City.

The baths and pool in the new gymnasium will be ready for use probably by March 1.

Burke Bridger has returned to the Hill after having spent several days in New York City.

If this bad weather prevails the baseball men will be rather late in getting into their togs.

Harry McMullan, who passed the Supreme Court examination last week, is spending some time at home.

Mr. Emmet Gudger, of the United States Navy will visit his brother Herbert Gudger here within a few days.

The members of the Buncombe County Club are urged to be present at the Thursday night meeting in the Chapel.

Archie Dalton had the misfortune to fall through the ice on one of the neighboring ponds several days ago while out skating.

All the Carolina men who stood the examination for law license at last week's session of the Supreme Court passed successfully.

The number of members in "The Boys" is increasing every day. At the first meeting a paper entitled "A Spanish Bull Fight" will be presented by Mr. Dicey Winston. Pay your initiation fee to Reynolds. The new members are Roberson and Gatlin.

A mass meeting was to have been held Monday night, when Prof. Gore, treasurer of the Y. M. C. A. building fund, was to make a report, and President Venable and Dr. Smith to speak of the movement. On account of the inclement weather and a business engagement necessitating the absence of President Venable, the meeting was postponed.

Track Team Notes.

The candidates for the track team will get on the cinders about March 1st this year. Captain Newton says that there will be some indoor practice in the gymnasium before that time.

There is no reason whatever why Carolina should not put out an excellent track team here this year for there is plenty of good material on hand, and with a little training the green material may possibly be developed into a record-breaker.

Several good meets will be aranged and good track men will be given a chance to distinguish themselves. Those who will probably try for the team are as follows: Captain Newton, Wilson, Captain '04, Winborne, Barry, Calder, Gudger, Story, Reed, Reynolds, Siftord, Crawford, Jacocks, Marlow and Gatlin. Sitton and Olham will probably not do any track work on account of baseball.

Chemical Journal Club.

The 39th meeting was held Monday evening at 7 o'clock. C. L. Miller spoke on "Some Chemical Aspects of the St. Louis Exposition"; Dr. R. O. E. Davis on "Some Present Problems in Technical Chemistry"; R. T. Allen on "The United States as It Impressed an English Scientist"; Dr. J. E. Mills on "Boiling Points of Homologous Series".

WASHINGTON'S BIRTHDAY EXERCISES.

Speeches by J. O. Carr, of Wilmington, and J. S. Newton and J. B. Robertson.

The exercises commemorating the birthday of George Washington were held in Gerrard Hall Wednesday morning at half past eleven. The speaker of the occasion was Hon. J. O. Carr, of Wilmington, of the class of 1895. Mr. Carr was one of the brightest men in his class, being a member of the Alpha Theta Phi, and was one of the leaders of college life. The representatives of the societies were Mr. J. Sprunt Newton, of the Philanthropic, and Mr. J. B. Robertson, of the Dialectic. Excellent music was furnished by the orchestra and much praise was heard of its music.

The exercises were opened by prayer by Rev. Mr. Plyler. Mr. J. K. Wilson, president of the exercises, then extended a welcome to the audience on behalf of the two societies to the commemoration of Washington's birthday and to the consideration of certain vital problems that were before the nation which George Washington had much to do toward founding.

Mr. J. S. Newton of the Phi Society was the first speaker. His subject was, "The University Student and Southern problems." He spoke as follows:

"We have met here for the purpose of doing honor to the memory of a great man, and if we would carry out his ideals we would find out our exact relation to our country and consecrate ourselves to its service. But to the duty we as University students owe to our State we should chiefly confine our attention.

"Much has been said and written of the possibilities of the present South. Orators and rhetoricians have spoken glowingly of our opportunities. Some of us merely accept them as axioms; others are fired by them to higher ambitions and nobler ideals.

"Many problems are demanding solution at our hands. But there is a problem confronting the Southern people unparalleled in the history of the world. One that has been demanding solution at our hands for over thirty years. Never before were two distinct races called to walk side by side with equal privileges and opportunities before the law. This is the great social question before the Southern youth. When and how it will be settled nothing less than omniscience can tell. But it must be solved with wisdom and unerring justice. The negroe's absolute rights must be weighed to him in the highest scales of justice. But in justice to ourselves and in justice to our country Anglo-Saxon supremacy must prevail.

"But along with this question comes the industrial question. Before the war her industrial system was based on slave labor and stood as a barrier to our new industrial movement. Her energies were more absorbed in defense of her constitutional views, and of her cherished institutions. But the great conflict, horrible as it was, forever freed us from the shackles of slavery. Defeated though she was, the South accepted the result with a spirit as beautiful as it is rare, and thanks the God of peace that slavery is no more.

"To-day the South is living her best energies to the pursuit of peace and achieving a most glorious triumph in the bloodless contest of industry, politics, and religion. Her natural resources are realized. The great Isthmian canal, the most gigantic project of this age, will pour rich commerce into our Southern ports. The spindles in our cotton mills are increasing at the daily rate of 5000. The number of cotton mills, now over 700, is more than twice the number in 1890. The output of cotton goods will be doubled, at the present rate, in four years. Great engines are being built, and great ships from Southern shipyards are plowing the waters of the sea and carrying the commerce of the world.

"Another great factor in our up-building is the educational awakening among our people. For a long time we held our heads in shame and confessed our enormous percentage of illiteracy. But to-day the bright light of education is illuminating our Southern skies, and every passing day brings further acknowledgment of the genius of Southern manhood.

"Let us go forth realizing that 'to whom much is given, of them shall much be required.' Let us take with us the shield of truth, integrity and industry and it will help to repel all obstacles. Relying upon the Divine Leader and upon the strong arm of the American people let us put forth every effort to make this Southland of ours a beacon light spreading the light of Southern civilization and inspiring men everywhere with a spirit of freedom and of right."

Mr. J. B. Robertson of the Di Society, was the next speaker. His subject was "George Washington: Side Lights on His Character." He quoted historical incidents to bring out the character of Washington. He said in part:

"We quit our college routine to do honor to this day. While we are celebrating this day we might rehearse something about the man who made famous this day.

"Washington's infancy was that of the ordinary child. Each boy should have a billy goat and a wagon or a hatchet. Washington had a hatchet the fame of which has spread abroad as far as Washington has been heard of. He told his father he could not tell a lie when asked about cutting the cherry tree, at which his father said he would not take that action for a thousand trees though they be flowering with silver and fruiting with gold. In his young manhood days he engaged to go to England to enter the English army, but his mother being unwilling he consented to stay at home, and we honor him for being obedient to his mother.

"Soon he was needed in a war nearer home. Braddock was sent against the Indians in Ohio. Washington went with him at the head of the Virginia riflemen. Knowing that the Indians would not fight in the open, he advised Braddock to pursue similar methods, but Braddock disdained his advice. As a result Braddock's men were routed and only Washington's men saved the day. Braddock was mortally wounded and after the battle Washington tended his wounds although he had disdained Washington's advice. That was a noble act and we honor the chivalry in a man that could do that.

"The war clouds soon gathered for the revolution. In this war the one figure that led and cheered the army was Washington. And after the revolution when mutiny began to break out it was Washington that persuaded the men to be as gentle in peace as they were brave in war.

"Washington had freed the nation and the temptation came to him to be king. But he put it aside. But he did become president at the call of the people, and it was he that first gave the American people to eat of the fruits of liberty. In 1789 Washington died, but his work will never die but will be handed down from generation to generation. And when we have worked out our colonial development and become a great nation we will still say that Washington was the one that did it."

Hon. J. O. Carr delivered the speech of the occasion. He spoke of the conditions in Russia to-day. He said in part:

"The foreign policy of Washington was commended and it was shown that when he declared that foreign influence was most baneful foe of republican government and warned the people against two great a friendship or dislike for a foreign power he sounded the key note and set the precedent for a century of our national greatness. Following this policy America has never struck a blow for conquest nor has she ever withheld her hand when freedom was threatened."

The speaker then contrasted the aims of the American with those of the French Revolution, and made a comparison of the conditions existing in France in 1780 and those existing in Russia to-day, showing their great similarity. He said:

"Louis XVI, like Nicholas II, was weak and incompetent; the French government, like the Russian government, was financially bankrupt; the peasant of France, like the peasant of Russia, had been

LAURANT.

The Magician and Illusionist Works His Magic in the Chapel Monday Night.

The college chapel was well crowded Monday night at the appearance here of Laurant, the magician. There was a much larger audience than usually attends the star course numbers, which shows that people like to see things that they cannot understand. Magic and mystery have always been a source of wonder and delight. The student and townsman equally enjoyed Laurant's performance.

The performance was supposed to begin at half past seven o'clock, but did not begin before eight. The audience became very restless over this delay and the students in the gallery were beginning to get over-boisterous when the performance began. This boisterous spirit showed itself several times during the performance and at times it approached the ungentlemanly.

Laurant's magic was hardly above that of the common magician. His manner was very entertaining on the stage and his audience were well pleased with what there was of the performance. But his program was not varied enough. His handkerchief juggling was cleverly done. Speas and Lyle aided him in this and made a name for themselves under this new role. His tricks with his magic clock took up most of the time between the first and second intermission. With this clock he made the hand stop at a number corresponding to the one taken out of a bag. Then he did the same thing in identifying cards taken out of a pack. Higdon assisted him in this and can tell you just how it was done.

The proverbial magician's hat was presented. From it he took about a bushel of paper, a rabbit and ten or twelve flags.

Mr. K. P. B. Cummings lived up to his usual reputation as a wit in assisting in answering questions submitted by the audience. Instead of drawing a question out of the hat he read out his own question which was rather embarrassing to a young lady in the audience.

The last part of the performance consisted in presenting the great casket mystery, or the witch of the flame. This scene was well worked up and was thoroughly enjoyed by the audience.

Musical Entertainment.

The musical talent of the University will make its first appearance before the college Friday night at eight o'clock. The orchestra and glee club have combined to give an entertainment on that night. Those that have heard the practices in the chapel know that the entertainment will be good, judging from the work of the orchestra and the mixture of snappy and pretty songs by the glee club. The men have been training hard the past two weeks and it is certain that a large audience will greet them tomorrow night.

The student body has pretty generally expressed its contempt of the disgraceful conduct of some men at the show Monday night. Frequently such conduct is railed at and spoken of as the acts of Freshmen. But unfortunately there were others than Freshman among the rowdies Monday night; an upper classman, who had a very conspicuous seat, evidently got as much pleasure out of showing his rowdiness as he did from the magician. This paper does not aspire to a position as teacher of manners, but it does ask that if a student cannot go to a public gathering without acting disrespectfully towards ladies and professors, let him stay away.

WE HAVE the pleasure of announcing that the editor-in-chief will hereafter be admitted to the meetings of the Advisory Committee. This should have been the case all the time. The present editor realized it very keenly during the football season last fall, and purposed to suggest at the end of the year, when there would doubtless be a better prospect of success, that the Committee make the change. The Committee, however, felt that they were misrepresented in the Tar Heel recently, on account of their side of the case not being known. As a result, they voted to admit the Tar Heel hereafter. This action seems to us a very wise one. The Tar Heel is supposed to represent and reflect every phase of the life of the college, and it cannot do this if it does not know what is doing. To be a good editor, one must have the broadest possible view. We are glad our view has been broadened.

Tar Heel Wanted.

The Library is very desirous of obtaining No. 18 of last year's volume of the Tar Heel. The date of the paper is Feb. 18, 1904. If any one has a copy and will give it to the Librarian, he will confer a great favor upon the Library and the Tar Heel as well. The file of the Tar Heel is kept in the Library and last year's file lacks this number of being complete.

Representative Boutell to Deliver the Commencement Address.

The University is fortunate in securing Representative Henry Sherman Boutell, of Illinois, to deliver the Commencement address. He is a resident of Chicago and a lawyer of ability, being a graduate of the Northwestern and Harvard Universities. Since 1897 he has represented his district in Congress. He is easily one of the leading Republican representatives and has broad views on national questions. A great deal of interest was attracted by his recent Chicago speech declaring his opinion that the South should be allowed to settle the negro question.

Mr. Boutell had made arrangements to be abroad at the time Commencement will be but said he would gladly postpone his European trip in order to be here.

Washington and Lee Debaters.

Mr. I. C. Wright, from the Phi, and Mr. A. H. King, from the Di, have been selected as the debating team that will represent Carolina in the contest with Washington and Lee. Mr. Wright's ability has been shown in one intercollegiate contest and is well known. Mr. King has not been in a public debate before, but showed great ability in the preliminary contest. Carolina will be well represented.

There is a bill before the Tennessee Legislature making football playing a felony. As the Purdue Exponent well puts it, this is just another proof of the statement that a new crank is found every day.

Positions for College Men.

We are beginning our annual search for capable College, University and Technical School graduates to supply to a large number of the 12,000 employers whom we serve. If you will be ready for work next June or before, write us today, stating what position you feel qualified to fill, and we will tell you if we have the right opportunity. It is none too early to be getting in line for a good place, especially if you want one that will prove permanent and offer chance for advancement. Our system is endorsed by leading college presidents, as well as by thousands of young graduates whom we have satisfactorily placed.

Remarks.

Brownie Gilmer spent Saturday and Sunday in Raleigh.

Mr. Preston Cotton has been appointed librarian of the Law School.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith delivered an address in Greensboro last Friday night.

W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr., spent a few days in Charlotte and Greensboro last week.

E. D. Broadhurst went to Raleigh last week to act as best man at the marriage of Dr. Betts, of Greensboro.

Livery stable men met their match Tuesday night. The mud between here and Durham varied in depth from one to three feet, and they refused to let out any teams to those who wanted to go to the show. Four men showed their independence by walking.

How's this for a full week? Star Course Monday night, Washington and Lee contest Tuesday night, holiday and Washington's birthday exercises Wednesday, Gimghoul dance Thursday, February German Friday, Concert by Musical Association Friday, and Georgia contest in the Di Saturday.

In Other Colleges.

A Georgia student at the University of Chicago recently threw up his job as a waiter in the University commons and left the University rather than wait on a negro.

The new athletic field at Stanford will comprise 10 acres and will be the finest in America.—Ex.

Among the Southern teams that will have Western coaches next fall are Virginia, Kentucky, Clemson, Alabama, and A. & M. The last season showed that the West can play football.

The largest university in the world, in point of number of students, is that of Tokio, Japan. Forty-eight thousand Japanese are studying there, the favorite courses being law and civil and mechanical engineering.—Athenaeum.

The University of Japan will send a baseball team across the Pacific to play Leland Stanford in San Francisco this Spring.

Virginia has apologized for the language that angered Georgetown some years ago, and athletic relations between the two will be restored.

At Columbia all Freshmen who have not already learned to swim are required to take lessons of a trainer in swimming, and gain a passing mark before the Freshman course in physical training is complete.—Ex.

Hereafter every student in the academic and scientific departments of the University of Vermont will be taxed five dollars for athletic purposes.

Commencement Sermons.

Both the baccalaureate sermon and the night sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association for the coming Commencement will be preached by Richmond men. The Rev. Dr. Gardner will preach the baccalaureate sermon; and the Rev. Dr. William Meade Clark will preach the night sermon.

Dr. Gardner is originally from South Carolina and is now rector of Grace Street Baptist Church, Richmond, Va. He is recognized as one of Virginia's most able preachers, a man of culture and scholarship, and we may expect a masterful sermon from him.

Dr. Clark is now editor of the Southern Churchman, which stands at the head of Episcopal publications in the South. The people of the village will be especially glad to know that he is to be back in Chapel Hill again, where he was once rector of the Episcopal church for some years. Mr. Clark is an Episcopal of the Virginia type and we may also expect an excellent sermon from him.

In the Societies.

Di question: Resolved, That North Carolina should have a child labor law which prevents children under fourteen years of age from working in factories. The affirmative won and Mr. Andrews, W. made the best speech.

Phi question: Resolved, That the national government should aid in the construction of roads. The affirmative won and Mr. Wright made the best speech.

To Play Pennsylvania and Navy.

The football schedule for next year has been nearly all arranged. One game has not been fixed finally, and so the schedule is not ready for publication. Of the games that are certainties, there are two of very great importance and interest, one with Pennsylvania and one with the Navy. The first of these will be played at Philadelphia and the latter at Annapolis. The management is to be congratulated on securing these games, for it has been difficult to do so before. Southern teams play too little in the North. Manager Carr set the pace in arranging the baseball schedule for this Spring, and it is a pleasure to know that the football team is holding up to it.

College Statistics.

Official statistics exhibit the college enrollment for the current year as follows, taking in order the 15 Universities that head the list in point of numerical importance: Harvard, 6,013; Columbia, 4,547; Chicago, 4,147; Northwestern, 4,007; Michigan, 3,726; California, 3,690; Illinois, 3,661; Minnesota, 3,550; Cornell, 3,338; Wisconsin, 3,221; Yale, 2,990; Pennsylvania, 2,664; Syracuse, 2,207; Princeton, 1,383; Leland Stanford, Jr., 1,370 total, 50,624. A significant feature of this list is the surprisingly large representation of the Western colleges. Out of the total of 15 Universities, with an aggregate enrollment of 50,624 students, 8, with 27,372 students, are in Western States. Harvard, the oldest, is the only University with more than 5,000 students, and only three others pass the 4,000 mark. Between 3,000 and 4,000 there are six, and between 2,000 and 3,000 there three. That prestige and importance are not determined by size alone is shown by the fact that Yale ranks eleventh, while Princeton stands fourteenth, smaller than Syracuse, and with only Leland Stanford, Jr., below.—New York Sun.

Washington's Birthday Exercises.

oppressed beyond further endurance; and the educated classes of France, like those of Russia, were arrayed against the existing government. Apparently all that is needed in Russia to repeat the scenes of the French Revolution is a Mirabeau to fire the enthusiasm of the people and a Napoleon to lead them to battle; but the result will be different, first because there is no Mirabeau or Napoleon in Russia to-day, and second, the attitude of the other nations is such as to reduce the disturbance to a mere civil war.

"Russia's trouble began in 1812 when Napoleon entered Russia. When Russia saw that she could drive back this mighty foe it gave her confidence in herself and ever since she has been pushing out to greater possessions. This has been done at the expense of the government, and at the same time there has been a neglect of internal development. And now Russia is reaping the fruit of her policy.

"Under the conditions existing in Russia it will be impossible for her to be victorious in the present war with Japan and thus extend her repudiated system of government farther East. Notwithstanding her inexhaustible supply of men she can not ultimately succeed where it is the individual personality and patriotism of the Japanese soldier fighting against the the crushed spirit of the Russian serf driven by the whip of his master. The greatest victory the Japanese people have won is neither the destruction of the Russian navy, nor the capture of Port Arthur, but they won the good will of all civilized nations when General Nogi allowed General Stoessel to return home in honor and to wear his sword, which sentiment was applauded by the whole Japanese people."

No. 18.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

Baseball.

Baseball is now taking its place at the head of the Spring athletics and all of the students want to see the candidates for the team get on the diamond once again. For the past two weeks Captain Cheshire and Coach Lawson have had the infield candidates practicing in the new gymnasium every afternoon from two to four o'clock and consequently the men are in pretty good physical condition already.

The first outdoor practice this season was held Saturday afternoon on the old athletic field back of the new gymnasium, where the men were practiced in catching flies more than anything else. It will probably be two weeks before the regular diamond will be fit for use because the wet weather of February has put it in a bad condition. The sun and wind which we are now blessed with bids fair to put it in playing condition soon.

The first two games which were to have been played with Bingham and Guilford at Chapel Hill are cancelled because the men were rather late in getting into their logs this year and no slack chances will be taken. Consequently the first game played will be with Oak Ridge Institute at Chapel Hill on March 25. Of course this will be a victory for us but not an easy one because Oak Ridge this year has a bully good team. Cook, the third baseman, and several old ringers are still with them and they will most probably give us a shot for our money.

The second game played will be with Wake Forest at Chapel Hill and this game will most likely be a hot one, for Wake Forest is said to have a smooth playing set of boys. At any rate, we feel sure of victory.

Just at present we are all wondering what kind of a team Carolina is going to put on the diamond this season. From the present indications she will have one of the strongest teams she has had within the past years. With Dr. Lawson as coach and John Cheshire as captain there is no reason why Carolina should not have a good nine, because there are plenty of good candidates for the team.

Dr. Lawson is an alumnus of this University. He is generally considered to be the best pitcher Carolina ever had, and, after leaving here, he was with one of the great Northern baseball leagues for some time.

This makes Cheshire's fourth year on the team and he has proven himself to be one of the best college ball players in the South. We feel sure that he will make a worthy leader.

Plenty of good men have presented themselves for the positions on the team and Coach Lawson is doing everything in his power to develop them from the very start. Among the candidates are: Sitton, Winston, Stem, Noble, Worth, Cheshire, Carter, Gudger, Taylor, Thompson, Hopgood, Barry, Gatlin, James, Patterson, Winborn, Rogers, Harris, Emerson, Jones, Weaver, Moore, and Smith.

The Trolley Line.

The indications are that there will be no trolley line in Chapel Hill soon. There is a deal of opposition to the plan proposed by Mr. Wright of Durham and mentioned in these columns recently. Professor Williams and Professor Noble and a number of villagers went to Raleigh Monday to argue the question before the legislative committee. A quorum of the committee could not be obtained however. Professor Noble was to favor the Wright plan and Professor Williams to oppose it. The latter objects to giving the Southern permission to discontinue its trains when the car line is completed. He wants both. The railroad people say they are running the Chapel Hill train now at a loss. The Southern is bound by its charter contract to run the train. Its freight connections are considered better than any that could be made by the trolley line; hence the Southern would haul the freight. The passenger traffic then would be the only part the new line would get. If the passenger and freight traffic together cannot support one road, they certainly cannot, taken separately, support two. So we cannot have two; we must have the Southern; and that leaves the trolley line out of the question.

Mr. Coffey's Lectures.

Mr. George Nelson Coffey, of the class of 1900, who is in charge of the Soil Survey of the U. S. Department of Agriculture, was detailed by the Bureau of Soils to give a course in his specialty in connection with the work of the Department of Geology during the month of February. Mr. Coffey received his training here and was formerly assistant in geology. His course has been taken with much profit by an earnest class of a dozen or more, and Mr. Coffey has shown himself a master-teacher as well as a soil expert. He is one of her sons of whom the University of North Carolina is justly proud.

The Georgia Debaters.

Messrs. C. C. Barnhardt, from the Di. and H. S. Lewis, from the Phi, have been selected as the Georgia debaters. These gentlemen have been very prominent in our debating life, both of them being Commencement debaters last year. The preliminary speeches showed that they have the question well in hand, and that they know how to present it. Carolina will be worthily represented. The question to be debated is: "Resolved, That the best interests of the United States are opposed to our permanent occupation of any part of the Eastern Hemisphere except for coaling stations."

A New League Proposed.

The following item, which is of some interest, is taken from the Times-Despatch. As to the proposition it brings up, we are informed that nothing definite has been said or done.

"The recent announcement that Georgetown and Virginia have practically settled their athletic differences, coming, as it does, upon the heels of Virginia's withdrawal from the Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Association, points towards the organization of an association among the stronger institutions of this section of the South. At all events, this looks to be the most practical solution of the present condition of affairs.

"Both from a geographical standpoint and for the welfare of athletics, such an organization seems necessary. A dividing line is already closely drawn between the stronger athletic teams of this section and those farther south. This is illustrated by the fact that in estimating the strength of the Southern teams, the records of the teams in this section are not given the same consideration by either Northern or Southern writers as those of the teams composing the Southern Intercollegiate Association.

"This gap has existed since the formation of the Southern Association some years ago. The territory embraced is a large one, and comprises a great many colleges, but there are few teams which stand out preeminently. Consequently it seems desirable that the leaders should get together and formulate an organization, under equitable playing rules, such as prevail among the larger Eastern institutions.

"An association composed of Georgetown, North Carolina, Virginia and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute, for instance, would be a formidable one, and would at once demand recognition in the college world. This "Big Four" of the Southeast would be to its section what Yale, Princeton, Harvard and Pennsylvania are to the East; Michigan, Chicago, Minnesota and Wisconsin to the West, and what Vanderbilt, Sewanee, Clemson and Auburn are to the far South.

"A strong, well conducted organization, with proper eligibility rules, would unite these institutions on a satisfactory basis and foster pure athletics among those where the greatest amount of rivalry already exists.

"This organization should in no way interfere with the present Virginia Intercollegiate Athletic Association and with the good it is doing."

February German.

The regular February German took place on Friday night in Commons Hall. Many of the most popular and attractive young ladies from over the State and elsewhere were in attendance, and consequently the German was one of the most successful of the year. It was skilfully led by Mr. John Cheshire.

Those present were as follows: H. P. Gibson with Miss Millie Archer of Chapel Hill, J. E. Pogue with Miss Lucy Andrews of Raleigh, H. McR. Jones with Miss Bessie Gore of Wilmington, B. K. Lassiter with Miss Julia Winston of Durham, J. E. Barry with Miss O'Berry of Goldsboro, H. M. London of Pittsboro with Miss Annie Taylor of Pittsboro, T. H. Smith with Miss Smith of Tacoma, Wash., E. V. Howell with Miss May Hume of Chapel Hill, W. P. Jacobs with Miss Octavia Hughes of New Bern, H. V. Worth with Miss Capelhart of Chicago, N. C. Curtis with Miss Fowie of Chicago, T. O. O'Berry with Miss May Henderson of Salisbury, A. H. Bahnsen with Miss Mary Andrews of Raleigh, R. R. Reynolds with Miss Huit of Charlotte, Tenn., A. C. Dalton with Miss Margaret Merrimon of Greensboro, G. M. Pritchard with Miss Louise Bradshaw of Greensboro, Graham Kenan with Miss Margaret Haynes of Winton, L. G. Rountree with Miss Major of Hertford, T. P. Cheshire with Mary Robinson of Raleigh, B. H. Bridgers with Miss Cheshire of Raleigh, Dr. and Mrs. Howe of Chapel Hill, A. L. Cox with Miss Belle Nash of Tarboro, E. S. Askev with Mrs. M. C. S. Pelton of Chapel Hill, Foye Roberson with Miss Crabtree of Kernersville, Stags: E. A. D'Allenbert, J. W. Sykes, F. Gilliam, J. M. Armstrong, M. Schenck, J. B. Murphy, C. T. Woollen, L. A. Tomlinson of Durham, E. S. Nash of Wilmington, J. T. McAden, H. B. Gudger, J. B. James, A. E. Hart, C. F. McRae of Greensboro, J. C. McRae, J. G. Wood, T. D. Pierce, A. J. Moore.

A New Book by Dr. Raper.

The Macmillan Company of New York and London have asked Dr. Raper to write an elementary text book on economics. Dr. Raper has accepted the offer, and it is probable that the book will be finished by the end of the year. The title of the book will be "Economics for High Schools; the Principles of Wealth and Welfare." The Macmillan Company will push the introduction and sale of this book especially in the Southern high schools.

Norfolk's Concession.

Norfolk has amended her Virginia proposition, and offers to pay the expenses of Carolina's football team as well as Virginia's to Norfolk next fall. Carolina had agreed to play Virginia before this concession was made, and the reason for it is not quite clear. It is not improbable that the Norfolk people realized that the student body here would not stand for such treatment as she first proposed for us.

Hot and cold baths may be had in the gym most any old time.

Two weeks ago we reprinted from the Gastonia News a clipping which gave offense, we are informed, to the sister institution to which it referred. To the athletic authorities of that institution we offer the assurance that nothing like an intention to offend prompted the copying of the article or the comment that was made on it. We assumed no responsibility for the article and credited it plainly to the paper to which it belonged. As to our meaning to bring a charge of professionalism by means of it—that interpretation seems to have been the cause of offence—it is enough to say that Carolina does not bring such charges through newspapers.

We wish to congratulate heartily the Musical Association on the striking success of their concert last Friday evening in respect both to the excellence of the programme and the size of the audience. The need for music is great in our life; the college community which has not its cultivating influence is to be pitied. Surely we are fortunate in having an organization which can fill this want as well as our Musical Association has shown itself able to do. Quite as agreeable is it to know that the members of the Association are supported by the student body. Last year and for part of this year, this support was not given. We hope the audience of Friday night may be taken as an earnest that the students have realized their duty—that all the burdens are not to be borne by the musicians.

The amount of time and work that members of the Musical Association devote to practice is astonishing. They give their time and labor to developing a side of student life that is of an importance to be compared with that represented by the athletic teams. We go to games to enjoy them and to aid the Athletic Association. The same reason should make us go to the concerts. As for the man who will go to hear the rehearsals night after night and then refuse to make a contribution to the Association or to attend its concerts, his place is not in the University of North Carolina.

Gimghoul German.

A most enjoyable german was given by the Junior Order of Gimghouls on the evening of the twenty-third in their Lodge on Rosemary avenue. The hall was skilfully decorated with cedar and Spanish moss. The electric lights were cut off and the bright light from the large open fire-place on the red and black of the order and the white and blue of the University made a beautiful picture. During the progress of the german light refreshments were served.

The german was masterfully led by Mr. T. P. Cheshire and Miss Copehart of Avocus. Those in attendance were as follows: T. P. Cheshire and Miss Copehart of Avocus, H. V. Worth with Miss Belle Nash of Tarboro, D. G. Fowle with Miss Lucy Andrews of Raleigh, E. S. Nash of Wilmington with Miss Annie Taylor Pittsboro, E. S. Burwell with Miss Louise Venable of Chapel Hill, J. E. Barry with Miss May Hume of Chapel Hill, Paul Schenck with Miss Smith of Tacoma, Wash., J. W. Winborne with Miss Mary Roberson of Raleigh, R. E. Calder with Miss Henderson of Salisbury, H. McR. Jones with Miss Cheshire of Tarboro, L. G. Rountree with Miss Margaret Pruden of Edenton, B. H. Perry with Miss Octavia Hughes of New Bern, B. H. Bridgers with Miss Fowle of Chicago, H. McMullan with Miss Major of Hertford, W. S. Bernard with Miss Millie Archer of Chapel Hill, N. C. Curtis with Miss Isom of Chicago, A. H. Bahnson with Miss Haynes of Winston-Salem, J. R. Moore with Miss Margaret Merriman of Greensboro, A. C. Dalton with Miss Louise Bradshaw of Greensboro, J. G. Wood, Jr. with Miss O'Berry of Goldsboro, E. V. Howell with Miss Thompson of Raleigh, J. B. Murphy with Miss Bessie Gore of Wilmington, A. L. Cox with Miss Annie Gray Nash of Tarboro.

The chaperons were: Mrs. Cramer, Mrs. Dalton of Greensboro, Mrs. M. C. S. Pelton, Dr. and Mrs. Raper, Dr. and Mrs. Howe, Dr. Wheeler, Dr. and Mrs. Pratt, Dr. and Mrs. Henderson, Prof. and Mrs. Gore, Miss James.

Stags: Foye Roberson, H. M. Emerson, John Cheshire, V. L. Gudger, H. S. Lewis, W. J. Bellamy, Cameron McRae, W. P. Jaccocks.

Remarks.

Dr. Bruner is again able to meet his classes.

Frank Gatlin spent several days in Durham last week.

Professors Williams and Noble spent Monday in Raleigh.

Mr. J. H. Vaughn spent several days last week at home.

Joe Armstrong has gone to Wilmington to spend several days.

George Pritchard has gone to Asheville for a few week's stay.

The football coach for 1905 has not been selected as was reported.

Baxter Boone spent Saturday and Sunday at his home in Durham.

Several men from here will attend the inauguration of the President.

Mr. W. D. James is on the Hill again after having spent two weeks at home in Laurinburg.

Mr. John A. Parker returned Tuesday evening from a week's visit to his home in Dunn, N. C.

Among the old men who attended the german last week were Albert Cox, Will Dunn and H. A. London.

Cleveland Norton and Cute Tomlinson, two old boys of Chapel Hill, attended the german here Friday night.

Mr. Harvey Holt was on the Hill for a few days last week. Mr. Holt is now in business at Oak Ridge, N. C.

FOR SALE — One beautiful Knabe Square Piano. This excellent condition. Apply to N. C. Long & Bro.

W. W. Williams, who has been confined to his bed several weeks with rheumatism, will be able to get out this week probably.

Work on the Beta Theta Pi chapter house is progressing rapidly and the members hope to be comfortably installed in it within a few weeks.

Dr. Smith gave a lecture before the Presbyterian conference at Charlotte Sunday night. His subject was "Some Phases of Bible Study."

The sun and wind which we are blessed with spells a good baseball diamond within a few days while Captain Cheshire and Coach Lawson mean a winning nine.

The membership of "The Boys" is growing every day. A trip "across the pond" is all the go. The new members of the club are: Noble, Wrenn, Apgar, and Lewis.

From the present indications Chapel Hill will be as old as Rome before she has an electric line connecting her with Durham. Several of the Chapel Hill merchants oppose it.

Several fellows went to Durham Saturday night to see James J. Jeffries. Jeffries weighs over 200 pounds and regardless of his theatrical duties he keeps in good training.

Mr Merritt at Yearby's drug store offers twelve drinks to any man who makes a home run in any of the scheduled games, six drinks to any one who knocks a three-bagger, and two drinks for every hit.

T. F. Hickerson, '05, now teacher of mathematics at Bingham School in Asheville, led the regular annual german of the Bingham German Club given at The Manor recently.

Mr. E. P. Denson left Tuesday morning for his home in High Point where he will spend a week or so before going on to accept the appointment to West Point which has recently been awarded him.

Concert by the University Orchestra and Glee Club.

The concert given by the University orchestra and glee club Friday night was thoroughly enjoyed by a large audience. This was the first appearance of the musical association this year and the expectations of the students and others were realized. The gallery was well filled with students and there were many visiting young ladies down stairs who were here to attend the February german. The association cleared about ninety dollars from the concert.

The work of both the orchestra and glee club showed the excellent work Mr. Woollen had done in training them. The program was carried out without a hitch with the exception that they had not enough pieces to respond to the numerous encores. The program was very pleasantly varied by a reading by Mr. McKie of "Mr. Dooley on the College Professor." Mr. H. V. Worth made the hit of the evening in his song, "A Series of Catastrophies," aided by the glee club. Altogether the concert was good and the orchestra and glee club will certainly meet with success on their proposed trips to several cities in the State. The following program was rendered:

PART I.

1. Forty-Seventh Regiment March—Orchestra.
2. U. N. C. Song—Glee Club.
3. Selection from "Prince of Pilsen"—Orchestra.
4. Serenade "Good Night, Beloved, Good Night"—Mr. Woollen and Glee Club.
5. Song for Cornet, "In Old Madrid"—Mr. Goslen and Orchestra.

PART II.

1. Spanish Serenade "Paloma"—Orchestra.
2. "A Series of Catastrophies"—Mr. Worth and Glee Club.
3. Reading—Mr. Dooley on the College Professor—Mr. McKie.
4. "The Sweetest Song of All"—Glee Club.
5. "Hail Carolina"—Ensemble.

In the editorials of the current number of the Magazine is a severe criticism of Mr. Dixon's "Leopard Spots." The editor of the Magazine certainly has a right to criticize as he sees fit, but coming as it does from the magazine of the University of Mr. Dixon's native State, this criticism will perhaps receive more consideration than it would under other circumstances, and it is for that reason I desire to enter this protest against such a misrepresentation of the sentiment of the University.

The Magazine has failed in its duty to honestly and faithfully reflect the sentiment of the University. A canvass of our student body would show conclusively that those who share in the Magazine's opinion are greatly in the minority.

The reason set forth for the Magazine's criticism is, in substance, that Mr. Dixon's books revive the memory of horrors that should be forgot; that the South has lived too long in the past, and the sooner these memories are gone, the better for us. The editor of the Magazine has not read the book. His criticism is grounded upon ignorance of the merit or the faults the book may contain. We grant his motive is honest, that he really believes it better for the South to break away from the old moorings; but the efforts being made by Northerners and Northern sympathizers to force the South to forget her past are doing more to keep alive sectionalism than are all other agencies combined. The Magazine utters the hope that the future will find us a nation of one aim, of one ideal. But shall the South have no part in the making of this new ideal? Shall it be forced to follow the example the example of the one with whom we are taking issue and preserve only a Southern body to be filled with Northern spirit and sympathy, and to become the temple of a Northern soul? In short, to become an American, shall the South be forced to become Northern, or will it be allowed to cherish the memory of a glorious past, and to have a just share in merging the ideals of the two sections into a happy unity?

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

MEETING OF THE ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

Gratifying Contributions to the Baseball Team—Mr. Townsend Elected to the Advisory Committee.

A meeting of the Athletic Association was held Friday night for the purpose of acquainting the students with the condition of the treasury of the Association and of soliciting contributions for it. President Venable gave a statement of the financial results of the last football season. Most of the money that was cleared, he said, had been set apart for the purpose of enlarging and improving the athletic field. The remainder would have to be saved to equip the football team at the beginning of next season. Consequently there is no money available for the baseball team. The team has practically no uniforms and but little other equipment. The team must have individual contributions from the students. He closed his remarks by offering to duplicate the amount that had been raised in a canvass of the college a few days before.

Prof. Noble then made a strong statement of the case. He referred happily to the great pitching Coach Lawson had once done for us. He was followed by Coach Lawson, who earnestly asked the students to back him up in his effort to develop the team into a winning one. Speeches were then made by Manager Jones, of the baseball team, Capt. Newton, of the track team, and Mr. McLean.

After the speeches, contributions were made in cash and by subscriptions that were very gratifying. The amount was not so large as it should be, but was much more respectable than the amount given last Spring.

At the close of the meeting President Kenan announced that there was a vacancy on the Advisory Committee caused by the election of the undergraduate member, Mr. Jones, to be manager of the ball team. Mr. Townsend was unanimously elected to the position.

Before declaring the meeting adjourned President Kenan stated that there would certainly not be another massmeeting this year to ask for money. The purpose of massmeetings, he said, is to get the students together for a good time, to show their appreciation of the teams and to rejoice with them in what they do. The successful massmeeting is the one where everybody goes; where everybody is there everybody enjoys it. He asked that we might have many such this Spring.

Bishop Strange Here this Week.

Bishop Strange, of Wilmington, who preached the University sermon for March last Sunday night, will remain here the most of this week. Hereafter he expects to come here for a few days each year. His object is to become acquainted with the men of the University, and especially with the men of his own denomination, so that when they get out into the life of the State he may know them from his acquaintance with them here. In order to be able to see any man who cares to speak with him, he has been staying from 2:30 to 3:30 in the afternoon and from 9 to 10 at night in the Y. M. C. A. room. He wishes any man who would like to speak with him to come there at those hours.

On Tuesday night he addressed the Y. M. C. A. at its regular meeting in the chapel. A great many students were in attendance. He spoke on the care of the ministry as a life work. His address was short but very much enjoyed.

The Historical Society.

The Historical Society held its regular meeting for March in the History room Monday night.

Mr. John H. Vaughan gave a very interesting account of his research work during the summer. He gave a brief description of Fort Caswell which was built in 1826 and which was surrendered to the Federal government in 1861. He stated that this fort was worked over in 1897 and consists of five batteries, and is of some interest from the fact that it is the only garrisoned fort in North Carolina. He then gave a sketch of his work in five of the eastern counties.

Mr. Vaughan spent most of the summer in those counties doing research work for Dr. Raper and it is evident that he did his work well.

Dr. Raper then gave a short review of Dr. Fitch's book entitled, "Some Neglected Points in N. C. History." It is a strong defense of the Regulators, and holds to the idea that the battle of Alamance was the first of the Revolution. While it claims to deal with neglected points it is simply a restatement of the general views of various writers. It is extremely interesting but strongly partisan.

He gave also a review of a pamphlet on the "Internal Improvements in North Carolina" recently issued by Dr. Charles Clinton Weaver, President of Davenport College. The principal points brought out in this pamphlet are that improvements began by private companies, but that in 1815 the State began to aid in the work. The West sought to build railroads while the East wanted canals, thus giving practically a sectional setting to the efforts. The author makes the point that a central market was needed most and that a railroad connecting eastern and western sections was the best solution. He refers very interestingly to the ideals held by President Caldwell. The last point is the part taken by private companies and corporations in the development of railroads from their beginning to 1860.

The meeting was one of the most profitable held this year.

Governor Bob Taylor.

It was a large audience that greeted Governor Bob Taylor in the chapel Saturday night, and his jokes, oratory, and songs were thoroughly appreciated. Governor Taylor is well known throughout the State and those that had never heard him knew that a pleasant hour was in store for them. And the speaker was up to his best in his new lecture, "Castles in the Air." It was a combination of oratory and humor seldom seen in a public speaker. His castles in the air were beautiful pictures drawn with the power of a master orator. Mingled with these pictures and yet necessary to them, were the many jokes which have made the Ex-Governor famous. His forte lies in his combination of passionate eloquence and broad humor. The one contributes to the other. And Governor Bob knows when the climax has been reached, knows how, by introducing a joke, to bring down the house in applause.

Governor Taylor's introduction was very happy, and caught the audience at once. He said that when he visited the University ten years ago it had three hundred and sixty students. That now it has six hundred and sixty, and that he hoped that by the end of the next ten years it would have twenty-six hundred and sixty. But that, he said, was a mere castle in the air. His lecture from then on was one air castle after another. The castle of Adam in the garden was the first one. His next castle of a young man wooing his girl on the river and in a swing was well done. The animal band was a splendid structure. His air castle of the boy was probably enjoyed more than any of his pictures. His picture of the man who built air castles as against the man sored on the world was good. But his humor after all was the main part of his lecture and that will not bear description.

Reflections Suggested by "Castles in the Air."

The student who found Sunday morning that the laundry agent had not returned his collars and cuffs was constrained to remark, "Even the laundry man was blowing soap bubbles last night."

A party were exchanging their views on the lecturer when one man said,

"Yes, he is a strong man. Only a man of power could reduce the glory of ancient Egypt as he did, to a bone, a stone, and a hank of hair."

"But what bothers me," returned another, "is where did he get that hank of hair?"

A provoking laugh was the response.

The power a freshman wields—when he has Bob Taylor to back him up. There is something to think about. To see it is worth the price. The unfortunate average man has to wait until a joke is told before he laughs. Even if the transparency of the joke reveals the point prematurely, regard for the speaker and for the part of the audience who might not have heard so distinctly restrains him from going at once into a state of thunderous ecstasy. Not so the freshman—the bright one, we mean. Just let a joker say, "Once when I was a bare-footed boy," and the bright one scents afar the joke, and sends forth such a clapping and such a shouting that the joker is overwhelmed, the luckless jokelet frightened back to cover—it might have been a joke, or it might have been a sad, sweet tale of a boyhood love, there is no way of knowing—and the unfortunate average man who has not a front seat decides that he paid to hear not the jokes but the freshman. Such is the persuasive power of the freshman—when backed up by Bob Taylor.

It takes a bright freshman to do this, however, and they are not all bright. Unbright some of them are. At least three hours and twenty-five minutes would be necessary for them to catch a joke that was told under circumstances the most favorable. They sit in silent wonder and amazement at the perspicuity of their fellows who finally subside from exhaustion into a semi-silence and gaze proudly at themselves. The joker, taking advantage of the lull, makes another attempt. The average man's hopes rise. Crash! they're gone. One of the unbright has at last decided that he must have let a joke go by—surely his cheering classmates saw something. So with a clapping of hands and a vigorous stamping of feet he calls his unbright fellows to their duty. He cheers, they cheer, the bright ones cheer, and even others join the noisy throng. So the joker is scared and the joke is lost and the average man gets cheated. Such is the power of a freshman—when backed up by Bob Taylor.

Bob Taylor got ahead of one man, and he did it well. Only Bob could have done it, but he did it to a finish. The man who was "did" goes to every show in the chapel and sits always in the gallery. Evidently he spends most of his time calculating just the moment when the show will be over. He has not a second to lose in the chapel. Of course after the show he will spend a quarter of an hour around the front door, and then loaf in somebody else's room till the lights go out. But that is another matter. The time he spends at a concert or lecture is valuable. So he watches carefully for a sign that the end is coming. He uses all his knowledge, acuteness and experience in detecting this. As he is a man of wide knowledge and one who spent quite

THE HEART of every University man rejoiced when the news came last week that the legislature had given us $50,000 for a laboratory and increased the yearly appropriation to $45,000. There is no need to state the increased advantages this means for the University man; they are well known. But the gift indicates a fact that we must note. The State seems at last to be coming to recognize that we must have money. One legislative committee some years ago recognized the need for a laboratory and heartily recommended that we build it, but further recommending that we get the money for it as we had got all our other buildings—from benevolent private individuals. That will doubtless stand as the most ironical report ever made by a legislative committee. Thank Heaven, the legislators have lost the bitterness of their humor.

Meeting of the Philological Club.

The Philological Club held its regular meeting Tuesday night. The program was as follows:

"Translation and Interpretation," by Dr. Hume.

"Some Problems in the English Relative Pronoun," by Mr. L. R. Wilson.

Dr. Smith announced that the Club will in the future be able to publish yearly a volume of its representative work. Definite action looking toward the publication of this book will be taken at the next meeting.

The Geological Journal Club.

The Geological Journal Club met at 7:30 p. m. Tuesday. Mr. Robert R. Reynolds, '06, was elected Secretary of the Club.

Mr. Jeffries gave a review of Chamberlain's planetesimal hypothesis.

Mr. Oldham gave some account of the chemical and geological theories of the origin of petroleum, and specimens of crude petroleum were shown the Club.

Mr. Cobb exhibited a shell-rock from Currituck and described the formation of the sand-reefs there on a pleistocene rock-reef foundation.

The next meeting of the Club will be held Tuesday night week at which time several papers will be presented by members of the Club.

Bishop Strange Preaches University Sermon for March.

The University sermon for March was preached by Bishop Strange, of Wilmington. A large crowd heard Bishop Strange speak on the resurrection of Christ as a fact. He is an alumnus of the University and one who since leaving here has done great credit to his alma mater.

Bishop Strange said in part: "Why is it that as men have stood over the bier of those that are dearest to them, their hearts have demanded a future, in spite of all of the physical evidence to the contrary. This universal longing can only be explained by the fact that man is to live after death. Wherever man has risen above a physical existence he has had this longing desire of immortality. Intellectual deduction also says there must be a future. But this in itself is not enough to govern conduct. All people have reasoned about this but Christ established it by actually rising from the dead.

"But is it a fact that Christ arose from the dead? Is the resurrection of Christ an authenticated fact or is it a mere myth?

"In the latter part of the 18th century a writer laid down the following five tests of the authenticity of a fact: First, it must be supported by senses. Second, it must be public. Third, public monuments must point to it. Fifth, these customs must start at that time and last down to the present. Let us try the resurrection of Christ by these tests.

"Firstly, Jesus Christ as he lived was a physical fact. His death was very physical. His every day conduct was in the world with physical men. Secondly, Christ's resurrection was a public event. He was first seen of the women. Then he appeared to the disciples when they were gathered together. Then he was seen of one hundred and twenty men, and Paul says that there five hundred men who saw him after he arose and that half of them were living at his time and could testify to the fact. Thirdly, are there any monuments to the risen Christ? The many churches stand today as a witness to the fact that Christ lives and works in them. Both the magnificent tabernacle and humble building testify to Christ. Fourthly, we have many customs that have come down to us that point to Christ. We have the Easter services that say Christ has arisen. Then we have the Sabbath, the ancient custom. Many old writers speak of sabbath worship as started early after Christ's time as a custom to meet on the first day of the week, because Christ rose that day.

"The best proven fact in human history is the fact that Christ arose. If we go back through the centuries and ask all the saints we see that this fact is everywhere assured. It is the most glorious fact in history. Here we must live this life with the future in view. If Christ lives he must be with us and that to help."

Remarks.

Dr. Venable spent Tuesday in Raleigh.

Dr. Pratt spent Friday of last week in Raleigh.

Disey Winston spent several days at his home in Wilson last week.

Branner Gilmer and Vonno Gudger spent several days in Raleigh last week.

J. Adam Wells who has been ill for several days is now able to be out again.

J. M. Umstead, Law of '04, of Durham, came over to hear the Taylor lecture.

At the last meeting of the Journal Club R. R. Reynolds was elected secretary and treasurer.

Mr. J. J. Parker has been selected scrub debater, from the Di Society, for the Georgia debate. He will no doubt do his work well.

Bill Pace, an old Carolina man, was on the Hill Monday and Tuesday. Mr. Pace is now engaged in the study of law at Wake Forest College.

Jack Donnoely spent Saturday and Sunday here. Mr. Doneely graduates in medicine at Raleigh this year in the University Medical Department.

Mr. James McRae, who has been teaching elementary Law during this year has severed his relations with the University. He goes to Wilmington where he will engage in the practice of his profession. His place here will be ably filled by Mr. E. D. Broadhurst.

The Shakespeare Club.

The most pleasant and profitable meeting of the year was held at Dr. Hume's residence Thursday evening. The features of the meeting were Dr. Hume's talk on the Old English Ballads, a paper on Hotspur, by Mr. Hubert Haywood, and Mr. Bagby's article on Hal.

The Football Coach Selected.

Mr. W. J. Warner of Cornell has been selected as football coach next year. Mr. Warner played on the Cornell team for four years and was captain of it during the last two years he played. In 1901 he was guard on Walter Camp's All American and was given the same position on Casper Whitney's in 1902. In 1903 he was head coach at Cornell. An epidemic of disease in that University, however, deprived him of most of his material and gave him little chance to distinguish himself. Last year he coached Sherman Institute, an Indian school at Riverside, Cal. The material was mostly new and there was little expectation for the team. He developed, however, a team that was considered the champion one of the Pacific coast. They won over Leland Stanford, University of Nevada, and University of Southern California.

Mr. Warner was very highly recommended and was selected in preference to five other excellent coaches whose names were under consideration. He has been engaged at a higher salary than the University has ever paid a football coach before.

Track Team.

The candidates for the track team have already begun work and every afternoon in the gymnasium from 3 to 4 o'clock practice is held under the supervision of instructor Brown. Captain Newton is taking a great deal of interest in the progress of the team, and he will without doubt have a record breaker this year. Among the candidates for the team are: Newton, Wilson, Curtis, Winborne, Perry, Story, Sifford, Reed, Singletary, Kenan, Gudger, Pittman, Jacocks, Johnson, and Jones.

Banquet at A. T. O. Hall.

A very delightful banquet was given in the Alpha Tau Omega hall last Thursday night after the Gingham dance, by Mr. D. A. Fowle. The banquet was in honor of Miss Annie Taylor of Pittsboro and Miss Isom of Chicago. The rooms of the hall were beautifully decorated and the banquet was thoroughly enjoyed by those present.

The attendants were as follows: Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Howe, Dr. and Mrs. J. H. Pratt, D. G. Fowle with Miss Lucy Andrews of Raleigh, N. C. Curtis with Miss Isom of Chicago, E. S. Nash of Wilmington with Miss Annie Taylor of Pittsboro, B. H. Bridgers with Miss Fowle of Chicago, H. McR. Jones with Miss Annie Cheshire of Raleigh, J. R. Moore with Miss Margaret Merrimon of Greensboro, Graham Kenan with Miss Mary Andrews of Raleigh. Stags: Messrs Cameron MacRae, J. C. MacRae, H. S. Lewis, H. L. Fry, J. E. Pogue, W. M. Wilson, J. T. Meades, H. Hill, J. D. Pemberton, and P. Pittman.

A Fellowship in Chemistry.

We are all doubtless glad to know that the department of chemistry continues to grow. A gentleman from the North, who does not care to have his name given to the public, but who recognizes the high grade of work being done here, lends a helping hand by the establishment of a fellowship. This fellowship consists of one hundred dollars a year and is to last for ten years. It is to be used in doing research work in technical chemistry. The conditions on which it is to be given are left to the instructors in this department. The accurate and thorough work in this department has been handicapped by the lack of a laboratory, but the new laboratory will increase the field and results greatly.

Washington and Lee's Debaters.

The U. of N. C. have selected their men to go against us in the coming debate and are looking forward to it with much interest. Our men have also been selected and they too expect the victory. We have no reason to doubt that we will not get it, either. Messrs. T. D. Sloan and W. F. Semple will represent us. They are expecting to represent us with all their powers of oratory and debate. We are sure they will. Not one moment will they idle while the debate is over them and when we win they will feel that it was work worth while.—Ring-Tum-Phi.

half of his winter evenings in a theater box before he came to college, he is generally successful. Ordinarily he does not make a mistake of more than fifteen minutes. So when a gleam of inspiration lights upon him, he walks noisily towards the door, lighting his cigarette as he goes, followed by a dozen others. True it is a little inconvenient for him to have to stand for ten or twenty minutes at the door, ready to dart down the stairs when the speaker starts on his last sentence. Likewise the noise he and his fellows make is more or less annoying to the rest of the audience. But those are small matters; he has saved three and two-fifths seconds of valuable time, and, above all, he was the first to see that the end was coming. Perhaps he mistimed it by half an hour, but then he saw it was bound to come. Great is his glory. This is the man that Bob Taylor put to the bad. Bob just spoke and spoke and suddenly stopped. Before the smart man knew it the end had come and found him in his seat.

half of his winter evenings in a theater box before he came to college, he is generally successful. Ordinarily he does not make a mistake of more than fifteen minutes. So when a gleam of inspiration lights upon him, he walks noisily towards the door, lighting his cigarette as he goes, followed by a dozen others. True it is a little inconvenient for him to have to stand for ten or twenty minutes at the door, ready to dart down the stairs when the speaker starts on his last sentence. Likewise the noise he and his fellows make is more or less annoying to the rest of the audience. But those are small matters; he has saved three and two-fifths seconds of valuable time, and; above all, he was the first to see that it was coming. Perhaps he noticed it by half an hour, but then it was bound to come. Great glory. This is the man the Taylor put to the bad. B spoke and spoke and stopped. Before the speaker knew it the end had come at him in his seat.

GUILFORD-CAROLINA GAME.

Carolina Downs Quakers by Score of 2 to 1 in a Close Game.

The baseball season for Carolina was opened here Saturday by a game with the Guilford College team. Guilford had several of her old men on the team this year and they gave Carolina a close fight. At no time in the game did the interest lag. And the game was not settled till the last man was out. The error that gave Carolina the two runs was very costly on the part of Guilford. Guilford's run also was made on an error. As a whole the game was very close. Several times Sitton had to fight hard to prevent scoring, for a Guilford man reached third and died there in the second, third, fourth, and seventh inning. And it was only Sitton's good head work, aided by the backing of the team, that several times saved the game.

Coach Lawson when asked about the game said, "The team played together much better than I had expected they would. The backing up was always good, especially the work of the fielders in backing up the bases. In the triple play every man was just where he should have been, third base was backed up by two players and each of the other bases by a player. I was not so well pleased with the batting of the team. This was our weakest point. But on a whole I think the boys played a good game because they were up against a strong team."

The game in detail follows:

Carolina took the bat for first inning. Barry leads off for Carolina. He hits to short stop and is out at first. Taylor followed Barry but could not connect with Hobbs's curves and fans three times. Cheshire retired the side with a fly to center field.

The first inning came near netting a run for Guilford and was prevented only by Winborne's throw from right field to the home plate. W. Lindsay was first man up. He hit to Sitton and was out at first. Murrow struck out and Noble muffed ball but threw him out at first. Watson followed with the only two base hit of the game. He lined out a pretty one between center field and right field. L. Hobbs then made a pretty hit to right field on which Watson attempted to go home but was caught at home plate by a quick throw by Winborne.

Second inning: In this inning Carolina got a man to second and Guilford to third. Winston leads off for Carolina. He walks to first on four balls. Gudger punted but Winston was thrown out at second by quick work of Doak. Winborne hit to pitcher and was out at first, Gudger going to second. Noble hits to third and is out at first.

For Guilford, Doak hits to Sitton and is out at first. Price hits to Sitton and is safe on Sitton's error. R. Lindsay flies out to Gudger.

Price steals second and on passed ball goes to third. But Sitton prevents scoring by striking out W. Hobbs.

Third inning: In this inning, Carolina on a hit, a sacrifice and an error retired with a man on second and third, while Guilford by a hit, 2 errors and a passed ball retired with the bases full. Stem made a safe hit by third. Sitton struck out. Barry hits to pitcher, who throws to second but too late to catch Stem. Taylor sacrifices, advancing Stem and Barry. Cheshire hits to short stop and is out at first, Carolina thus losing her first good chance to score.

Robb struck out but Noble drops ball and Robb beats it to first. W. Lindsay hit to Sitton and he threw to second but Cheshire misses it. On passed ball Robb goes to third and Lindsay to second. Murrow flew out to Winston. Watson hits to left for safe hit but Taylor fields it too quick for Robb to score. Then it was up to Sitton to save the game, with three men on bases. He did it by striking out L. Hobbs.

Fourth inning: Carolina put up as pretty a piece of team work in this inning as has ever been seen on this diamond in the triple play which was the feature of the game. Winston flew out to right. Gudger hit to pitcher and was out at first. Winborne struck out.

Doak walked. Price hit to right for a safe hit and Doak went to third. On next ball Price went to second. R. Lindsay hit to first and Stem threw ball in home to prevent Doak's scoring. Noble and Gudger caught Doak in a box between home and third, Gudger put him out, threw the ball to Cheshire at second who caught Price napping and then threw ball to Stem at first who caught Lindsay. The team work in this play was fine and it speaks well for Carolina's infield.

Fifth inning: Noble lead off for Carolina with a safe hit over third. Stem makes sacrifice bunt and is out at first, but Noble went to second. Sitton and Barry struck out. W. Hobbs strikes out. Robb flies out to Stem. Lindsay hits to third and beat it out. Tried to steal second but is caught.

Sixth inning: It was in this inning that Carolina did her scoring. Taylor hit to pitcher and was out at first. Cheshire gets base on balls. Winston hit to short stop and was out at first, Cheshire going to second. Gudger hit over second for base hit and Cheshire went to third. The ball was thrown home from center field to prevent Cheshire scoring and Gudger went to second. The catcher then threw it over the second baseman's head and Cheshire and Gudger scored the only two runs of the game for Carolina.

Guilford retired in short order. Murrow from short stop to first. Watson from pitcher to first, and L. Hobbs from third to first.

ABOUT THE TEAM.

A Communication from One Who Knows.

I have been requested to write something for the "Tar Heel" about our baseball team. Should I get personal says the editor—he must correct the proof sheet and assume responsibility.

Carolina's team should be a fast one this year. The men are active, energetic and possess the ability to play winning ball. Without an exception they are in excellent physical condition, being carefully watched and cautioned about their arms to prevent any "glass arms" developing. The weather has been heathenish, but remarkable it is that no accident has occurred. To see the players at work upon the field one must recognize the features most essential for a winning team, an earnest, conscientious, hard working tribe. There are some bad features, also, that exist, one particularly, and a most miserable state of affairs develops wherever a team shows it,—"individual playing." No team ever makes a success where you see individual work. Witness a game in which each player covers only his own position, and you will see a team minus "team work," suffering defeat after defeat. This state of affairs exists entirely too much with our team, certainly in one position. Here's my German for it, and good advice in it, too:

Who trigs hot liners, kedges flies,
Is always out of place?
Who plays left field, and centre field,
Right field and second base?
Der schordt schtob should!

We don't want individual playing; lend a helping hand and assist your team mates. Say to your player in front, on your right and your left, "I'll back you; if you don't get it I will; make the attempt anyway."

As a fielding team Carolina has a beaut, fast in every position, showing speed characteristic of Kalina, and improving every day; and yet it can be increased if only Capt. Cheshire would play der schordt schtob position, and Dickey could arrange his business(?) in Franklinton over our long-distance telephone and spend more time at second base. Gudger, too, is a "funny one." More earnest work would fit him better for practice. We all wish him success in his profession after the season closes, but now 'tis stop base hits, look carefully after 3rd. Stem is greedy and "inclines" to occupy too much of the runner's line and territory. "Lean" more toward the inner side so as to avoid an accident and call for a tin can ambulance. Der kedges are coming, but Noble should realize it is not always best to try to score a home run. James, too, has a fault; his bat is too short to connect with the "high balls" he persists in reaching after. Make 'em come over. Hobgood also seems to like the distance between himself and the fence. It's a long way, Hob. Barry, you can't dazzle the pitcher's eyes by that rapid stick motion; keep your bat in position ready to strike and don't throw away so much energy. Taylor, Sitton, Patterson and Winborne, this to you:

There is so much bad in the best of us,
And so much good in the worst of us,
It behooves me not to speak ill of the rest of us.

It's all said; now let's join hands and play, "Carolina Ever." Our first has been played; let's keep up our score and work to defeat Virginia. We have many old scores against our worthy rivals of the South. Our team must win back the laurels lost last fall and present them to Dr. Venable and Captain Roberson for safe keeping. Any ball players that have never "put on gloves" and have any grievances against me can find me at room number 27 Old East. However, I would rather discuss this game we are going to play than fight.

Our scrub team deserves mention. 'Tis the scrub that makes the Varsity. Carolina is extremely fortunate to have such a hard working team to develop the Varsity. Its infield and outfield are fast. That will make the Varsity hustle to mow 'em down. Twice last week it showed them the way home, and won easily and no one enjoyed the score, six to one, more than their hustling little catcher, Moore. (Don't be so indifferent about the result of scrub games.) Emerson too, shows the ability and willingness to hustle every minute, with Bynum, Harris and Calder to fill in the other positions of infield. There are no weak "spots" to point out. Little Skeet is everywhere, looking after everything that comes in his territory and trying to assist his men in other positions, a feature admired in any ball player. Harris also shows earnest work and a form of aggressiveness which has won for him a position on the scrubs at short. In fact, I can only speak in such a manner of every man on the scrubs. Keep up your good fast games, scrubs; the students and coach appreciate and admire every effort you make to develop our Varsity. The scrub has also a fast outfield that will show improvement and make the boys now possessing "N. C." uniforms play to keep them. Remember, every one, you are in position to replace or be replaced at any time. I do not consider any outfield player as a permanent fixture. We have a fine lot to build upon and it's essential that the material to be used must be good, showing ability in judgment, fielding and hitting. Now, it's up to you, scrub men; show the form, and you shall certainly wear an N. C. U.

The Tar Heel did not appear last week for a very good reason, there was no way to get it printed. After half the material had been set up, the engine broke down, and there was nothing to do but wait until another could be got. Thanks to the promptness of the Southern, the engine which was shipped from Raleigh Tuesday reached here the next Monday. Two days was then necessary to set up the engine. So all hope of issuing last week's paper disappeared. In consequence of this the paper we issue this week is a mixture of what should have been in two papers. It is unsatisfactory to us and must be so to our subscribers. But the circumstances permit nothing better.

In the Societies.

In the Dialectic Society Saturday night the query was: Resolved, That the public school funds of North Carolina should be apportioned between the white and black races in proportion to the amount of school taxes each race pays. Mr. Duls made the best speech.

The query in the Philanthropic Society was, Resolved, That children under fourteen years of age should be prohibited from working in the factories in North Carolina. Mr. N. A. Townsend made the best speech.

Scrub Debaters.

In the Philanthropic hall on Monday night a contest was held for the selection of a Phi man as Georgia scrub debater. Mr. Simmons was selected as the best man. Mr. J. J. Parker is the Georgia scrub debater from the Dialectic Society.

Mr. Herring, from the Phi Society, and Mr. C. C. Buchanan, from the Di, are the Washington and Lee scrub debaters. As Mr. Herring was the only one trying for the debate in the Phi no contest was held. He was just elected by the society.

Dr. Wheeler Honored.

Dr. A. S. Wheeler, of the Department of Chemistry, has been invited to deliver a course of lectures on organic chemistry before the Summer School of Harvard University next summer. He has accepted the invitation. This is quite an honor to Dr. Wheeler as well as to the University, for Harvard seldom comes South for her lecturers.

SENIOR CLASS MEETING.

Permanent Organization Formed. —Notable Decision Regarding the Class Gift.

The Senior Class took a step last week which promises to mean a great deal for the University and to win for the class the honor of succeeding college generations. They decided to postpone the presentation of the usual class gift until the reunion of the class to be held at commencement in 1915. Instead of the gift being a hundred dollar piece of statuary it will be something of much greater pecuniary value and of more practical and lasting advantage. The following are the provisions of the committee report which was adopted by the class:

1st, That the gift be presented at the reunion held on the tenth anniversary of our graduation.

2nd, That the money for this gift be paid by the members of the class in subscriptions payable annually.

3rd, That each member shall determine the amount of his subscription, and shall have the privilege of increasing it at will.

4th, That the subscriptions for the present year shall amount to at least one hundred dollars, to be paid by May 15th.

5th, That the annual subscriptions shall be paid to the permanent Secretary and Treasurer of the class.

6th, That the President, Vice President, and Secretary and Treasurer of the permanent organization of the class, shall constitute a committee to have charge of this fund; and that the Secretary and Treasurer shall be ex-officio chairman of this committee.

7th, That this committee shall administer this fund, so that it shall return the largest interest compatible with safety of investment.

The class adopted this after a thorough discussion and consideration of the subject. Several weeks ago a committee was appointed, and after investigating the question they brought in the above report. A minority of the committee were in favor of the majority report, but wishes to add to it the provision that a gift should be presented at the time of graduation also. The class adopted the majority report. There was not a dissenting voice against the ten year plan.

It is believed that the decision of the class means a great deal for the future of the University. First of all it means that the members of the class will as alumni, men of the world, take a systematic, practical interest in the welfare of their Alma Mater. The percentage of alumni who have given financial aid to the University is small. There are doubtless many reasons for this, but the most obvious one is that we have not many rich men. Men of devoted loyalty and only moderate means are doubtless frequently quite willing to give the small amount they can but are deterred from doing so by a feeling that their gift would be but a drop in the bucket. The feeling is natural and excusable; when a man does all he can he wants to see something come from it. The class of 1905, realizing this and believing that if this man had an opportunity to show his devotion in a way that would really count, offered to its members a means of attesting their loyalty to their Alma Mater and their class. A man of naughty-five can give of his means however small and not be afraid that his contribution will be lost; he can give with the assurance that it will add to the fund which will make his class memorable while the University lasts and be of aid to his Alma Mater.

Not only will the movement be of pecuniary benefit to the University; it will also hold the class together. This class has shown a strong feeling of unity throughout its existence, and having a definite aim as an organization in the world will preserve this feeling. The men will feel that at the end of ten years they are to come back and meet with their classmates and present to the world worthy proof that the devotion of a University man to his class and his Alma Mater is more than a name. This feeling will serve to strengthen the tie that binds and to prevent noble loyalty from drifting into a mere memory.

The permanent officers of the class, who were elected at the close of the meeting, are: President, N. A. Townsend; Vice-President, H. McR. Jones; Secretary and Treasurer, Frank McLean.

LAFAYETTE WINS BOTH GAMES.

Monday's Game Was Close.—The Score Was 3 to 2.

Lafayette met and downed Carolina in both games pulled off Monday and Tuesday respectively. The first game was a hard struggle and only won when Carolina's last man, Winborne died on a grounder to first base. The first game was a pitcher's battle between Hobgood and Newberry, Hobgood giving six hits and Newberry seven. All the runs made off Hobgood were made after two men had been retired and were made on costly infield errors, while those made off Newberry were all earned. The game abounded in many pretty plays. Captain Irwin's throwing to bases was decidedly the feature of the visitors' playing, he nailing four men in a vain attempt to steal second. Hubley also played a pretty game for the visitors, his pick-ups eliciting much applause from the grand stand. For Carolina, Gudger was decidedly the star at the bat, connecting three out of four times up for safe hits. He was responsible for the only two runs scored by Carolina, his home run drive over the left field fence bringing in Dickey Winston. Below is a detailed account of the game.

First inning: For Carolina, Barry goes out pitcher to first. Stem flies to third. Cheshire is out hit by batted ball.

For Lafayette, Snook walks. Hubley fans, and Snook is caught off first by a quick throw of Hobgood and finally run down. Irwin is out on fly to Winston.

Second inning: Winston is out short to first. Gudger singles to center the first hit of the game. Winborne singles to left, advancing Gudger to second. They both die on the sacks, though, as Noble and Patterson both fan. Two hits this inning.

McAvoy singles to left. Reeder follows with a safety to right and on Patterson's fumble McAvoy scores while Reeder goes to second. Peters and Falkinson retire on infield flies. Hawk singles to right who throws the ball to Noble to cut off Reeder at the plate. Reeder wisely holds third base, though, and baits Noble, on making a wild throw to catch Hawk stealing. Reeder scores and Hawk goes to third. Newberry retires the side by fanning. Errors were responsible for it all. Lafayette 2 runs, 2 hits.

Third inning: Hobgood out second to first. Barry walks, but is thrown out trying to steal second. Stem is out pitcher to first.

Snook fans. Hubley singles to center. Irwin hits to right field, who muffs, but Cheshire is Johnnie on the spot, and gathering up the ball, he throws Hubley out at second. Irwin is caught napping off the first by a quick throw from Hobgood.

Fourth inning: Cheshire is out on pop fly to pitcher. Winston singles to left, and Gudger follows with a drive over the left field fence for a homer. The ball cleared the fence by 15 feet. The home run did not seem to daze Newberry, for Winborne and Noble were easily retired.

McAvoy hits a difficult fly to left center, which Winston gathered in after a long run. 'Twas a pretty play. Reeder and Peters go out on infield grounders.

Fifth inning: Patterson singles to right. Hobgood goes out after attempting to bunt twice, on a fly to left. Patterson is out trying to steal second. Barry goes out at first base.

Falkinson fans. Hawk reaches first on Gudger's fumble. Newberry is out on fly to Stem. Snook walks, but Hubley goes out. Cheshire to Stem.

Irwin is out second to first. McAvoy flies out to left. Reeder singles to left and Peters walks. Hawk hits to Gudger, thus forcing Reeder out at third. Gudger refused to fumble that time.

Seventh inning: Gudger singles to left making his third hit of the game, and goes to second on Newberry's wild throw to catch him off first. Here is where Carolina threw away a good chance to score, for the next three men failed to connect with the ball, leaving Gudger on second.

Hawk is out at first. Newberry pops up to Stem. Snook fans.

Eighth inning: Hobgood flies out to short. Barry is hit by a pitched ball and walks to first. He dies trying to steal second. Stem is out Hubley to Peters.

Lafayette scored the winning run in this inning. Hubley reaches first on wild throw of Gudger. Irwin in an attempt to bunt flies out to pitcher. McAvoy gets to first on another one of Gudger's errors. Reeder singles to center and Hubley scores the winning run. Peters is out on fly to pitcher. Falkinson is out second to first.

Ninth inning: Carolina died game in the ninth inning. Cheshire cracks a solid single to left and Carolina stocks began to rise a little bit. Winston sacrifices him to second. Gudger, entreated by the rooters to knock another home run, tries hard to make it good, but goes out via Newberry to Peters. Winborne goes out on a grounder to third. Thus we allowed a close game to slip through our fingers, a game that should have been won if Hobgood had received due support.

Lafayette 0 2 0 0 0 0 0 1 x 3 6 1

Batteries: Hobgood and Noble; Newberry and Peters. Summary: Earned runs, Carolina 2; left on bases, Carolina 4. Lafayette 7; home runs, Gudger; bases on balls, off Hobgood 3, off Newberry 1; struck out by Hobgood 6, Newberry 6; hit by pitched ball, Barry. Time of game 1 hour, 35 minutes. Umpire, Phil Meade. Scorer, M. Orr.

THE BAND.

Giving Open Air Concerts Daily and Playing at the Games.

If any justification was needed for referring frequently to the Musical Association and urging its claims for the support of the students, the justification is at hand. Nearly every afternoon, about six o'clock, the band gives open air concerts that are delightful. Everybody hears them, and everybody enjoys them. When the musicians come out on the steps of the Alumni they are soon surrounded by a happy crowd. When the first strains are sounded men begin to come from every direction, and they keep coming till the concert is over.

The band has some good pieces and they know how to play them. Some of them are as popular and are whistled as much as the glee club's famous "Stein Song" of two years ago—the song that took the Normal by storm. The best thing of the afternoon is the concert. It comes just after baseball practice and it fills in the space between that and supper as nothing else could. So everybody on the campus goes to the Alumni "when the band begins to play," and the man walking in the woods a mile away stops and listens "when the band begins to play."

But the open air concerts are not all. The band goes to the games, and the band plays, and the band cuts a big figure there too. When Gudger parks a ball a piece from the band makes you feel that there is no such thing as losing. Those who were here two years ago—with the great batters and fielders—remember how important a part the band played in the games that spring. This year's band is better than the one of that year. It is a great credit to the individual members and their director Mr. Woollen. The College owes them a lot.

Carolina 4; Oak Ridge 3.

Oak Ridge made the game as interesting for Carolina Saturday as Guilford had done the Saturday before, but the game was more in Carolina's favor than it was with Guilford. Carolina showed much improvement in batting, getting nine hits off Warren to Oak Ridge's five hits off of Sitton. Carolina made five errors and both of Oak Ridge's runs were made on errors by Cheshire in the first and Gudger in the third inning.

Both teams made two runs in the first inning. Carolina's two runs were both earned on clear hits, while Oak Ridge's were made on Cheshire's wild throw. Barry led off for Carolina at the bat with Warren in the box. Barry struck out. Taylor hit safe over first base. Cheshire drove a two base hit between left and center field. Winston followed with a hit over short stop and Taylor and Cheshire scored. Oak Ridge's runs were made by Bennett and Cook. Bennett led off with a hit over second. Warren sacrificed and advanced Bennett to second. Bennett stole third. Earle Holt was retired from short stop to first. Cook got first on safe hit. Tranthum then hit to Cheshire, who threw the ball over Stem's head and Bennett and Cook scored.

There was no more scoring then until the last half of the third inning when Oak Ridge scored her other run. Cook hit to Gudger, who threw ball over Stem's head and Cook went on to second. Tranthum then made a safe hit to left field and Cook scored. Tranthum was left on base.

Carolina made two more runs in the fourth inning. Winston got base on balls. Gudger hit safe past third and Winston went to second. Winborne followed with a hit over third which filled the bases. Noble hit between second and short and Winston scored. Stem then bunted and Winston scored for Gudger. The side was retired on a double play.

The tabulated score follows:

WE ARE glad to add to our exchange list the Wake Forest News. Wake Forest is to be congratulated on having a weekly paper. There is a great deal lacking in the life of a college of that size that has not such a publication. Their Magazine is a creditable one, and there is no reason why the News should not be equally successful if the students give it the support that is due from them.

TWO GAMES this week already and both of them defeats. There is no use in denying that poor playing did it—the error column tells the tale. But there was some fine playing done, as fine as was ever played on Carolina's field, and there is the important fact in the baseball situation; we are coming to something better. The team with men that can do such playing as six men on that team have done this week can win, and they will do it. We expect to give a much different report of the coming Friday's game.

THE BASEBALL season is on and several facts are clear. As to the work of the team we will leave that for the athletic editor to speak of. But there are two facts apparent in the conduct of the students that call for mention. The first is that the students have patronized the games fairly well. We do not mean to say at all that this patronage is all it should be. It is far from the ideal, when every man in the University would be on the bleachers, to follow up every play his team makes from the beginning of the season to the end. This ideal has little promise of realization. But every approach to it is a cause for pleasure.

Another fact as noticeable as the first is that the men on the bleachers do no cheering. It takes a home run to move them. One spectator said this was a clear proof to him that there is no college spirit at Carolina. We do not agree with this statement. Carolina has college spirit. The trouble is she does not know how to show it in yells. What we need is to have some cheer-leaders that the men will follow. Give us the leaders and there will be cheering. The trouble is in the leaders.

This matter of cheering is a question of when a cheer should be given. For our part the contention that we should give as hearty a rouse to a team when it has made four errors hand running as when it has made a brilliant triple play, seems absurd. A cheer is a natural expression of pleasure, and to give it when there is nothing to please is an artificial show that can do no good. But there is a difference between such a cheer and a yell. The college yell is the means by which a student body expresses itself. The college team occupies a very different relation to the college from that of the professional team to the town that hires it. The latter is something hired to give pleasure. But the college team is the representative of the institution. It is an organization that every man in the college has an interest in, just as much interest as anybody else. When the team loses any freshman loses as much as any player; when it wins the glory belongs to the college. This being the case, it is up to the student body to show its confidence in the team in the official way—through the yell. Frequent yells in a game have the effect of reminding the players of the trust that is placed in them and of keeping the team together. The players say that yells help them, and we fail in our duty if we do not give them.

The Journal Club.

The Geological Journal Club held its regular semi-monthly meeting Tuesday evening March 21 in the geology lecture room at which time several papers were presented. Prof. Collier Cobb reviewed a paper on the autopytographs of plants.

A very interesting paper on "Mica in North Carolina" was presented by Mr. Stearette who exhibited several excellent specimens.

A paper on the occurrence of copper ores in Person county was presented by Henry Davis.

R. R. Reynolds also read a paper on the briquetting of coal.

Remarks.

T. J. Gold, '03, spent two days here last week.

The Yackety Yack copy has been sent to the printers.

Mr. E. D. Broadhurst spent Saturday in Greensboro.

W. T. Shore and Hubert Gudger left today for Asheville.

The last Stag German will come off Saturday night, April 1st.

Dr. Smith delivered an address at St. Mary's in Raleigh Saturday evening.

Quite a number of fellows went to Durham Saturday to see "The Runaways."

William Boylan is able to be out after having been confined to the infirmary for several days.

There is an epidemic of pink-eye that is causing not a little inconvenience. Green goggles are very popular.

The members of the Buncombe County Club are urged to be present in the History room Monday night at 7 o'clock.

C. C. Buchanan won the first place in the Washington and Lee scrub debate. J. J. Parker won the first in the Georgia contest.

Manager J. V. Howard of the Track Team went to Raleigh to meet the A. & M. and Wake Forest managers to arrange for a meet with those teams.

Dr. Hume has been invited to deliver the historical address at the anniversary celebration of the church founded by his father in Portsmouth, Va.

Earl Holt, '03, showed Saturday that he can catch as well as ever. Unfortunately he has not fully recovered from the injury he received last year and still has to have a runner.

The Capital City has had a strong attraction for Chapel Hill folks lately. Report reached here that Reverend Brigman was flitting lightly about among the oaks of the Capitol square recently. Parson Matthews is still suffering from a conscience wounded by a train ride from there to Durham Sunday.

Wake Forest Team and Schedule.

The Charlotte Observer of Sunday gives the schedules of all the State teams, with a brief sketch of what each team is doing. We reprint below what is said about the Wake Forest team:

Because of the bad weather and the fact that the first game of our schedule is not until March 27, the baseball team has not yet been chosen. A complete line-up of the team cannot be given, but Mr. J. Richard Crozier, director of gymnastics, says that all the members of last year's team who have returned this year are about sure of their positions. It is not likely that any of them will be replaced by new men. The old candidates are: John Ivey Smith, of Pitt county, will catch; Slocumb Rubert Edwards, of Chatham county, and Eugene A. Turner, of Wake county, will do the pitching; Thomas D. Walker, of Pulaski, Ga., will hold second base; James Turner, of Wake county, short-stop; O. P.

Richardson, of Cherokee, S. C., left field; and George T. Goodwyn, of Scotland county, center field. Mr. Crozier has many new candidates to pick from for the remaining positions. Those who have made the best showing for these three remaining positions are as follows: Burton J. Ray and Benj. Thomas Holding, both of Wake county, for first base; C. A. Walters, of Wake county, and Berder Townsend, of Robeson county, for third base, with W. C. Hamrick, of Cleveland county; V. F. Couch, of Iredell county, and F. K. Morris, of Henderson county, making best showing for right field. After the first team is chosen out of the remaining candidates, among whom are some very good players, a second team will be organized by Mr. Crozier. This team will desire to correspond with such other teams as would like to challenge them.

March 27 and 28—Oak Ridge, at Wake Forest.

March 31—University of North Carolina, at Chapel Hill.

April 1—Trinity, at Durham.

April 5—A. & M., at Wake Forest.

April 10—A. & M., at Raleigh.

April 21—A. & M., at Raleigh.

April 22—Davidson, at Winston-Salem.

April 24—Furman University, at Charlotte.

April 29—St. John's College, at Wake Forest.

May 2—Trinity, at Wake Forest.

May 3—A. & M., at Wake Forest.

May 5 and 6—Guilford, at Wake Forest.

May 8—Trinity, at Raleigh.

May 10—A. & M., at Raleigh.

Schedules would have been made with colleges outside the State, but for the fact that the trustees do not allow the team to go outside the State.

The Economics Club.

In the Economics Club Tuesday night the Georgia question was discussed briefly. Messrs. Parker and Simmons were present and brought out some of the strong points of the affirmative. The meeting was a valuable one to the debaters and was a conspicuous proof of the usefulness of the Club.

TUESDAY'S GAME.

The second game resulted in a walk-over for Lafayette, but again, as we said about the first game, the fault was not due to the lack of good pitching, for Sitton pitched a masterly game. Incidentally Lafayette scored seven runs, while we were presented with our first goose egg of the season. Of Lafayette's seven runs, one of them was earned, but a dumb play by one of our infielders was the direct cause.

Lafayette had a youngster by the name of Kinsey in the box, and a total of two hits, scattered through nine innings, tells the story of our indebtedness to him. He had a slow ball among his assortment of benders that caused the Carolina batters a good deal of trouble, especially Thompson, who, with grim determination to park one of them, stepped up and reaching out as far from the plate as possible, succeeded in popping to catcher. Though Kinsey yielded only two hits, yet he did not out-pitch Sitton to any great extent. He struck out five men, while Sitton struck out eleven. But few clean hits were made off his delivery. Lafayette scored her runs as follows:

In the first inning Snook fanned, Hubley bunted to Stem, who held the ball in his hands long enough to let Hubley reach first. Irwin scored Hubley by a two-base drive to left. Again in the fifth inning Lafayette scored two runs on one hit and two costly errors. In the sixth Peters, Folkenson, Hawk and Snook scored for the victors, on two hits this time and two more costly errors. These errors! Carolina went out in one, two, three order for the first four innings. Barry, to break the monotony, walked to first on a base on balls in the fifth, but went out trying to reach third on Taylor's pretty drive to left for one base. We retired in order, also, for the next three innings, and again in the eighth Kinsey allowed us to reach first by a base on balls, but no farther could we get to save the name of us. Dickey Winston in the ninth caught one of Kinsey's shoots on the nose and laid it up against the left field fence, but Stem and Cheshire were unable to score him. There's some consolation in knowing that we reached third once. Carolina has just got to cut out so many costly errors. Hobgood and Sitton both pitched winning ball and deserved to win. But let's forget it and beat Wake Forest, say for instance Friday, by a good score.

Below are the innings:

Batteries: Sitton and Noble;
Kinsey and Irwin.

Summary: Earned runs, Lafayette 1. Stolen base, Snoot. Two base hits, Winston, Hubley, and Irwin. Sacrifice hit, Winston. Left on bases, Carolina 2, Lafayette 5. Struck out by Sitton 11, by Kinsey 6. Bases on balls off Sitton 3, off Kinsey 2. Passed balls, Noble 3. Wild pitch, Sitton. Time of game, one hour and 50 minutes. Umpire, Mr. Phil Meade. Scorer, M. Orr.

CAROLINA VICTORIOUS.

Defeats Wake Forest in a Slow and Listless Game—Score 11 to 5.

In a rather slow and listless game of ball, Carolina downed Wake Forest last Friday by the score 11 to 5. Wake Forest was clearly outclassed from the start and Sitton, who was in the box for Carolina, made monkeys of them for seven innings, when he let up and decided to give his fielders a little something to do. Edwards, Wake Forest's crack pitcher, did stunts for the Baptist brethren, and the Carolina boys found little trouble connecting with his curves. Winston, in particular took a special liking to his delivery and cracked out four safe hits out of five times at bat. Edwards, though hit for eleven safeties, pitched a better game than the score would indicate, for a number of costly errors were made and most of them at a time most advantageous to us. Edwards, and in fact, the whole Wake Forest team, seemed to be suffering from a bad case of stage fright, and Carolina found it easy sailing to pile up nine runs in four innings. With the score ten to nothing against them, Wake Forest suddenly developed that "never say die spirit," and in the seventh and eighth innings they pulled together and five hits coupled with a like number of errors by our team, enabled them to push five runs across the plate. The game, though slow and uninteresting at times, was not without features. Cheshire made several pretty stops and throws around second base and seems to be getting into his old time form. Winston's hitting has already been mentioned. The new men, James and Thompson, in center and right, respectively, both played good ball. James got the longest hit of the game. Thompson made two timely hits and played right field like a veteran. For Wake Forest, Turner, J., deserves mention. He accepted ten out of twelve chances at short, several of which were difficult, and connected with Sitton's curves for two hits. Carolina played better ball than in the last game, though the number of errors still hung about the 5 mark.

The band was out in all its glory and its several selections were well rendered. But we are glad to say that the band did not do all the rooting, for the student body took a brace and their many yells tended to liven up the slow moments of the game. One squad of rooters composed of "Capt. Bob" Reynolds, "Barney" Lassiter and "Bully" Moore, ably assisted by Judge Cuthor Brockwell, whooped things up considerably.

The story of the game is as follows. Captain Cheshire won the toss and decided to take the inns.

First inning: Winston hits the first ball pitched to left and stops on second. Stem bunts to Edwards, who catches Winston going to third. Stem steals second and goes to third when Cheshire goes out pitcher to first. Thompson cracks a solid single to right and Stem scores. Gudger out short to first. Two hits; one run.

Goodwyn, Richardson and Smith fan.

Second inning: Noble fans. Taylor out on foul fly to first. James fans.

Holding out, Noble to Stem. Hamrick and Turner, J., fan.

Third inning: Sitton hits to short and reaches first on first baseman's error. Sitton steals second and scores on Winston's pretty single over second. Winston goes to third on throw in home to catch Sitton, and Stem scores him with a pretty bunt. Stem steals second and is advanced to third on Cheshire's sacrifice, but is caught napping off third by a quick throw from Hamrick. Thompson out second to first. Two hits; two runs.

Walker flies to Thompson. Turner, E., and Edwards fan. Sitton has fanned seven out of the first nine men up.

Fourth inning: This inning proved Edward's Waterloo, and right here is where Carolina clinched the game. Gudger starts the trouble with a hit over third base good for two bases. Noble walks. Taylor fans. Edwards loses control and gives James and Sitton bases, thereby forcing in Gudger. Winston follows with another timely hit to center on which Noble and James cross the plate. Stem bunts and beats it out, leaving three men on bases. Cheshire hits to third, who throws Sitton out at home, while Cheshire reaches first. Thompson beats out an infield hit and Winston scores. Still three men on bases. Gudger comes up for the second time in this inning and hits to Turner, J., at short, who throws the ball over first's head and Stem and Cheshire score. Noble ended the fun by flying out to left. Six runs; four hits.

Goodwyn out on fly to Stem. Richardson fans. Smith flies out to right.

Fifth inning: Taylor out pitcher to first. James reaches first on Holding's error, but is caught trying to steal. Sitton out short to first.

Holding reaches first on Gudger's fumble. Hamrick hits to Cheshire, who puts Holding out at second. Turner, J., flies out to right and Walker follows suit. Thompson is getting plenty of flies in right.

Sixth inning: Winston out short to first. Stem flies to left, and Cheshire goes out on grounder to first.

Turner, E., flies to third base. Edwards goes out second to first. Goodwyn reaches first on Winston's error, but is left, as Richardson fans.

A NEW LIBRARY.

Mr. Carnegie Offers to Build One Provided an Endowment is Raised.

The President received a letter from Mr. Andrew Carnegie last week stating that he would "be glad to pay for the erection of a library for the University at the cost of $50000, provided the University raise a new endowment of $50000 for the upkeep and maintenance of the library." At a meeting of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees Saturday the offer was accepted. Every effort will be made to fulfill the conditions of the gift.

The need for a library has been one of the most urgent felt by the University. The growing collection of books has been cramped, so that many of them have necessarily been put in boxes, where they are not available. Many of those on the shelves are so far up in the regions of dust that he must have a brave heart who dares to venture after them. We ought to be well able to appreciate the facilities of a modern library. Mr. Carnegie may be assured that he could not have made his offer to a more grateful and appreciative institution.

To realize fully the meaning of this offer of Mr. Carnegie's it is necessary to know what are the resources of the library at present. Its annual income is about $4000, a few hundred more than that this year. Add to that the interest on $50000. That is what it will have when we have the new building.

There is every reason to hope that the friends of the University will help her to avail herself of the offer that means so much for her.

Meeting of the Modern Literature Club.

Mr. John Charles McNeil, of Charlotte, gave an address before the Modern Literature Club Thursday evening on Stephen Phillips. Mr. McNeil is a poet of recognized ability and is making a name for himself as a newspaper correspondent. So his coming was expected with interest. The Philanthropic Society had tendered the use of its hall for the evening, and it was here that the lecture was given. The members of the Club and a few invited guests composed an appreciative audience.

Dr. Smith, the President of the Club, in presenting the speaker said that it would be the policy of the organization to invite from time to time men of this and other states who had made honorable achievements in creative literature. This policy was inaugurated, he said, that evening.

Mr. McNeil's address was the appreciation of a scholar and a poet. He stated that the popularity of Stephen Phillips is no more a guarantee of enduring fame than it was in the case of Scott as a poet. But he claimed for the poet and dramatist what the latter claims for himself—fairness. He pointed out the justice of Stephen Phillip's protest against being judged by the standards of Shakespeare, when his work is written for a different age and is not meant to be looked upon as following Shakespearean principles.

After the address Mr. McNeil responded to a request to recite some of his poems. The speaker's voice, though hampered by a cold, was deep and pleasing. The following are some of the poems he recited: "Ask Me Not", "Poor Baby", and "The Drudge." The first of these is in the current Century, and the last in the October number of the same Magazine.

A Communication.

Mr. Editor:

Those of us who have thought in the least concerning the efforts which are being made by the different classes to make each class more distinct, and to cultivate the proper class friendship are justly proud of what has already been accomplished. But the only way for the greatest good to be obtained is for each man to respect the institutions of each class as something foreign to his class and its privileges. Most especially must we respect those above us and await the time when we can take their places.

To the Senior class much honor is due for taking the initiative step along this line, and those of us who are not Seniors certainly should respect their claims and keep off their grounds. I refer, Mr. Editor, most especially to the seats which they have placed under the Davie Poplar. They belong to the Senior class and have been placed there for their own use and pleasure. Most of the men in the Sophomore and Junior classes realize this and have respected their right. But there are some, mostly new men, however, who have viewed the matter in a different light. To these men I would suggest that they consider for a moment. Of course, such may seem humiliating to the fellow who ruled the campus at his prep school, but he should remember that he has four years here and will have the pleasure of seeing come here next year men who are just as smart as he is now, and then he can question himself.

There must come into the life of our institution a greater respect for upper classmen. All other leading institutions have it and it tells for good in their life. Our tendency and efforts are along this line and we are beginning to feel the results. Let us therefore encourage the good work by staying away from the Senior seats. We are going to be Seniors some sweet day and then the other fellows have got to stay away, so let us begin to teach both by precept and example.

A JUNIOR.

The debating season, which is on with all its force, brings out a fact that is extremely unpleasant, that is, the slight regard so many University men give to the simple laws that govern the use of their mother tongue. Many a good speech is ruined by its crimes against the grammar every one is supposed to have learned in the primary school. Some may say that this subject, being a literary one, should be treated by the Magazine. It should. But though it is a literary one, it is not so primarily; it is first of all a question of business, of every day life, and often reduces itself to a matter of dollars and cents. Never is it less than a problem of common sense. We are not trying to tell a debater how to make a speech; we are learning a lesson from the debaters. When a University debater writes a speech he endeavors to use faultless logic and faultless grammar, and he knows how to do it. But most students in making an unwritten speech, are apt to fall down in their grammar. The trouble is they are not used to speaking correctly. The speaker who is careless in the grammar used in his conversation will unconsciously make frequent errors, to the pity or disgust of his audience. To know that he was making these errors would fill him with mortification. But regret would be worthless. If he is not able to use correct grammar without waiting to think it out he cannot use it at all; he has to think of what to say, not how to say it.

Not only in debating does this hold good. Whenever a man gets excited or interested he is going to talk in the way that is most natural to him, in other words, he will talk according to his usual habit. The consequences may be great or small according to his audience. But certainly he can gain nothing by his errors. The demagogue politician of the peanut stripe tries to win the favor of an illiterate audience by aping them. His success is doubtful and if attained is dishonorable. The man who runs the risk of murdering grammar has all to lose and nothing, absolutely nothing to gain.

Such a reason should be enough to determine a man. But the University student has an additional one that is of great importance. Every grammatical sin he is guilty of is charged by his hearers to the Alma Mater he so shamefully misrepresents. Some of the hearers lower their opinion of the University accordingly. Others think that if a University man can afford it they can too; the University man, that is, sets the standard for too many people to be criminally careless.

Cornell University Medical College.

The course covering four years begins the first week in October and continues till June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

Remarks.

Albert L. Cox, '04, is on the Hill.

Dr. Venable went to New York today.

Louis G. Rountree is in New York for a week.

A new tennis court is being built for the Association, East of the gymnasium.

Mr. John Charles McNeil was the guest of Dr. Henderson while here last week.

W. T. Shore returned Monday from a trip to Asheville, Winston-Salem, and Greensboro.

Prof. Cobb will take a party of students to Cummock coal mine some time this month.

The Freshmen and Sophomores will play a game of ball next Saturday evening at 3:30 o'clock.

Captain Roberson is having practice for the football men Wednesday afternoons and Saturday mornings.

Hubert Gudger went to Asheville last week to visit at his home. His brother, E. C. Gudger, '02, of the Navy, was also there.

The German Club.

At a meeting of the German Club Friday H. L. Lewis was elected leader of the April German, which is to be held on the twenty-fourth. The following new members were admitted: G. M. Butler, Baxter Boore, Freddie Stem and Dicey Winston.

The Georgia Debaters Off.

Messrs. C. C. Barnhardt and H. S. Lewis, our Georgia debaters, left Tuesday for Athens. The debate will be held Thursday evening. There is no need to say that they carried the confidence of the University in them. These gentlemen have worked hard and have been well trained. The final scrub contest was held Monday night.

Tennis Tournament With Virginia.

It is very probable that Carolina will meet Virginia in tennis this spring on the Hill. Virginia has written to the Tennis Association, wishing to come here this spring for a tennis tournament, and our Association has agreed, since Carolina's men went to Virginia last year. It is hoped that these tournaments may be held each year between Virginia and Carolina and, perhaps, each fall and spring. The tournaments are to alternate between Chapel Hill and Charlottesville.

The new tennis court that is being built on the East side of the gymnasium will probably be ready for the tournament. Carolina has no place to hold a tournament where charges for admission could be made, but the Tennis Association felt that it owed it to Virginia to invite her here this year. It is hoped that we shall have courts in the new athletic field, when it is enlarged.

A tournament will be started in a few days to decide who shall represent the University against Virginia. Provision will be made whereby students who do not belong to the Tennis Association may enter the tournament. All wishing to enter the tournament should hand their names to Mr. H. M. Emerson at once, as the tournament ought to start by the middle of next week.

THE CHEMICAL LABORATORY.

The Contract Given Out—The Changes It Will Make in the Other Departments.

The contract for the chemical laboratory has been given to Mr. N. Underwood of Durham. Work is to begin on the building as soon as the material can be assembled, which may require a month. It will occupy a position opposite the space between the Alumni and the New East, and on a line with the Carr. It will be built of pressed brick with granite sills. The general plan of the building will be quite simple and without ornamentation. There will be no porch or columns, but there will be plain pilasters of brick. The simplicity of the style will be one of the elements of the building's beauty. And it will be a handsome building. It will add much to the appearance of the campus.

The entire amount of the appropriation will be spent in erecting the building and providing it with desks. The apparatus will be otherwise provided for. Every effort will be used to make the building itself as complete as possible. The laboratory rooms will be thoroughly provided with hoods and flues. The main lecture room will have 2000 square feet of floor space and a seating capacity of 300.

The erection of the laboratory will be followed by several changes in the other departments. The old laboratory will be occupied by the Medical Department, which will also have one room in the new laboratory. The part of the New East now taken up by this department will be given up to the Biology Department.

The Summer School.

There will be no summer school for teachers this year. Until quite recently it was expected that there would be one. The Trustees have decided, however, that the embarrassment in the state of the University's funds makes it impossible to have the school. There will be great regret among the teachers and others who expected to be here.

The decision of the Trustees does not affect the summer term of the Law School.

Seventh inning: Thompson reaches first on an error of short stop, and goes to second on a wild pitch and steals third. Gudger walks, but is caught off first and put out, but Thompson goes home while he is in box. Noble and Taylor go out on infield grounders.

Wake Forest scored two runs in this inning. Smith struck out, but he gets to first as Noble missed the third strike. Here occurred one of the prettiest plays of the game. Holding hit a slow grounder between first and second which got by Stem. Cheshire backed him up, however, and got the ball to Sitton who was covering first, in time to retire the batter; pretty team work. Hamrick reaches first on a fielder's choice, Cheshire throwing Smith out trying to score from third. Turner singles to center, the first hit off Sitton. Walker walks. Turner, E., singles to center and Hamrick and Turner, J., score on Noble's error on the throw in home. Edwards out, Sitton to Stem.

Eighth inning: James hits to left for 3 bases. Sitton fans. Winston beats out an infield hit and James scores. Winston tries to steal second, but is out; in trying to slide his leg comes in contact with the second baseman's knee, and consequently he is laid out for a few minutes. The accident, though painful, was not serious and Winston played the game out. Stem flies to short.

Richardson, Smith and Holding score for Wake Forest in this inning on three singles and an error of Thompson in right field. Sitton hit a man on the head in this inning, but it didn't seem to hurt him much.

Ninth inning: Cheshire singles to left, but is caught off first by Edwards. Thompson hits a high fly to left who muffs. Gudger and Noble out on infield grounders.

Edwards out second to first. Goodwyn out on grounder to first. Townsend fans. Thus Carolina places another game to her credit. Following is the official score:

WAKE FOREST DEFEATED.

Carolina Does the Work, Winning by a Score of 5 to 3.—Thompson's Home Run Was the Feature.

The following detailed report of Saturday's game is from the News and Observer:

It was the first inning in the game yesterday that won out for the University ball team over Wake Forest, the score being five against three. Both teams played good ball.

Of course there are other complications that might have come, but when at the end of the first half the Chapel Hill boys had three runs to the good, it was an up hill fight for Wake Forest.

But for an error of the Wake Forest short stop in the first inning in place of three runs the University would not have scored in that inning. One man was out when the short stop threw over first the runner going to second. The next man fanned, but then a single and home run piled up a total of three.

The greatest crowd of the season witnessed the game which was a tight one all through. Both bleachers were packed and a great crowd stood.

The game opened with the University boys at the bat. Winston flew out in centre, and on an overthrow of Townsend, Wake Forest's short, Taylor went to first and on to second. Stem fanned, and Cheshire made a single in left. Thompson rapped the ball out into the race track and beyond for a home run, Taylor and Cheshire also scoring. Gudger flew in left. For Wake Forest, Goodwin fanned. Wallace was out pitcher to first. Smith singled in centre, and Hamrick hit the air.

In the second it was three men to the bat and three out for each team. Thompson, the University pitcher, and Edwards, the Wake Forest pitcher, each striking out a man, Noble, of the University, and E. Turner, of Wake Forest, being the victims. In the third there was no scoring, though the University got two men on bases, both walking, one being hit and the other waiting for four balls.

In the fourth the University got one run, Wake Forest two. Barry made a hit in centre, James batted to short and the ball got away. With one down and two men on bases Winston hit in right and Barry scored. Taylor flew to first and Winston was caught off his base. In Wake Forest's half Walker walked and Smith singled too hot for first to hold. Hamrick bunted towards third and made first on an error, while Walker scored, and Smith was on first, Hamrick going on to second. Turner, J., bunted, and reached first, the pitcher catching Smith at home plate. Townsend was up and catcher Noble muffed an easy foul. The Wake Forest rooters were now yelling with enthusiasm, everything being on tiptoe. Townsend was out short to first, but Hamrick scored, the yelling increasing. Then Turner, E., went out, pitcher to first.

In the fifth Stem, Cheshire and Thompson died on a fly to second, pitcher to first, and third to first for the University. For Wake Forest a two bagger in left by Walters was followed with a bunt by Edwards, who was out at first, Walters going to third. Goodwin flew in right, but Walters beat the ball home. Walker flew in left. In the sixth for the University Gudger got to first as Walters in left muffed an easy fly, but Noble, Barry and James died on flies. For Wake Forest with two down Turner, J., singled, but Townsend was out, pitcher to first. A close decision at first went against Wake Forest, as when Hamrick batted to the pitcher Thompson dropped the ball and lost time in getting it to first. Townsend was out, pitcher to first.

In the seventh for the University Winston on a fly in right and Taylor from second to first had passed in checks, Stem batted to third and was safe at first on a very close decision, the Wake Forest rooters objecting to it strenuously. Cheshire lifted a fly in left and it was easy fruit, but three of the Wake Forest men got mixed about it and none caught it, while Stem scored and Cheshire went to second. Thompson batted to Edwards, who fumbled and Thompson was safe. Gudger died third to first. In its half Wake Forest failed, though with two down Turner, J., made a hit, but Townsend went out, pitcher to first.

In the eighth neither side scored. For the University Noble fanned, Barry and James being retired on flies. For Wake Forest Walker was hit by the ball and walked, but was caught at second. The next two men lost out. In the ninth the University did nothing, Winston losing short to first, Taylor flying to short and Stem to centre. In its last half Wake Forest had a seeming chance. Turner, J., went out on a foul fly to the catcher. Townsend batted to the pitcher who outran him to first. Turner, E., singled in left, the ball was thrown around wild and he reached third, but the next man ended Wake Forest's hopes, as Walters failed to hit the ball.

CAROLINA WINS.

In the Eighth Contest with Georgia the Tar Heels Win their Fifth Victory—Splendid Hospitality of Georgians.

"Carolina won by a unanimous decision," was the glad news that came from Athens, Friday morning. And it was as welcome as a night of waiting can make a piece of good news. The wires were out of order the night before and the interested Carolinians had to wait. The question of state was whether Georgia should tie Carolina making the score 4-4, or should Carolina win the rubber. She won.

The query for debate was: "Resolved, That the best interests of the United States are opposed to the permanent occupation of any part of the Eastern hemisphere, except for coaling stations." Georgia had the affirmative and was represented by Messrs. H. W. Telford and W. O. Marshburn. Carolina's representatives were Messrs. H. S. Lewis and C. C. Barnhardt. The judges of the debate were Prof. W. T. Holmes, Hon. H. Y. McCord, and Hon. F. E. Galloway. Mr. Telford opened the debate for Georgia, and was followed in turn by Lewis, Marshburn and Barnhardt.

As the debate itself, the most important detail was the fact noted in a telegram—the decision was unanimous. Circumstances make it impossible to give an extended review of the speeches. The time of each speaker on rejoinder was: Mr. Telford, five minutes; Mr. Lewis, five; Mr. Marshburn, two and a half; Mr. Barnhardt, six. The audience was large and appreciative, cheering generously both the Georgians and the Tar Heels.

The entertainment given our debaters was delightful. From the time they arrived in Athens Wednesday afternoon until they left they were shown every attention. They were met at the train by a committee and carried to the hotel. After supper they were shown about the city and were called upon by a number of students. Thursday they drove through the city, visiting the places of interest and were escorted through the campus and buildings of the University. Chancellor Hill called on them during the morning, and entertained them and the Georgia debaters at dinner. The faculty and students made the greatest effort to make the stay of the visitors pleasant. They could not have been more successful.

While Messrs. Barnhardt and Lewis were enjoying this hospitality and looking forward to the contest, they received the following telegram:

"Luck to you.
"E. D. Broadhurst."

Mr. Broadhurst was on the debating team that beat Georgia in '09—the only team that ever won from them on their home ground before this year.

The Washington and Lee Debate.

The second debate of the season will take place in the chapel Friday evening with Washington and Lee University. We have a right to have confidence in our debaters, for Mr. Wright in the Georgia debate last year showed himself a strong debater, and Mr. King has evidenced like ability in the scrub debates this year.

The Washington and Lee debaters are Messrs. Thomas Dwight Sloan and William Finley Semple. The debate will be presided over by Senator Alfred Moore Scales, of Greensboro. Mr. A. C. Dalton will serve as secretary. The judges are Congressman Robert N. Page, of Aberdeen, Dr. M. D. Hardin, of Charlotte, and Dr. Cranford, Professor of Philosophy at Trinity College.

The Campus Trees

One of the large oaks near the New East has been cut down to make way for the new laboratory. This of course had to be done, but it is unfortunate, for our trees have fared hard this year. The storm last fall blew down several of the largest; the one with the seat about it side of the walk from the Old East to Old West; one near the walk from the Alumni to the Chemical laboratory, and several others. Those destroyed by the storm were replaced this spring by young ones which will in time—a long, long time—fill the places of the others. The one that gives place to the laboratory will naturally not be conspicuous for its absence.

In spite of these losses the campus will some day have more and handsomer trees than it has ever had. The large vacant space on the north, between Dr. Alexander's and Cameron Avenue, has been set in trees this spring. Dr. Coker has given a great deal of care and labor to this work and hopes to have here a specimen of every tree that grows in North Carolina. The ground has been drained. Every attention will be given to this arboretum.

Geology Notes.

The Geological Department has just received a carload of valuable specimens of minerals, rocks and ores from all parts of the world by way of the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

It is interesting to note that the School of Mines of this University won a gold medal at the St. Louis Exposition for its exhibit.

The Summer Law School.

Prof. McGeehee will not teach in the Summer Law School this year. His place will be filled by Dr. Thomas Rullin and Mr. J. Crawford Biggs. There will be a number of lectures by eminent jurists during the session, and other features to make the term of unusual interest. The outlook for a very successful school is promising.

THE gymnasium lacks one thing to make it complete, and that is a clock. The rule is, that the building must be closed at half-past six o'clock, and everybody must get out, whether they are exercising, bathing, starting into a bath or what not. The trouble is that nobody has anyway of telling the time in the gym; lots of men have no watches and they could not use them while exercising if they had. The frequent result is that a man is surprised and very much embarrassed by the six-thirty bell and the call of the janitor to "get out." Some way ought to be devised to let one know that closing time is coming.

Dr. Smith.

Dr. C. Alfonso Smith, Professor of English at Univ. of North Carolina, will deliver the address before Graduating Class, in June.—The Tech.

The Elisha Mitchell Society.

The 160th meeting of the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society was held in the Chemical lecture room, Tuesday evening. The following was the program:

The Edison Storage Cell. Mr. J. E. Latta.

The Organization of the Ovum. Mr. H. V. Wilson.

Antophytographs. Mr. Collier Cobb.

Shakespeare Club.

The Club held its meeting Mar. 31. The interesting papers were followed by enlivening discussion. Mr. R. G. Lewis's paper on "Lear's Daughters: A Study in Heredity"; Mr. I. C. Wright's on "Is there true art in the Preservation of the Nemesis in Richard III.?" and Dr. Hume's on "Dramatic Reasons for Certain Omissions and Re-handlings in Richard III.," made a fine programme.

In the Societies.

In the Phi Society Saturday night the question discussed was: Resolved, That the manufacture and sale of liquors should be a government industry. The affirmative won and Mr. Katzenstein made the best speech.

On account of not having any lights the Di Society failed to have a meeting.

THE TRACK TEAM.

The State Meet and the Virginia Meet Arranged.

Special efforts are being made this spring to create as great an interest in track and field as is shown in other athletic sports. The present indications are that the efforts in this line will be successful.

Arrangements have already been made for several meets away from here, and it is hoped that several contests may be held here between different classes.

The first contest will be held at Raleigh on April 27th between the different colleges of the State. On May 8th the annual Virginia-Carolina meet will be held at Charlottesville. In these contests the events that will be entered are as follows:

- I. 120 yards hurdle.
- II. 100 yards dash.
- III. ¼ mile foot race.
- IV. ½ mile foot race.
- V. 1 mile foot race.
- VI. 220 yards hurdle.
- VII. Running high jump.
- VIII. 16 lb. shot put.
- IX. 220 yards dash.
- X. Running broad jump.
- XI. Pole vault.
- XII. Mile relay.

It is absolutely necessary that a large number of men come out to the daily practice and get in training, that there be a sufficient number of men to select a winning team. Let each class elect a captain, and for the next few weeks do daily work with his men, that the very best men be sent to represent the University in these contests.

It will be two weeks before another baseball game is held at Hill, so show your spirit and energy by coming out and encouraging the team, and when the manager calls for subscriptions, show your interest by subscribing as liberally as possible.

L. W. Matthews went to Greensboro Friday.

Prof. McGehee was away several days last week.

H. B. Gunter was visited by his father Monday.

Parson Matthews went up to Greensboro Monday.

C. R. McLean spent Saturday and Sunday at home.

W. P. Chapin spent Sunday at his home in Pittsboro.

E. H. Farris has returned from a two weeks' visit at his home.

Material for the Chemical laboratory is being hauled upon the campus.

Manager Stewart of the football team returned to the University today.

H. F. Fry was unexpectedly called home Saturday evening by the death of his father.

Wade H. Oldham will leave Thursday to accept a position as chemist in the steel works at Birmingham, Ala.

R. Z. Allen spent several days last week at his home in Wadesboro, where he was called by the death of his mother.

Dr. Eben Alexander, '01, is visiting at his home here. Dr. Alexander received a two year appointment in one of the New York hospitals some months ago.

F. W. Bynum, who plays first on the scrubs, had his nose broken by a ball in one of the practice games last week. We are glad to say that he is getting along well.

Dr. Hume has been invited to deliver a month's series of lectures on the "Literature of the Bible" at the Summer School of the South at the University of Tennessee.

Mr. Holladay, owing to the fact that he is busy finishing up Senior pictures, will not be at his Chapel Hill gallery on the two following Wednesdays—the 19th and 26th.

R. W. Perry has returned to the University and will graduate with his class in May. He has been engaged as assistant to a cotton seed oil expert in Memphis since November.

Messrs. C. C. Barnhardt and H. S. Lewis returned from their Georgia trip Monday evening. They are much pleased with the reception Georgia gave them as well as with the result of the debate.

The Buncombites.

The Buncombe County Club held its regular monthly meeting Monday evening at 7:30 o'clock in the History room. The Club will hold its next and last meeting of the year April 18 in the History 7 room. Several members of the faculty have been invited to attend and at this meeting the Club will have a smoker. Mr. Ralph Weaver has been chosen to present a paper concerning Buncombe County.

The Club has now about thirty members, but they say that next fall they hope to open up with about thirty-five.

The Team Leaves.

The baseball team left Tuesday morning on its Northern trip. Games were scheduled for this trip with Virginia, St. John's, Georgetown, and the Navy. The Virginia game, which was to be played today, was prevented by the rain.

The Swimming Pool in Use.

The swimming pool in the William Preston Bynum, Jr., gymnasium was filled last week for the first time, and the students are now able to enjoy the building to the full. The temperature for a day or two after the pool was filled was near the freezing point, but there were a good many swimmers who braved it.

At the Virginia Inauguration.

President Venable and Dr. Smith will attend the inauguration of Dr. Smith will attend the inauguration of Dr. Alderman as president of the University of Virginia this week. Dr. Smith will make an address on that occasion. The event will be one of the greatest in the life of the Virginia University, Dr. Alderman being their first president. The Virginians have made great preparation for the inauguration and will celebrate it worthily.

The Star Course.

At last we are to have another star lecture. And the star lecture never comes alone. So we shall have a double dose soon, Jacob Riis is coming on April 19 and the Chicago Glee Club on April 22. Both will be good. Mr. Riis is one of the most distinguished sociologists in the United States, and his books are very interesting. He has lectured in all sections of the country. As for the Glee Club—all the musical entertainments are good in Chapel Hill.

The Faculty at Northwestern has decided to give college credit to those students who make the Glee Club. This plan greatly increased the number of candidates.—Ex.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

A GREAT DEBATE.

Carolina Loses to Washington and Lee in a Debate That Was Full of Interest from Beginning to End.

The first intercollegiate debate between the University of North Carolina and Washington and Lee was held in the college chapel Friday night, and resulted in a victory for Washington and Lee. This being the first debate engaged in with Washington and Lee the outcome of the contest was doubly interesting, and Washington and Lee's representatives showed themselves worthy opponents.

Carolina's representatives were I. C. Wright and A. H. King, who had the affirmative side of the question. T. D. Sloan, of West Virginia, and W. F. Semple, of Indian Territory, were representatives of Washington and Lee. The judges of the contest were Congressman R. N. Page, Dr. M. D. Hardin and Prof. I. W. Cranford. State Senator A. M. Scales, of Greensboro, presided over the debate, and while the judges were out delighted the audience with some reminiscences of his college days.

Mr. Wright was the first speaker and developed the following ideas:

Every action and reaction in the world is the result of the working out of some absolute law. We don't believe in miracles any more. This age is the reign of law. Then what is the law of progress? And does the fact of the Solid South under present conditions conform to it or not?

It is an evolutionary process. Nothing is complete and perfect. The South can not sit still without going backward.

China thought she could, but we see the result. Never have England's institutions or politics of government been too sacred to be changed when conditions demand it, and that is the secret of her growth. Russia thought she could sit still and develop, but we see the result.

Until about thirty years ago Japan thought she could, but she saw she couldn't, so she obeyed the law of progress, threw aside her old ways of doing things, and changed her customs and practices where necessary, and as a result she has become a world power.

Stagnation kills progress. Then how do we prevent stagnation and secure progress? It is by change, competition and rivalry. Kites fly against the wind. You can not develop a football team without an opposing team, and if we are to have the best teams to lead the South on to progress, we must have an opposing team. We must have two strong political parties.

This is the foundation principle of American life. Two strong parties, each trying to do the best for the people and for improvements, all knowing that the people will support the one which does them the most good, this has been the secret of our growth, and this is what the fact of the Solid South will have none of.

Competition is the life of trade, the life of thought, the law of life. In the "Solid" South there is only one applicant for the government, and he practically inherits the job. The same principle which condemns an absolute monopoly which is behind all this trust regulation and the Sherman law, demands competition in the public life of the South, demands the dissolution of the "Solid South."

The laws of Congress are passed with especial consideration for the wishes of the doubtful States. Then let the South be doubtful and her claims will receive greater consideration. Then and not till then will she reach her fullest growth.

Then what is the good of staying "Solid?" Slavery, war, reconstruction, force bills and negro domination made her solid. They have vanished. But we are told that we are the best people on earth anyway, why change? But the cry of negro, negro, drowns every sensible argument and policy of good and hence the South stays "solid" when all necessity for it has vanished.

What does this mean? It means that she has failed to recognize changed conditions. It means that one phase of the Southern white man's life controls his action and thinking on every question of good and of political life. And we respectfully submit that this keeps him from being free, restrains him, stifles all competition as to governmental policy, violates the absolute laws of progress, in that it is opposed to any change, and is detrimental to the highest development of the South.

FIRST FOR NEGATIVE.

Mr. T. D. Sloan, of Washington and Lee, spoke first for the negative side in the debate. His argument was a demonstration of the fact that the educational and social progress of the South were not being retarded by her political uniformity, and also included a treatment of the negro problem, showing its over-shadowing importance and the unfitness of the Republican party to deal with it.

In his argument to establish the educational progress of the South, Mr. Sloan after admitting a greater percentage of illiteracy in the South than existed at the North, produced statistics to show that the illiteracy was due to the fact of a negro population of 8,000,000, and the financial ruin, caused by the Civil War and the subsequent misrule of reconstruction days. He then spoke of the remarkable growth of public schools and showed a corresponding decrease in illiteracy in the Southern States.

The negro, he said, has received far more than the legitimate share of appropriations for education in the South as seen by the fact that he has furnished less than $5,000,000 of the $140,000,000 appropriated by the South for negro education. While negro illiteracy is decreasing rapidly in the South the report of Hon. Sidney J. Boone to the Southern Educational Conference in 1904 showed that there was a decided increase in this illiteracy in the Western section of the United States, while in the North Atlantic divisions the decrease in illiteracy would not compare with the South. Hence Mr. Sloan concluded that educational progress in the South was greater than in the Republican and doubtful States of our Union.

In his treatment of the social conditions Mr. Sloan showed that there is a well defined determination on the part of the Southerners to eradicate the crime of lynching from the South. But lynchings are not confined to the South. Mob law knows no section. It is peculiar to no party. Democrats and Republicans are alike guilty. Is a man restrained from murder by his views of the tariff? Will a man's views of currency incite him to commit arson? I have no patience with those who are too blind to see that lawlessness is not an affair of the head but of the heart. The cause and cure of such crimes lie far deeper than a man's political preference.

He said that the solving of the negro problem till the present had failed because of Republican interference. This he illustrates by the most recent and promising of all the solutions yet attempted, the adoption of the State Constitution practically eliminating the most objectionable negro vote. "But for Republican interference the negro would quietly and contentedly have accepted this new condition of affairs. This party is unwilling to lose his vote. Consequently their repeated agitation of this question in Republican journals. The negro is beginning to feel that he has been unjustly treated and is becoming restless and insolent. To complicate the situation still further there is an increasingly larger element in the Republican party clamoring for a reduction of Southern representation."

In conclusion Mr. Sloan showed that it was not ignorance nor prejudice which kept the South a political unit, but the interest of self-preservation.

What use to tell her of retarded progress when the most wonderful development is going on under her very eyes? of what avail is it that the Republican party calls the negro problem a political constant pressure on it?

"In spite of direful warnings of Republican politicians the South continues to prosper as she rapidly advances toward that high station to which the God of the Nation has destined her. May her progress be unimpeded by discord in her ranks as she advances to the forefront in the sisterhood of States.

SECOND FOR AFFIRMATIVE.

Mr. King, second speaker for Carolina, spoke in substance as follows:

"Not only the causes which in the beginning modified the South have passed away, but new conditions which demand dissolution have arisen.

"Before the war the South was chiefly an agricultural people. The abolition of slavery wrought wonderful changes in our industrial life. New industries have sprung up. Some of her people seek livelihood on the farm, some in the mine, some in the factory. The South is no more bound solidly together by a oneness of interest than any other section of the Union, yet the South is the only section whose entire electoral vote may be depended upon with absolute certainty. No other section is solid all the time. What is it that holds the South solid? Is it the status of things with the causes all gone? Such a condition directly opposes the fundamental law of progress, throws competition to the four winds of heaven, and forms a party monopoly for which there is no substitute.

"In favoring the dissolution of the "Solid South" we neither condemn nor commend any particular party. We simply advocate the existence of two strong political parties as the exponents of Southern life.

"The people of the South, influenced by a fond recollection of the past, advocate the governmental theories of the past, theories that were then constructive, but now are ultra-conservative. The last campaign is proof of this.

"What will force the South to recognize the changed conditions and destroy the party monopoly? It is competition. Competition is the law of life. The competition of two strong political parties would give us the best administration possible, would drive the pettifogger from his profession, and would enact the laws most conducive to the progress and development of the South.

"People may say what they please about the Populist administration in this State 8 years ago, but it has been a blessing to disguise. When the Democrats were thrown out of power they went to work to get back in, not by corruption and bribery, but the representatives of the party saw the woeful ignorance of the State and seized the opportunity of crediting a good deed to their party. Competition had come. The pool of political stagnation was stirred, and from the moving of the waters came the healing virtue which is fast curing the ignorance in our State.

"The 'Solid South' robs Southern statesmen of the highest positions of trust and honor in our government. Before the South became solid her statesmen filled the chief

TEAM'S NORTHERN TRIP.

Carolina Conquers St. John's, but Loses to Georgetown and the Navy.

CAROLINA 5, ST. JOHNS 1.

Carolina, in her first game on the Northern trip, put up an errorless game and with Patterson in the box easily defeated St. John's by the score of 5 to 1. The result of the game was never in doubt after the third inning, for Carolina landed on Staley, St. John's pitcher, hard and often, and soon had enough runs to put her on easy street. Patterson pitched his first game of the season and twirled a noteworthy game. Only three hits were made off him and two of these were scratches. The team behind Patterson also put up a spectacular game and made many difficult stops and plays which elicited much applause from the spectators. Outside of the good pitching and splendid team work several star plays were made. Thompson in right field made a beauty catch of a long foul, and Stem, on first, reached high in the air and pulled down a wild throw with his gloved hand. St. John rooters declared it was highway robbery. Winston scored in the first inning on hits by himself and Stem and a pretty sacrifice hit by Cheshire. Cheshire and Stem scored in the third on two hits, a base on balls, an error and a timely two bagger by Gudger. Two more runs were pushed across the plate to insure the safe keeping of the game, in the fifth on hits by Taylor and Thompson and a couple of costly errors by St. John's infield. St. Johns scored her only run on a three base hit by Staley followed by a single by De Vries. Following is the official score.

NAVY 3; CAROLINA 2

The Navy defeated Carolina in a hotly contested 13 inning game by the close score of 3 to 2. The game was from the beginning a pitcher's battle, and Sitton, who was again in the box for Carolina, only lost because of costly errors behind him. The game up till the fifth inning was slow and listless, owing to the boat race between the Navy and Georgetown, which was going on at the same time. At the close of the fifth inning, the boats pulled up to the goal with the Navy in the lead, and all eyes were turned on the game. Carolina played dumb ball for five innings, not seeming to take much interest in the game. The Navy took advantage of our stupidity and pushed two runs across the plate that should never have been scored. Gill scored in the first on his hit, an error by Gudger and a single by Sproffoid. Carolina went her one better in the third on a couple of errors by Gill, followed by a timely single from Taylor's bat. The Navy tied the score in the fourth when Goldthwaite walked, stole second and third while Noble was looking at the boat race, and tallied on Stiles's single to right. Then followed 8 hard innings of good fast baseball, both pitchers and fielders being on their mettle. Needham, who pitched for the Mid-dies, was easily connected with, but Carolina's line drives always went straight to some fielder. The Navy infield had hardly any work to do, for almost every ball went far in the outfield and right into the hands of some Navy fielder. The Navy scored the winning run in the thirteenth inning after two men had been retired on strikes. Gill hit a grounder to Gudger, who fielded cleanly, but threw a little wild to Stem at first. Stem got the ball off the base and touched Gill in the back, but Umpire Grider called him safe. McWhorton, the next man up, also hit to Gudger, and reached first on a very questionable decision. Sproffoid hit a line drive to Barry in center, who misjudged, then muffed, and the winning run, much to the delight of the some 6000 spectators, was scored. Allow me to say one word about the umpire. Carolina lost the game, but undoubtedly she didn't receive her due from the umpire, for she got the butt end of every decision. Needham, Sproffoid and Gill were the stars for the Navy; while Sitton, James, W., and Stem put up the best game for the Tar Heels.

executive offices of our nation. Jackson, Calhoun, Jefferson, Madison, Washington and Polk are illustrious proofs of this. Where are they now? Like Rachael's children of old 'they are not.' And what is the explanation? The answer is the 'Solid South.'

"The 'Solid South' turns governmental appropriations into other sections. The claims of the doubtful States are satisfied first. With the 'South-Solid' her claims always come last.

"The 'Solid South gives us a party monopoly which fosters stagnation in all public life, robs Southern statesmen of the chief offices of our nation, and turns the choicest appropriations into other sections and thus hinders the progress of the South.

MR. SEMPLE CLOSES.

Mr. William F. Semple, representing Washington and Lee, made the closing speech in the debate. His speech was devoted to a discussion of the industrial and political phases of the subject. He pointed out that the South is already making remarkable progress; that as a manufacturing section it is going forward at a rate that is marvelous to behold. He quoted from a speech on the industrial progress of the South delivered by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, of the University of North Carolina, and inquired if our progress has been "so great, so rapid, so marvelous," why should we need to abandon our policy of political uniformity. The only thing which the Republican party offered the South, he said, was tariff concessions. But this argument assumed that protection is a perfectly sound principle. As a matter of fact it is a universally converted principle. Furthermore the argument for protection overlooks the fact that the South was already a protected section. Protection is an artificial means of encouraging industries; it is meant to be applied to sections which are at a natural disadvantage. The South does not need it because the South is rich in natural resources, and her manufacturing enterprises are already developing faster than those of any other section of the country.

He admitted that more Southern men would be placed in offices if the South should vote Republican occasionally, but the mere holding of an office is not an evidence of progress. The South's lack of influence so far as it lacked influence, is attributable to the fact that the Southern people since the war have been absorbed in recovering their economic position. Her chief concern has been in local, not national politics.

"I do not apologize for the statesmen of the South," he said; "if the South has no Calhouns, neither has the North any Websters." He said that the South's position in the Democratic party is not due to the fact that it can be relied upon, but is due to the prejudice which the people of the North entertain against the placing of Southern men in high offices. He concluded that the South's interest political, industrial, social, and educational required that she remain united.

REJOINDERS.

Mr. Wright in his rejoinder showed that the South was more divided prior to the war than since, that two parties must exist for proper competition, that all causes for a solid South have vanished, that competition makes strong men and not mutual assent to leading questions.

Mr. Sloan in his rejoinder said that the South if it must break at all, must break into the Democratic and Republican parties, that the authorities of both parties claim that the negro problem has not been solved from the politician's standpoint, that the Republican party does cater to the negro population, citing instances.

Mr. King in his rejoinder reduced the negative's argument to two points: That the negro problem exists and the South is progressing. The fact is that the South is progressing, but the question is, is she progressing as rapidly as she could, or would, if she were not solid. A yard dog can make progress with a block on, but take off the block and he will make better progress.

Mr. Semple in rejoinder asked what influence could two Southern parties wield at Washington, or in national convention. Massachusetts has two political parties, and we want no such rivalry, neither do we want a Tammany Hall like New York has.

In conclusion he said that the affirmative contends that the South votes solid from fear and because of traditions. This makes out a hard case against the Southern people.

THE DECISION.

A very annoying feature of the debate was the fact that no announcement was made as to whether the vote of the judges was unanimous or divided. Some industrious "sounding" was done after the debate, though, and we feel safe in saying that the vote stood two to one, Dr. Cranford voting for the affirmative, and the other judges for the negative.

CAROLINA THE VICTOR

Farmers Fan Furiouly, but Fail to Find the Ball.

SITTON'S MARVELOUS PITCHING

His Magic Spit Ball Strikes Out Seventeen Men and Yields but Three Hits.—Winston's Work Was Magnificent.

Carolina got even with A. and M. for the defeat administered by her in Raleigh last year, and with Sitton in the box easily downed the Farmers 4 to 0. Sitton pitched as pretty a game as was ever seen in Raleigh and was a complete puzzle to the batsmen, only three hits being registered off him, and one of these was a scratch. He fanned 17 of the Farmers, and that is a record to be envied, for they are a hard hitting aggregation of ball players. The hits made off him all came after two men were out, and though A. and M. got two men as far as third base, yet they never had a chance to score, for Sitton would put the spit to the ball and Winston would get the put out. Scientifically speaking, Sitton and Winston were about the whole show for Carolina. The team played well enough behind them, whenever they got a chance, but that chance was not often forthcoming. Cheshire made the only miscue for Carolina when he dropped a pop fly which was so easy it was hard. Heath was in the box for A. and M. and he also pitched a good game, giving up six hits. The four runs made off him, however, were not entirely due to errors, for Carolina managed to hit when hits were needed. Fully 2000 people witnessed the game, all classes of people being represented. Pretty college girls, excursionists, Farmers, etc., were there in throngs. A. and M. took their defeat pretty hard, but they should gather consolation from the fact that they simply went up against a better team. The cadets had a big bonfire which they intended to ignite immediately after the game, but they said they couldn't find a match. The detailed account of the game is as follows:

A. and M. won the toss and chose to go to bat first. Eskridge fanned. Hadley was out Cheshire to first. For Carolina: Winston fouled out to catcher. Stem made a clean hit to left and went to second while Cheshire was being retired pitcher to first. Worth went out on a hit to short.

Second inning. A. and M. Knox and Heath fanned. Drake singled to left, but was left on first as Lattimore fanned. Carolina. Gudger drove to left for one base. Thompson fouled out to catcher. James walked. Emerson went out on a grounder to first, advancing Gudger to third and James to second. Sitton was hit by pitched ball and walked to first, rubbing his digits. Winston tried hard for a hit but lifted a fly to third for an out, leaving three men on bases.

Third inning. A. and M. Harris and Staples fan. Eskridge out Sitton to Stem. Carolina. Stem hits one over second which looks safe, but Staples grabs it up with one hand and retires Stem at first. Cheshire fouls out to Hadley. Worth is out on a line drive to center.

Fourth inning. A. and M. Asbury flies to Worth in center. Hadley is hit by a pitched ball, goes to first and steals second. Knox is out on fly to Stem, who throws to Cheshire and doubles up Hadley. Carolina scored two runs this inning. Gudger, after hitting nine fouls, goes out on a high fly to center. Thompson hits a slashing drive to right field and stops on third, owing to the ground rule that a hit into the crowd was good for 3 bases. James hits to first, and Thompson, through slow baserunning, is caught at the plate. Emerson hits to Heath and goes to second while James scores, Knox missing the throw at first base. Sitton follows with a clean hit to left field and Emerson crosses the plate with the second run. Sitton steals second, but Winston retires the side by going out pitcher to first.

Fifth inning. A. and M. Heath is out Sitton to Stem. Drake beats out a bunt, goes to second on a passed ball and steals third. Lattimore and Harris find trouble solving Sitton's spit ball, and neither get any farther than the plate. Carolina. Stem flies to short. Cheshire is out, pitcher to first. Worth is out on a line drive to right which Lattimore nabs right on the brink of the precipice.

Sixth inning. A. and M. Staples fans. Eskridge is out, pitcher to first. Asbury reaches first on Cheshire's error. Hadley fans. Carolina. Gudger and Thompson go out on infield grounders. Winborne, who supplanted James in left field, flies out to first base.

Seventh. A. and M. Knox is out on grounder to Sitton, who touches him running down the line. Heath fans. Drake walks and steals second, but gets no further as Lattimore fans. Carolina: Emerson is out short to first. Sitton hits one to Asbury which is too hot to handle, steals second and goes to third on Staple's fumble. Winston is hit by pitched ball, and immediately pilfers second. Stem goes out on a drive to left. Cheshire, however, comes to the rescue with a solid single to right on which Sitton scores, and then Winston scores on Knox's error of the return ball. Worth is out on fly to third. Two runs, two hits.

Eighth. A. and T. Harris, Staples and Eskridge all ingloriously fan. For Carolina, Gudger fans, he being Heath's only strike-out victim. Thompson and Winborne are out short to first.

Ninth. A. and M. Asbury comes up with blood in his eye, but Sitton makes a monkey of him and

JACOB RIIS.

"The Battle With the Slums."

A large audience greeted Jacob A. Riis in the chapel Wednesday night, and were greatly pleased and edified with his lecture on "The Battle with the Slums." Mr. Riis dealt with the slum problem in a very sympathetic way. He has worked in the slums of New York for twenty-five years, and should know what he is talking about. He began his work as a reporter, and his reports of the crimes of the slum district there was always an appeal for this class of people. He has written several books which deal with this problem, such as "How the Other Half Lives," and "The Making of an American." Mr. Riis spoke very touchingly of President Roosevelt and showed his great admiration for him. Mr. Roosevelt as president of the police board of New York and afterward as Governor, was closely connected with Mr. Riis and greatly aided him in his work. Mr. Roosevelt has called Mr. Riis "the most useful citizen of New York."

Mr. Riis's lecture was illustrated by a stereopticon. With his slides Mr. Riis carried his audience out into the slums of New York and showed the dirt and poverty that abound there. Mr. Riis's work has been a fight for the home with plenty of light and air, and for the schools and public parks. He has fought against crowded tenement houses. He said that all this battle with the slum meant that man is made in the image of God and we must see that he does not desecrate that body if we can help it, and God knows that we can.

Carolina 5; South Carolina 3.

Carolina worsted South Carolina College last Friday by the same score that she beat Syracuse Wednesday, 5 to 3. South Carolina was clearly outclassed from the start, and though they made three runs off Thompson in the first inning nobody worried, for the difference in the calibre of the two teams was self evident. South Carolina scored her three runs, and her only three runs, in the first inning on a single, a base on balls, a wild pitch, and a wild throw by Emerson on a difficult chance. Thompson settled down after the first and South Carolina never had another chance. Carolina tied the score in the third on singles by Thompson and Cheshire, an error and Worth's timely double to center. Another was scored in the fourth on Winborne's single and steal and Thompson's two bagger. Another was scored in the eighth on three clean hits. The feature of the game was Carolina's hitting, especially that of Cheshire and Worth, who led with 3 safeties apiece, and Sitton, Winborne and Stem trailed along with two apiece. For South Carolina Capt. Wilcox in left and Davis at short played excellent ball. Rain fell at intervals during the game. Following is the official score:

Carolina 18; South Carolina 8.

The second game between North and South Carolina was played in Durham on Saturday before the smallest crowd of the season. Manager Jones has had tough luck this season so far, and he deserves better audiences after this to pull him out of a deep rut. The game was characterized by hard hitting on both sides. Sitton retired at the end of the fourth inning in favor of Thompson. Incidentally Carolina was 13 runs to the good. In four innings Sitton struck out 8 men. Twenty-one hits speak well for Carolina's batters. Following is the official score:

The attendance at the games this spring is a disgrace to the student body. In former years the complaint has been made that the managers have too few games played here, where the students have an opportunity to see them. This year a schedule was arranged that was everything that could be desired. It provided plenty of games for us to see. Games could have been arranged elsewhere with a certainty of good gate receipts. But they were brought here for the students. What appreciation has been shown of this? There were less than a hundred student spectators at the last two games played here. The result was that the manager lost on both of them.

What excuse can be given for this we do not know. It is not that the games were poor. Our team has played a good game and they played good teams. Whatever the reason, if there is any, the conduct of the students shows very little spirit or interest. They have asked for the games here and got them. Now they stay away. The team does not have enough spectators to give them a decent cheer on their home ground; the manager is losing money and the students are responsible.

The Chicago Glee Club.

The Chicago Glee Club gave the last entertainment of the Star Course in the Chapel Saturday night. The club consisted of a male quartette and a reader, Miss George. The reader was a complete bore; the quartette was good. The programme would have been enjoyed more if several such pieces as "The Goblins Will Get You" had been left out. Audiences care little whether a piece is old or new, but they want something good. The quartette gave some good ones. It is not likely that finer singing was ever heard in Chapel Hill than theirs in "Antoinette" and in "The Song the Chimney Sang." They were magnificent. They gave a version of "Three Old Crows" that differed slightly from the Chapel Hill version, and this was the hit of the evening. It brought forth all the applause there was in the house.

The Track Meet.

The great State track meet of the colleges will be held today under the auspices of the A. and M. The colleges to be represented are Carolina, Davidson and A. and M.

The Carolina Track Team will leave this morning for Raleigh. The team is composed of the following men: Coach Curtis, Captain Newton, ex-Captain Wilson, Pittman, Barry, Ruffin, Reynolds, Sifford, Reed, Jacobs and Barry.

The trial events were held Monday afternoon and the following marks were made:

100 yard dash—Jacobs, with Newton second.

220 yard dash—Jacobs and Wilson.

Low hurdles—Wilson and Curtis. High hurdles—Wilson and Curtis.

Quarter mile—Newton and Pittman.

Half mile—Reed and Ruffin.

Pole Vault—Newton.

Broad jump—Newton.

Shot put—Newton and Pittman.

High jump—Newton and Wilson.

Captain Newton has had the men in regular training for some time and it is hoped that Carolina will carry off her share of the honors of the day. There are very few men in the South today who can run the quarter, 220 yard dash, 100 yard dash, make the high jump, broad jump, pole vault, put the shot and throw the hammer as does Newton.

The next track meet will be held at Charlottesville, Va., on May 4. At this meet Virginia, Carolina, Vanderbilt and Georgetown will be represented.

Field day will be held here probably Monday of next week.

Let us sell you a couch, a rocker, a bed, anything in our line, and if it is not fully as represented return and we will refund the purchase price. You need no "boot". Grady & Moize (two U. N. C. boys) are kept "boning" to save you money.

Cornell University Medical College.

The course covering four years begins the first week in October and continues till June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

The Glee Club and Orchestra will leave Friday afternoon for a trip to Greensboro and Winston-Salem. Friday evening they will give an entertainment at the Normal and Saturday evening at the Salem Academy. This is the first trip they have taken since two years ago, when they went to the Normal. That trip was a very successful one. They have done very faithful practice this spring and an equally successful trip is hoped for them now.

Carolina 5, Syracuse 3.

Carolina defeated Syracuse University team here last Wednesday in a slow but exciting game by the score of 5 to 2. The score was a tie from the sixth to the eighth innings, and for awhile it looked as if Syracuse might win. The game was characterized by a good deal of kicking over Umpire Meade's decisions, especially by Syracuse, who could not be satisfied with anything. It seemed. Incidentally, Mr. Meade umpired a good game and although he had several close decisions to make at critical stages of the game he made them without the least partiality to either side. Carolina scored one run in the second inning. Gudger singled over third, but Winborne forced him out at second. Winborne stole second and came all the way home on the catcher's throw which went far out into center field. Emerson singled in the fifth, stole second and scored on Sitton's clean smash to left. Syracuse started scoring in the fifth. Ryan reached first on Gudger's over-throw, went to second when Martin was being retired short to first and scored on Morrissey's single to right. She tied the score in the sixth on a single by Wilbur followed by a two base hit from Burrell's bat. Carolina broke the tie in the eighth when Cheshire hit a line drive to left which got away from the left fielder and rolled to the fence. Cheshire stopped breathless at the third cushion, and scored on Winston's single to centre. Two more runs were made in the ninth. Thompson got in the way of one of Conerery's shoots, stole second and third and scored on Sitton's drive to the fence good for two bases. Syracuse made matters look dangerous in the ninth. Ryan opened up with a clean three bagger to center. Martin singled to center, scoring Ryan. Winborne fumbled the ball and Martin went to second. Watsey was hit by a pitched ball and hurt had enough to delay the game five minutes. With two men on bases and none out. Sitton got his spit ball in operation and retired the side without further scoring, striking out two men and causing the other to ground to short. Wilbur and Burrell played fine ball for Syracuse while Emerson, Sitton and Cheshire did the best work for Carolina.

The Passing of B. Booth.

Uncle Bennie died Sunday morning after a life of eighty years and an illness of more than two months. Thus passed a familiar and picturesque figure from the life of the village. For years this aged man has wandered the streets delighting the students with his imitations of the cock crow and feats showing the remarkable toughness of his skull. Only the older students, however, have seen him butt the head out of the barrel or leap high into the air and land on his head. Of late years he has lost his agility and age has made him feeble. But his skill in the cock-crow never forsook him. Sometimes in the attempt his voice would quaver and he would seem to give up the effort, but suddenly the call would come as clear as was ever heard in a barn yard. Then would follow quickly to the great amusement of the bystanders, a succession of sounds that could be made only by a poultry show—or Bennie Booth. He was indeed a picturesque figure and inspired more than one visiting newspaper man to write of the peculiarities of Chapel Hill. But he is gone, and his clever feats and acute remarks are memories. He will play a leading part in the reunion anecdotes of the coming years.

adds another strike out to his already long string. Hadley, implorred by A. and M. rooters to knock the cover off the ball, swings three times at the delusive sphere and retires to the bench. Knox hits a drive to right, which gets by Thompson on a wicked bound and lets Knox reach third. He is thrown out, however, on a very pretty relay throw by Thompson and Worth at the home plate. Umpire Whitaker sends Knox back to third base, on account of the ground rule. Thompson was almost entirely surrounded by pretty girls in right field, and no wonder he couldn't get the ball.) Here was A. and M.'s only chance to score, and although the Farmers were hopelessly beaten they tried hard to stave off the ignominy of a shut out, but to no avail. For Heath ended the game when he gave Stem a grounder, also a ball, at first. The game was characterized by a great deal of rooting on both sides. Carolina's Luck Deserts Her Until the Seventh, When She Lands Four Runs, Which Are Lost on Technicality.

The second game between Carolina and A. & M. was played here Saturday afternoon. The game was scheduled to begin at 4 o'clock, but on account of a wreck near Raleigh the A. & M. team did not get here until half past five. The game began at five forty and was stopped in the middle of the seventh inning with the score 5 to 3 in favor of Carolina. Umpire Meade said that it was too dark to finish the seventh inning and hence the seventh inning would not count. This gave the game to A. & M. by a score of 3 to 1. It was perfectly evident that A. & M. outplayed Carolina up to the seventh inning both in the field and at bat. A. & M. played an errorless game up to the seventh inning with the exception of Heath's wild throw to first. Sitton gave four bases in the first four innings. These coupled with some costly errors placed Carolina in a dangerous position in both the first and third innings, and resulted in 3 runs for A. & M. in the fifth. Carolina made five errors, three of which were by Gudger, to A. & M.'s one. Sitton was a little slow in getting started to pitching and was not in his usual form at any time during the game. As Winston said, "This is not our time of day for playing ball," but Sitton struck out nine men in six innings which is not so bad.

There has been some kicking on the Hill against Umpire Meade calling the game in the middle of the seventh inning. In defence of his decision he said that Hadley, captain of A. & M.'s team, wanted to stop the game at the end of the sixth inning, but that Captain Cheshire was not willing to do it, and as he thought they would have time to play another inning, he decided that way. But Carolina began hitting and the inning was longer than the others, and hence there was not time to finish. But Coach Lawson and Captain Cheshire thought the inning ought to have been finished. There has also been some criticism of A. & M. for killing time, but Umpire Meade said that Sitton killed more time in his wind up all through the game than A. & M. did, but A. & M. killed all she could. Their pitcher actually left the field before the game was called. Carolina evidently made every effort to hasten the game in the seventh inning, Captain Cheshire purposely allowing himself to be put out in order that A. & M. might get her half of the inning. The game cannot be counted as an official game, as the rules require that a championship game be started at least two hours before sundown. The students here are very anxious to have the game counted and let the tie be played off. It is learned, however, that there is no prospect of arranging a third game.

If the game were counted up to the sixth inning there is no doubt that A. & M. won. She played till then a superior game. Carolina's pick up in the seventh must not be ascribed to darkness at all. The fact is she simply began to bat; A. & M. fielded well to the end of the game, but Heath lost his elusiveness, Carolina found him and placed her hits where they could not be handled.

The game in detail follows:

Carolina was first at bat. Winston led off with a fly to first baseman. Stem was given his base. Cheshire was out pitcher to first, while Stem went to second. But there he died, for James flew out to center.

In the first inning A. & M. was retired with a man on first and third bases. Eskridge flew to Winborne. Asbury was given his base on balls. Hadley hit to Gudger, who threw wild to Stem and Hadley was safe and Asbury went to third. Knox hit to Sitton who threw Hadley out at second. On next ball Knox went to second. He was playing off second and Sitton threw the ball to Emerson who by a pretty throw caught Asbury trying to steal home.

Second inning: Gudger was out short to first. Thompson fanned and was thrown out at first by the catcher. Winborne flew out to short.

Drake went out short to first. Heath and Temple fanned, and it began to look like the pitching that Sitton did at Raleigh.

Third inning: Carolina was again unable to get onto Heath's curves and only three men faced him in this inning. Emerson went out on a foul fly to Hadley. Sitton was robbed of a pretty drive between first and second and thrown out at first. Winston was out on foul fly to Asbury.

A. & M. filled the bases in this inning with two bases on balls and the first hit of the game. Harris led off with a hit to left field. Staples was given his base on balls. Eskridge and Asbury fanned. Hadley was given his base on balls thus filling the bases. But the agony for Carolina was ended by Knox hitting to Cheshire who threw Hadley out at second.

Fourth inning: In this inning Carolina made the first run of the game through a wild throw by Heath, a sacrifice, and the only two base hit of the game by James. Stem led off with an easy one to Heath who tossed it over first baseman's head and Stem went to second. Cheshire sacrificed and was out pitcher to first, while Stem went to third. James then knocked a high fly past center field good for two bases and Stem scored. James went to third on passed ball by Hadley, but died there, as Gudger and Thompson knocked pop flies to

Representatives of the Phi Win in an Interesting Discussion.

The regular Fresh-Soph debate between the Di and Phi Societies was held in the Chapel Friday night. The query debated was, "Resolved, That Trusts are Detrimental to Our Industrial Development." The Phi representatives, Messrs. E. L. Stewart, '08, and E. M. Highsmith, '07, had the affirmative side of the question, and the Di representatives, Messrs. DeWitt Holt, '08, and R. C. Day, '07, had the negative. The committee decided in favor of the affirmative.

STEWART.

Mr. Stewart was the first speaker. He started by admitting that organization is of value in industry. To be of value this organization must subserve its interests to those of industry and of society. Trusts, he said, instead of doing this are complete monopolies and oppress all classes of industrial society.

He then took up the law of decreasing returns, proved its application to every phase of life; showed how the trusts disregard this law and are enabled to do so by the vast amount of capital their monopoly secures to them. He stated that every attempt against them in courts or legislatures had been futile, thus proving that the trusts are stronger than public sentiment or power. The statement was made that trusts oppress all classes of society by forcing the manufacturer to sell at a low price, the consumer to buy at a higher one, and by forcing the wages of the laborers below a living point. The speaker stated in conclusion that trusts do away with industrial freedom.

HOLT.

The following is the synopsis of the speech of Mr. Holt, the first speaker on the negative: The trust is a natural stage in the development of our industrial system, which is a product of constant growth. The negative claim that industry is the supplying the wants of humanity most efficiently and at the least expense. This is impossible without a growing system of business and business methods. In all phases of life there is this system of growth, and it is by adherence to this principle that American industry has grown. In a highly developed civilization it is necessary to have an industrial system and the trust fills this place in our life. The trust is a product of growth and is honest, and it serves the industrial world better than any system yet tried.

HIGHSMITH.

Mr. Highsmith stated that we have just four phases of industrial life to consider: capital, labor, business management, and the production of raw material. He proposed to show that the trusts brought about such a state of stagnation in industry by oppressing all classes of industrial society and by crushing out freedom of individual action and enterprise, which his colleague had shown to be the very life-blood of our industrial development.

He showed: That the trusts centralize the wealth-producing power of the nation by controlling the whole of our trade. That they crush out all competition, by showing that they are monopolies and therefore cannot exist as such with any considerable competition in the field. He showed by representative instances that they exact unjust prices from consumers. That the United States is peculiarly open to trust evils from the facts that our tariff system excludes foreign competition; our government has only nominal control over the trusts, and potential competition has no place in our industrial life. That they crush out freedom of individual action by destroying equality of opportunity in industry and thus hampering progressive thought there, dominating the field of labor, and making legitimate competition impossible and thus checking the progress of inventions.

That, these things being so, industry can receive no stimulus so long as the trusts hold under present conditions.

DAY.

Mr. Day showed how the trust, which as admitted by both sides is the advanced stage of legitimate corporations, serves industry (1) by rendering industry stable, and (2) that concentrated industrial forces are necessary as distributing mediums.

Mr. Day then showed that the trust removes conflicts from industry and places our industrial system on a basis of normal and permanent growth. He then showed that our industries are enabled to meet the organized industries of other countries and thus secure for our producers the most thriving export trade of the world. He showed in his rejoinder that the corporations are infant trusts.

Carpenter Hurt.

Hunter Carpenter, former football star of Virginia Polytechnic Institute and University of North Carolina, has been badly hurt. He would probably have been killed but for his fine physical condition. He is general manager for his father, J. C. Carpenter, of Clifton Forge, on the railroad works.

While unloading a lot of small tram cars from a Chesapeake and Ohio flat car one of them, falling three feet, knocked Carpenter down and pinned him by his leg. The flesh was crushed and the bone was fractured above the knee. A blow on the head knocked him senseless. This wound was sewed up. His shoulder held the weight of the car and saved his chest from being crushed.—College Topics.

THE game of the season is to be played to-morrow. It is the duty of every man in the University to be on the bleachers or in the grandstand and make himself heard.

WE reprint in another column an article from the Red and Black which is in part very creditable to our societies and our debaters. The implication that is not so favorable must be allowed to the point of view. Georgia says we won on oratory; every time Georgia has won from us Carolina said about the same thing. A lot depends upon the point of view. It is significant, however, that the Red and Black speaks of the "English department." Here the English department is very valuable to the debater, but it is not at all in charge of the debating system. The same is true of the economics department. The department which has most impressed itself on our debating system is that of philosophy. The aim of every North Carolina debater is to get his logic right. So deeply set is this principle that the criticism has often been made that we pay no attention to eloquence. Evidently our Georgia debaters were eloquent in spite of themselves and were profited by it. If that is the case we would do well to use eloquence as well as logic.

A. & M. Wins Track Meet.

The Carolina track team was defeated in Raleigh last Thursday by the A. & M. College, the score being 56-53.

The meet was held on the new track lately built around the baseball diamond in the college grounds. The track was in a miserable condition, part of it being soft dirt, and the other covered with big cinders. The condition of the track was a great draw-back to the Carolina men as they have been used to a very smooth track.

This score, 56-53 could not rightly be considered a defeat, because the A. & M. men simply had their own way about everything. They ran in the discus on Carolina and claimed that it should be thrown in every college meet. Of course A.

& M. won first and second places on this, counting them eight points, while Carolina did not enter a man as none of them had ever practiced with the discus.

In the 220 yard dash Carolina was robbed. A great bend was in the middle of the 220 track which consequently caused the outside man to run about ten yards farther than the man on the inside track. In this race of course the A. & M. men got the inside track while our men got the outside and as might have been expected A. & M. won first place in the 220 dash.

In this meet it was practically Captain Newton, of Carolina, against Wilson, of A. & M. Captain Newton acquitted himself with honor at this meet and we should all feel justly proud to own such a man as Newton. He won two first places and four second places, while Wilson of A. & M. won four first and two second places. W. M. Wilson broke the Southern record on high hurdles, time 16 2-5 seconds.

The events were as follows: shot put, 1 place won by Wilson of A. & M., 2 place won by Newton of Carolina; hammer throw, 1 place won by Wilson of A. & M., 2 place won by Perkins of A. & M.; 100 yard dash, 1 place won by Wilson of A. & M., 2 place won by Newton of Carolina; 440 yard dash, 1 place won by Newton of Carolina, 2 place won by Pittman of Carolina; high jump, 1 place won by Newton of Carolina, 2 place won by Wilson of A. & M.; 220 yard low hurdles, 1 place won by Wilson of A. & M., 2 place won by Wilson of Carolina; half-mile race, 1 place won by Sifford of Carolina, 2 place won by McLendon of A. & M.; Pole Vault, 1 place won by Hunt of A. & M., 2 place won by Newton of Carolina; 120 yard high hurdles, 1 and 2 places won by Wilson and Curtis of Carolina; 1 mile run, 1 place won by Truit of A. & M., 2 place won by Reed of Carolina; broad jump, 1 place won by Wilson of A. & M., 2 place won by Newton of Carolina; 220 yard dash, won by Wilson of A. & M. first, and Jacocks of Carolina second.

Cornell University Medical College.

The course covering four years begins the first week in October and continues till June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

Remarks.

Professor Noble will leave in a few days for Europe. All who desire to see him before leaving must do so not later than Saturday.

Carolina for the first time meets Virginia here in a tennis tournament this spring. Virginia's representatives will meet Carolina's in both singles and doubles on Monday, May 8.

The Philological Club met Tuesday night. The following topics were discussed: The "Epicene Pronoun in English," Prof. C. A. Smith; "The Shifting of the Accent in Modern English Words," Prof. J. M. McBride, Jr.

The Morning German of Commencement, usually given by the Sophomore Order of T. N. E., will be substituted this year by an open subscription german. All those who desire to go to this german will please see H. McR. Jones as soon as possible.

Methods of Debating.

Nothing demonstrates more clearly the power of oratory on the public mind than did our recent debating contest with North Carolina. While we commend the foresight of the two gentlemen from North Carolina, in considering the effect on the audience, and while we praise their excellent speeches, we still believe that Georgia and the English Department is working on the right track; that a debate should be rendered in an impassive tone to a judicial audience, and not consist in metaphorical allusions fit for a memorial day service.

When two such men as Mr. Telford and Mr. Marshburn fail, there is something radically wrong, and unless we are grievously mistaken, the wrong lies in our literary societies, a priceless boon in our midst which we have shunned as if they were a pestilence.

We have seen them made political training schools, even those of us who expect to be farmers.

We venture to say that there are not two men in college who can face an audience with the ease that North Carolina's men did in the debate. This ease comes only with constant practice, and Phi Kappa and Demosthenian are the only two institutions of the University of Georgia set apart solely for this purpose.

While we have received two successive defeats at the hands of North Carolina, let us not condemn our method of debating, for in the last five years, under the new regime of debating, we have won twice from North Carolina, and twice from Sewanee, making a percentage of 66 2-3 won: two off from home, two at home.—Red and Black.

The Medical Commencement.

The graduating exercises of the Medical Department will be held in the Chapel tomorrow night. There are nine graduates this year.

The address will be given by Dr. Albert Anderson, of Wilson. The candidates will be presented by the Dean, Dr. H. A. Royster, and the diplomas will be presented by the President.

Music will be furnished by the University orchestra.

Senior ball invitations have come and can be got by purchasing a commencement ticket. Come early before all the invitations are gone.

Death of Mrs. Collier Cobb.

Mrs. Collier Cobb died in the Watts Hospital, Durham, Thursday. The seriousness of her illness was not known to the college community and the news of her death was very unexpected. The event caused sadness to many friends here and cast a gloom over the community.

Mrs. Cobb was, before her marriage to Professor Cobb a year ago, Miss Lucy Martin Battle, daughter of Hon. R. H. Battle. She was born in Wadesboro Oct. 14, 1861. After the war her family moved to Raleigh Mrs. Cobb visited her uncle, Dr. K. P. Battle, and other Chapel Hill relatives often before her marriage and was well known and liked here. Since coming to reside in the village she had made many acquaintances among the students and her hospitality and kindness made them all her friends. Her death is a loss to the college. We express the sentiments of the student body in offering expression of deepest sympathy to the bereaved family.

Mrs. Cobb was distinguished by her devotion to the church and to charities. For years she was organist and a member of the choir. She was a woman of fine talents and influence.

The funeral was held in the Chapel of the Cross Friday afternoon at 6 o'clock and the burial took place at sundown in the village cemetery. Her baby, Richard Battle Cobb, who had died the day before, was buried in the same grave. A large crowd attended the funeral. Among these were many of her relatives and friends from a distance. Her old pastor, Rev. I. McK. Pettiyer, of the Church of the Good Shepherd, was among them.

Mrs. Cobb was by right of birth a University friend. Her family have been prominently connected with the institution for generations. Her father is secretary and treasurer of the University. Her uncle was president and is now a professor. Her three brothers are alumni. These are Dr. Lewis J. Battle, Washington, D. C.; Mr. Edward L. Battle, of Edgecombe, and Mr. W. K. Battle, of Raleigh Mrs. Carolina Stitt, wife of Capt. William Stitt, of Charlotte, and Mrs. Rosa, wife of Dr. Robert Miller, of Goldsboro, are her sisters.

The Boys.

The number of members in "The Boys" is increasing every day and a great deal of interest is now being shown by the members.

A French class in conversation has been organized under the supervision of Dr. Bruner and every afternoon at 2:30 the members of the class meet to converse in French.

Those who intend going to Europe this summer on cattle boats are: Dicey Winston, Frank Gatlin, Jim Barry, Hubert Gudger, Bill Robinson, Theo. Cheshire, Bob Reynolds, Brutus Noble, Beef Wrenn, Pud Latta, Judge Clark, George Butler, Allen, Covington, Joe Armstrong and several others.

Parties will go to Europe also from Davidson College and the University of Tennessee.

Hadley and Heath respectively. Drake flew out to Thompson. Heath fanned. Temple walked, but was left on first as Harris fanned.

Fifth inning: Carolina got two hits this inning, but nor uns. Winborne and Emerson both fanned. Then Sitton hit safe to center field. Winston followed with a dinky hit past second. But Stem flew out to Asbury leaving Sitton on second and Winston on first.

In this inning A. & M. did all of Her scoring. With two men down A. & M. with three hits aided by three errors netted three runs in this inning. Staples fanned. Eskridge singled to center. Asbury hit to Sitton and was safe on fielders' choice, Sitton throwing Eskridge out at second. Hadley followed with a single to left. Winborne fielded the ball and threw to Gudger at third to catch Asbury, but Gudger dropped it and thus Carolina missed her chance to shut A. & M. out, for this would have been the third out. On next ball Hadley went to second. Then Knox singled to right field and Asbury and Hadley scored. Knox went to second on the throw home to catch Hadley. Drake hit to Cheshire and was safe on his error, Knox going to third. Winston threw to Gudger to catch Knox, but the ball went by and Knox scored, while Drake went to third. Heath fanned.

Sixth inning: Cheshire hit a hot drive to center field. He stole second. James and Gudger flew out to center field. Thompson went out pitcher to first.

Temple fanned. Harris was safe at first on Stem's error and went to second. Staples went out on foul fly to Winston. Eskridge was out Emerson to Stem. This was a pretty pick up, Emerson getting it almost behind first base.

Seventh inning: Winborne led off with a single to center field which was too hot for center fielder to handle and he went to third. Emerson hit to second base and was safe on second baseman's error. Emerson went to second on next pitched ball, Sitton singled to right field and Winborne and Emerson scored. Winston flew out to Drake. Stem walked. Cheshire singled over second base and Sitton scored. Stem went to third and on Asbury's error went home. In the meantime Cheshire ran around to third. Carolina wanted to finish the inning and as it was fast getting dark Cheshire walked off of third and was put out, and James was told to fan out. But umpire Meade decided that it was too dark to continue the game and so he knocked out Carolina's half of the seventh inning, A. & M. thus winning by a score of 3 to 1.

Tabulated score for the six full innings follows:

CAROLINA WINS BOTH GAMES.

FIRST GAME 6 TO 1.

The first game of the season between Carolina and Virginia on the Hill Thursday afternoon was Carolina's from the start. It at once developed into a pitchers' battle and Sitton had the better of it. Adams, Virginia's crack pitcher, who held Yale down to one run, was decidedly in the air and from the first inning with one run for Carolina, it was clear that he had an off day. Carolina pounced on him at the start and never let up until he was taken out in the sixth inning. But Sitton and Virginia has been trying ever since to explain it. Winston called for the spit ball, Sitton spat, and Virginia fanned. That is the story of Virginia's side of the game. One of the features of the game was Council's fanning. He absolutely refused to stay on the Hill that night.

The features of the game were Sitton's pitching, striking out seventeen men, and Thompson's hitting, getting three hits out of four times up. More than three men faced Sitton in no inning, except in the second and ninth. In the second four men came up and in the ninth five.

Carolina's scoring was done in the first, fourth, fifth and eighth innings. In the first inning Winston got base on balls, Cheshire singled, Worth got base on balls and Thompson was hit, forcing in Winston. In fourth inning Thompson and Stem singled and Winborne sacrificed, bringing in Thompson. In the fifth, Carolina scored three runs by two three baggers, two bases on balls, and Gudger being hit. With two men down, Cheshire walked, Gudger was hit by pitched ball, Worth knocked a three bagger and scored, both of them. Thompson did the same and scored, Worth. Carolina added one more in the eighth. Emerson reached first on error of first. He stole second, and on attempt to steal third, ball was thrown wild and he scored.

Virginia's only run was stolen, that is, Pollard got on first on Sitton's error, stole second and third, and on ball coming out, the diamond stole home. This was as pretty base running as has been seen here since Archie Graham left.

SECOND GAME 3 TO 2.

Carolina defeated Virginia in the second game at Greensboro by a score of 3 to 2. This was one of the most exciting games ever seen in Greensboro, and Virginia was not beaten until the last man was retired. A heavy rain storm broke up the game after Carolina had been retired in the ninth inning, the game being an eight inning affair. Virginia had little chance of scoring though, for Sitton was pitching in great form and had the Virginians completely at his mercy. Sitton and Winston again did the star stunts for Carolina, and again as in the previous game, proved themselves the star battery in the South. Sitton was simply unhittable, his spit ball causing man after man to head the argument attempt to find the ball. His bases on balls however, proved costly, both runs directly resulting from his liberality. Pollard was in the box for Virginia, and though hit very hard by the Tar Heels, he kept his hits fairly well scattered. Eleven safeties were registered against him and three earned runs.

Georgetown 7, Carolina 2.

Georgetown defeated Carolina in a slow and uninteresting game by the score of 7 to 2. Costly errors on part of the Carolinians gave Georgetown nearly all their runs, while Carolina's runs were due to the wildness of Georgetown's pitchers. Drennan started the game for Georgetown, but was taken out at the end of the fifth on account of wildness, Ayer succeeding him. Thompson pitched six innings for Carolina and was batted hard by the Georgetown men, but managed to keep his hits pretty well scattered. Winston and Moore were the battery for Carolina after the sixth, and they succeeded in blanking their opponents during the remainder of the game. Martell for Georgetown played a star game. He hit a ball far over the left field fence for a home run, and was robbed of another homer by a brilliant catch by Winborne. Emerson's work at second and the battery work of Winston and Moore were the features of Carolina's play. Carolina lacked the snap and vim displayed by them in the previous games, but the fact that they had just licked Virginia twice, more than explains the seeming lay off.

The Commencement banquet.

Judge R. W. Winston, of Durham, has accepted an invitation to deliver the address at the Society banquet Commencement. Mr. C. W. Miller will be the toast master. The other speakers will be Messrs. W. T. Shore, J. K. Wilson, Graham Kenan, C. C. Barnhardt, N. A. Townsend and A. C. Dalton. The committee in charge hope to make the banquet, which has proven itself one of the most pleasant of Commencement occasions, a more distinct success than it has ever been before. Special effort has been made to get a satisfactory menu, and the decorations will be very complete. The committee will do everything possible to make the occasion attractive, and if the students are there they will not fail. The larger the number of students present, the more the alumni and every one else will enjoy it. The banquet itself is worth staying to Commencement for, and the more that stay the better the banquet will be.

Tabulated Score for the Season.

Following is the official batting and fielding averages of the team of 1905, compiled by M. Orr. The Wake Forest game in Raleigh is left out, as no record was kept of the game.

Easter Dance.

The annual Easter dance took place here May 4th. It was led by Mr. H. Stuart Lewis, assisted by Messrs. Allan Morrison and Hampden Hill. The hall was beautifully decorated in Carolina colors on account of the Virginia game. The following couples participated:

Mr. Graham Kenan with Miss Isom, Mr. Hubert Hill with Miss Caro Gray, Mr. J. T. McAden with Miss Willa Norris, Mr. Daniel Rowle with Miss Mary Fowle, Mr. Lykes with Miss Nannie Rogers, Mr. Murphy with Miss Webster, Mr. James Barry with Miss Aycock, Mr. T. O'Berry with Miss Loula Macdonald, Mr. Bernard with Miss Hume, Mr. Askew with Miss Harris, Mr. Mills with Miss Dunnington, Mr. Foye Roberson with Miss Mary Ella Moore, Mr. Hubert Haywood with Miss Gertrude Winston, Mr. Robert Calder with Miss Margaret Alexander, Dr. and Mrs. Henderson, Dr. and Mrs. Mangum, Dr. and Mrs. Pratt, Dr. and Mrs. Alexander, Mr. John Sprunt Hill, Mr. Alf. W. Haywood. Staggs: Messrs. Curtis, Worth, Cheshire, J. Gudger, Coach Lawson, Cox, Cheshire, T., McMullan, Winston, Emerson, Morrison, Gilmer, Haywood, T., Bridges, J. R., Moore.

It is a pleasure to acknowledge that the TAR HEEL is indebted to Mr. Manlius Orr for reporting most of the games this season.

THIS is the last number of the TAR HEEL that will be issued before Commencement. It is delayed by the fact that the scorer, who reports the games, was away until Sunday night and was engaged in the tennis tournament Monday and Tuesday. The Athletic Editor, Mr. Ross, is also president of the Tennis Association and had his time taken up entirely by the tournament. The other working editor was away and the honorary editors were sufficiently engaged in allowing their names to grace the paper. To avoid the delay was impossible.

THE baseball season just closing has been a great success. Carolina is proud of her team, not because they won the most important games, but because they did their best. That they won was a most pleasant incident, but only an incident. The men who will get sweaters for representing North Carolina on the diamond this spring are true Carolinians. Every one of them played for his Alma Mater, and threw all his power and spirit into his work. The team was a unit; every man played his part of the game and helped his fellows. The result was a season of victories.

It is not our purpose to speak of individual men. The tabulated score given in another column is sufficient comment. But there are three men who have conspicuous places not shown in the score. The first of these is Coach Lawson. He is worthy of all the honor the friends of Carolina will give him. His skill and knowledge of the game are all that could be desired of him as a teacher of the game. But a coach needs, as much as skill manliness. Men now in college have seen Carolina have coaches who did not have this quality. But Lawson has shown by his firmness, dignity and gentlemanly conduct that he is a coach worthy of the name,— a man. Winston is equally deserving of praise. His influence on the team was of the greatest value. He had his place safe and there was not a more desirable place to be had. But when several places on the team became vacant and a reorganization was necessary, he said to the coach, "Put me where you need me." He went behind the bat, and, when a pitcher was needed he filled the bill. The third man is Moore. He was a faithful scrub, and a good cheer leader. And, when unexpectedly he got into a game, his influence was invaluable.

THE small number of students who stay to Commencement is an occasion for frequent remarks. The smallness of this number makes Commencement much less pleasant for the students who do stay and for visiting alumni. Efforts have been made repeatedly to make the exercises more inviting. And the efforts have been successful, but the students have not found out the fact. The banquet of the societies was a step in this direction. This year there will be two new features. All the faculty will be in the academic procession on Commencement day, and all will wear caps and gowns. There will also be a subscription dance open to all. This dance will take the place of an order dance, and credit is due Ball Manager Jones for instituting it.

Every part of Commencement is open to every University man, and it is his duty to take part in the exercises and help to make them successful.

Carolina Wins Tennis Meet from Virginia.

Carolina met Virginia here Monday and Tuesday in the first tennis meet with Virginia ever held on the home grounds and defeated her. Virginia invited Carolina's team to Charlottesville last year, and it is a pretty well accepted thing that the two universities are to play each year alternating between Charlottesville and Chapel Hill.

This meet consisted of doubles and singles. Virginia's representatives were W. N. Page and J. C. Packard. Carolina's were H. L. Fry and M. Orr. The doubles were played Monday afternoon and were won by Virginia. The court was in a bad fix caused by the recent rains. Virginia won the first, second and fourth sets, Carolina winning the third. The games in all four sets were 6 to 4. The singles were played Tuesday afternoon. Fry beat Packard three straight sets. The games were 6-4, 6-3, 6-2. Orr beat Packard three out of four sets. The games in sets were 8-6 won by Packard, 6-3, 9-7, and 6-4. Carolina's men showed a lack of team work in doubles, but clearly outclassed Virginia in singles. Carolina won two out of three events, thus winning the meet.

Senior examinations are now on, having begun Wednesday. The regular period begins on the 16th,

Cornell University Medical College.

The course covering four years begins the first week in October and continues till June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

THE MEDICAL COMMENCEMENT.

Nine Graduates—Address by Dr. Albert Anderson.

The Graduating Exercises of the Medical Department of the University were held in Gerrard Hall May 4. Dr. W. T. D. Moss opened the exercises with prayer.

Dr. Albert Anderson, an influential physician of Wilson, then gave the address. It was full of thought and practical suggestions. Throughout the address the speaker was earnest and seemed to have a message for thoughtful men only. After the address Dean Hubert A. Royster presented the candidates for their diplomas which were delivered by President Venable. Those receiving their diplomas were Charles Everett Conwell, Quinton Henry Coake, John Bessall Cranmer, John Donnelly, A. B. 1899, Mont Royall Farrar, Joseph Newitt Moore, Leone Burns Newell, A. B. 1900, Ralph Saunders Stephens, Lorenzo Stephens Webb.

Music was furnished by the University orchestra.

Track Team Prizes.

The Durham merchants who are patronized by the students here, gave generous prizes in the preliminary track contest. In addition to these Mr. Hinton, the Raleigh tailor, also gave a prize. These gifts were all valuable and gratitude is due the donors for their generosity and for the interest they have shown in student affairs. The following is the list of the prizes, their value, and donors:

Pair of trousers, $8.00., given by A. C. Hinton, won by Wilson; chair, $7.50, by Royall and Borden, won by Wilson; pair of trousers, $8.00, by C. T. Parson, won by Jacobs; pair of Oxfords, $5.00, by Pridgen and Jones, won by Reed; silk umbrella, $5.00, by Sneed-Markham-Taylor, won by Curtis; meerschaum pipe, $5.00, by W. M. Yearby, won by Pittman; hat, $3.50, by W. A. Slater Co., won by Singletary, S.; dozen photographs, $6.00, by Waller Holladay, won by Newton.

Preparing for Commencement

Memorial Hall is being overhauled preparatory to Commencement. The roof has been repaired and painted. All broken window lights have been replaced, and most of the wood work has been painted anew. The seats are already arranged in the hall; in the future they will not be taken out, for the hall will be used only at Commencement.

A change that has been made is a small platform in front of the main stage. This is for the Seniors to stand on when receiving their diplomas. The Seniors instead of sitting on the stage, will occupy front seats reserved for them on the main floor. As the names of half-a-dozen are called they will mount the steps of the rostrum and be presented with their sheepskins. The increase in the number of graduates has made this necessary. This year there is less room on the stage than there has been heretofore, because the members of the faculty will all have places on it.

The following Seniors have been selected as Commencement orators: H. S. Lewis, I. C. Wright, W. K. Perrett, J. B. Robertson.

Memorial Day.

The Veterans and their hostesses, the Leonidas Polk Chapter of the Daughters of the Confederacy, had possession of the campus Wednesday. The old soldiers assembled on the campus and marched to the beat of their aged drummer to the well. There they passed the time pleasantly till noon, when they marched to the foot of the campus to partake of the dinner prepared for them by the ladies.

At 3.30 the exercises in the chapel took place. Major Cain introduced the speaker, Dr. Hume. Dr. Hume was a chaplain in the war and his subject was, "Leaves From the Note-book of a Confederate Chaplain." He told eloquently of his experiences, and of his acquaintance with leading men of the Confederacy. At the completion of this address the crowd repaired to the cemetery to decorate the graves of the soldiers buried there.

Music was furnished by the University band and the quartette.

Captain Stem, of the Ball Team.

The baseball team did itself proud in electing Mr. Fred B. Stem, '07, captain for next year. He has done the work of first baseman well this season, and Carolina did not have a better fielder last year. He knows the game and has the confidence of the college and of the players. A better man could not have been elected.

Dr. Raper Lectures

The only faculty lecture we have had this year was delivered last week by Dr. C. L. Raper, before an audience that filled the chapel. His subject was: "Some Achievements and Possibilities in Southern Wealth Producing." We regret that lack of space has prevented a full report of the lecture. It was entertaining and very instructive. An analysis of the conditions of the Old South and the New, from the economic point of view, was given, which was enlightening to the audience.

Wilson Captain of the Track.

The students of the University will be glad to know that Mr. W. M. Wilson, of the class of '05, has been elected captain of the track team for 1906. For three years he has been a member of the varsity track team, and this year he succeeded in covering himself with laurels by breaking the Southern record in both the low and high hurdles. He was captain of the team of 1904, and on account of his brilliant track work this spring he was re-elected to the captaincy.

Infer-Society Banquet.

The banquet of the Societies will be given as usual Monday night of Commencement week. All who expect to be present are requested to hand in their names to T. G. Miller without delay. The admission fee must be paid not later than May 25.

The Magazine editors elected for the next year are: Editor-in-Chief, J. K. Wilson, Phi; Associate Editors: Phi, J. A. Parker, J. B. Palmer, H. L. Sloan; Di, O. S. Mills, R. M. Brown, W. L. Mann. Business Manager, W. B. Love. Assistant Business Manager, R. A. Her-ring.

COMMENCEMENT

A GRAND SUCCESS IN EVERY RESPECT.

One Hundred and Tenth Annual Commencement a Great Occasion—A Record-breaking Graduating Class—Splendid Speakers and Welcome Visitors—Banquets a Delightful Feature.

The Commencement of 1905 was a notable one. There was every thing to make it delightful. It was thoroughly a University affair. Those in charge of each department used most successful efforts to make every feature one that could be enjoyed by every University man and every visitor. Everything was in harmony. In all the speaking there was not a false note. In none of the social affairs was there any evidence of aught but the truest University feeling.

And the people had a good time; everybody, from the patriotic freshman to the senior; from the pretty girl who ate streaked candy under the ancient oaks to the gay creature of society who graced the Senior Ball; from the alumnus of a year's standing to the graduate of half a century ago; men and women, all enjoyed it. The recollection will be bright in their memories. They should remember it, for they saw one of the largest academic processions that ever entered Memorial Hall; they heard able preachers; they heard speakers whose influence is great in the State and Nation; they met with people; in short, they saw a University Commencement.

THE SERMONS.

Sunday was, as usual, taken up with the two sermons. The morning sermon, the baccalaureate, was delivered by Rev. Charles S. Gardner, of Richmond. His text was: "I am come that ye may have life more abundantly." The speaker is an eloquent man. His address was an earnest plea to young men not to allow themselves to be blinded by materialism and a greed for gold.

The part of this morning service that will linger longest in the memories of the audience is the prayer of Professor Williams for the graduating class. It was a farewell and god-speed from a devoted teacher and citizen.

In the evening Rev. William Meade Clarke, formerly of Chapel Hill but now of Richmond, preached before the Y. M. C. A. Dr. Clarke's sermon was intensely practical and was an urgent appeal for the practical as opposed to the theological and dogmatic in religion. It was a fine presentation of the idea that "To the pure all things are pure." The sermon was received with interest.

THE INTER-SOCIETY BANQUET.

The banquet Monday night was the one feature of Commencement that was not a complete success. There was one thing lacking—there were not enough students there. Arrangements had been made for the most pleasant banquet we had ever had. The menu was never so good before. The decorations were a great improvement on those of the preceding banquets. The alumnus speaker was one of the most distinguished men in the State. With these circumstances the banquet could not fail to be an exceedingly pleasant occasion. But there was no throwing off the slight feeling of incompleteness that the empty seats near the door occasioned. The alumni felt it and the student felt it. But in spite of this the banqueters, old and young, had a good time. Mr. Boutell was a guest.

The banquet was opened by the address of welcome by the toastmaster, Mr. C. W. Miller. This was responded to on the part of the alumni by Mr. R. H. Battle. During the dinner the following toasts were responded to:

"The Societies," by Mr. C. C. Barnhardt.

"The Modern System of Debating," by Mr. Graham Kenan.

"The Societies and Culture," by Mr. Archie Dalton.

"The Societies and the State," by Mr. J. Kenyon Wilson.

After the toasts and after the dinner the address of the evening was delivered by Judge R. W. Winston, '79. Judge Winston began with a witty introduction and a reference to the Chapel Hill railroad. He expressed the earnest hope that Chapel Hill would soon be connected with the outside world. Then he came to his address which was on "The Point of View." He spoke first of the importance of the point of view and of the influences that narrow it. The University, he said, is distinguished for the breadth of its point of view. The true University man is loyal to his organization only so far as being so means being true to his Alma Mater. He closed his address by proposing this sentiment:

"The University of North Carolina true enough not to be dependent upon money gotten from illegal sources—wise enough not to be allied with illegal trusts or combinations—brave enough never to have monkeyed with populism—good enough to recognize merit in rags, and liberal enough to provide for every worthy son of the State—secure in the affections of the people, our University, once and always—now and forever."

Judge Winston made the speech of a broad-minded and able man.

After the banquet the members of each society went to their halls where alumni reunions were held.

CLASS EXERCISES.

Tuesday morning the class exercises were held in the Chapel. And it was then that the people saw that the seniors were sad. The president of their class was not with them. The exercises were held, but the one who should have been the most conspicuous figure was absent. President Townsend was confined to the infirmary by an attack of pneumonia. The class had ordered a splendid banquet to present to him on this, the class day, but his condition would not permit him to receive either visitors or flowers. Vice-President Barnhardt took his place and read the address that had been prepared by Mr. Townsend. After this the following papers were read:

The Class History, by Mr. J. V. Howard.

The Class Prophecy, by Mr. A. H. King.

The Last Will and Testament, by Mr. C. W. Miller.

Mr. I. C. Wright stated the purpose of the class to present the class gift during the commencement of 1915. More than fifty dollars has been raised already for the purchase of this gift.

THE ALUMNI MEETING AND THE PRESENTATION OF THE GYMNASIUM.

When the class exercises were over the alumni took charge of the meeting. Dr. Venable read two letters from Judge W. P. Bynum, the first announcing his desire to erect a building as a memorial to his grandson, and the second presenting the building to the trustees. The letters were the straight forward statements of a noble man, expressing simply, briefly and clearly the wish to honor the memory of a noble young man, a favorite grandchild, and the hope that the building would be of value to this University. The following is the letter to the Trustees:

"CHARLOTTE, N. C., May, 1905.

"To the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina:

"DEAR SIR:—With your permission, I have caused to be erected upon the grounds of the University, a gymnasium, intended for the use and benefit of the students, and in memory of a grandson who died before his graduation at this school.

"Naturally, the place desired and selected for this building was the University of North Carolina, an institution that has accomplished and is accomplishing so much for the educational growth and prosperity of the whole State.

"With the hope that this building will be of some assistance in this great work, I respectfully and cordially present the gymnasium to the Board of Trustees of the University of North Carolina.

Most respectfully,
W. P. BYNUM."

Dr. Venable voiced the sentiment of the entire University in speaking his regret that the modesty and infirmities of age of Judge Bynum prevented his presence at the presentation exercises. The building was accepted by Dr. R. H. Lewis in a speech as simple and eloquent as the words of the giver. He spoke briefly of the record made by William Preston Bynum, Jr., during his two years of residence in the University and quoted the words of the dean of the faculty: "I have been teaching thirty-two years and have known many fine students and young men, but young Bynum's name always comes first to my mind when I think of them." We give two extracts from Dr. Lewis' speech:

"In the dawn of a manhood of such rare promise, with the glow of the east shining on his bright young face, 'God's finger touched him and he slept.' But his is not the sleep of oblivion. He will never be forgotten as long as the records of this institution remain and its walls stand. Among the very foremost on its long roll of honor extending back more than a hundred years, his name is writ in indelible ink, and on the front of this beautiful building it is carved in stone that will withstand the 'tooth of time' for centuries to come.

"There could not have been devised a more fitting memorial to a college boy than this. Nothing appeals more to lusty youth than athletics in all its forms. The gymnasium is the center of this department in the University life—it is its very heart. And therein is enshrined for future generations of manly young men the name of William Preston Bynum, the name of both grandson and grandfather ever to be held in grateful remembrance.

"It may be a mere fancy, but the architectural style of the building, it seems to me, is most appropriate. While very handsome, it is very simple, as befits a people whose motto is Esse quam videri. It is a square building and in this respect I trust symbolical. It stands firm and strong, 'four square to all the winds of heaven.' And so I hope will ever stand the Athletic Association of the University of North Carolina to the athletic world—straight and true, firm and strong, four-square against all temptations to achieve success by trickery or deceit, remembering that defeat with honor is worth a thousand victories besmirched. The general Athletic Association, which is essentially the student body, is the chief maker of college opinion. May this beautiful building of theirs be to them as a temple of honor, from which emanates such influences that no man guilty of dishonorable conduct, either on the athletic field or in the class room, can continue to live within its shadow. In such a consummation would the beautiful character in whose honor it has been erected be indeed fitly commemorated."

After Dr. Lewis' speech Hon. Chas. R. Thomas made the alumni address. The speaker talked somewhat of the days of his college life and the record of his class. He then spoke of the great advance in ma-

THE TAR HEEL each year devotes an editorial to asking the students to stay to the next Commencement. Apparently these editorials are of no avail. The students simply cannot be made to realize that Commencement is a splendid opportunity for them. But it is not the purpose of this piece to speak of these men. There are other men in the University who stayed this year and whose presence was a drawback. These men took no interest in commencement, and, instead of giving their aid and support to the events that depended upon the students for success, used their influences against such events. Unfortunately for themselves, they refused to mingle with their brother students and unfortunately for the University they had some influence. By all means, gentlemen, if you are so foolish as to refuse to be University men yourselves do not use your pernicious influence on the new comers who are ignorant.

THIS ISSUE completes the current volume and ends the work of the present editorial board. The editor desires in closing his connection with the paper to thank the Athletic Association for the honor done him and to gratefully acknowledge his indebtedness to the members of the board who have aided in the editorial work. The most conspicuous of the latter are Messrs. Ross and Reynolds.

terial welfare made by the University since his student days. The closing part of the address was taken up with a mention of the problems that confront University men as men of the nation. Mr. Thomas was very eloquent.

THE ALUMNI LUNCHEON.

This was, as always, one of the happiest times of commencement. There was a large and enthusiastic crowd present. Col. Kenan, President of the Association, knew how to preside over a dinner, where, he said, there must be a mixture of eating and of business. Toward the close of the dinner he called on President Venable, who made his yearly report to the Association. One of the most interesting statements in this report was the remark that $27,000 of the $50,000 necessary to be raised to receive Mr. Carnegie's gift is now in sight. The first payment toward this was received from a woman graduate of the University. Dr. Venable requested that a committee be appointed to have charge of raising this money. The following committee was appointed: Dr. Venable, Dr. Smith and Dr. Alexander from the faculty and Messrs. Geo. Stephens and E. M. Andrews from the alumni.

Mr. S. M. Gattis was then called upon to act as toastmaster. He was a capital one. The following responded to toasts: Fred Carr, Col. Killebrew, J. C. Horner, J. C. McNeill, Dr. Battle, J. A. Lockhart, Jr., Congressman J. L. Gudger, L. Patterson, J. Y. Joyner, Rev. A. L. Betts, J. S. Hill, Dr. C. D. McIver, H. Weil, Maj. J. W. Graham, C. C. Barnhardt and Congressman Boutell.

The officers of the Association were re-elected.

THE DEBATE.

The commencement debate was won by the Phi, and Mr. Kerr won the Bingham medal as announced in another column. Lieut.-Gov. F. D. Winston presided and L. W. Parker, of Hertford, was secretary. The query was: Resolved, That Congress should confer on the Interstate Commerce Commission full power to regulate railway traffic rates, subject to review by a Court of Transportation.

The debaters were: Affirmative—Phi, J. S. Kerr and J. A. Parker; negative—Di, W. L. Mann and V. L. Stephenson.

The judges were A. W. Haywood, of Haw River, George Connor, of Wilson, and J. C. Horner, of Oxford.

After the debate the President's reception was held in Commons Hall. The rain caused the absence of many who would have been present. There was a good crowd present, however, and all evidently enjoyed the occasion.

GRADUATION DAY.

The academic procession Wednesday was the most imposing that any student now in the University ever saw. The list below shows the large number of graduates. These as well as most of the members of the faculty wore caps and gowns and they made a long line as they marched two and two from the Alumni to Memorial Hall. The class was so large that it was impossible for them to find a seat on the rostrum. They occupied the two front rows of seats on the main floor.

By a wise change in the programme the speeches were put second. After prayer by Rev. A. L. Betts, '80, Mr. Boutell delivered the commencement address. This gentleman had already been on the Hill for several days and had made friends of the University. Something good was expected from him and no one was disappointed. His address showed the devotion of a patriot and the master mind of a statesman.

Cornell University Medical College.

The course covering four years begins the first week in October and continues till June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

COMMENCEMENT.

He opened with some personal references that were exceedingly pleasant, telling of his first acquaintance with North Carolina through the letters received during his boyhood by his mother from his father, a Union soldier fighting in North Carolina. He felicitated himself on the safe return of his father and on his own enjoyable visit to the Old North State.

Mr. Boutell showed an astonishing acquaintance with the history of this State. And he referred his young audience to the splendid record of their North Carolina ancestors as furnishing splendid examples of right living and noble patriotism.

The main part of the address was a masterly review of the fundamental changes that have gone on in our government since its foundation. Lack of space prevents a fair account of this address. It can only be said that the young men of the audience were urged to keep in mind as citizens the principles of the fathers. When a change is necessary and is right let it come, but let there be no changes simply for the sake of "getting along."

The speaker closed with an address to the graduating class. He said:

"My last words shall be to the young men of the University. Be true to the noble traditions of your Alma Mater, cherish always the friends and companions of your youth. Hold fast through life to the love of home, of kindred and of neighbors. Ennoble your simplest tasks by faithful service. Be loyal to your town, to your State, to your country. Emulate the lives of your fathers, and let the words of Hewes, of North Carolina, be your guide, "My country is entitled to my service, and I shall not shrink from her cause, even though it should cost me my life."

After Mr. Boutell had spoken the commencement speakers contested for the Mangum medal. The speakers and the subjects of their orations were:

Walter Kenneth Perrett, The South's Movement toward a World Point of View.

Judge Buxton Robertson, America as a Liberator.

Isaac Clark Wright, The Best Conditions for Southern Progress.

Henry Stuart Lewis, The American Spirit.

Mr. Robertson won the medal. The judges were Messrs. E. W. Pou, J. S. Manning and S. M. Gattis.

BENEDICTION.

*Presented May 4, 1905, at the closing exercises of the Medical Department.

Mr. Boutell.

With many Commencement orators it is the fashion to reach Chapel Hill not earlier than Tuesday evening or if possibly Wednesday morning. Not so with our speaker this year. Mr. Boutell reached Chapel Hill Monday, after having spent several days traveling through the State. He had a message for the graduates of the University of North Carolina and he fitted himself as thoroughly as he could for the delivery of that message. He studied North Carolina history and literature and people. Then he threw himself thoroughly into the spirit of the University. As a result, he came among us, not as a foreigner, but as a man. There was the heartiest exchange of friendship and cordiality between him and our people.

Mr. Boutell said he had a delightful visit, and there is every reason to believe that he enjoyed it thoroughly. He was part of the whole Commencement. At the inter-society banquet, at the alumni luncheon, at the president's reception, at the class exercises, and at the dances he was a welcome and interested guest. His daughter, Miss Alice, who accompanied him, was also heartily welcomed. And apparently she too will remember pleasantly Chapel Hill Commencement.

Appointments in the Departments.

President Venable made the following announcements of the appointments in the different departments of the University: T. F. Hickerson, instructor in mathematics; I. W. Roe, assistant in pharmacy; W. H. Kibler, B. F. Royall, T. P. Cheshire, assistants in biology; B. H. Perry, J. B. Jeffress, assistants in geology; E. E. Randolph, C. W. Martin, L. M. Kelly, and G. L. Paddison, assistants in chemistry; T. B. Higdon, assistant in French; Dr. L. R. Wilson, assistant in German; J. C. Hines, Jr., assistant in physics.

Mr. M. H. Staçy has been granted leave of absence for a year. Mr. Stacy will spend the year studying at Cornell.

Baseball Sweaters.

Sweaters or stars were awarded to the following baseball players this year: Sitton, Winston, Cheshire, Stem, Gudger, Worth, Thompson, Winborne, James, J. B., Calder, Emerson, Moore.

As the design for the baseball sweaters is new this year, the Advisory Committee presented each of the players with a sweater.

Lawson Invited to Return.

At its last meeting the Advisory Committee unanimously voted to invite Coach Lawson to coach the team for next spring. To make so early the election is quite out of the custom, and it was done as a compliment to the splendid work done for this year's team by Dr. Lawson. The resolution of the Committee expressly stated this as its object.

Enlargement of Athletic Field.

At its last meeting the Advisory Committee ordered that work in enlarging and improving the athletic field be begun without delay. The contract for this work was let to a Durham contractor during the winter, but the bad weather and the necessity for the team's using the field constantly made necessary the postponement of the work.

The amount of money on hand is not sufficient to increase the capacity of the grand stand and bleachers in addition to the other work. This will have to wait until more money is secured. The drainage, grading, and enlargement, however, will be carried out now.

Team Managers.

The managers of all the athletic teams for next year have been elected. Mr. Stewart, who was last fall elected manager of the football team, has resigned, because he doubted his ability to return to the University next fall, and also because he realized the serious handicaps that beset a player manager. Mr. A. H. Bahnsen has been elected to succeed him.

Mr. T. Grier Miller was elected manager of the baseball team.

Mr. Burke H. Bridgers will manage the track team.

HANDSOME
Floral Designs!

Our designs are made well, carry well, keep well. They have a distinctiveness unlike all others. Nothing ordinary, not just the proper thing every time. Not just a conventional design, but the unusual kind. Changelessness and sameness forever in designs we have learned to eliminate. We are supplying just now particularly handsome CARNATIONS, also WHITE and PINK ROSES, superb flowers, long stiff stems.

Vol. 14.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 29, 1905.

No. 1.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

ON THE GRIDIRON.

A Review of the Football Outlook for Carolina—More Men Wanted to Enter the Contest.

At present the outlook for the football team is not so promising as many have predicted that it would be at this time of the season. The number of candidates is by far smaller than it has been in former years at this time, and as a consequence the coach finds it necessary to play men in positions other than those they are accustomed to play in.

Coach Warner in speaking of the schedule said: "It is one of the hardest schedules I have ever seen, and as a consequence it is necessary to have almost two Varsity teams, or in other words, a good substitute for each position on the team."

As may be seen on the field every afternoon, there is an insufficient number of candidates to pick from. In college there are now scores of big heavy, well-developed men, who should show college spirit enough to come out and help Coach Warner produce a winning team for Carolina. In order to send out a winning Varsity eleven to represent us on the gridiron, it is necessary to have a good, strong, well trained second team, and to have this the big men in college must come out.

There is special need for good quarterbacks. There is at present only one quarterback on the Varsity and unless some more good men come out for this position it will probably be necessary to take some Varsity man from his place in order that he may play quarter in case Sadler is hurt.

So far both teams have been handicapped by accidents which have occurred to several of the best men. Gardner's knee is at present giving him a good deal of trouble, while Abernathy's thigh has been bruised up for several days. Tuesday afternoon while running through signals, Seagle had the misfortune of having his nose broken by colliding with Traylor. Sadler, the quarterback, has been unable to play for the last week on account of a sprained ankle.

Saturday afternoon there was such an insufficient amount of material that the regular afternoon scrimmage work had to be dispensed with. Under such conditions it is utterly impossible for Coach Warner and Capt. Roberson to develop a winning team. As yet neither Varsity nor scrub team has been picked and now there are good openings for every one who will come out and work. Even if there is not enough college loyalty among the students to bring them out, there are other inducements. Mr. Lemmert, the tailor, has offered three fine sweaters to the three scrub men doing the best work during the season, and, moreover, all those scrubs who do faithful work during the season will receive a free trip to Norfolk on Thanksgiving day to see the Carolina-Virginia game, the greatest game of the season for us and for Virginia.

The team belongs to every single student in college, and if one is unable to play he might at least come out on the side lines during practice time and give a few yells for those who are striving to make a good team. So far a dozen good college yells haven't been given on the side lines this season. Now without interest among the student body and without sufficient material what can we expect?

It is now time that we begin to think seriously of our situation, as our first game of the season, which will be played with Davidson College on October 7 in Charlotte, is drawing near. Davidson last year played us a tie game but we feel sure that no such thing will happen one week from Saturday.

But if such should happen whose will be the blame? Coach Warner, the captain and the faithful ones are doing all in their power. The students alone thus far, in the furnishing of recruits and in enthusiastic support, have neglected the building of the team.

The following Varsity players of last year are back and are playing for their old positions: Townsend, left end; Seagle, right guard; Storey, right tackle; Winborne, half. Capt. Roberson, who played full last year is playing half at present. Some of the others are: Abernathy, playing for left tackle; Gardner for guard; Traylor, guard; Sadler, quarter; Snipes, full; Snipes and Parker, centre; Brown, of Lafayette, Singletary and Pittman, end.

Coach Warner, into whose hands the training of the eleven has been placed, is a Cornell man, having played on the Cornell varsity in 1901 and 1902 and captained the team once. In 1902 he was guard on the All-America. In 1903 he coached Cornell and last year the Sherman Institute Indians, of Colorado, with marked success in both instances.

Buncombe County Club.

The boys from the "land of the sky" held their first regular meeting this year. About twenty five old men were present from which the following officers were elected: V. V. Williams, president; E. E. Connor, vice-president; Hampden Hill, Secretary and Treasurer; committee on entertainment, R. R. Reynolds, J. W. Haynes and C. G. Weaver. This club holds regular monthly meetings at which several members read papers or make short talks on the different industries of the county. Buncombe has reason to be proud of the interest her boys are taking in her development and we see no reason why the boys from other counties should not organize. A special meeting is to be held soon at which new members will be enrolled.

THE BILL OF FARE.

The Lyceum Course of Entertainments as Arranged by the Faculty and the Societies.

The Star Lecture "prospects" are always of interest at this season. The time honored "football prospects" take precedence of them of course. But the lecture course in its own way means much to the college and to the village. Chapel Hill differs in several respects from a modern metropolis. The crowded theatre with its far-famed stars are not of us; the festive circus no longer wends its way through the wilds of Orange, seeking to educate the natives with its ten great moral shows combined. Never yet has even a modest stock company discovered that we are a spot on the map; so the lurid melodrama and the "specialty girls"—they, too, are not of us.

It is easy to see, therefore, that the lyceum course, breaking in on our life of seclusion, is naturally of some interest. Those who have had unpleasant experiences with lyceum courses and are consequently suspicious of them on general principles, wish to know their fate. Others look forward to them with genuine eagerness, while a third class think of them only as a means of getting their money back.

That the last idea adds an element of pleasure is beyond all question. The student joins a society, and after having bade his money a fond farewell, flings it, with averted face, into the coffer. Then when a month later, after the matter has slipped entirely from his memory, he is handed a ticket to an entertainment "free for nothing"—why, it's like being president of a life insurance company. What's that? Suspense? Well, just restrain yourself, we're there already. So here goes.

The first entertainment will be by Opie Read, the well known author, who will be here on October 14. The others are:

Prof. Chas. Lane, October 20.

Otterbein Male Quartette, January 22.

Wendling, who is well remembered here, February 17.

Dr. John P. St. John, March 3.

Edwin Brush, March 15.

Press Association Notes.

The Press Association held a meeting recently and organized for the coming year. Plans for the year's work were submitted by the dozen or more present. This association is probably the only one of its kind in the Southern States. Certainly it is a great help to the newspaper men on the Hill, who not only help themselves but in turn are helped by them. The officers elected were:

John A. Parker, president.

R. R. Reynolds, vice-president.

B. H. Perry, secretary.

S. H. Farabee, treasurer.

ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION MEETS

Officers and Editors Elected for Coming Year—Other Matters.

A large number of students gathered in Gerrard Hall Friday afternoon, 22d, for the annual election of the Athletic Association. In the absence of the president, Mr. Graham Kenan, who has not returned to college, the meeting was called to order by Vice-President H. M. Emerson.

The unanimity with which most of the officers were elected detracted somewhat from the interest, there being only a few close contests. As a result of the election, the following men were chosen:

Messrs. J. V. Howard, president of the Athletic Association; J. R. Moore, vice-president; Holt Hayward, secretary and treasurer; J. K. Wilson, '05, graduate member of the advisory committee; P. E. Seagle, '06, undergraduate member; V. L. Stephenson, '06, editor-in-chief of THE TAR HEEL; J. S. Kerr, '06, J. F. Spruill, '07, J. H. D'Alemberte, '07, W. D. McLean, '07, M. Orr, '08, associate editors.

In accordance with the regulation adopted by the Advisory Committee last spring making the position of assistant editor-in-chief an appointive one, Mr. S. H. Farabee, '07, was selected. Mr. N. A. Townsend was elected business manager, and he appointed Mr. H. L. Sloan as his assistant. Mr. "Bully" Moore was unanimously re-elected, despite his fervid protestations, to the position of chief cheerer.

Mr. A. H. Bahnsen, manager of this fall's football team, then announced that Mr. Lemmert, of Baltimore, who has already attested his kindly interest in the University and especially in the athletic phase of our life, had favored us with another gift. Realizing the prime importance of a strong second team, the sacrifice made by each member of it and the value of any incentive to increased effort, Mr. Lemmert offers three sweaters to those three men on the second team who make the most progress between now and the Thanksgiving game. Coach Warner and Captain Roberson are the judges.

'07 Election.

The Juniors met Wednesday afternoon and elected the following officers:

E. C. Herring, president.
G. F. Leonard, 1st vice president.
T. W. Dickson, 2nd vice president.
O. S. Mills, secretary.
C. V. Cannon, treasurer.
S. H. Farabee, historian.
L. W. Parker, poet.
J. W. Haynes, orator.
A. C. Hutchison, statistician.
O. L. Hardin, prophet.
Captain of foot ball team, A. T. Morrison.

Manager of football team Hampden Hill.

Also at their meeting the class unanimously passed resolutions against hazing of any form.

After an interval of a few months THE TAR HEEL greets its readers once again this morning. Since the paper is not entering upon a new career, but merely, in common with the entire college community, taking a fresh start after months of relaxation, we are spared the necessity of informing an interested world either that "we are just embarking on the untried seas of journalism" or that "we have come to stay." The first would not be strictly true; the second we assume as a fact requiring no statement. We infer from the fact that from its very foundation to the present day the paper has had continuous existence that there is a niche in University life which THE TAR HEEL should and must fill. Just what this niche is, just what the functions of a paper published by the Athletic Association are, is a question about which differences of opinion have always existed, and probably, in the nature of things, will always exist. Each year a new board of editors assumes the task of issuing the paper; each year the board finds itself face to face with the same problem, of arbitrating conflicting claims, of giving to each phase of our varied life that attention to which it is entitled. Each year the problem is solved in the way which seems best to those in charge.

As we assume the responsibility and prepare to grapple with the problem, it is with little expectation of giving universal satisfaction, unless human nature undergoes a change. Certainly it would be more than any predecessor has accomplished. We have in mind as we write the experience of a certain business manager of this paper—to be safe, say fourteen years ago (we believe the paper has been established thirteen)—after sending the paper to an alumnus in New York for several weeks, he requested the alumnus to subscribe. His reply was, in substance, as follows:

"If you would devote something less than four or five columns a week to telling of defeats and more to giving one an idea of what is going on at the Hill, none would subscribe more readily than I. Otherwise, however, I prefer to be spared the weekly disappointment of reading it."

On the other hand is the individual who would give expression to his views after this manner: "The locals be darned. What I want is a detailed report of the individual plays of each game." And the demand of each, it must be admitted is, from his standpoint, right.

The horizon of him who successfully harmonizes these diverse views will not be limited in its scope to one department or one phase of college life. It will be as broad as University life is broad.

What, then, should the paper be? A mirror, reflecting the doings of all those who fall within our sphere? Yes. A means of communication which shall bind the distant alumnus to the scenes of his alma mater? Yes. But more than these. A conservator of all that is truest in University traditions, an influence making for a just conservatism on every question touching our life in this college world—that is our ideal.

The football season is on. Though the first actual contest with a rival institution is several days distant, the actual work of training the team began with the first day of the session. That it is essential to Carolina's prestige that she put out a winning team this fall is not a debatable question. The putting out of a winning team demands three things: first, material—a sufficient number of men having the grit, the energy and the weight necessary to a successful participation in the game; second, efficient coaching; third, the loyal, unwavering, enthusiastic support of the team on the part of students, faculty and alumni. The first of these, in a reasonable degree, we believe we have. The second we know we have. It is for us to say whether our team shall enter the coming contests discouraged by indifferent and lethargic support or inspired by the consciousness of our enthusiastic confidence.

Speaking of football, we trust that we may be permitted to hope that the coming season will develop from our football squad a safe, reliable goal kicker. The championship of the South was lost last year and the year before the title was dangerously imperilled by failure to kick a single goal. In each case the team as a whole had put up a magnificent exhibition of football.

Our debaters have received and are considering a challenge from the University of Virginia for a debate next spring. Virginia has invariably proven herself an able and honorable opponent in whatever field she is met and we trust that the debaters of the two institutions will succeed in getting together on the stipulations and have the contest.

To the New Men.

The new student who fails to join one of the literary societies will deliberately deprive himself of some of the most valuable opportunities for self-development afforded by the institution to which he has come, presumably, for self-development. The face to face meeting with fellow students, the acquirement of poise before an audience, the clash of mind against mind in the arena of debate, influence one as no other experiences can ever impress him.

It is true, of course, that many who are nominal society members have made no attempt to gain skill in debate; it is equally true that in most cases those very men are the most ardent advocates of joining a society. There is a social side, a strengthening of the ties of friendship, a widening of the circle of one's acquaintance, as well as a getting on the "inside track" of things, enjoyed by the society member, which can be found in the same way and to the same degree in no other organization.

LOCAL NOTES.

—In each of the societies the new men will be initiated next Saturday night.

—A new book by Dr. Smith entitled "Studies in English Syntax" will appear in the near future.

—Miss Ella Thomas entertained Monday afternoon in honor of Mrs. Milton Brown, of Salisbury, and Miss Mary Thomas, her sister.

—Each student of the University receives this copy of THE TAR HEEL free. The business manager will call on you next week to give you an opportunity to subscribe.

—The total registration at the Hill up to last night is 619. The grand total, including the medical department at Raleigh, is probably 645.

—Commons, the University boarding hall, opened up this fall under a new management, Mrs. Dickson being matron. There are at present 160 boarders, besides the waiters.

—A familiar sight on the football field these afternoons is the figure of ex-Capt. R. S. Stewart of last year's team, who is spending some time on the Hill, and is coaching the second team.

—Dr. Smith will publish in the November number of the Educational Review, New York, an article on "Honor in Student Life in Colleges and Universities." It was read before the National Educational Association at Asbury Park, July 6.

—After consideration of a number of bids the business manager of the Magazine yesterday awarded the contract for printing the Magazine to The University Press, which has previously published it. Work will begin at once and the Magazine will be issued some time next month.

—Dr. MacNider, the recent addition to the faculty of the medical department at Chapel Hill, has been appointed college physician for the fall term and may be found in his office in the old post-office building just opposite the Central hotel. His office hours are from 2 to 3 and from 7 to 8 p. m.

—A charter has been granted by the Secretary of State to Mr. Eugene M. Armfield, of High Point, Hon. Wescott Roberson, of High Point, and Mayor W. S. Roberson, of Chapel Hill, to organize a new bank at Chapel Hill. The authorized capital of the bank is $50,000. It will be a savings bank and its promoters expect to open for business in a few days.

—The Young Men's Christian Association is preparing to issue a directory of the students similar to that published last year and the year before. This enterprise, at first an experiment, proved to be a source of invaluable aid in locating students. The success of the Y. M. C. A. handbook has come to be proverbial, its constant use having won for it the title of "the Freshman's Bible."

—The Bynum gymnasium was reopened Monday, 18th, and is being extensively used. The instructor in physical training this year is Dr. Lawson, the well known coach of last spring's baseball team. Dr. Lawson will be assisted by Mr. Wardlaw, an expert in boxing, who will give lessons in the art. As formerly, the gymnasium is open to Freshmen on Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays; to upperclassmen on the other days.

—The baseball season is a good ways off but not too far off to be of interest. Capt. Stem, Thompson, James, J. B., James, W. D. Sitton, Patterson, Calder, Moore, Winborne and Emerson of last year's team are back. Among the promising candidates for next season's team are Cunningham, pitch, and Shull, Fox and Holt. Dr. Lawson, last season's coach was unanimously re-elected by the advisory committee at the end of last season.

—In accordance with what has become an annual custom, Dr. Venable addressed all the students of the University in Gerrard Hall on Friday, 15th. His remarks were directed largely to the new students, who comprise more than one half of the registered students today. He attempted to place them in touch with the spirit and the life of the University, that they might derive the greatest possible benefit from their stay here and acquit themselves in a manner worthy of the highest ideals of this institution. On Thursday, 21st, he spoke to the members of the Senior, Junior and Sophomore classes.

Football Schedule.

We publish herewith the schedule arranged for Carolina's football team this fall. It is probably more or less familiar to our readers on the Hill, but this is probably not true of our readers elsewhere. It is a schedule calculated, at first glance, to take one's breath away. With one possible exception there is not a cinch in the lot. Every team is a strong one, three ranking among the most powerful on the American gridiron. Never has Carolina had a better chance to distinguish herself than that afforded by the schedule below. This fact should inspire each Tar Heel football fighter to buckle to his work with grim determination to make the season successful.

The schedule follows:

October 7, Davidson, at Charlotte.

October 14, Pennsylvania, at Philadelphia.

October 21, Navy, at Annapolis.

October 28, V. P. I., at Richmond, Va.

November 4, Georgetown, at Richmond.

November 11, A and M. at Raleigh.

November 18, V. M. I., at Winston-Salem.

November 30, Virginia, at Norfolk.

The only regrettable feature of the schedule is that not a single game is to be played on the Hill. A game was scheduled with Guilford here for the 30th, but the abolition of football at Guilford cancelled this. Manager Bahnson asked Davidson to play us here but she declined. Since then he has made several attempts by telegraph to arrange a game here with South Carolina College but up to yesterday had heard nothing in reply.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Mr. Greene Berkley came in last Monday to stay a few days.

Mr. Hal Harris, '08, has returned to the Hill to resume his research work.

Mr. J. W. Bennett has been in Raleigh for several days having his eyes treated.

"Red Buck" Bryant ran over to Durham last week to write a little insurance.

Mr. T. N. McDiarmid, ex-'03, of Lumberton, is again in college studying law.

The many friends of Mr. V. Sitton were delighted to see him turn up last week.

Rev. Alfred R. Berkley, '00, has been visiting friends on the Hill for the past week.

Mr. W. S. Hunter was suddenly called home Tuesday to attend the funeral of his father.

Mr. A. W. Peace returned to the Hill Tuesday after having been called home to the funeral of his father.

Mr. W. T. Fisher, '03, who is studying law at Columbia University, stopped over a day or so last week.

Mr. W. B. Love, '06, manager of the Magazine, went to Durham last week in the interest of the Magazine.

Mr. W. C. Woodard, of Rocky Mount, stopped over a day or so last week with his son, W. C. Woodward, Jr.

Mr. Frank P. Milburn, architect for the new chemistry building that is being constructed was on the Hill last week supervising the work.

Messrs. H. V. Worth, Claiborne Carr, A. W. Haywood, J. F. Patterson, J. B. Ramsey, W. J. Bond, J. E. Hobgood, B. K. Laster, and W. M. Dunn were among the recent visitors on the Hill.

Mr. Lionel Weill, formerly known in college as "Dutchy," was here last week. Mr. Weill is contemplating taking an advanced course in chemistry, and expects to return to the Hill to take up his work.

S. S. Robins, '04, spent a few days on the Hill last week visiting his brother. Mr. Robins received the degree of Master of Arts from Harvard last commencement. He returned to Harvard Friday to resume his studies.

State were centered upon the University football team. He was greatly applauded.

Mr. J. K. Wilson and Prof. Herty each spoke at the meeting. Mr. Herty, who is the new professor of Chemistry, made a good impression upon the gathering. His reputation for encouraging athletics had preceded him to the University and his presence Friday night proved his devotion beyond a doubt.

The practicability of running an excursion to Raleigh was discussed, and almost the entire body voted its intention to go. So also in regard to an excursion to Norfolk.

The effect of this meeting was made evident Saturday, when a fair crowd of big men were out on the field.

Sigma Alpha Epsilon and Phi Delta Theta had no initiates.

Law Class Elects Officers.

The law class met Tuesday for the purpose of organization and elected the following officers:

N. C. Carter, president.

W. J. Sherrod, vice president.

C. C. Loughlen, secretary and treasurer.

N. A. Townsend, judge pro tem.

F. S. Hassell, solicitor.

T. W. Simmons, clerk.

J. A. Parker, sheriff.

L. T. Moore, coroner.

J. K. Wilson, class representative on University council.

Di and Phi.

Last Saturday night the Di and Phi Societies each held their first debate for the year.

The question discussed in the Di was: Resolved, that the tariff of the United States should be placed on a revenue basis. The question was awarded to the negative, and Mr. R. M. Brown made the best speech.

In the Phi the following question was debated: Resolved that the best interests of the United States are opposed to her permanent occupation of any portion of the eastern hemisphere, except for coaling stations. The affirmative won and Mr. Simmons was voted best speaker. Mr. J. B. Palmer resigned his place on the magazine staff and Mr. L. W. Parker was elected to succeed him.

'09 Joins the Procession.

The instinctive liking for early hours which pervades each Freshman class presents an interesting study in psychology. If it be winter, then the icy front steps of the Alumni, with the chill wind sweeping round the corners, at anywhere from 6 to 7 a. m. is to the Freshman heart an ideal substitute for a photograph gallery. If it be the season when political ambition runs high then either Battle's park or the third story Latin room (well fortified) in the New West is good enough for him.

The aforesaid Freshman class at the aforesaid time and the last named place assembled Tuesday morning under able and experienced generalship and elected the following officers:

Freeman, president; Gean, first vice president; Umstead, second vice president; McNilley, secretary; Bowan, treasurer; Coffen, historian; Barbee, class representative; Queen, orator; Jones, M. J., poet; Jones, W. H., prophet; Hurtle, statistician; Wilkins, janitor.

Training Table.

The training table for the football men started at Mrs. Tankersley's last week. The following men attend regularly three times a week: Roberson, Townsend, Brown, Story, Abernathy, Gardner, Winborne, Sadler, A. Snipes, Lefty Snipes and Coach Warner,

THE UNIVERSITY ORCHESTRA.

First Open Air Concert Given Saturday Afternoon.

The University Orchestra, so popular with the students last spring, made its initial bow for the session late Saturday afternoon. Practically every member of the band has returned, and it will probably be recruited from the students.

When the old students first heard the music Saturday, many planted themselves around the monument and Davie Poplar and there remained till the music had ceased. And it was good music too. Several men were heard to ask if the orchestra played for commencement, and when informed it did not, declared that it was good as the Richmond concern. This orchestra probably is classed below the professional bands; but to the average student there is none better. Besides, it is a part of the University.

So, when this orchestra sometime later on gives a little concert to help defray travelling expenses—for it, together with the Glee Club will surely visit a few cities—it is up to the students not to stay away. They should encourage the band to play on.

The Y. M. C. A. Rally.

At the opening of the fall term each year the Young Men's Christian Association holds a special meeting for the purpose of enlisting new students in the ranks of its Bible students. This meeting was held Sunday afternoon, 17th, in the college chapel. President Venable spoke first, recommending the organization as one which would work for good in their college life. Prof. E. K. Graham strikingly portrayed the lasting benefit to the individual himself and to others of effective, consecrated service.

After these addresses President Love outlined briefly the work of the coming year and a canvass of the audience was made for new members.

Changes in the Faculty.

Several changes have been made in the faculty of the various departments since last year. Dr. I. H. Manning, professor of Physiology, has been elected dean of the medical department in the place of Dr. Whitehead, resigned, who accepted a similar position at the University of Virginia. Dr. C. S. Mangum is now professor of Anatomy, Dr. Wm. DeB. Macomber, professor of Pharmacology, Drs. L. B. Newell and W. C. Richardson are demonstrators in Anatomy.

Prof. E. K. Graham, who was absent last year at Columbia University, is occupying his former position as associate professor of the English Language.

Mr. N. W. Walker, of the class of 1903, has been elected professor of School Organization. This department is a new one, designed to render assistance to the secondary schools of the State.

Mr. Frank McLean, '05, is instructor in English in place of E. D. Broadhurst, who is practicing law in Greensboro.

Mr. T. E. Hickerson, '04, is instructor in Mathematics, replacing Mr. M. H. Stacy who, is pur-graduate work in mechanical engineering at Cornell.

Dr. L. R. Wilson is instructor in German this year.

On account of the large number of students two new men have been added to the teaching force. They are: Mr. R. H. McLain, '06, assistant in Mathematics and Mr. W. L. Mann, '06, assistant in Latin.

Dr. Chas. Herty, who was elected professor of Chemistry has taken charge of his department.

Library Notes.

Much credit is due Dr. L. R. Wilson for his efforts to help the new men. He has arranged to take Freshman class in sections in the library and teach them how to use it. This will give every man in the class a better knowledge in one afternoon of how to use the library than a great many men heretofore have got in four years.

Dr. Wilson has instituted an alphabetical card system this year which is valuable also to himself and even more so to those who borrow books from the library.

All books in the Chemical, Physical, Zoological, and Geological departments were recatalogued during the summer.

The new shades in the library makes the lights much better. We are glad to mention all these improvements.

Worth Prize Men at Harvard.

Dr. Chas. Hughes Johnson, of the class of 1898, spent a day at the University last week on his way to assume his duties as professor of psychology at the Pennsylvania State Normal College. Dr. Johnson has just taken his doctorial degree at Harvard University, where he did work of high distinction in philosophy. Five winners of the Worth philosophy prize here have made fine records in the graduate school at Harvard: Dr. Johnson; Mr. E. P. Carr, Dr. Herman H. Horne, Mr. S. S. Robins and Mr. F. W. Coker. Both Dr. Johnson and Mr. Carr were given the Harvard Traveling Fellowship, and Mr. Carr held an assistant's place at Harvard. Dr. Horne, whose notable history of education is dedicated to Prof. H. H. Williams is now professor of psychology at Dartmouth College and a lecturer

Sophomore Election.

It is probably proven herself a formidable opponent in whatever field she is met and we trust that the debaters of the two institutions will succeed in getting together on the stipulations and have the contest.

To the New Men.

The new student who fails to join one of the literary societies will deliberately deprive himself of some of the most valuable opportunities for self-development afforded by the institution to which he has come, presumably, for self-development. The face to face meeting with fellow students, the acquirement of poise before an audience, the clash of mind against mind in the arena of debate, influence one as no other experiences can ever impress him.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

THE FOOTBALL SITUATION.

Injured Players Recovering—A Nery Scrub Team Giving the Varsity Some Lively Scrimmages.

The effects of the mass meeting which was held Friday night in inducing new candidates to put on uniforms and try for the football team were not long in making themselves felt. Monday and Tuesday afternoons forty or fifty men were on the gridiron and at one time three teams were busily engaged in practicing signals and new formation plays.

This week the coach has given several new plays and evidently they are ground gainers, for both teams have used them to good advantage. Never before have the scrub and Varsity elevens been so evenly matched. At present there is vim and interest from beginning to end. The scrubs show a nery persistence in their attempts to score against the Varsity, but as yet they have not been successful. More than once, however, they have come dangerously near success. In Tuesday's game the Varsity had a hard time crossing the scrubs' goal line, but finally by hard line plunges the pig skin was carried across.

With such an excellent coach and such a nery scrub team we feel confident that Carolina will send out a winning eleven of which we will be justly proud.

The students on the sidelines, with the assistance of the college band, have aided materially in putting life into the practice games. With a crowd of supporters filling the air alternately with "Yackety Yacks" and cheers for the scrubs, with a band on the bleachers discoursing inspiring music, one can't help but play his best. The presence of whole-hearted and noisy-throated backing has won games without number. The absence of such support in equally as many cases has meant defeat.

The men who were injured and caused the loss of three days of scrimmage work are now rapidly getting into good condition and are able to play in their old positions. Seagle's nose is about well and Sadler is again playing his position at quarter. Trailor, however, had his ankle badly wrenched in Tuesday afternoon's game and is now confined to the infirmary.

Just at present the leading topic of discussion is the Davidson-Carolina game in Charlotte Saturday. It is rumored that the Davidson eleven and its many supporters confidently expect to defeat Carolina, but that remains to be seen. Of course we fully expect to win, but not by a very large score. This year, it is reported, the Davidson eleven is stronger than ever before and with some of our men in a crippled condition we can hardly expect to run over them.

THE CHEMICAL LABORATORY.

A Magnificent Structure Which Will Be an Ornament to the Campus.

Last spring the State Legislature appropriated $50,000 for the erection of a chemical laboratory on the University campus. Work was begun on the building immediately after commencement and has proceeded as rapidly as circumstances permitted ever since. It is hoped that it will be completed in December, so that it can be equipped during the Christmas recess.

The need for the building had been felt for so long that it was determined that when an appropriation was secured a building ample for all necessary purposes should be erected. Dr. Venable told the legislative committee that not one cent less than $50,000 would be accepted; that to build a less costly laboratory would only entail greater loss in the future. The fact that he carried his point, if nothing else, justifies his position. Only $45,000 of the amount appropriated is to be used in the construction and equipment of the new building, the remaining $5,000 to be spent in the equipping of the old laboratory for the department of biology or of medicine. The department of biology decided to remain in their present quarters in the New East building so the old laboratory will be occupied by the department of medicine. Part of the $5,000 will be spent in improving the present quarters of the biological department.

The new building is located in the northeastern part of the campus, in the rear of the Alumni and Old East. It is to consist of two stories, and will contain abundant room for all the chemical students now in college with liberal allowance made for increased numbers in the future. It will be lighted, of course, by electricity, heated by the central heating system and will possess a thoroughly modern equipment. The need for a lecture room for the large classes, which was so keenly felt before, will be provided for by a spacious auditorium in the rear.

The building is constructed of pressed brick and when completed, in the opinion of experts, will be by far the handsomest building on the University campus.

First Year Med. Officers.

The first year Medical class has elected the following officers: Spitball Sitton, president. Royall, vice president. McCain, secretary. Adams, treasurer. Dunlap, chaplain. Shipp, coroner. Schromwald, poet. Thompson, historian.

Coach Warner and Mr. R. S. Stewart paid a visit to Durham Wednesday of last week.

ATHLETIC MASS MEETING.

A Gathering to Discuss The Football Situation And Arouse Enthusiasm Succeeds in Doing Both.

With the band playing, a great fire blazing and hundreds yelling, many students marched into the Chapel Friday night. The occasion was a mass meeting—the first of the season—and although many of the new men were a little wary of mass meetings, still an enormous crowd turned out.

The object of the gathering was, as President Howard said, to stir up enthusiasm and spirit among the students—to support the team, both with new men on the field and the cheerers on the lines. Mr. Howard's remarks were followed by a good talk from ex-Capt. Stewart, who urged upon the students the necessity of supporting the team. "Go out there on the field, you big men, and if you can take any man's job, why, do it. The team is not made yet."

Coach Warner also said a few words along the same lines as did Mr. Stewart. He said that he was told by people up north that he would find the men down here rather light but with sand in their gizzards. He came down here and was surprised to find such promising candidates. And then accidents came doubly and laid out a number of men, and something must be done to strengthen the team. Unless heavy men show up at practice the chance for a successful team here is very slight.

Mr. Gardner addressed the students too. He did not want to butt in, he said, except to say a few things to those present. He indulged in a few pleasantries in which ex-Capt. Stewart figured largely, and made a good talk. Mr. Gardner declared, amid great applause, that he and Messrs. Sadler and Abernethy were not here merely to play football. They were students and their work at the end of the year would verify his statement. He said they had finished at A. and M. and then had cast their lot with the University. Mr. Gardner also explained that the eyes of the whole State were centered upon the University football team. He was greatly applauded.

Mr. J. K. Wilson and Prof. Herty each spoke at the meeting. Mr. Herty, who is the new professor of Chemistry, made a good impression upon the gathering. His reputation for encouraging athletics had preceded him to the University and his presence Friday night proved his devotion beyond a doubt.

The practicability of running an excursion to Raleigh was discussed, and almost the entire body voted its intention to go. So also in regard to an excursion to Norfolk.

The effect of this meeting was made evident Saturday, when a fair crowd of big men were out on the field.

Football Notes.

Gleaned From The Washington Post.

George Foster Sanford, who coached Virginia last year, has taken charge of the Yale candidates.

Pennsylvania's squad numbers forty-four, just enough for four elevens. Pennsy's coaches say this year's crop of candidates for the football eleven is the finest in the history of the school.

Yale backs are said to be the swiftest and most powerful line hitters that have represented Eli in years. The team promises to be especially fleet of foot. All the men, however, are light, not a 200 pounder among the candidates.

Mike Murphey is said to have discovered a Japanese student at Pennsylvania who can play football and who is an expert at jiu-jitsu. A rare combination and one that should make trouble for an opposing team.

Hurry Up Yost is directing the coaching of the Vanderbilt squad in Nashville, Tenn., and a crowd of 1,000 spectators is congregating daily to listen to the two words that have done so much to make Yost famous.

Amos Foster, a western prophet is the first man to pick Harvard as a winner over Yale. He is coach of the Cincinnati University team and has made a careful study of the football situation in the East.

An exchange gives the following list as among the candidates for the Carlisle team: Scouchuk, Man Who Forgets, Eagle Man Wahoo, Brave Thunder, Little Old Man, La Roque, Miquel Tomahawk, Two-Dogs-in-the-Snow, Chestnut-on-the-Fire, Pabawena and Pecongga. How's that for a line-up?

Our Opponents.

College Topics, Virginia's semi-weekly, has the following on the football situation. Three of the teams mentioned will be met by Carolina this fall. Some of the players mentioned are well remembered here.

"Virginia has some able opponents this year in Carolina, V. P. I., the Navy, Georgetown, Bucknell and the Indians. Carolina is sure to put up a great fight for Southern honors. Blacksburg has imported several old players, among them Carpenter. She will also have Bear from Carolina. Virginia's withdrawal from the State association enables V. P. I. as well as herself to disregard the four-year limit and from the present outlook it seems that V. P. I. is reaping the benefit of the arrangement. Both the Navy and the Indians are reported strong. The Indians will have their entire last year's team back again. Georgetown is preparing to open up her coffers and produce a hustling team."

Topics says that while the squad is promising in numbers, weight is badly needed.

No sight is more calculated to inspire with hope the University man than that of the rising chemical laboratory. Only those who know the tremendous disadvantages under which the members of the Department of Chemistry have been forced to do their work for the past few years can realize what this addition to the University's equipment means to the department and to the entire institution. Handicapped by the lack of equipment, compelled by the stress of circumstances to prosecute the work in quarters scarcely more than one half as large as necessary, and which were in very truth a menace to the health of those working therein, the department has proceeded with its work, faithfully, unflinchingly, and with a remarkable degree of efficiency. It would seem to an outsider almost impossible that under such circumstances work could have been accomplished which places this University in the very forefront of the leading institutions of America. And yet facts, undeniable and un-denied, furnish abundant proof of the truthfulness of this statement.

This high estimation in which we are held is the outcome, we believe, not so much of the brilliant personal achievements of the teaching force, as of the training and character of the work of the men sent out with the stamp of the University upon them. The laboratory made famous by the discovery of carolinium and berzelium had been making itself felt in the world of science through all the years of furnishing inspiration and of laying in others the foundation of future usefulness. This, we believe, is characteristic of the entire University, and the most conclusive proof that it is securing the accomplishment of its highest purposes.

But the thoughtful observer will see in the erection of this building more than even a much needed strengthening of our equipment. It marks—not a turning point—but a milestone in the progress of the enlightened public sentiment of the State. It marks a changed attitude on the part of the State, the creator, towards its own University, the creature. The long bitter years through which the college fought against opposing forces for its very existence, when grinding poverty and sectarian hatred combined to crush her, are familiar history to those who have followed with heartfelt interest her career. Those days are gone, never to return, and we would not recall them now save that we may gain fresh inspiration from a fuller appreciation of our present position. The University has been playing its noble part in the history of the State, preserving its highest ideals, and moulding the character of its citizenship for a century and a decade. The chemical laboratory will be the first building ever placed on this campus by the act of the State. It has been nearly five years since that recommendation was made by a legislative committee, which deserves to be immortalized as a specimen of unintended irony, tragic, however, to this institution. When the pressing need for a chemical laboratory was pointed out so forcibly that even they were convinced of its necessity, the committee recommended that, "inasmuch as the other buildings of the University have been supplied by private generosity the Committee recommends that this need be supplied from the same source."

But now—all this is changed. At no time in her history has the college meant more to the people of the State than it means today. Never before has pride in the institution and loyal enthusiasm for it pervaded to such an extent the entire citizenship of the State. No wonder that when we view in the light of her achievements in the past the possibilities of the future we are optimistic as to her career.

It is unnecessary to say that U. N. C. expects every man who represents her on the gridiron Saturday to do all in his power to erase the disgrace of last year's nothing-nothing score. We know that every man is determined that neither that nor any similar score shall be posted at the close of the game.

There are just two questions we have never been able to answer satisfactorily. The first is, What is life? The second: Why are students forced to stumble about dark landings and darker stairways in the old buildings? Loss of time, risk of injury and invariable loss of religion results from each venture outside one's room at night.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Messrs. John A. Parker, Reynolds, and Traylor now have their feet under the training table.

—Thursday, today, has been settled upon definitely for the issuance of this paper and upon this day it shall appear.

—Dr. J. E. Mills will pass through in a few days en route to Germany, where he will do advanced work in Chemistry.

—The Charlotte Observer says that Davidson is preparing to send a large delegation of students to Charlotte Saturday to back the Davidson team.

—At the last meeting of the Philanthropic Society, Mr. W. A. Jenkins, '07, and Mr. O. R. Rand, '08, were elected Soph-Junior debaters. This debate will take place some time in November.

—The Westminster League of the Presbyterian church has purchased one of the old tennis courts back of the Carr building from the A. T. O. fraternity and will fit it for use within a few days.

—Dr. J. M. McBryde, who was last year associate professor of English Language during Mr. E. K. Graham's absence, is now dean of Sweet Briar Institute, Va., an institution for the higher education of women.

—Mr. Herbert Williams, of the Sophomore class, was taken ill with fever last week and left Tuesday for his home near Asheville. His cousin, Mr. Victor Williams, '07, accompanied him to Asheville, returning Saturday.

—Mr. James Parker, a miller of Chapel Hill, dropped dead at his place of business in the western part of the village Saturday morning. The immediate cause of his death was heart failure. Mr. Parker leaves a wife and several children.

—Dr. Charles L. Raper, associate professor of Economics and History, was seized Wednesday night, 37th, with a severe attack of asthma, which confined him to his room for several days. He was able to meet his classes again Monday however, and is improving.

—Quite a good deal of repair work is being done in the hall of the Di Society. Old seats have been repaired and new ones, made necessary by the increased enrollment, are being added. A room adjoining the society hall has been fitted up, at considerable expense, for use as a committee room.

—Much interest has been aroused among the students by the coming presentation of the dramatization of Thos. Dixon, Jr.'s famous novel, "The Clansman" tonight. A large number will probably go to Durham to take it in. It is said that every livery stable conveyance in Chapel Hill was engaged several days ago.

—Prof. J. W. Gore, who was compelled to suspend work last year in order to rest his voice, has again assumed charge of his department. Prof. G. C. Crawford, who last year filled Prof. Latta's place in the department of Physics, now has a position with an electrical engineering company in New York city.

—The Dialectic society is making an effort to secure the portrait of Maj. Wilson, of Morganton, to add to its collection of portraits of distinguished alumni. Maj. Wilson was one of the surveyors of the Western North Carolina railway, considered "one of the seven wonders of the world," winning by this work renown among his craftsmen the world over.

—University people throughout the State will be interested to know that Mrs. Julia Graves, widow of the late Professor Graves, who moved to New York two years ago has returned to Chapel Hill, where she and her daughter, Miss Mary, will reside in the future. She has moved into the house where Dr. Wheeler lived, and Dr. Wheeler has taken the dwelling formerly occupied by Dr. R. H. Whitehead.

—Mr. W. D. Weatherford, the secretary of the Southern College Young Men's Christian Association, was on the Hill the first of the week. Monday evening he talked to the members of the association in an informal way. On Tuesday evening he delivered an address to a good sized audience on "The glory of a clean record." It was a strong, forceful presentation of the subject.

—On last Saturday morning the moot court met at the usual hour and the first case of the year was tried. The case was a suit for damages against the Southern Railway. Messrs. Carter, Bean and Wilson, J. K. represented the plaintiff; while Messrs. Gash, Townsend and Weaver appeared for the defence. The defendant won. The court convenes every Saturday morning at ten o'clock and all who so desire are cordially invited to attend.

—Mr. Pearson, the Durham clothier, has made a generous gift of a $25 suit of clothes to the scrub making the most improvement between now and Thanksgiving day. Mr. Frank McLean, the presiding genius of last year's TAR HEEL, asks us to state in this connection that through inadvertence he failed to mention in the columns of this paper a similar gift by Mr. Pearson at the close of the baseball season last spring. The suit, awarded to the man with the best batting average, was won by Mr. Thompson.

—THE TAR HEEL has received a copy of the invitation which is being sent to alumni of the University in New York in regard to University Day. It is proposed to have an informal dinner Thursday evening, 12th, with, of course, responses to toasts and reminiscences of college life. The committee on the banquet is headed by Judge Van Wyck, ex-mayor of New York. The others are: Dr. Chas. Baskerville, professor of Chemistry in the College of the City of New York; Rufus L. Patterson, one of the vice presidents of the American Tobacco Company; Lindsay Russell, formerly of Wilmington; Ralph H. Graves, of the New York Evening Post; George Gordon Battle, ex-assistant district attorney of New York county, and a well-known barrister.

—Mr. Ernest Sifford, who graduated last year in chemistry, visited the Hill Tuesday. Mr. Sifford has been working in Birmingham, Ala.

Mrs. W. H. Battle Dies Suddenly.

Mrs. William H. Battle died suddenly Friday evening at the home of Professor Collier Cobb. She had been in feeble health for some time, but her death was, nevertheless, rather unexpected, resulting from heart failure. She had just returned from a visit to a neighbor and dropped dead while on the front porch. Medical aid was summoned, but to no avail.

Mrs. Battle was the widow of the late Dr. William H. Battle, and lived in Lylesville. She is survived by two children, Mr. K. P. Battle, Jr., of Winston-Salem, and Miss Pattie Battle. Another daughter, who died several years ago, was the first wife of Professor Cobb.

The remains were taken to Lylesville Saturday afternoon and interred.

PERSONAL PARAGRAPHS.

Dr. Joel Whitaker, of Raleigh, paid a visit to the Hill last week.

Mr. Burk Bridgers, '03, stopped over Tuesday on his way to Washington, D. C.

Mrs. J. J. Thomas, of Raleigh, stopped over a day last week with her son, J. J. Thomas, Jr.

Prof. McGehee, of the law department, spent from Saturday till Monday in Raleigh on business.

Mr. W. B. Love was in Greensboro last Friday and Saturday in the interest of the University Magazine.

Mr. K. P. Nixon, '05, who is a student at the Trinity law school, spent several days on the Hill last week.

Prof. M. C. S. Noble was off the Hill several days last week attending an educational rally at Elizabethtown, Bladen county, where he delivered a speech.

Mr. R. L. Vernon, of Charlotte, traveling passenger agent for the Southern Railway, was here last week making preparations for the Norfolk excursion on Thanksgiving Day.

Dr. Venable went to Raleigh Friday to attend a meeting of the executive committee of the Board of Trustees of the University. He returned home Friday evening, and left for New York on business Saturday connected with the University, which will keep him there for several days.

Di and Phi.

Both societies held their weekly meetings last Saturday night, and as this was the time for initiation of new men, there was quite a lively time in each hall.

At their meeting the Di took in seventy-two new men, and nine were received at former meetings, making the total of new members this year eighty-one. Owing to the fact that there was so much business before the house, it was impossible to hold the debate.

The Phi initiated 52 men, and one was received the 23rd, making a total of 53 men. The following question was debated: Resolved, that the time has come when a young man in North Carolina should vote with the Republican party in affairs of State interest. The negative won the decision and Mr. James Small McNider made the best speech. Also Dr. Hume delivered an interesting talk on the importance of the society work.

On next Saturday night the question for discussion in the Di is: Resolved that the South offers greater opportunities to the young man than the North. Second class on duty, first section affirmative. The Phi will debate the following: Resolved, that trusts should be controlled rather than exterminated by the government. Section I. on duty.

University Day.

From the reports coming to the University from various sections it appears that alumni associations all over the State are preparing to celebrate University Day, Oct. 12th, in an appropriate manner. The general alumni association set on foot, last year, the movement of which these meetings are the result. It was suggested to local associations that each local organization have University Day in some fitting way. The suggestion met with favor, and in many towns of the State there were, on Oct. 12th, enthusiastic meetings of University graduates. At some of these banquets were spread; others took the form of a smoker; some were informal gatherings. At several of these meetings plans for helping the University, by spreading the knowledge of her work and worth or by making material gifts, were discussed, and from nearly all of them words of loyal interest and encouragement were sent. The indications are that in practically all of the towns of the State there will be meetings of this sort this year. The programme for the celebration here has not been completed.

Freshmen and Societies.

Saturday night was one long to be remembered by the new man and now that it is gone 150 Freshmen breathe more easily. Perhaps (for who shall say?), the anticipation was worse than the reality. There was no lack of coaching, certainly, on the part of the Sophs, and even the Seniors, before the initiations.

"When you climb over the stag's horn chair blindfolded, do not snag yourself," was the advice given by an old Senior to a sixteen-year-old Freshman, as he showed him the picture of the chair in the Record.

"I hope none of you have sore or bruised hands," said a sympathetic Junior who had retired from society just to express his sympathy to about fifty waiting Freshmen.

Some of the new men are sometimes persuaded to have their clothes padded. A hundred different things—gloomy and tragic—are always intimated to the Freshmen on these occasions. When they get inside they are called upon by some upper-classman to make a little speech. All these things the new men must endure; but the thing that comes nearest killing the average Freshman is to hear some Y. M. C. A. leader move that the initiation fees be reduced from $50 to $35. And then maybe the president will declare the motion out of order on the ground that the method pursued is not the proper one for amending the constitution. It has ever been thus, and it will ever be.

The Moral of The Ancient Mariner.

This story is not "published exclusively" nor for the first time. The Charlotte Observer is entitled to the credit for first publishing it to the world a few weeks ago. But aside from the local color imparted by the fact that the incident purports to have occurred on Chapel Hill soil and was related by one of our own professors, it will bear repetition for its own sake. The boy in the story will command the sympathy of every one who has read the poem referred to. But hark to the story:

It was an examination for the removal of entrance conditions in English.

"What is the lesson taught by 'The Ancient Mariner?'" was the question fired at the student.

"Punctuality," replied the conditioned one.

"What!" exclaimed the professor. "How in the world do you figure that out?"

"It's this way," said the boy. "If that old soak had been on time at that weddin' he wouldn't have had to listen to all that mess."

DAVIDSON DEFEATED.

The Mecklenburg Boys are Shut Out in an Interesting Game at Charlotte.

Carolina defeated Davidson at Charlotte last Saturday afternoon by a score of 6 to 0. It was the first game of the season for both teams and this fact lent an added interest to the contest. The Davidson team came down backed by supporters 300 strong and Davidson rooters soon o'erran the town. The Observer says "Chapel Hill (why will they call us Chapel Hill?) did not make much of a showing on the streets, but eleven strong, husky chaps, with powerful limbs and well knitted muscles, lay in wait at the Central Hotel. The Davidson rooters seemed excited and nervous." At the appointed hour more than 1,000 interested people were on the sidewalks. The following account of the game, the only available one, is from the columns of the Observer.

The game was called at 3:45 by time keepers Dr. J. P. Monroe and Col. Walter Murphey. Drs. Baxter S. Moore and Brodie C. Nalle were the referees. Davidson took the ball and the southside of the field. As the game commenced the crowd, about 1,000 strong, circled closer and began to break across the ropes. The spectators were enthusiastic from the very beginning. Davidson rooters were everywhere and very demonstrative. As the game progressed the crowd circled closer.

Davidson kicked off and put the ball in motion. It was caught on the 20-yard line. In the first or second mix up Parks McKay was knocked out for a moment or two. The ball remained with Carolina, but the Davidson boys kept it close to where it started. The Varsity team kicked the pigskin from behind the line and the Presbyterians carried it back. Carolina got the ball on the 47-yard line, and Abernethy made a drive for 12 yards. The ball was lost to Davidson on her 30-yard line. Lacey started for a run around the left end, but Sadler tackled him after he had gained about 17 yards. Davidson bucked the centre, but to no purpose. Two yards were made around the left end. The Presbyterians resorted to a kick; Sadler caught the ball and carried it back 25 yards around the left end. Roberson took the ball for a 5 yard gain, and Abernethy followed to the same effect. Roberson made 15 yards around the left. Abernethy hit the center for four yards, and Roberson followed with seven. Sadler tried the center, but failed to make a gain. Carolina was offside, and went back five yards. Carolina kicked and Lacey caught the ball, but Singletary made a brilliant run and landed right on top of him, before he could move out of his tracks Davidson kicked and Sadler caught and carried the ball back 30 yards. Carolina lost 15 yards on a fumble, but Abernethy made 10 of it back around the left end.

This sort of playing kept up for the entire first half of the game which continued 20 minutes. Neither side made a point. It was very evident from the start that Carolina could hold the Davidson boys in check, but it was doubtful if the stronger team could score.

The Varsity boys made a touch-down and kicked a goal within six minutes after the second half was called. Abernethy, Gardner and Sadler bucked the center and made gain after gain. After that the Davidson boys rallied and made a desperate fight to keep the score at 6, and it was successful. The playing of Lacy, a tiny fellow, and Lane was very fine. Lane did some clean, clever tackling in the line. Abernethy and Gardner did first class work for the Varsity boys. Sadler, Winborne, Snipes and Roberson made a splendid quartette behind the line. Abernethy gained every time he struck Davidson's line.

When Carolina made the goal there was great excitement. The crowd scattered all over the grounds and it took some time to clear the field for the game to continue.

The last few minutes of the game were intensely interesting, for the Davidson boys put forth every effort to keep the Varsity boys from gaining. The game was exciting from start to finish and did well for green teams. The spectators were pleased. They felt as if they had gotten the worth of their money, and no serious accident had marred the pleasure of the afternoon.

The two teams lined up as follows:

Carolina.	Davidson.
Winbourne, L. H.	Hicks, Denny
Parker, C.	Stodard
Seagle, R. G.	Daniel
Abernethy, L. T.	Croom
Singletary, R. E.	Moore

FRESHMEN ELECT SOME MORE.

At a Second Meeting a Second Ticket is Declared Elected—An Interesting Contest Follows.

THE TAR HEEL has received the following communication which it is asked to publish:

At a called meeting of the Freshman class at 11:30 p. m. Sept. 30th, '05, Mr. Ray took the chair and after the meeting had been called to order, the following officers were nominated and seconded; after which the ballot was taken which resulted in the election of the following officers.

- President, R. M. Bryant.
- 1st Vice Pres., Tom S. Dalton.
- 2nd " " Sam N. Clark.
- Secretary, M. S. Huske.
- Treasurer, Donald Ray.
- Historian, H. P. Osborne.
- Class Representative, W. G. Thomas.
- Orator, Jim S. Patterson.
- Poet, Donnell Gilliam, Jr.
- Prophet, J. E. Cooper.
- Statistician, Duncan McRae.
- Captain Foot Ball Team, Leslie Perry.
- Manager Foot Ball Team, Jas. T. Hanes.

After the election of officers it was moved that a copy of these minutes be sent to The Dean and Editors of "Tar Heel" respectively. Carried. There being no further business the meeting adjourned.

- D. Ray, Act'g Chairman.
- M. S. Huske, Sec'y.

There were present (and by proxies) ninety three (93) qualified Freshmen, which constituted a quorum, and also a majority of the Freshman class.

Our readers will perhaps remember that our initial issue contained an account of a Freshman class election, the ticket being headed by Freeman for president. The place of this meeting, as announced heretofore, was the third story of the New West; the time thereof a reasonable time before breakfast. We supposed at the time that this closed the season of politics, but this, it seems, was not the case. Some of the members of '09, being more ambitious than last year's class, which was abundantly satisfied with one election, straightway held another, the time of which was a half hour before the beginning of Sunday, October 1st, and the place the new athletic field on the west goal's 45 yard line. At this meeting an entirely new ticket, headed by "Red Buck" Bryant for president was nominated and elected. Then came the peculiar part. After having held two meetings and having declared two different tickets elected nobody seemed willing for both elections to stand. Those who had voted in one declined to recognize the other and as the class was divided against itself the matter was referred to the dean of the academic department, Dr. Alexander, for arbitrament.

Those who voted in the first election contended that in all corporate bodies a quorum is the only thing necessary to elect officers or transact any other business at a called meeting. They contended that they had a quorum, and as proof of this submitted to the dean 66 signed proxies. They maintained that inasmuch as their election was the first one held, was held in accordance with all Faculty rules and as a quorum was present, their election should take precedence of all subsequent elections, no matter how many voted in them.

Those who participated in the second election held (whether admitting or denying the contention of the others as to the general principles governing elections, we do not know) that it was customary in the University for a ticket, in order to be elected, to have a majority of the registered vote of the class; that the first ticket was not voted for by a majority and therefore was not elected; that the second ticket did receive such a vote, and in proof of this submitted for the dean's inspection ninety-three proxies.

Dr. Alexander's statement in regard to the matter in question is substantially as follows: "So far as power to decide such elections one way or another is concerned I have none; but since the matter was referred to me I have looked into it the best I could. So far as I can learn, it has for a long time been the custom in the University to have a majority before declaring a ticket elected. If we follow this custom it seems to me there was no election except the second."

And there you are. Meantime let the good work go on. We're waiting for a third election. It shall have a place in these columns no matter what it displaces.

Dr. Hume to Lecture.

Dr. Thomas Hume will leave Saturday for Norfolk, Va., to attend and to participate in the exercises of the centennial celebration of the First Baptist church of Norfolk, Dr. Hume's former home.

On Sunday night Dr. Hume will deliver the address of the evening on "Denominational Literature."

Next Thursday, 19th, he will deliver a reminiscent address at the dedication of the new Y. M. C. A. building at the University of Virginia, Charlottesville. This is also the occasion of a reunion of the surviving alumni of the University who established in Charlotteville in 1858 the first College Y. M. C. A. society in the world. Dr. Hume was the first charter member and the second president. His name is first on the roll.

"Bill Reid," the head coach at Harvard this year, will receive $7,000 for his three month's work. This is at the rate of $28,000 a year. It is estimated that Yost gets about $5,000.

The honor system is based upon the philosophic doctrine that human nature is white. At any rate, for it is evident that you object to that, it is based upon the idea that it is not all black. It has an honorable history in this institution; it is one of the chief sources of our pride in her. The only trouble with it as it stands today is that most of us have an erroneous idea as to the comprehensiveness of its scope. This misconception leads to innumerable inconsistencies. The student who is most scrupulously honest on an examination because he feels that in this field the "system" is in vogue is often as equally careless about the moral niceties in matters where he supposes the "system" does not obtain. This is the reason one so often searches for a newspaper or magazine in the library only to find that the article or the news note which was the particular object of his search has been carefully clipped by some considerate person who has preceded him. This is the reason that our librarian has learned to take precautions to preserve from mutilation books and periodicals containing attractive pictures.

It has never occurred to this student that to throw entirely open a library valued at many thousand dollars and permit each one of six hundred and fifty students to have free and unrestricted access to its contents, offering unlimited opportunities for vandalism and even theft, is an act prompted by the spirit which is back of the honor system and throws the student upon this honor as completely as any examination.

The honor system, from its own very nature, would fail in the work it was intended to accomplish in the development of character were its scope not broad enough to include every situation and every relation sustained by the institution to the student.

The fathers of the plan knew this and so constructed it. It is the students, themselves, who have failed to grasp this idea, and have thus, in many instances, brought the system into disrepute.

In almost every city of importance in North Carolina and in many which are far away, loyal sons of Carolina meet today to celebrate the natal day of their alma mater. Though separated by hundreds and thousands of miles of intervening space there is unity of spirit, unity of purpose, and harmony of action among them. Friends long separated are being thrown together once more. Reminiscences of days long past are being resurrected. A new bond of union is being established between University and alumnus. His loyalty to her is being intensified, his regard for the furtherance of her interests quickened and renewed. Wherever the assemblage, whether North or South, in public hall or at banquet table, there is one sentiment, one toast today: "The University—May she live forever!"

The first game of the season has been played and won. The score was not so large as it might have been; neither was it so small. On the whole, we have no reason to be dissatisfied. The team as a whole played hard, consistent ball, and the frequency with which long gains were made entitles the team to our confidence.

Next Saturday, October 14, will afford an opportunity to test the relative strength of Southern and Northern teams. North Carolina will grapple with Pennsylvania, who crushed Harvard by a large score last year; Vanderbilt goes up against the great Michigan team; Virginia and the Indians will tussle; and V. P. I. will try issues with West Point.

Di and Phi.

At the regular meetings of the Di and Phi societies last Saturday night each society received five new men.

Resolved, that the trusts should be controlled rather than exterminated by the government, was the question debated in the Phi. The question was won by the affirmative and Mr. Highsmith made the best speech.

The Di discussed the following question: Resolved that the South offers greater opportunities to the young man than the North. The decision was in favor of the negative and Mr. W. R. Jones was voted the best speaker.

Next Saturday night the Phi will debate the following: Resolved that the Southern Railway spur to University Station should be torn up and an electric line run directly from Durham to Chapel Hill. Second section on duty.

For the Di the following: Resolved that the United States should reform her Chinese exclusion act. First class on duty, first section affirmative.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Dr. Joel Whitaker, of Raleigh, a former star on Carolina's football team, has returned to college.

—A new section in French 1 has been created, Mr. N. A. Townsend, who has been appointed assistant in French, having charge of it.

—The Phi Chi, a medical order initiated the following men from the second year medical class: E. J. Scofield, E. N. Davidson, W. W. Greene, and Kitchen.

—A party composed of Prof. Alridge, of Trinity Park High School, Miss Alridge, Miss Dill, Miss Ritch and Miss McLees, spent a day on the Hill very pleasantly last week.

—The Philological Club met this week and elected the following officers: Prof. E. K. Graham, president; Dr. J. D. Bruner, vice president; Dr. L. R. Wilson, secretary and treasurer.

—Mr. J. J. Bailes, of Fort Mill, S. C., has recently entered college. Mr. Bailes is a 240 pounder and played center on Wofford for two years. He should make a valuable acquisition to the foot ball squad.

—On account of the large number of students taking German 1 it was found necessary to organize another section. This new section began work Tuesday morning with Mr. Frank McLean as instructor. The class meets the first hour, Tuesday, Wednesday, and Thursday.

—Chief Justice Walter Clark has presented his picture to the Philanthropic society, of which he was a member while he was at the University. Judge Clark is one of the most prominent men in North Carolina and the Phi society is fortunate in securing his picture.

—A continuous report of the Davidson game was given in the Chapel last Saturday. It frightened us unnecessarily once by saying that a Davidson man ran with the ball to our 5 yard line instead of our 55 yard line. On the whole, however, the report was fairly good.

—The Dialectic society Saturday night elected as its representatives in the Soph-Junior debate this fall Messrs. J. J. Parker, '07 and B. F. Reynolds, '08. The Philanthropic society, as announced last week, has elected Messrs. W. A. Jenkins, '07 and O. R. Rand, '08. An interesting contest is expected.

—It is being rumored around here that Frank Foust, Carolina's former tackle, will return to college this fall. Should Foust register before the 12th, he will be eligible to play football this year. Big Stewart remarked that if Foust came back here, he would not be the only former Carolina player to register.

—Opie Read, the first of the Star Course attractions, is scheduled to appear in Gerrard Hall next Saturday night. Mr. Read is best known as a novelist and the many who have been charmed with his literary productions will be interested in him on this account alone. The press notices speak of him highly as a lecturer. His subject has not been made public.

—The Moot Court convened Saturday morning at the usual hour. The case on docket was a criminal one; State vs Jackson for obtaining goods under false pretense. The State was represented by Solicitor Hassel, Messrs. Carter, Loughlin, and "Bully" Moore; while Messrs. Smoot, McMullan, and Prior appeared for the defendant. The jury returned a verdict of not guilty.

—"Wonder what Davidson will put on the redpage in her 1905-6 annual," remarked some one after the game the other day. "For the last two issues of 'Quips and Cranks' Davidson has gone to the trouble to procure a blood-red page on which was boldly printed the score against Carolina. Unfortunately it looks as if she will have to leave out what is to her the dearest page of her annual."

—THE TAR HEEL said last week: "Mr. W. S. Hunter has gone home to attend the funeral of his father." This was strictly true so far as Mr. Hunter was concerned, but we are very glad to be able to state that on reaching home he found that he had been misled by the somewhat peculiar wording of the telegram announcing his father's illness. His father was seriously ill but has now improved and Mr. Hunter has returned to the Hill.

—The Inter-State Committee and the Bible study Department of the University Association are planning a Bible Institute to be held here on the 21st. and 22nd. (of October) for the University and the following institutions: Trinity College, A. & M. College, Wake Forest College, Guilford College, Raeford Institute, Whitsett Institute, and Bingham School. Mr. Kenneth C. MacArthur (M. A. Howard) of New York, one of the international committee staff, will be one of the new speakers.

—An invitation was received last week by both the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies from Secretary Jos. E. Pogue of State Fair, asking that the Di and Phi each send a representative to Raleigh to participate in a prize oration contest on Friday night of the Fair week. It was proposed that each college in the State send not more than two representatives, the orations to be not longer than fifteen or twenty minutes and a gold medal to be awarded to the one judged the best orator. After a careful consideration of the proposition both societies were of the opinion that while it was highly desirable that the University be represented, the notice came too late to allow sufficient time for preparation. The invitation was therefore declined.

Program for Today's Exercises.

University Day will be celebrated as usual on the Hill today. Recitations will be suspended, and all are expected to repair to Gerrard Hall to pay our tribute of regard to the institution which came into being on this day so many years ago. The following interesting program has been arranged for the occasion:

1. Music—University Orchestra.
2. Prayer—Rev. J. W. Wildman.
3. University Hymn.
4. Report of President Venable.
5. Hail to U. N. C.
6. Address by Col. Robert Bingham.
7. Song of the Old Alumnus.
8. Benediction.
9. Music—University Orchestra.

MARRIAGE TUESDAY EVENING.

The Social Event of the Season Takes Place at the Presbyterian Church at Chapel Hill.

The Presbyterian church of this place was the scene of a beautiful wedding Tuesday evening at 8:30 when Mr. Hugh S. Robertson of Bronxville, N. Y., and Miss Mary Harris, formerly of Chapel Hill, met at the altar and were pronounced man and wife.

Much interest was felt in the event and long before the hour set for the ceremony, the church was crowded. While awaiting the arrival of the wedding party, Mrs. J. Flake Carlton, of Durham, sang in her beautiful way Mendelssohn's bridal song. Following this a string quartet from the University Orchestra played with fine effect.

Promptly at 8:30 Mrs. A. W. Wheeler struck up Mendelssohn's wedding march and the party entered the church. The ceremony was performed by Dr. J. L. Robertson, of Bronxville, N. Y., father of the groom, assisted by Rev. W. T. D. Moss.

The attendants were: Miss Margaret Robertson, of Bronxville, N. Y., maid of honor; and Mr. S. B. Conover, Greenwich, Conn., best man. The other attendants were: Misses Lillian Foust and Eugenia Harris of Salisbury, and Mr. W. S. Bernard, Dr. C. S. Mangum and Mr. E. K. Graham, of Chapel Hill. Master Thomas Harris, was ring bearer and Miss Elizabeth Harris was flower girl.

Mrs. Robertson is the daughter of the late Dr. Thomas W. Harris, of Chapel Hill, and has long been very prominent in North Carolina and Virginia social life.

Among the out-of-town guests at the wedding were: Mrs. Will Morgan, of Fayetteville; Dr. and Mrs. J. L. Robertson and Miss Margaret Robertson, of Bronxville, N. Y.; Mrs. J. Flake Carlton, of Durham; Mrs. Eugene Harris and Miss Eugenia Harris, of Salisbury; Messrs. S. B. Fish, New York; T. W. Harris, Bronxville; Isaac Harris, New Haven, Conn.; S. B. Conover, Greenwich, Conn.

Mr. Blythe Morris has returned to the Hill after a short trip to his old homestead, Goldsboro.

Mr. Thomas O'Berry has gone to Richmond to have his eyes examined by a specialist.

A ROUGH SHAKE-UP.

The Tale of an Early Morning Ride, Two Long Dives, High Life in a Carriage and a Wreck.

They came loping out out of Durham real early Friday morning. They had been over there to see "The Clansman", they were a little late and Old Bill, the driver, had sworn to put them through.

So H. W. McCain, H. P. Masten, B. F. Royal, E. R. Wallace, M. P. Cummings and J. B. Douthit, six jolly boys, hopped into the carriage and off the horses started. There was not another carriage that could keep in hailing distance of theirs; they skimmed big trees, ran over little saplings, mowed the banks along the road, and lived high when the wheels struck a rut. From the horses' feet fire flashed as big as the stars overhead—and all the time the carriage was moving on. The boys say that was riding some. At last the carriage had passed every other vehicle; then the horses simply let themselves out; they burnt the wind; and would have been in Chapel Hill in twenty minutes if—and here hangs the tale.

The boys in the carriage felt that something was sure to happen and happen soon. Wallace dived out into space; the others clung to the cushions. Happily there was nothing in the path of Wallace but a bushy blueberry bush and he sat on that—and he believes he left an impression. The carriage made another great lurch, and Douthit looked at the North star—the moon had passed in her chips—and asked for light; then he dived, and after several handspings arose from a thorn bush—a little worse off for scratches.

And yet the carriage rolled. Old Bill manfully held to the reins; the four remaining boys squatted and prepared for the worst. It came. A deep rut was struck—a signal for a general break-down. Springs, wheels and the long tongue snapped, and driver and boys were pried in the road. Old Bill was rendered unconscious, a splinter pierced the foot of one of his horses and the carriage was almost a complete wreck, but the young men were uninjured.

Class Season Opens Today.

Though we are unfortunate in having no opportunity to see an intercollegiate game of football on the Hill this fall our case is far from hopeless. There will be class games in abundance; and good ones, too, from present indications. Each class has already elected its athletic officers and the campus in the rear of the South building and the gymnasium is alive each afternoon with ambitious candidates for the various teams.

There is always a peculiar interest attached to a class game. In no other contest is the rivalry so keen, defeat so bitter, victory so sweet. The editors of college newspapers may, and often do, find it necessary to devote columns and columns of valuable space to exhortations of the students to support their varsity team. Often their exhortations fall, apparently, upon desert air, for the next day brings with it perhaps, the same deathlike silence on the bleachers and on the sidelines, broken only by the cracking of peanut shells and calls for the "apple boy." But whoever heard of a class game, especially if the sophomores were interested, where the cracking of peanut shells was not drowned in a chorus of yells and the apple boy forgotten in the shuffle.

We started to say, but on consideration have decided not to say, for fear you may have heard some one say it before, that the class team is the feeder of the scrub team, and thus, indirectly, of the Varsity. But whether you have heard it before or whether it is by a flash of inspiration that it has occurred to us is immaterial. It is true, and of the highest importance.

Much of the stock argument in favor of football, like much of that used against it is, we confess it, without foundation. If our class teams were abolished the case for football would be terribly weakened. They are of more direct benefit to the health of the students than even the Varsity, because many more participate in the games. By their keen competition they constitute a spirit of healthful competition and of hearty class loyalty which this institution needs. For each and for all of these reasons the class game is a valuable institution.

The schedule so far as arranged at present is as follows:

Freshmen vs. Sophomores, today at 3:30.

Juniors vs. Seniors, Saturday, October 21st.

Victors in the first game vs. victors in second, Saturday, October 28th.

Vanquished in the first, vs. vanquished in second, Saturday, Oct. 4th.

Three other games will be arranged, so that each team will play each other.

Tennis.

The Tennis Association met last week and elected the following officers:

D. P. Tillet, president.

Holt Haywood, sec. and treas.

It is expected that Carolina will meet Virginia this fall in tennis at Charlottesville. At any rate Dr. Venable, who has just returned from there, says that Virginia expects us to send a tennis team there. It will be remembered that Virginia sent a team to the tournament here last spring and that Carolina won the championship. This fact is somewhat surprising in view of the great interest exhibited in the sport at Virginia. There it ranks equal with baseball and football in popularity. Here, while it is participated in by perhaps a larger number of students than either of the other games, we do not as a rule regard it as an intercollegiate sport.

If we are to play Virginia this fall, and the general understanding appears to be that we will, it is high time that more interest were being taken and preparations being made. The University caused some courts to be erected last spring and presented them to the Association, but as yet they are virgin soil; no one has ever played upon them. The victory last spring merely served to show what Carolina can do when she tries—in tennis, as in everything else. It is up to every one who can play tennis or who thinks he can play to enter the contest for places on the Varsity team.

Vol. 14,

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, OCTOBER 19, 1905.

No. 4.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

PENNSYLVANIA WINS.

BUT NORTH CAROLINA DOES HERSELF PROUD.

Carolina's Fast and Fierce Team Work Holds the Last Year's Champions to Three Touchdowns.

North Carolina met the powerful aggregation of the University of Pennsylvania on the gridiron in Philadelphia Saturday and with remarkable success held the giants to three touchdowns, being defeated by a score of 17 to 0. Every man on our team played hard, clean ball from start to finish, eliciting many favorable comments from the Northerners who expected, they said, to pile up a score of 50 to 0. The following account of the game, which was witnessed by 8,000 or 10,000 people, is from the Philadelphia Bulletin.

Roberson, of North Carolina, kicked weakly from the centre of the field to Scarlett, standing twenty-five yards from Penn's goal. The Red and Blue men then started on a march to a touchdown. North Carolina proved fast and nifty on defence, played low and tackled hard, but Folwell, Sheble and Longwell found it easy work marching ahead five and ten yards at a time. Finally only forty yards from North Carolina's goal Sheble fumbled, but Stevenson, quick as usual fell on the ball, and there was much joy in the Red and Blue camp. On the very next play Penn did a little unfair work with their hands and paid twenty yards as penalty for the pleasure. Feeling it a waste of time to make that distance up by rushing the ball, Sheble dropped back and kicked to Sadler on North Carolina's ten-yard line.

Sadler tried to run the pigskin back, and was of course buried under a mound of Red and Blue jerseys. The Southern boys managed to carry the ball four yards in two attempts, but then decided to kick. Roberson stood too near his line, and was rattled by the Penn players charging towards him, and kicked less than fifteen yards. In four plays after thus regaining possession of the ball, Lamson was shoved over the North Carolina goal line for Penn's first touchdown. Storrey missed the goal. Score—Penn. 5—North Carolina, 0.

North Carolina kicked off again. Folwell caught the ball on the twenty-yard line and hustled back five yards before he was tackled and incidentally laid out. After coming to he tried to play again, but was taken out of the game. Green going in.

On the next lineup, Sheble punted. Sadler misjudged the kick and let the ball roll to his own fifteen-yard line before falling on it.

Once again the Southerners got their attacking machinery in working order and clipped off the usual four yards. Fearing to try again for the last three feet needed to keep the ball. Roberson punted to midfield, the pigskin going out of bounds. After two ineffectual dashes, Folwell got off on a forty-yard run by working that moss-grown fake, the double delayed pass. First the ball was given to Sheble, by him to Green, and then to Folwell, while the entire North Carolina team chased Green and the interference as it went around one end, while Folwell sailed around the other all by himself.

Three plays now failed to gain materially so Stevenson tried a quarterback kick. It failed to gain territory, but in the ensuing mixup a Penn man got the ball. Then the Red and Blue started once more towards a touchdown, but holding cost them 20 yards again and a poorly placed quarterback kick lost the ball.

After one fruitless effort to gain, North Carolina tried to kick and Roberson fumbled the pass from centre, but luckily fell on the ball. Trying it again, he kicked about 20 yards and gave Stevenson a chance for one of his hair-raising runs. Catching the ball on the bounce, "Steve" dodged both ends, hurdled a tackle and darted 25 yards through a broken field until downed by a nifty Southerner, who was knocked out in the process. After this brilliant play, Penn foolishly tried another quarterback kick and again lost the ball.

Here North Carolina pulled off a neat play. Trying the old delayed pass themselves, Roberson, their fullback, got away for 10 yards around Gaston's end and would have made more, only he ran out of bounds and into Stevenson's elbow at the same moment. It took almost the time limit to bring him to, but finally the game was continued. The first half proved to be nearly up, however; and the whistle blew in a very few seconds. End first half.

Penn. 5—N. C. 0.
The Southern boys, though light, played a surprisingly fast game. They have profited by the lessons of their coach, "Bill" Warner, the former Cornell captain and brother of Glenn Warner, the famous coach of the Carlisle Indians, now with Cornell.

The second half started with no change in either lineup. Penn kicked off this time. Sheble kicking 35 yards to Story, who ran 5 yards back before being downed. North Carolina lined up quickly and in two plays made a first down. Then Pennsylvania braced and Roberson, of North Carolina, made a punt of 10 yards or so, giving the ball to Penn on the Southerners' 40-yard line. The big University of Pennsylvania backs and linemen crashed through the light blue and white line 5 and 10 yards at a time. Fighting desperately the North Carolina boys gave ground until at last Penn was with-

UNIVERSITY DAY.

An Appropriate Celebration—Dr. Venable Reports the University in a Flourishing Condition—A Thoughtful Address by Col. Bingham.

The celebration of University Day on the Hill last Thursday was a distinct success. The program arranged for the day was interesting and everyone entered into the exercises with the proper spirit.

At eleven in the morning a large audience gathered in Gerrard Hall, where the exercises were opened with prayer by Rev. J. W. Wildman, pastor of the Chapel Hill Baptist church.

Dr. Venable then made his annual statement as to the status of affairs in the University. Reviewing briefly the past year he pointed out many things which are sources of gratification.

The large number of students—667—registered last year, with 650 already registered this year; the completion of the Bynum gymnasium, the appropriation for the Chemical laboratory and the increased appropriation for general purposes, the appropriation from the General Educational Board, the Carnegie gift for a new library (only $20,000 yet to be raised), establishment of the Department of Applied Sciences with Prof. J. W. Gore as dean, and the organization of the Graduate Department with Dr. C. Alphonso Smith as dean, the granting of a charter to the Phi Beta Kappa, the establishment of fellowships in Chemistry, the establishment of the University council, satisfactory work and good order—all these are most encouraging.

Dr. Venable then introduced the speaker of the day, Col. Robert Bingham, of Asheville, stating that he was a graduate of the University, his father a graduate of the institution and his grandfather was for years one of its honored professors.

"Our history," said Col. Bingham, "has been neglected too long. We have allowed it to go by default and it is now time we were standing up for our rights." Continuing he treated exhaustively of the period preceding, and the period of reconstruction succeeding the Civil War. "The horribleness of the latter has just begun to be realized by the thoughtful men of the North. These admit now that it was a colossal mistake." Coming finally to more modern times, Col. Bingham spoke of the great opportunities afforded the South today in the solution of great problems, which are facing the nation. The race problem, the problem of a bribed and conscienceless body of Senators, the existence of an outrageous and unjust protective tariff, said he, demanded our attention. The retention of the Philippines is the only natural policy for us to pursue. In fact, in less than fifty years every foot of soil on the American continent will be owned by the United States. If we would rise to the occasion in each instance and solve each problem in a manner worthy of us we must meet them without sectarian narrowness or prejudice, fairly and squarely, without rashness, without precipitateness, yet without fear.

At the close of Col. Bingham's address, which by the originality of its thought, the boldness of its expression and the general skillfulness of its treatment held the attention of the audience for considerably more than an hour, the University Orchestra rendered a selection and the exercises were closed with the benediction, pronounced by Rev. J. W. Wildman. Delightful orchestra music was interspersed throughout the exercises. The singing by the entire audience of the University Hymn and the Song of the Old Alumnus was also a pleasant feature.

In the evening from 9 till 11 a reception was tendered by the faculty to the members of the Senior class and the second year students in the professional schools, in Commons Hall. This was in pursuance of a custom established last year. The affair was entirely informal and was much enjoyed by the fairly good sized crowd present.

Opie Read Tells Some Stories.

Rarely has any Chapel Hill audience left Gerrard Hall more universally pleased with an entertainment than that which greeted Opie Read Saturday night. No announcement of his subject had been made and after one had heard him through he could easily understand why. He had no subject. There were those who entertained apprehensive fears that a reading from one of his own books—delightful though they are—was to be thrust upon them. But their fears were groundless.

At 8:10 o'clock Mr. Read rose, confident in the strength of his towering manhood, and began to tell stories. At 8:31 Mr. Read seated himself in a chair in the centre of the rostrum and—continued to tell stories. And people listened. There was no pedantic rhetoric here, none of Bob Taylor's attempted flights of flowery eloquence, but fun, hearty, wholesome fun, sprinkled here and there with pathos. It was a student of human nature revealing, reproducing human nature. Now it was the dark, alternately humorous and pathetic; now the typical Kentuckian feud-fighter, thirsting for revenge for the blood of his kinsman; now the village rustic visiting the city theatre or forming his first acquaintance with a modern automobile. One forgot, as he listened, the personality of the storyteller in the fascination of the story. And that is the highest test of the storyteller's skill.

Saturday's score was one to be proud of. For the first time in many years if not for the first time in the history of the two institutions Carolina met the University of Pennsylvania on its home grounds. An idea of the impression our team made may be gathered from the fact that the Pennsylvanians are anxious for a date on our next year's schedule. The Philadelphia papers speak highly of the fast, clean ball played by the Southerners and the Washington Post correspondent says, "Not once were they caught napping." None knew better than the Tar Heels the invincible strength of the great Northern team, but they were undismayed and fought desperately every inch of ground. It is safe to say that thousands who perhaps had never heard of the University of North Carolina before now know of the place and respect it because of the sort of men it sends out.

The announcement made elsewhere of the resignation of Rev. W. T. D. Moss, of the Presbyterian church, is one which will be received with regret by every University student who has known the man and fallen beneath his influence. Few ministers here have been more popular or have exercised a greater influence for good. We cannot speak for the villagers but we can speak for the students; and we know that his broadminded liberality, which is the supreme test of an honest and sincere thinker, and the practical application of the philosophy of religion to everyday life drew within the sphere of his influence not a few to whom, ordinarily, a church was not a familiar place.

West Point has probably discovered that the report last spring that Carpenter was crippled for life was somewhat erroneous. But the worst of it is that West Point may not be the only one to make this discovery.

We've run across another question which we are unable to answer. Here it is, gentle reader, we submit it for your prayerful consideration: why is it that some people never know when to stop?

The individual who wants a detailed report of the games is having his innings this week.

"The Clansman."

[At the suggestion of quite a number of those who attended the presentation of "The Clansman" at Durham, this criticism was secured by special request from a writer whose literary insight and ability as a critic is well known.]

Max Nordau once said of "The Leopard's Spots" that it had deliberately undone the work of "Uncle Tom's Cabin". The same remark might be applied to "The Clansman" and to the play of that name which is now going through the South. Some one else has said that the book is not an answer but a sequel to that former one. Mr. Dixon in his address to his audience in Durham last week remarked that "The Civil War did not settle the Negro Question; the Civil War created the Negro Question"—and his play is a portrayal of the manner of its creation.

The play is avowedly intended to show the other side of the question to those who for forty years have heard one side alone, and with all its faults, the picture is a vivid one. It deals with the horrors of the period of "Reconstruction"—a period which has never had parallel in the history of any conquered nation. A time of such humiliation that the men who tell with kindly humor their stories of the war, grow pale and silent at the aftermath—this is the setting of the play and the appeal is a powerful one to Southern minds. It can hardly be expected to meet with a hearty reception in the North, though it is noticeable that Mr. Dixon's books have been treated fairly, and generally appreciatively, by his Northern critics.

The play is one which sets men thinking. It is crude, melodramatic, violent. In Richmond after its presentation a negro riot was narrowly averted. At Durham there were a number of negroes present who expressed their disapproval by hisses and finally by filing out. It could hardly be expected to appeal to their taste. The fact that the play really holds its argument for them is lost. The argument is more subtle than they can appreciate. The negro Lynch voices the argument for the race in his appeal to Stoneman when he asks his daughter's hand in marriage, reproaching him bitterly that after he had "trained these eyes to see, this heart to feel"—he denied him the things that he had learned to feel and appreciate. Mr. Dixon shows the reason for the forming of the Klu Klux Klan and vindicates its motives and actions. He shows the danger to the nation of training the negro to expect and to demand privileges which, by reason of their own nature, can never be theirs. The picture, as I have said, is powerful. It is moving. It is much needed. But it is crude, inflammatory; even dangerous. The play if presented by a good company would be much more artistic and effective. As presented in Durham the cheapest and shoddiest stage effects were insisted upon and the general effect was weakened. It speaks well for the force of the play that in spite of these great drawbacks the play was decidedly felt to be a strong and moving picture.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Mr. Holt Haywood is one of the marshals at the State fair this week.

—On account of the lecture Saturday night no debate was held in either society.

—Mr. R. E. Calder has been elected extra Senior member of the University Council.

—The second Star Course attraction is billed for tomorrow night in Gerrard Hall. The speaker of the evening is Prof. Charles Lane.

—At a party given to a few of her intimate friends, Miss Daisy Hanes, of Winston-Salem, recently announced her engagement to Mr. Robert Lassiter, class of '05, of Henderson, the marriage to be solemnized in December.

—The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society held its first regular meeting Tuesday evening. Two entertaining and instructive talks were made: one by Dr. Wilson on sponges, and one by Dr. Wheeler on paper manufacturing.

—The University Bulletin is the latest. It is a schedule published once a week by the University and conspicuously posted, giving notices of lectures, meetings of various societies, etc., during the coming week. It will be found worth while.

—Rev. W. T. D. Moss, pastor of the Presbyterian church of Chapel Hill, has resigned his pastorate and will preach his last sermon next Sunday before leaving for Washington, D. C., where he goes to accept a pastorate. Dr. Moss has been pastor here for about two years.

—The Economics Club will meet for the first time this year in the History rooms next Tuesday night. All those taking courses in Economics and specially interested in industrial problems are invited to join. Subsequent meetings will be held in the Economics room in the Alumni.

—At a meeting of the Sophomore class last Saturday it was decided to give a $5 sweater to every man who makes a place on the class football team. The sweater is to have the initials '08 worked in it. As a result of this action some good material has since reported for practice.

—Six men, Messrs. Cheshire, O. B. Ross, Orr, Haywood, Hyman Phillips and H. M. Emerson, have entered the contest for places on the Varsity tennis team. Each man of these will play every other and the two winners will form the team. It is probable that a practice game with Guilford at Guilford College will be arranged after the team is selected.

—Modern Literature Club will hold its first meeting for this year on Thursday night, at 7.30, in No. 7. Alumni. A full attendance is necessary because the program for the year must be arranged. This organization during the first year of its existence has clearly shown its usefulness in the University. This usefulness will be greatly increased this year.

—At ten o'clock last Thursday night fifteen members of the class of '05 assembled at Pickard's Hotel where they enjoyed a sumptuous feast and told stories of the good old days at U. N. C. Later they went to the Davie Poplar where they sang a number of class songs. The red carnation was chosen as the class flower and on the twelfth of every October each member of the class of '05 will wear the class flower.

—A contest will be held next week among tennis players for a $7.50 racket offered by the association to the winner. The contestants for places on the Varsity team are debarred from entering the contest. This gives every man, however mediocre a player he may think himself, a chance to win. The admission fee for membership in the association is only $1, reduced from $2, and is, therefore, within the reach of every one.

—At the meeting of the Dialectic society Saturday night Mr. J. J. Parker tendered his resignation as Junior debater on the Soph-Junior debate, circumstances having made it inadvisable for him to undertake the work. Mr. Roby Day was elected in his place. The query which has been agreed upon is, "Resolved, that the United States government should own and operate the railways of the United States." The Di will uphold the affirmative and the Phi the negative.

—The weekly session of the moot court was held Saturday morning at ten o'clock. Hicks vs. the Nami Mfg. Co. for damages in the sum of $5,000 for the loss of three fingers, was the case on docket. The attorneys for the defendant were: Messrs. Sherrod, W. T. Wilson, T. N. McDiarmid, Hoyle, T. W. Simmons, and Shore. The counsel for the plaintiff were: McGeachy, Moore, J. K. Wilson, McNider, Davis and H. C. Jones. The case was ably handled by both sides, but the verdict was returned in favor of the defendant.

—Dr. William B. Phillips, of the class of '77, delivered an interesting lecture in the chapel Monday night. Dr. Phillips was formerly a professor in the University, later professor of Geology in the University of Texas and for the past five years has been engaged in mining quicksilver in southwest Texas. In a simple conversational manner, with no attempt at oratory, Dr. Phillips talked most entertainingly of the Texas country, its life and its people. From the nature of the address it is impossible to reproduce it. One statement, however, should be mentioned. He said that there were three great civilizing forces instrumental in civilizing Texas: the modern rapid fire gun, the wire fence and the tin can. The first drove away the Indians, the second rendered cattle stealing difficult, and the third made it possible for people to buy their food already prepared in tin cans. He closed by inviting everybody to visit him in Texas provided they bring with them—a bucket of water and a tree.

Freshmen Tie Sophomores.

The first class game of the season, the contesting teams being those of the Freshman and Sophomore classes, came off according to schedule last Thursday afternoon. As it was a holiday and nothing doing in particular in the afternoon a good crowd was present. As is customary at class games, though, most of the crowd showed up after the manager had left the gate.

At the end of the first half and likewise at the end of the second the score stood nothing to nothing. Twice the Sophomores got the ball within a few yards of the Freshmen's goal but both times failed to carry it over. The game was interesting throughout, quite a number of good plays being made.

PENNSYLVANIA WINS.

in striking distance of the goal line once more. Several North Carolina men and a Pennsylvania man were laid out on the way, requiring the assistance of the ambulance corps.

The casualties were not serious, however, and the victims resumed their positions. Finally, when a touchdown seemed imminent, Sheble, the unlucky, fumbled, and North Carolina recovered the ball. On their first play Abernethy, of North Carolina, was laid out cold. It seemed impossible to bring him back to life, but after a long delay he recovered, and the game went on.

North Carolina failed to gain an inch in their two attempts, and Roberson tried to punt, but he kicked less than ten yards. Getting the pigskin in this easy fashion on their opponent's twenty-five-yard line Penn went, ahead and made a touchdown. Two short dashes by Lamson, a twenty-yard run around the end by Green, and a plunge straight through centre by Folwell gave Penn the coveted touchdown. Torrey kicked the goal.

Penn, 11—North Carolina 0.

Before the next kick-off Thayer replaced Gaston at left end for Penn. North Carolina punted from midfield to Sheble on Penn's ten-yard line. The speedy halfback sped forward thirty yards before he slipped and was downed. Then Stevenson sped away on a thirty-five yard run, but went out of bounds, and so really gained only ten yards when tackled.

Stevenson's jersey was ripped off, and the coaches sent him to the field house, putting Johnson in at quarter.

Two attempts under the new general gained a first down, but then Penn lost fifteen yards for holding. Green made up five yards when Sheble was forced to kick and sent the ball spinning fifty yards to Sadler, who fumbled, and barely recovered the ball. The Penn coaches then sent in Bankhardt for Torrey and Rooke for Junk.

North Carolina failed to gain and Sifer punted twenty-five yards to Johnston, who was downed in his tracks. Starting with a five-yard dash by Green, Penn sailed down for another score. Short dashes by Lamson and Sheble followed Green's run. Then Folwell broke through.

On tackling him both the referee and umpire were downed in the resulting mixup, causing great amusement in the stands.

In two more plays Folwell went over for the third score of the day. Sheble kicked the goal. Score—Penn, 17; North Carolina, 0.

Hobson took Robinson's place at left guard for Penn. Once more North Carolina kicked off and Sifer drove the ball from midfield to Johnston on Penn's ten-yard line. The little quarterback dashed back fifteen yards before being downed by a mass of blue and white jerseys.

Sheble punted on the first lineup, sending the oval forty-five yards to Sadler, who was downed in his tracks by Scarlett and Thayer. Scarlett was hurt in making the tackle and was sent to the side lines, Gallagher taking his place.

North Carolina decided to kick and then got off a really good kick, the ball going thirty yards. Johnston caught the flying sphere and dodging two would-be tacklers dashed forty yards towards the North Carolina goal. He went directly along the side lines and the Southerners claimed he stepped out of bounds, but the officials didn't see it and the run went. On the very next play Penn lost twenty yards more for holding. Folwell failed to make up the distance, but Green slipped away for a clean twenty-five yards around left end, seeming sure of a score until downed by Sadler on the North Carolina ten-yard line. On the next play Johnston tried a quarterback kick. A North Carolina man was "Johnny on the spot," however, and the game ended as he clutched the flying ball and called down. Final score:

Penn, 17—North Carolina, 0.

The original lineup follows:

Carolina.	Pennsylvania.
Winborne, L. H.	Longwell.
Parker, C.	Torrey.
Trailor, R. G.	Junk.
Abernethy, L. T.	Draper.
Singletary, R. E.	Scarlett.

Roberson, F. B.	Folwell.
Snipes, R. H.	Sheble.
Sadler, Q. B.	Stevenson.
Story, R. T.	Lamson.
Gardner, L. G.	Robinson.

Referee—W. H. Corbin, of Yale.
Umpire—Al. Sharpe, of Yale.
Linesman—Wallace, of Pennsylvania.—Time—20 minute halves.

On the Gridiron Saturday.

V. P. I. surprised everyone by defeating West Point 16 to 6. It is needless to say that Carpenter was the star, making two touchdowns and kicking a goal from placement. Other scores follow:

TRACK WORK AT ANNAPOLIS.

Saturday's Contest Proves a Tar Heel Funeral—Seven Touchdowns in Forty Minutes.

"Carolina loses—thirty-eight to nothing," was the way it came over the wires, but on the Hill not one solitary soul could be found who believed it. That any team in the world could win from North Carolina by that score, common enough as it is in football, was unbelievable. People simply shook their heads incredulously and waited for the team to arrive and say that it was all a big mistake.

But it was true, and there seems to be no explanation except that the Navy played football and Carolina—didn't. There were other things, of course. The game was played on the Annapolis grounds with all the advantage in favor of the home team; the North Carolinians were fatigued by a wearisome trip and seemed unable to get together. Carolina was expecting a hard game but it was believed, nevertheless, that she had almost an even chance to win. The betting at Annapolis, as a matter of fact, was even. The cadets, remembering their unexpectedly close game with Carolina last spring in baseball, were also expecting a hard rub and determined to take no chances.

The cadets opened up by kicking to North Carolina's 40-yard line. Carolina made three ineffectual attempts to advance the ball, failed to make the required distance and the ball passed (as the News and Observer would say) from the possession of the State to that of the Nation. The Navy made two or three short gains and then their left half back got loose for a beautiful run of 30 yards and a touch down. This took all the starch out of the Tar Heel team and all the ginger out of their playing. Reynolds, it is said, being a notable exception. The Navy team, with its strong line and backs of lightning-like speed were not slow to take advantage of this state of affairs and hammered our line here, there and everywhere for decisive gains, making two more touch downs before the ending of the first half, and kicking all the goals.

In the second half the Navy put in many substitutes and as our line was weakened by the constant hammering of the first half a more open game was possible. Several plays which seemed almost irresistible were put into execution and the Navy backs would dodge and dart through holes and circle ends for 20, 30 and 40 yards. The longest run was 70 yards.

Carolina's punting was mediocre and her secondary defence weak. The men who tackled tackled high and therefore were easily pushed back. The ends broke up the interference fairly well but did not smash it behind their opponents' line.

One plausible reason given as accounting for Carolina's bad showing was the fact that the team had to keep keyed up for two big games only a week apart. And Saturday's game won't be any cinch.

The line up was as follows:

Carolina.	Navy.
Townsend, L. E.	Welch
	Strowthers
Abernethy, L. T.	Piersol
	McKinney
Gardner, L. G.	O'Brien

Gridiron Gossip.

Barry, right end on Carolina's team last year, is playing end on Virginia. His name has been included in the list of stars in every game Virginia has played.

W. P. Jacocks is playing left half on the team of Bingham School, of Asheville, and is reported as one of the stars of the South Carolina game. He is a member of the faculty.

Among the candidates for guards at the University of Pennsylvania are six men weighing respectively 242, 200, 203, 215, 183, 197. Both of her regular ends, by the way, are out of the game for the rest of the season on account of accidents in the first minor practice games.

A Japanese and a Russian are playing side by side on Harvard's second eleven, the Jap playing tackle and the Russian an end.

THE SPIRIT OF BIBLE STUDY.

Prof. Plato Durham Chooses This as the Theme For an Able University Sermon.

The regular University sermon for October was preached Saturday night in Gerrard Hall by Prof. Plato Durham, formerly of Trinity College, now pastor of Trinity Methodist church, Charlotte. As the sermon and the institute were coincident Prof. Durham had been asked to preach a sermon appropriate to the occasion. He chose as his subject, therefore, the study of the Bible.

"It is inspiring," said Prof. Durham, "to walk up and down this campus, to think of the visions which have been dreamed, the purposes born in this place. But how many of these have gone unaccomplished through failure to vitalize the truth obtained here. I shall speak of a means of attaining this power: the study of the Bible.

"This age is inclined to pay too little attention to the study of the Book of books. Men who have the finest equipment, intellectual and otherwise, for its study, exhibit too little faith in it. We need men who live up to its teachings, who are honest seekers of the truth and who will approach its study reverently. Let every test be applied, that the truth may prevail. But we want less of the irreverent study. I denounce as a dangerous man that one who approaches the Bible irreverently, seeking to destroy it.

"Education is a dangerous gift, because it is so valuable. It sometimes makes us irreverent in our search for truth in the Bible. Reverence for truth lifts man up but irreverence is sure to pull him down. When a man's mind is absorbed in the Word of God there is not so much danger of his falling. Let the mind be centered about the teaching of God. The man who does this is the most potent power for good.

"The Bible keeps one's life in touch with the greatest men of the world, such as Abraham and Moses. It satisfies the thirst for God, inherent in every one. This longing for companionship with God is the only possibility for ultimate happiness and peace. Only by means of the Bible can man rise to his highest strength."

The Crowd and the President.

It is in Raleigh. It is at the Fair. Bands are playing, flags are flying, the toy balloon man is crying his wares and the peanut vender is on every corner. Here and there a fakir is buncoing some wise Reuben with the pea and shell game. A Babel of voices—a confusion of sounds.

Off to the left the Midway, with its "Hiki," wonderful lions, snake eaters, female dancers and monstrosities. A stream of humanity pours in and out of the tents. The beat of tin pans—a fearful din—adds to the general pandemonium. Now and then a well dressed man is seen to make his way into the crowd, stop, deftly finger a vest pocket, and pass on.

There is an unusual stir. As one man the multitude faces to the right. A carriage approaches. A subdued murmur arises. "The President," and then ninety thousand voices let loose a mighty yell. In company with Lieutenant Governor Winston, Senators Overman and Simmons and others Mr. Roosevelt pulls for the stage. What a buzz! How anxiously the mob tip-toes for a look at him! Even the mother with her fretful babe ceases her lullaby. The young man is no longer talking to his girl. The happy father lifts his little son far above his head, and the dust is settling unheeded in his mouth.

The President mounts the platform. He is not quite so fierce looking as his pictures. He does not look like the mighty wielder of the big stick. In fact, as he perpetrates that strenuous, that grim determined smile, he looks, to say the least, as if he had had a good breakfast. He is in his glory. A renowned hero among ninety thousand worshippers. For a time he awes the multitude; then the crowd becomes more at ease—and cheers. The President is among his people.

His speech—what of that? Not many heard it, not many cared to hear it, all wanted to see him, all saw him, and all went home happy.

Professor Lane Last Friday Night.

The newspapers from which Prof. Charles Lane's press notices were clipped must have been subsidized. Certainly the professor failed to measure up to them. Apparently he did his best. Undoubtedly the crowd did theirs. They had come out to enjoy themselves and proceeded to make the best of the occasion. If a joke were sprung (and a few were) which could not have voted in the election of President Washington, the crowd responded nobly. When at times he leaped into a lengthy dissertation which he reeled off at the rate of a thousand words a second the crowd simply held its breath and wondered.

The trouble was, he was advertised as a "humorist". And if one proposes to deliver anything in the world save the genuine article let him beware of raising expectations. The audience was not expecting philosophy or poetry but humor, and the mixture under the circumstances was somewhat disappointing. The hour was, on the whole, not spent so very unpleasantly. But the magnificent exhibition of the orator's power, the plastic audience, convulsed, swayed at will by the magnetism of the orator's personality (which one had been led to expect)—well, it simply wasn't there.

It is said that V. P. I. has four ex-captains on her Varsity eleven,

The least said about it the better. Let's forget it as quickly as possible, everybody get together and surprise V. P. I. It can be done, for their team will be over confident.

By the way, isn't it time something were being said or done about this year's Yackety Yack? If one is to be issued, the sooner the organization of the staff the better. This may save express charges on the books next summer, to say nothing of mental anguish.

He must be a chronic kicker indeed who complains of the dullness of life on the Hill these days. For the past two weeks, beginning with University Day, we've had an over-plush of attractions. Those whose habit it is to take in everything are forced to keep a firm grasp on their Bulletin, that nothing may give them the slip.

THE TAR HEEL received a letter from an alumnus in Oklahoma yesterday, inclosing his subscription and adding, "I want to know if our boys are going to beat Virginia this year." This is but one of many, but we are moved to mention it simply as an illustration that the interest in our team and our institution is not confined to this State nor this section of States.

We knew something was the matter! Listen to this and be comforted: "That Bible Study Institute is a hoodoo," said a student Saturday after the news had been broken. "The last time it was held here Georgetown beat us 33 to 0, the worst defeat up to that time in our history. This time it's even worse." A motion is now in order to abolish the institute, or—better—to postpone it till the close of the football season.

The failure of North Carolina and Virginia to get together on the stipulations providing for an inter-collegiate debate, though not altogether unexpected, is none the less regrettable. With one exception, Carolina has defeated every institution North or South with whom she has debated. Virginia also has a splendid record and nothing short of a football game would arouse more interest than such a contest between the two. The difficulty, it must be admitted, seems inherent in the matter and grows out of the totally different situations which prevail at the two Universities. We trust, however, that some day the debate will be held.

The problem of inter-class relations is an intricate and ever recurring one. When one thinks it has been settled forever it bobs up serenely again. This is true not only at this institution but, it would seem, at practically all other institutions. One solution of the question which is in fact no solution but merely adds to the complexity of the problem—we refer to the arbitrament, as it were, by force of arms—has been tried, found wanting and today is under the ban. Public sentiment on the Hill is overwhelmingly opposed to it. The two upper classes, inviting the cordial co-operation of the next lower—yes, of the two lower classes—are determined that if prevention lies in their power, the University shall never again be hurled from the high position she now occupies in the esteem of the State and the world by resorting in a single instance to the "benevolent assimilation" of printer's ink.

But we should not forget that thus far we have dealt, are dealing, with but a single phase of a question which has certainly two sides. Have we after all struck the root of the matter yet? If so, why the re-enactment of the little drama year after year for certainly more than a decade? Is it merely the inherent depravity of human nature? No matter what the explanation you attempt to give, a study of the other side would surely prove worth while. The purpose of this article is not to make specific suggestions. It has for its object the stimulation of thought. Thought about what? About this: Does not the long and "honored" history of hazing in American colleges, to some degree and in one form or another, indicate that it arose out of some necessity which is perhaps more real than is usually supposed? If so, does not its successful abolition demand some substitute?

The Bible Study Institute.

As previously announced, a Young Men's Christian Association Bible study institute was held here Saturday and Sunday, 56 delegates, representing A. & M., Wake Forest, Trinity, Elon, Whitsett, Raeford and Buie's Creek Academy, being present.

The object of the gathering was to discuss various methods of pursuing the study of the Bible in vogue at various institutions and thus facilitate the work. The first meeting was held Saturday afternoon, the second Sunday morning and the third Sunday afternoon. At each of these the discussions, which were largely informal, were led by Kenneth C. MacArthur, of the national committee having charge of College Y. M. C. A. work.

Saturday night Mr. MacArthur delivered an interesting lecture on the various plans of Bible study. Mr. MacArthur is a graduate of Harvard and has had much experience in the direction of Y. M. C. A. affairs.

The visitors at the institute appeared to enjoy themselves and said they were glad they came.

LOCAL NOTES.

—The annual banquet of the Senior class will be held next Tuesday night at Pickard's.

—More than three hundred students attended the Fair last Wednesday and Thursday. They saw the sights, took in the sideshows, heard the President, and returned home safe and sound.

—The Philological Club will meet Tuesday evening, October 31st, at 7.30, in room 7, Alumni. Papers will be presented by Dr. Smith, Prof. Toy and Mr. Graham.

—The editor-in-chief of the Magazine asks THE TAR HEEL to announce for the benefit of anxious and apprehensive subscribers that the October issue has already been printed and will be sent out as soon as the covers, which have been delayed, arrive.

—The Freshman and Sophomore teams, which played each other to a standstill on October 12th, will try issues once more Saturday morning. At least, this is the understanding at present. Class schedules, however, be it known, are subject to change at a moment's notice.

—At the meeting of the Dialectic society Saturday night it was decided to abolish the declaimer's contest which usually takes place in the spring, and to substitute for it a debating contest between members of the Freshman class, the one making the best debate to receive ten dollars. The contest will take place the last of November.

—The Chemical Journal Club met Monday night in the chemical laboratory lecture room. Several papers were read and discussed. Dr. Herty read a most interesting paper on "The Organization of an Industrial Chemical Plant." Mr. Randolph followed with a skillful treatment of "Gaseous Products of Actinium."

—The Economics Society held its initial meeting of the year in the History room Tuesday night and organization was effected. Dr. Raper has charge and Mr. J. W. Haynes was elected secretary. Some phases of the Southern labor problem were discussed. Much interest was manifested and a goodly number enrolled. The society will meet once each month.

—As a precaution lest the present year should be marred by the resurrection of hazing in any violent form the Juniors have appointed the following committee to report all such offenses to the University Council: J. J. Parker, Old East; Linn, Carr; Pittman, South; Weill, Old West and Hunter, Mary Ann Smith. The Seniors have appointed every man in the Senior Class.

—Once each month a general meeting of Freshmen students in English is being held by Professor Graham, for the purpose of enabling the student to profit in a more marked degree by what he reads; to make his general reading contribute to his general culture. Talks along appropriate lines will be made at these meetings by members of the faculty who are interested in the work.

—Dr. Hume returned Monday from his trip to Norfolk and Charlottesville, Va., where, as previously announced, he delivered two lectures, one at Norfolk, the other at the University of Virginia. The papers at both places refer to his lectures in very complimentary terms. He stopped over at Danville Sunday on his return in response to a very pressing invitation, preaching there Sunday morning and evening.

—The first meeting of the Historical Society this session was held Monday night in the History room. With a large staff in his hand Dr. Battle called the meeting to order. He said that it was a custom for every president while in the chair to use a walking stick of some kind, and that he was going to keep up the custom by using a different one every time. The one he used Monday night was a large staff used by the Russian Pilgrims in their pilgrimage to Jerusalem. He has sticks from every country except South Africa and he hopes soon to have one from there. Mr. J. K. Wilson was elected secretary. A paper was read by Mr. Wilson on Reconstruction days in North Carolina, followed by a talk from Dr. Battle on Johnson's course towards the State in Reconstruction times.

Unable to Get Together.

At a called meeting of the Di society several days ago the society by a practically unanimous vote rejected the stipulations proposed by the University of Virginia. This, it is presumed, means that no debate with Virginia will be held this year. The Phi society has taken no action yet, but the cooperation of both societies is, of course necessary before we can enter into a debate.

The debate had been under consideration by both institutions for several weeks and concessions had been made by both sides. The one point on which the issue hung was the restriction or the non-restriction of participation in the debate to academic undergraduate students. Virginia demanded that professional students, law and, presumably, medical students be admitted. This violated the fundamental principle of our debating system, which is that intercollegiate debating is not for professionals but for amateurs. Besides, Virginia's law school is stronger than ours and it could not be expected that ours would jump at once into the spirit of the contest, since it was not accustomed to participating. We would thus be handicapping ourselves in an unreasonable manner; going into a debate, as it were, with one hand tied behind.

To Virginia, in her turn, it apparently looks equally unreasonable for us to ask her to meet our academic department without the assistance of her professional schools. Here the situation appears to be reversed, as our academic department is admittedly the stronger. Besides, she says, she thinks it would be unfair to the professional students to deny them the right of participation.

Drew the Line on Two.

The New York Tribune, of last Wednesday, stated that Columbia was perplexed by a difficulty the like of which had never presented itself there before. William Fisher, who was a star end on Carolina in 1902 and in 1903, is playing the same position on Columbia, but refused to participate in Saturday's game with Amherst because the latter played two negroes on the team. He was with difficulty induced to play Williams College, which had one negro on her team, but finally yielded. In the case with Amherst, however, he drew the line point-blank. The Tribune stated that it was difficult to find a man to fill his place.

LATER: The account of Saturday's game shows Fisher back at his old place. The score, as noted elsewhere, was a tie. Fisher's quick seizure of the ball on a fumble enabled Columbia to tie the score. The pressure brought to bear on him was evidently too much and he yielded to college loyalty.

The statement made recently that Martin J. Condon, Jr., is now playing end on the Yale eleven is incorrect. Mr. Condon is in Mexico, engaged in mining. The Yale end is named Congdon.

Juniors Defeat Sophomores.

The second class game of the season was played between the Juniors and Sophomores Saturday afternoon and won by the Juniors 5 to 0. It was agreed before the contest that the game was not to count in the championship series as several Sophomore players were absent.

The Sophomores kicked off to the Juniors, who finally brought the ball to within a few inches of the goal. Here however they fumbled, a Sophomore got the ball and kicked out of danger. Before this could be made up time was up for first half with no scoring.

In the second half the Juniors kicked off, forced the Sophomores to punt, thus securing the ball. They scored on a brilliant quarterback run by Tillet, which was the play of the game. The Sophs then rallied and made good gains, time being up with the ball in their possession about 20 yards from the Junior goal.

Mr. James G. Gray, Jr., manager of the Sophomore team, asks THE TAR HEEL to state, without mentioning any names, that everybody who went in the gate Saturday paid admission. The which is hereby done.

Y. M. C. A. Work Progressing.

Written for the Tar Heel.

The Young Men's Christian Association is going forward steadily with its work this session. A large number of new men have connected themselves with the association and it is expected that the membership will exceed that of former years, regardless of the fact that the fees have been doubled.

The Mission study classes have not been organized yet, but a number of men have been enrolled in several very interesting courses. The course on Medical missions is very popular among the medical students, and the studies of the different countries, especially of the Philippines and Japan, are receiving attention. The biographical course always appeals to fellows who like to study of real men accomplishing very real things for the good of mankind.

The Bible study Department of the Y. M. C. A. has been very active and as a result has enrolled about a hundred and twenty-five men in daily devotional Bible study courses. If the department is to live up to its opportunity, however, its work is only fairly begun, for at least three-fourths of the students at the University have it in them to take up this most beneficial work.

The Y. M. C. A. is serving the University in a high and practical way in giving to every student this opportunity of making a careful personal study of the Bible that is at once scholarly, scientific, historical and devotional. Those who are not acquainted with this work and who have at heart the higher interests of their own lives and of their University would do well to look into it.

Had Read One, By Gum!

Prof. Graham: (to an applicant for admission to the English Department:—"Name some of the books which you have read.")

Freshman (after a pause)—"I've read 'Oliver Goldsmith' by David Copperfield." (!)

Why Not?

"Yes," remarked a scrub to the TAR HEEL man a few days ago, "the scrubs go out on the field and get — butted out of them and by way of reward are treated to a little spiel about 'the noble scrubs.'"

Rather cynical, wasn't it? But there was as much truth in the statement as there was prose. Words are so easy—and so cheap. We do not underestimate the value of expressions of appreciation and encouragement; they are rays of sunlight which make life worth living. The purpose of this article is merely to suggest that our expressions of such appreciation take more concrete form. The sacrifice made by the scrub is not imaginary; it is actual. Nowhere in our life do we find a sterner, more rigid test of a man's college loyalty than right here. Nowhere do we find the response to the call of duty more self-sacrificingly cheerful, more unfailingly prompt than here.

But lest we lay ourselves open to the charge of "spieling," we will jump at once to the practical side of the question. How can the position of a player on the second team be rendered more desirable? In general, by offering the same sort of inducements as those which render a position on the Varsity so attractive. Several steps in the right direction, it is true, have already been taken, in the offering of sweaters, etc. And the salutary effect of these measures has already made itself felt.

But the subject nearest the heart of the scrub with whose remark this article opens was "some trips." Why not? A trip was arranged for the team last year; much interest was manifested and every man worked harder because of the extra inducement. We speak of it now because we think it is important. We have not even mentioned the direct strengthening of the Varsity resulting from any strengthening of the second team. That has been threshed out sufficiently in the days that are gone. But no matter from what standpoint the matter is viewed, it claims our serious consideration.

Sophomores Vs. Davidson Faculty.

Davidson is having her annual uprising. Three Sophomores were expelled last week for impressing upon the new men the desirability of "minding their manners," the aforesaid Freshmen having presumed to give a class yell on the Davidson campus. Thereupon the Sophomores, all except six, threatened to leave the institution in a body unless the three were reinstated. The Freshmen then added their voices to the general tumult by also requesting the reinstatement of those under the ban. It seems, however, that the belligerents lost their nerve, for the men were not readmitted and at last accounts all was lovely again.

West Point is said to be very anxious to learn the result of the Navy-V. P. I. game November 25. They wish to find out whether the Virginians are capable of cleaning up both branches of the service.

THE TAR HEEL.

Vol. 14.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 2, 1905.

No. 6.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

CARPENTER WAS RIGHT THERE.

The Former Star Repeats His Former Stunts But Carolina's Weakened Team Plays Fast and Furious Football.

C. Hunter Carpenter, law student, football player, erstwhile Captain-elect of our Varsity eleven, now, as formerly, of V. P. I., met the University of North Carolina with his powerful collection (!) of college stars in Richmond last Saturday and defeated Carolina 35 to 6.

The score was no surprise to those familiar with the situation. Aside from the undoubted strength of the Virginia aggregation of players, many of whose stars were born playing football and have kept it up ever since at divers times and places, was the fact that Carolina probably never entered a contest in worse shape. Parker, Gardner, Sadler, Brown and Singletary were not even taken on the trip on account of illness and injuries. Several of the regular men who got in the game were in very bad condition. Notwithstanding these handicaps the team put up an article of hard, fast plucky football which commanded the admiration of all onlookers.

V. P. I. won the toss and chose to kick off to Carolina. On the kick-off the ball went out of bounds. Then the pigskin went to the cadets who, in spite of Carolina's desperate playing, hammered our line for gain after gain. At last after nine minutes of hard play, Blacksburg scored her touchdown by showing Wilson over the line. V. P. I. kicked goal. Carolina, undaunted, went at the Virginians furiously and before they knew what was doing, Abernethy, for North Carolina, had smashed through and over for a touchdown. Winborne kicked goal, tying the score. It was now 6 to 6.

But V. P. I. waded in and after several decisive gains Carpenter tore around right end on a spectacular dash of 55 yards for a touchdown. He failed at his try for goal making the score 11 to 6, "against our favor." After this no more scoring was done in the first half, the ball going up and down the gridiron in the possession of now one, now the other of the rival teams. Once Winborne took the ball and dashed around end for 15 yards, once Whitaker hurled Carpenter back for a loss of 5 yards. Another time Carpenter, on a double pass from Harlan ran the length of the field and over the line, with the whole Tar Heel team at his heels. He had stepped out of bounds, however, and the ball was brought back to V. P. I.'s 45 yard-line, and here the first half ended.

Dunlap was put in at Williams's place at Carolina's left guard and the cadets shifted Nutter to quarter and put Hanvey in the game.

Roberson kicked off to V. P. I.'s 15-yard line and finally after once losing the ball to Carolina and again regaining it the third touchdown for V. P. I. was made and Carpenter kicked goal. Several things happened while this part of the game was in progress: Abernethy and Seagle were hurt, but continued to play. A V. P. I. player who has a reputation for being careless with his English applied an opprobrious epithet to "Bob" Reynolds, Carolina's right half. Reynolds gave him one straight from the shoulder and as a consequence, was requested by the umpire to retire. Snipes went in in his place. Wright twisted his ankle and Pittman went in at end.

The fourth touchdown was made by straight playing aided by long runs by Carpenter and Webber. Carpenter kicked goal. Seven minutes remained to play. The next scoring demanded five minutes of play which was fierce on both sides. Finally the veteran player broke through Carolina's line, dodged the interference and ran 20 yards back of the goal posts. He followed this up by driving the sphere between the goal posts. Then with only two minutes left to play he carried the ball around N. C.'s right end and with beautiful interference, shook off several tackles and carried the ball 80 yards for a sixth touchdown. After kicking goal he retired from the game exhausted. Thompson took Pittman's place at end, the latter being hurt. Both teams were by this time exhausted and no more scoring was done. The game ended with the ball in the middle of the field.

The line up was as follows:

V. P. I.		N. C.

Carolina the Stronger.

Charlotte Observer, 30th.

The football team of Davidson College spent yesterday morning in the city on its return from Charlottesville, Va., where the previous day it had gone up against the eleven of the University of Virginia. The Presbyterians were a little jaded, but said that the Virginia team was not as strong as the eleven of the University of North Carolina.

THE SENIORS BANQUET.

At Pickard's Hotel Tuesday Night a Pleasant Evening is Passed—Class Unification the Theme Discussed.

At 8.30 Tuesday evening the Seniors of the University gathered in the dining hall of Pickard's hotel. They were there to enjoy themselves and they got busy at once. Dughi, of Raleigh, had charge of the preparation and serving of the indispensables, an elegant menu had been prepared and nothing was lacking. It was a place and a time to forget for the hour that the recitation bell would ring on the morrow again or even that there were such things as entrance conditions in English. First math? Speak not of it. Said we not that 'twas a Senior gathering?

The class met in accordance with a custom established by last year's Senior class. There were present as honorary guests, Prof. Williams, Dr. Howe and Mr. Bernard, the latter an honorary member of the class and a speaker at the banquet of this class last year.

President Love acted as toast master and announced that these three Faculty members had been invited to speak to the class on this occasion. The general line of discussion was to be on the question, How can we unify our class organizations and put an added intensification and a deeper, fuller meaning into our class life?

Dr. Howe was the first speaker. A graduate of Princeton, where the class exists in a higher form of development than almost anywhere else, he described for the class the life at that institution: the stirring though always friendly rivalry between the classes, the indissoluble ties which bind classmate to classmate, the power of organized public sentiment in the solution of what, at other places, are almost insoluble problems. He showed wherein our life here is deficient and urged every one to exert himself to remedy the defect. Sentiment, public sentiment, is the great motor power in the rendering distinct of classes and sentiment crystallizes in college customs which grow up around the place.

Mr. A. C. Dalton responded for the class. His theme was "Class Fellowship." The richest thing in a man's whole college life, said he, is the association with fellow students, and the forming of friendships which last through life. Many men have in them qualities and possibilities of which you never dreamed until you learned them intimately.

The next speaker of the evening was Mr. Bernard, who took a very practical view of the situation. He talked not about other colleges but about our own, dealing with conditions as they exist. "Go to the bottom of the matter," said he, "and you will find that the origin of all bad feeling in our midst has been political rivalry." He cited the case of his own class, said that the officers were elected on purely political considerations and as a result hardly one had any interest in the class and to reunite the class is today an impossibility.

V. L. Stephenson responded briefly. He analyzed the term unity, showed that there were two aspects, class unity and college unity, each of which was as indispensable as the other, and spoke of the effect upon our life here of the unified class system.

Last on the list came Prof. Williams. "The center of gravity in our national life," said he, "has shifted three times since the birth of the nation. First it was the preacher, next the scholar, third, it has been and is in a large degree the soldier. The next center of gravity is to be the commercialist. An age of commercialism always follows an age of imperialism. Commercialism demands, is demanding men of iron character. If the University is to fulfill its duty it must produce the great commercialist. If she is to do this there must be a hearty and strenuous competition in our life here, competition based on personal worth and personal efforts."

He told of the long fight he had waged for equality of opportunity and for the rights of the individual when at one time organizations by combination had threatened to crush those rights. But Mr. Bernard, said he, had laid his finger on the real trouble today. "It is wooden politics, which dishes out college honors years in advance. Where is your incentive to work, to strive, to advance yourself, in the face of such a system? If we have not this competition, how are we to produce the great man of the future?" Professor Williams spoke as only he can speak when he loses himself in the discussion of the vital questions touching our college life.

As this completed the regular programme, extemporaneous talks were called for by the toastmaster. Mr. Blackwell, a new member, responded to the call of the class and was the only student speaker who ventured to tell a joke. Not only that, but he got it off successfully. At this juncture, however, the lights winked a solemn warning, it was found impossible to arrange for their continued burning and the party reluctantly disbanded.

Concerning Things Philological.

The Philological Club met in the Alumni building Tuesday night for its regular meeting. The following was the programme of the evening:

"A Note on Alliterative Phrases in Dichtung und Wahrheit" by Prof. W' D. Toy.

"The Origin of the Auxiliary, Do" by Dr. C. A. Smith.

"Jonson and the Character-writers" by Mr. E. K. Graham.

The New York Tribune of October 22nd in a lengthy review of the status of American athletics reaches the conclusion that a national tribunal having supervision over all forms of amateur athletics is a necessary and logical thing, its supervision not to be confined strictly to college sports but to all. It would be its task to work for such things as the elimination of brutality in football, and for the general purification and uplifting of American sports.

Many complex questions have arisen for the settlement of which no adequate body exists. The power of this board, which would consist of fifteen or twenty members, would be absolute, and would thus eliminate much trouble. President Hadley, of Yale, President Eliot of Harvard, and President Wilson, of Princeton, are suggested as some of its members, and then comes the interesting and pleasing part:

"The South," says the Tribune, "would secure its representation through the head of the University of North Carolina, a university by the way, which is proving to be a great factor in the development of all that is good in sports and past-times in the South."

It is gratifying to observe that the earnest efforts put forth by this institution in the direction of pure athletics have attracted attention and that North Carolina is receiving the credit due her.

The TAR HEEL wishes to say a word to the students and, for that matter, to all other members of the University, on a subject which for several obvious reasons has not received exhaustive discussion in these columns this year. We speak of it now only because we believe it is of vital importance. Our team is passing through a crucial stage. Crushing defeats are back of them, intensified by a series of unavoidable accidents. Hard games are in front of them, games which the University's prestige demands shall be won. We have a team of men who are fighters to the last ditch—men who can and who propose to play winning football. The whole University knows this, the whole University believes it. The success of the season demands that we shall no longer keep this knowledge to ourselves, but shall show it to the team. Not through lack of loyalty, but simply through inertia, it certainly has not been shown thus far this season. How can we show it? By getting behind the team this very afternoon and staying behind it, loyally, enthusiastically, till the end of the last half of the Virginia contest. An unsupported team can not win a championship.

THE TAR HEEL trusts and confidently believes that it chronicles this week the last defeat of the season. The three games which have been lost were lost to stronger, heavier, more experienced teams. They were games which, under the circumstances, it was almost impossible to expect to win. The games which yet remain are all hard ones. Not one can be won without the hardest kind of fighting. But it is also true, we believe, that there is not one which cannot be won if the team plays as it has shown that it can play, and if it is supported by the college as we know the college can support it. Forgetting the past save so far as the lessons learned in it may profit us, let us look forward to the future. The games which determine whether the season of 1905 shall go down in the history of Southern athletics as a success or a failure are yet to come. But they are almost upon us and it behooves us, each in his own sphere, to do our duty, to rise to the occasion, to leave behind us a victorious season.

It seems to be pretty generally conceded that the new system of selecting intercollegiate debaters passed by the societies year before last and suspended temporarily last year will at least be given a trial. It provides for a contest which shall be a debate and the participants in which shall be all candidates, no matter of which society a member. It was suspended last year on the ground that there was an insufficiency of time for the operation of the system, but this was largely a pretext. The real trouble was, the prospective debaters were not in favor of it. This year this situation appears to be changed, as most of the debaters appear to want it. As for its impracticability—well, if the Di society succeeds in having its Freshman debate there should be no trouble about anything else.

It would have been a severe disappointment to Carpenter if he had conceived the notion of going to the University of Virginia this year.

Speaking of epidemics, how about quizzes. If there was one last week there were fifty. Is the habit contagious?

—On Pickard's register there is a paper addressed to the Second Assistant Postmaster General, which everyone who passes by signs. This paper is a petition for a Sunday mail to and from the town of Chapel Hill. The paper goes on to state that Chapel Hill has 1,000 people in it and the University 650, who are deprived of their Sunday mail. It receives the endorsement of the postmaster of Chapel Hill, who is in favor of adding to the convenience of his patrons here. Sunday mail could be secured at a small expense.

LOCAL NOTES

—The Freshman and Junior teams meet in joint battle on the gridiron this afternoon at 2.30.

—A missionary rally was given last Sunday night at the Methodist church by the Sunday school children.

—Mr. W. H. M. Pittman has been appointed assistant librarian. This is an increase in the force of library workers.

—Mr. A. W. Peace, who for several years has been cashier of the bank here, has resigned to accept a similar position at Oxford.

—The Junior banquet will be held Friday night at Pickard's hotel. An interesting programme has been arranged for the occasion.

—A mass meeting will be held in the chapel tonight to give the team a send-off. Tonight, in the chapel. It's not hard to remember nor easy to forget.

—Mrs. Berry has recently begun the erection of a modern dwelling on a lot joining the western side of the campus. When completed it will be one of the finest and most modern dwellings in town.

—The covers have arrived and the University of North Carolina Magazine for October has already been issued. The covers are very attractive and begin to look "something like." The magazine itself is well worth reading and a credit to the editorial staff.

—Mr. N. W. Walker attended a meeting of educators at the University of Virginia last week. The meeting was attended by professors of secondary education from the leading Southern colleges, and by Dr. Wallace Butterick, representing the General Educational Board.

—Owing to the illness of Manager Bahnson, Assistant Manager D. P. Tillett took charge of the team on the Richmond trip. Messrs. T. G. Miller, R. E. Calder and Snow also accompanied the team. Coach Whitney, of A. & M., it is said, was also an interested spectator at the game.

—Rev. W. T. D. Moss preached his last sermon at the Presbyterian church Sunday, 29th, and not the Sunday preceding as had been expected and as was announced. Sunday evening at the church Dr. Moss was presented with a handsome cup by the students as a token of their esteem.

—Messrs. John A. Parker, Gardner and Sadler, of the football team, who were confined in the infirmary the latter part of the week with a throat trouble which it was feared would develop into diphtheria were released Saturday morning. Their illness prevented their going on the V. P. I. trip with the team.

—Last Wednesday evening at his residence Judge MacRae entertained a number of his friends at an opossum supper. There was an elegant spread of barbecued 'possum and barbecued pig and other tempting dishes. Every guest present declared the occasion most enjoyable.

—At the meeting of the Modern Literature Club last Thursday night Dr. George Howe resigned as vice president and Dr. L. R. Wilson as secretary and treasurer.

Messrs. J. K. Wilson and V. L. Stephenson were then elected to these positions. Several new members were received. The next meeting will be held the second Thursday in November.

—The tennis tournament has been completed. The two who won out for places on the Varsity team which is to play at Charlottesville were Messrs. Orr and C. C. Phillips. Mr. Orr, it will be recalled, was a member of the team which represented us against Virginia so successfully last spring. It is expected that the match will be pulled off about November 11th.

—Dr. Wheeler left last Thursday for Johns Hopkins hospital to have his hand treated. While doing some experimental work in the chemical laboratory he had the misfortune to cut his hand on a piece of glass tubing. At first he supposed the injury was only a slight one but as it continued to give him a great deal of pain his medical director advised him to have it examined by a specialist.

—The boys from Alamance county have recently organized a club known as the Alamance County Club. Mr. W. H. L. Mann was elected president and Mr. Holt Haywood vice president. The object of the club is to make the boys better acquainted, and to discuss the economic and other questions of interest about the county. They expect to meet again in the near future and at this meeting Dr. Battle will address them.

—The Sophomore football team will play the team of Horner School in Chapel Hill Saturday morning at 11 o'clock. This will be the first game on the Hill this fall with an out-of-town team and should and probably will be an interesting game. Not much is known of the strength of the Horner aggregation. The Sophomores propose to give them hospitable treatment and will make arrangements for them to be represented in the rooting. The admission will be 25c.

—A challenge for a debate next spring has been sent to Washington and Lee University, of Lexington, Va. Carolina is anxious for a chance to retrieve last year's defeat and trusts that a debate will be arranged. The debate last year was held in Chapel Hill. Carolina submitted the question and Washington and Lee had choice of sides. This year, if the debate is arranged the situation will be reversed and the debate will be held at Lexington.

In the Forum.

In the Di Saturday night the following question was discussed: Resolved, That the Chinese Exclusion Act should be so amended as to permit the entrance of the Chinese on the same terms as immigrants from other foreign countries. The negative won and Mr. Arledge made the best speech.

The Phi discussed the advisability of running a trolley line to Durham. It was decided that the line should be run, and it is presumed that work will be begun immediately. Faculty members were excluded from the discussion of the question. Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr., made the best speech.

The Georgia Debate.

At a meeting Saturday afternoon of those who intend entering the contest for a position on the Georgia debate, the following question was agreed on and submitted to Georgia, "Resolved, That the tariff policy of the United States should be revised on the basis of a tariff for revenue only." Georgia has the choice of sides. The debate this year according to the stipulations, will be held in Chapel Hill next April.

It is probable that the preliminary contest will be held some time this fall. All who have any gift whatever in the art of debate should enter the contest and proceed to make it interesting for somebody.

Another Standstill Game.

The Freshmen and Sophomore teams met for the second time last Saturday morning in an attempt to settle the question of supremacy, but the attempt was fruitless. When the referee's whistle blew at the end of the second half the score was that same old story, nothing to nothing, satisfactory, in this instance, to neither of the combatants.

Raney, for the Sophomores, kicked off to about the Freshmen's 20 yard line and the ball was returned only a few yards. The Sophs forced the Freshmen to kick, blocked the kick and got possession of the ball. It was soon lost, however, on a fumble and the Freshmen took it back up the field, MacRae leading off with a good end run. The Freshmen were forced to kick and punted far up into the Sophomore territory. Then began a series of advances by the Sophomores followed by the losing of the ball on fumbles and time was up with the ball in the middle of the field.

In the second half the Freshmen kicked off to near the Sophomore's 25 yard line and the Sophomores got busy with the ball. The Freshmen soon had possession of the ball, however, and made several long gains. The ball went up and down the field thus, with the fighting fast and furious until the referee's whistle blew.

The stars for the Sophomores were Emerson, Gardner and Raney. Ruffin, also, made a number of good plays. The stars for the Freshmen were, Gaylord, McRae and Patterson. The kicking was good. Had it not been for the numerous fumbles the game as a whole would have been very good.

Virginia Kicks on Carpenter.

Charlottesville, Va., 29th, Correspondence Washington Post.

The fact that the advisory board of the University of Virginia has protested against the playing of Carpenter, the star halfback on the team of Virginia Polytechnic Institute, in the contest scheduled to come off Saturday at the University of Virginia, has created little surprise at this institution. Some six or seven years ago Carpenter made his debut on V. P. I.'s team. Last fall found him in the lineup of North Carolina's varsity but soon after the close of the season he withdrew from the Chapel Hill institution and entered business with his father in eastern Virginia. Now he is again at Blacksburg in the capacity of coach and player and it is charged that he is pursuing studies in which he had already graduated. The local paper in his home town says that he is "now at V. P. I. where he will remain until the close of the football season."

The Virginia authorities assert that they have absolute proof that he has received pay for athletic services, their proof being the sworn statement of a man who saw the money paid over.

The student body of the University, while recognizing that professionalism should not be tolerated in the South, are anxious to see Saturday's game with Carpenter in the lineup. Some men say they will not go to see the game if he is not in it. They say that V. P. I. has never beaten Virginia, that Virginia has never been beaten on Franklin Field and that while the game will be a hard one, Virginia will be able to hold her own.

The Sophomore Class at Harvard has voted not to reinstate the "rush" abolished last year by the Class of 1907. Of recent years the rush has degenerated from its original purpose of furnishing a healthy, harmless outlet for the rivalry between the underclassmen to a general "rough house" of the worst sort.

Carolina Downs Catholic Team

SCORE 36-0 THEIR PILL

Abernethy Stars at Full—Line Holds Georgetown at Every Point—Team Work a Notable Feature.

Georgetown met overwhelming defeat at the hands of our Varsity eleven in Richmond Saturday afternoon by a score of 36 to 0. The victory, while not unexpected, was none the less gratifying, especially as it was the first time in years that Carolina had succeeded in forcing her rival to bite the dust. It was known that owing to the adoption of new eligibility regulations at Georgetown this fall their team was by no means the terror it had previously been, but the tremendous score piled up by Carolina's fast playing was entirely unexpected. At every point of the game North Carolina proved herself incomparably superior: her line impregnable, her ends alert, her backs fast and speedy. Every man on Carolina's team played ball—football, not ping-pong. And when it came to kicking goals Whitaker was Johnny-on-the-spot. Six times the tip of his shoe crashed into the leathern sphere; six times it sailed serenely through the goal posts. Prominent among the features of the game were the long dashes of Abernethy, who on one occasion circled an end for 65 yards and in three more downs took the ball over the line.

Carolina kicked off to Georgetown, who was downed on the 20-yard line. Georgetown on two plays advanced the ball 13 yards and lost it to Carolina on a fumble. Reynolds gave it a lift of 15 yards and Winborne 4. Then Abernethy crashed through for 10 yards and Carolina's first touchdown. Whitaker booted the sphere and the score was six to naught.

Once more the Tar Heels kicked off and sent the ball spinning to within 15 yards of the Catholic goal. Georgetown kindly fumbled in Carolina's favor and Winborne called down on the 10-yard line. Here Georgetown grew stubborn but Carolina got busy. Reynolds plowed through for 5 yards, Abernethy added 2 and Winborne circled an end for the coveted score. Whitaker was called on again, made a fair catch and it was twelve to naught. 5½ minutes now since the first kick-off.

Throughout the remainder of the first half the battle continued without further scoring on either side. Georgetown, to break the monotony kicked off this time to Carolina's 15-yard line and Seagle, securing the ball, returned it 10 yards. Soon, however, came the ever present fumble, this time in Georgetown's favor.

After changing and rechanging hands on fumbles more than once the ball was finally in Carolina's possession in the middle of the field. Georgetown then took a brace and secured the ball on downs. But her desperate efforts to score proved fruitless. Finally after repeated gaining, repeated kicking, repeated failing, repeated fumbling, time was called with the ball in Georgetown's possession on Carolina's 20-yard line.

After a breathing spell the teams lined up for the second half and the Catholics slammed the sphere to the Tar Heels' 15-yard line. Reynolds secured the ball and came rushing back for 20 yards. Abernethy followed with a brilliant dash of 35 yards. Winborne added two and Abernethy 15. Story bucked the line for no gain and Abernethy on three attempts carried the ball over the line. Whitaker kicked goal and the score was now eighteen to naught.

In the next few minutes came the play of the game. Georgetown kicked to the 15-yard line and Reynolds again brought it back 20 yards. Then Abernethy hugged the sphere to his bosom and performed a magnificent, spectacular run of 65 yards through Georgetown's line. On the next play he added 7 more yards; on the next he carried it over.

Carolina next sent the ball to her opponents' 15-yard line, whence a Georgetown runner brought it back 16 yards. Again the ball began changing hands. Georgetown failed to gain and kicked to Carolina who in her turn punted, after Abernethy had smashed through for 7 yards. Carolina soon had it again, however, and Winborne made a dash of 30 yards. In a few moments more, Story was sent over for a fifth touchdown. Whitaker performed his wonted stunt. It was thirty to nothing.

The sixth touchdown was made by Reynolds. Carolina secured the ball on a fumble on Georgetown's 25-yard line. In spite of the Washingtonians' stubborn resistance Winborne went through for 5 yards and Abernethy made it 20 more, stopping to draw breath on the 5-yard line and Reynolds completed the tragedy.

This ended the scoring. Georgetown kicked to the Tar Heels' 10-yard line and Abernethy spurted through the whole Georgetown team for 43 yards. At this point Story went out and Williams went in. Reynolds made no gain and on downs the ball was Georgetown's. In a moment, however, the tables were reversed and Carolina had a clear title. Two rushes resulted in no gain, then Abernethy with nearly all the Georgetown team hanging to him sped down the

THE JUNIOR FEAST.

Pickard's Hotel Scene of a Pleasant Gathering Friday Night—Wit, Humor and Eloquence Permeated the Speeches.

The Junior class banquet was held in Pickard's Hotel Friday night. There were present as the guests of the class Professors Herty and Graham and Mr. McKie of the faculty. There was little of the formal about this banquet; everybody looked pleasant and acted naturally; the occasion was like, as some one expressed it, a reunion of a large family. From the time the body marched into the dining hall at 9:20 until the first small hour of the morning approached, there was something on the go. Everybody was called on to speak, and though some of the boys were hard put to it for something to say, they nevertheless responded.

President Herring, in the capacity of toast-master, filled his position creditably. He seemed aware of the fact that a gracious, airy short talk would be more agreeable than a leadened article of twenty-seven minutes duration. His opener was decidedly a hit and put the already jolly crowd in a still jollier mood.

The talks by the the three guests—they declared against the word address—were such as to create not only the heartiest applause, but even surprise at the wholesome humor displayed. Prof. Herty was not well known here; he had come from another State, and was not familiar with the ways of the University. It was hardly possible to expect him to be in complete harmony with our life; but the degree of knowledge and adaptability displayed by him on this occasion at once marked him as a favorite at the University. He simply had in him the spirit an alumnus is supposed to have. Mr. Herty emphasized the fact that though a student chops wood to enable him to pursue his studies in college, he does not lose thereby, but is esteemed for so doing.

Professor Graham spoke feelingly of various phases of University life, of the advantages students of the present have over students of the past, of the better relations obtaining now between both students and teachers as compared to the past. The burden of his talk was on the oneness in class life—sinking individuality for the whole class. This, Mr. Graham said, had been done to a marked degree.

Mr. McKie talked about the advantages of having a class, of having classmates, of having joys and sorrows in common. He had been denied this boon, he said. He had been compelled to hook on a study here and there without the privilege of going straight through. He also discussed the matter of establishing customs at the University and clearly pointed out why why a deal of care should be exercised in this matter. Messrs. Palmer, Sidbury and Linn responded to these talks for the class. Each had given their subject, "Class Unity," careful thought and spoke with force and assurance.

At intervals during the banquet Carolina songs were rendered. Professor Graham suggested and taught the class a new yell, which was given with much gusto by those present. After adjourning, the class members, who had each declared that his was the best class ever, marched up to the well, lined up and rent the air with music.

Sophs. Defeat Horner.

Two hundred and fifty people meandered out to the athletic field Saturday to see the Sophomore and Horner football teams meet on the gridiron.

Five touchdowns were made by the Sophomores during the progress of the game but by the voluntary act of the Sophomores the score stood 11 to 0 at the close of the game.

It happened thusly: For the first few minutes of the game it was slaughter, pure and simple. The Sophomores waded through the line of the visitors and circled their ends at will. In a very short time three touchdowns and three failures at goal were registered to their credit. At this stage it dawned upon the minds of the Horner players that "sump'm was wrong sumwhere." When they discovered that, under the regular class-team rules, the Sophomores were playing three scrubs, they registered a forcible kick and refused to proceed. After some parley the three "professionals," Davis, Rogers and Raper, voluntarily retired and the game went on, the Sophs agreeing among themselves not to count the first three scores. Only one other touchdown was made in the first half, leaving the score 5 to 0 in favor of the Sophs.

In the second half the Horner boys played better ball than in the first and only one touchdown was made against them. It was made by Emerson in the play of the game. On a quarterback run, he broke through the line, dodged the interference and sprinted down the field for about 55 yards. The Horner quarter dashed at him and thought he had him but when the Horner man rubbed his eyes and looked about him he found that Emerson had hurdled him and, without even losing his step, had gone right over the line. It was one of the prettiest hurdles seen here for many a moon.

Vanderbilt's crushing defeat of the Texans last Saturday week practically gives the S. I. A. A. championship to Vanderbilt. Texas was considered her most formidable opponent for the honor.

It is scarcely necessary to remark, here on the Hill, at least, that if the law department is moved from Chapel Hill to Raleigh, as has been proposed by some one, the change will be made in the face of the counsel of those who have the University in charge. During the years which have elapsed since the establishment of the law school and the union with the university proper, it has grown to be a very vital part of the institution. Its faculty in some cases is identical with the faculty of the academic department, its students very largely have come from the academic department, and in practically every particular its interest has been one with the interest of the entire University.

We are, of course, prejudiced in some degree, in our view of the situation. We know that the action proposed would cripple us seriously, especially in athletics, and to whatsoever would in any degree, retard our progress we are naturally opposed. But eliminate that feature entirely, if you will, and what is the situation?

Is the environment of Chapel Hill not conducive to study? If not, then not merely the law school, but the other departments as well should share in the change. Are not the library facilities adequate? If not, we doubt exceedingly if a suitable place can be found within the borders of the State. Besides, we wonder how many law students today even begin to avail themselves fully of the opportunities our library offers. Would the number of students be increased? Surely not, if the comparative cost of living figures at all in one's plans. Is the change proposed in order that embryo attorneys may have an opportunity to see a really, truly court in operation? When one considers that the great majority of law students have spent much of their time in court rooms, it is difficult to see wherein much more would be gained from loafing round the Raleigh court houses than from actual participation in Judge MacRae's moot court.

But, after all—think of this a moment, will you? Many a law student, to whom college and college life was and would ever have been an unknown quantity, has, in the pursuit of his professional career, sought "this Mecca in the Orange county woods," and here, for his first and only time, here, on a campus hallowed by the tread of almost the very fathers of the nation, in hallways which have resounded with the voices of Polk, and Vance and Ransom, breathing an atmosphere whose creation is this University's noblest achievement, has touched and felt, not in its keenest intensity, but in some degree at least, that life which, with its communion of congenial spirits one with another, its sharp distinctions, its keen rivalry, its wholesome defeats, its hard won honors, its loyal friendships, is without a parallel in the world. Is not this fact in itself a weighty consideration?

Saturday's victory was a magnificent one. All loyal Tar Heels should be, all loyal Tar Heels are, justly proud of it. A turning point was due and Carolina supporters hope and believe that the defeat of Georgetown is the beginning of better things. But next Saturday's contest with A. and M. is perhaps the hardest one of all those which we must win. The A. and M. students say they have the strongest team in the South. This may or may not be true. We trust that Saturday's score will disprove it. But one thing offers no room for doubt. Our Varsity eleven will meet a team whose defeating will require every ounce of strength and energy in the make-up of our team. It really seems as if everyone in Chapel Hill were going to Raleigh Saturday. Let us go, not in expectation of a walk-over, for, be assured, there will be none; but rather in the realization that a desperate battle for victory must be fought, and in preparation for the struggle. Then, if we win we shall deserve to win. If we lose we shall at least die game.

But we must not lose.

The announcement made recently that not only are lights to be placed in the hallways of all University dormitories but the entire campus is to be lighted up as well is one which will be received with pleasure by everyone. And if the students do not permit the lights to remain unmolested, it will surely be a "case for the State."

More About Fisher.

THE TAR HEEL is indebted to Dr. Chas. Baskerville, of the College of the City of New York, for the following clipping from the Evening Telegram of October 30th. Dr. Baskerville adds: "U. N. C. men will be glad to see this, as I was. Luck to the team."

"There is this to say about Fisher. He is practically unknown to the East, but if there are more football players at home like him Columbia had better tell them to come along and join the band. For a man who has never played against Eastern elevens he handles himself like a veteran, and his judgment both in defence and attack is admirable. Unquestionably he is one of the football finds of the year. Presuming that he continues to improve as all good ends do, he will be one of the stars of the football firmament before he has finished his term with the light blue and white."

LOCAL NOTES

—The Modern Literature Club will meet tonight at 7.30 in room 16, Alumni.

—Dr. A. S. Wheeler, who went to Baltimore for the treatment of his injured hand, has returned. His hand is considerably improved.

—In the Di Saturday night Mr. J. J. Parker won the decision. Over in the New East Mr. James Small MacNider walked off with the olive wreath.

—Messrs. E. K. Graham, M. C. S. Noble, Dr. Coker and Dr. Howell, of the Faculty, were in Raleigh yesterday in attendance on the wedding of Dr. C. A. Smith.

—Chief Cheerer Moore asks that all those who go on the Raleigh trip get together and stay together throughout the game. The A. and M. rooters have simply got to be drowned out.

—The directory of the students of the University, published by the Young Men's Christian Association has been issued. The booklet, which is neat and serviceable, is a gift to the students and the Association deserves their thanks.

—Mrs. W. H. Hunter died Sunday afternoon at her home in Chapel Hill of tuberculosis, after an illness of about three months. She leaves an infant about two months old. Funeral services were conducted Monday and the interment was in Orange church cemetery.

—The Zeta Psi fraternity gave a dance Saturday night in honor of Miss Sara Bernhardt, of Salisbury, who is the guest of Miss Mary Graves. It was an informal affair and no invitations were issued. Music was furnished by a string quartet from the University orchestra.

—Washington and Lee University has replied to our challenge for a debate next spring. They express willingness to meet us, provided professional students be not excluded. The Debating Union of Carolina has replied that it will be impossible for Carolina to agree to those terms. And thus the matter stands.

—The Musical Association has secured the Schubert String Quartette, of Boston, Mass., for a recital Monday night at eight o'clock. This quartette, which visits only three other places in the South, is the best musical number that has ever visited Chapel Hill. No student should miss this opportunity of hearing them.

—Thursday night a mass meeting was held to give the team a send-off on the Georgetown trip. The team, however, failed to show up and the meeting adjourned. Monday night an informal, spontaneous meeting was held and while the flames of the bonfire leaped high and yet higher the students attested their delight at the Georgetown score.

—A committee composed of Messrs. R. A. Doughton, of Sparta, J. S. Manning, of Durham, F. H. Busbee, of Raleigh, who were sent to Chapel Hill to find out the consensus of opinion here regarding the proposed removal of the law department to Raleigh, were here the past week, pursuing their investigation. On returning to Raleigh they reported adversely as to the change.

—Messrs. Manlius Orr and H. H. Phillips left yesterday morning for Charlottesville where, as representatives of the University of North Carolina, they meet the representatives of the University of Virginia in an intercollegiate tennis tournament. They expect to play the doubles this afternoon and the singles tomorrow. They have good reason to believe they will win.

—Dr. Thos. Hume, before a large audience in Gerrard Hall Tuesday night, repeated the historical address delivered by him at the centennial celebration at the University of Virginia. It was a most interesting address, dealing with the rise of the entire Y. M. C. A. system of the world from the Association at Virginia, the constitution of which was written by Dr. Hume himself. The extent of the movement, Dr. Hume said, was surpassingly more far reaching than he had ever dreamed it would be.

—At a meeting of the Sophomore class Monday afternoon it was decided that, whereas, the pocket-books of the members of the class might not survive the simultaneous demands of the class banquet Friday and the trip to Raleigh Saturday, and whereas the game could not be postponed and the banquet could, therefore was it resolved that the banquet should be and thereby was duly and lawfully postponed until such time as said pocket-books might be recovered from the drain upon them.

—At the chapel services Monday morning Dr. Venable announced that in the near future, either by the end of this term or the first of the next, electric lights would be placed in the hallways and landings of all University dormitories; and not only this but that the entire campus would be thus lighted, dispelling forever the Egyptian darkness which has hitherto prevailed. He stated that this was done about eight years ago and the students showed their appreciation by shooting out the lights.

—THE TAR HEEL is asked to state that Granby Theatre on Thanksgiving night will be in charge of the University of Virginia Alumni Association and the North Carolina Society, and that the teams and rooters of the two institutions will be the guests of the Associations. Subscriptions to defray expenses incidental to these arrangements will be accepted from members of the above associations exclusively and no subscription will be accepted for less than five dollars. The first 150 givers of five dollars will be entitled to two seats each. Remittances, with application and statement as to whether seats desired are in the Carolina or Virginia section should be sent to Albert L. Roper, Carpenter Building, Norfolk.

Death of Miss M. E. Mitchell.

Miss Margaret E. Mitchell, a well known and highly esteemed resident of Statesville, and daughter of the late Dr. Elisha Mitchell, of the faculty of the University, died at her home in Statesville Thursday afternoon, October 26th, aged 80 years.

Miss Mitchell was the last surviving member of a family of four daughters and one son. She was born, reared and educated in Chapel Hill. Her father, it will be recalled, who was a distinguished scientist, was for many years professor of chemistry, geology and mineralogy in the University. In 1875 Miss Mitchell and her sister, the late Mrs. Grant, went to Statesville and took charge of Statesville Female College, with which she was connected until the death of Mrs. Grant in 1883. Since then she had lived quietly there. The funeral services took place from the First Presbyterian Church of Statesville Friday afternoon and the remains were interred in Oakwood cemetery.

Yet Another Tie Game.

After twice holding the Sophomores down, the Freshmen played the Juniors a 0-0 game. The contest was lacking in things spectacular. For a few minutes of the first half it seemed that the Juniors would run over the Freshmen; but a couple of costly fumbles lost to the Juniors all chance of victory. The halves were for only fifteen minutes.

In the second half, the teams appeared more evenly matched. The ball was first with the Juniors, then with the Freshmen, and at the end of the game was in the middle of the field. Tillet and Gaylord excelled in good playing.

This contest was notable for two things: the perfect conduct of the crowd and the entire absence of anything savoring of brutality by the players. At no time during the game did the crowd rush upon the field as similar crowds have so often done. There was not the slightest evidence of unclean ball playing in the game, nor was either team penalized.

The line up of the two teams follows:

Juniors	Freshmen
Day	R. E. Eames
Farabee	R. T. Wadsworth
Hunter	R. G. Howard
Abernethy
Brinkley	C. Yokely
Hoyle	L. G. Johnson

The Story of an Elephant.

The Di Society Freshmen are debaters from 'way back, and thereby hangs the tale of the white elephant which is resting serenely on the hands of the aforesaid society. As has been announced, a debating contest for Freshmen only was decided upon for this fall, the prize for the one proving himself the best debater being ten dollars in gold, silver or soda fountain checks, according to the desire of the winner. It was hoped that by this means at least a half dozen might be induced to enter into the contest and aid in the solution of the problem of Chinese exclusion. But lo—the fathers of the plan builded better than they knew. Ask them. They will admit it themselves and smile a sickly smile. For when the polls were closed on Saturday night it was found that not four nor five nor even six, to make it short, no less than 34 had signified their intention of going after that tenner. And they mean business too. Go where you will, they are there. In their rooms, in the library, 'neath the campus trees, in Battle's park, in every nook and fence corner, morning, noon and night, meal time and mail time—they're boning Chinese exclusion. One of these cold November nights in the hall of the Di society there's going to be something done.

Let's see. Thirty-four speeches of twelve minutes each, thirty-four rejoinders of five minutes each—Major Cain says it will take in the neighborhood of nine hours and thirty-eight minutes.

Hail to the class of '09! They've on their fighting clothes and don't care who knows it. Here's hoping the best man will win.

[The society made a stab at the problem Saturday night by amending the stipulations so as to provide for two preliminary contests and one final contest, the participants in which shall be the two best on the affirmative and the two best on the negative (eight in all) of each of the first two groups.]

field for 30 yards. Snipes bucked the line for one yard. Gardner for 4, and Snipes again for 2. Then Georgetown got possession of the pigskin on a fumble, failed to gain and kicked to Carolina's 45-yard line. Carolina on successive gains by Snipes, Reynolds and Abernethy brought the ball to Georgetown's 15-yard line where it was lost on a fumble. Here the referee's whistle blew; the weary players gathered up their fragments, felt themselves carefully and slowly left the scene. Carolina's defeat of Georgetown was a matter of athletic history.

DRAWN BATTLE

NO SCORING SATURDAY

A Fiercely Fought Contest in Raleigh Last Week—Varsity's Goal Threatened But Aably Defended Each Time.

The leading event in North Carolina football took place at the Fair grounds in Raleigh last Saturday afternoon when the University football team met that from the A. and M. College. After fifty minutes of desperate struggling the score stood nothing to nothing, neither team being able to score a point on the other.

The game, which was interesting from start to finish was viewed by a large crowd. The University team was accompanied by a coterie of about 300 rooters who were game to the core, and the University band. The News and Observer said: "There was something very fine about that band and its persistency, as it played on brazenly triumphant with the ball in the hands of their enemies almost within a span of the goal line; there was something very fine about the hundreds of white and blue rooters who shouted their cheers with throats as brazen as their horns and would not admit the possibility of defeat; there was something very fine indeed about that young rooting captain [Bully Moore] sitting on the rail of the fence, for the most part with his back to the game he would have given his eyes to see, waving his stick with its white and blue ribbons to his cheering followers, with that look in his piercing brown-black eye which says to the end, 'Never give up'."

If the number of yards which a team carried the ball decided games A. & M. would probably have won. But to win a football game is to carry the ball across your opponents line, and that thing is what neither of the contesting teams did. More than once was the ball, through the brilliant end runs of Steele, A. & M.'s star quarterback, a recent and valuable addition to the team, brought near the line defended by North Carolina. But never did that thing occur that the Carolina team did not rally magnificently and present to the onslaught of the charging cadets an impregnable, iron wall, against which they dashed themselves in vain, from which they fell back repulsed.

Carolina won the toss and chose to defend the east goal. The band broke forth into renewed playing, the rooters rent the air with enthusiastic yells, the rest of the spectators held their breath as Wilson, for A. & M. sent the sphere hurtling to Carolina's 10-yard line. In an instant Abernethy had it and dashed back for 17 yards. Reynolds tried an end for 2½ yards. Winborne tried left tackle for no gain and Carolina kicked to the centre of the field, Townsend downing the A. & M. man in his tracks.

Steele tried a quarterback run, but Abernethy was there and Steele discovered several new constellations as "Abby" hurled him back eight yards. Then Tull tried centre for five yards, and Wilson sent the pigskin 35 yards, the Carolina man receiving it being downed in his tracks. Abernethy then tried the line for 7 yards, Reynolds for 3 and Reynolds again for no gain. Here A. & M. was penalized 5 yards for offsidng; Winborne added five and then Abernethy fumbled to A. & M.

A. & M. hit the line for 3 yards and then Steele, with good interference, circled an end for 35 yards. With the ball on the University's 10-yard line, Shaw hit the centre for 7 yards but on the next play Tull was thrown for the loss of a yard. Wilson went through for two yards, but that was all. A. & M. did their best, but it simply wasn't in them to take the ball over that white chalk line and on the next play the ball was Carolina's on downs on her 3-yard line. Carolina advanced the ball on several plays 9 yards and then kicked to the 40-yard line. Wilson made a pretty run of 25 yards around Carolina's right end just here. Soon the ball was within a foot of the line but it was won for Carolina on downs by her impregnable defense.

Carolina this time advanced the ball 10 yards before kicking to A. and M.'s 55-yard line. A. and M. returned it 5 yards, sent Wilson ahead for 20 yards, lost 5 yards and then failed to gain. On third down with 8 yards to gain Wilson kicked 35 yards to Reynolds, who returned the ball 17. Soon Carolina kicked again, this time for forty yards, but after A. & M. had made a few short gains, time was up with the ball on Carolina's 53-yard line.

At the beginning of the second half which the rooters interspersed with their continual songs and yells, the two teams went at it once more with vim and energy, Carolina showing especial spirit. Roberson kicked to the 7-yard line and Shaw was downed on the 17. Wilson tried an end but was thrown for a loss of 5½ yards. He tried again and Townsend threw him for a loss. Then he kicked 30 yards, the University man being downed in his tracks. Then Carolina took a brace and started on a march for a touchdown. Winborne went over for 6 yards, Reynolds 15 through the line, and Abernethy made it 4 more. The next tries were no go and Abernethy sent the pigskin to the 10-yard line. Then A. and M. by steady gains brought the ball near Carolina's goal. Once Steele circled an end for 23 yards, and again for 20 yards. Finally the ball went over, but A. and M. had held in the line and the ball was carried back 20 yards. A. and M.

THE SMITH-HECK WEDDING.

A Brilliant Social Event at Raleigh Last Wednesday—Dr. and Mrs. Smith in the North.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, professor of the English Language in this University and Miss Susie McGee Heck, daughter of Mrs. J. M. Heck were married at the residence of the bride's mother in Raleigh last Wednesday night.

The handsome home was artistically decorated and ablaze with lights. In the north parlor the wedding was celebrated. The room was a bower of white roses, white carnations, palms, ferns, and smilax, the color scheme being green and white.

At 9:30 Rev. Egbert W. Smith, pastor of the First Presbyterian Church of Greensboro, brother of the groom took his position. To the inspiring strains of Mendelssohn's march the wedding party then entered in the following order: Dr. C. Alphonso Smith with his best man, Dr. Thomas Ruffin, of Charlotte; the groomsmen: Dr. Henry Rawlings, of Lynchburg, Va.; Mr. W. A. Parkins, of Charlottesville, Va.; Dr. W. C. Coker, and Dr. E. K. Graham, of this University; Mr. William Harry Heck, of the University of Virginia. The dame of honor, Mrs. Jones Fuller, entered alone gowned in white silk and lace with bouquet of bridesmaids' roses. She was followed by the bridesmaids, Misses Marie Brooks, of Philadelphia and Susan Clark, of Raleigh; and Misses Mary Grimes Cowper of Raleigh, and Mabel Moorman, of East Orange, N. J. Then entered, alone, the maid of honor, Miss Pearl Heck, sister of the bride, gowned in blue satin and carrying white roses. Next came the bride, Miss Susie McGee Heck, charmingly attired in white satin, hand embroidered in pearls, duchesse lace, pearl ornaments and carrying a shower bouquet of Lilies of the Valley. She entered with her brother Mr. George C. Heck, of New York, who gave her away in the beautiful wedding ring ceremony, consummated 'neath a wedding bell of smilax and white carnation, which was suspended from the ceiling.

After the wedding an elaborate reception was tendered the friends of the newly wedded couple; and these came by hundreds to bestow upon them the warmest of congratulations and the sincerest of good wishes. Among the guests at this reception were: Dr. Egbert W. Smith, of Greensboro; Dr. Samuel Smith, of Columbia, S. C.; Rev. H. W. Smith, of Brooklyn, N. Y.; Dr. Henry Louis Smith, of Davidson; Prof. and Mrs. J. W. Gore, of Chapel Hill; Dr. F. P. Venable, Dr. E. Alexander, Dr. L. R. Wilson, of Chapel Hill.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith left Thursday on their bridal tour to visit various Northern cities. They expect to be absent about two weeks.

Carolina went up against Virginia last Thursday and Friday evening in a tennis tournament, and contrary to expectations was badly worsted in the meet. Virginia was worsted here last spring but certainly had something up her sleeve for the Carolina team this year. Pollard and Chapman represented Virginia. Pollard won the championship of Virginia at Richmond last fall, and with his hard, swift leopard strokes and his peculiar jumping serve outclassed both of Carolina's representatives. Chapman from Los Angeles, California, though not in Pollard's class, was a strong, finished player and put up a steady, consistent game. Carolina, represented by Phillips and Orr, put up a hard fight in the doubles, but could not cope with their opponents in singles. Virginia took three out of four sets in doubles 6-4; 4-6; 6-4; 6-4. The next afternoon Pollard won from Orr 6-0; 6-3; and 6-1, three consecutive sets. Chapman won from Phillips three hard-fought sets, 6-4; 6-3; 6-2. Carolina's team say they have no excuse for not winning the tournament. They acknowledge that they were beaten fairly and squarely, but they think that they can beat Virginia down here on their own courts. They say that strange courts, two cold days and a strange audience made a big difference in their playing.

Both Messrs Orr and Phillips were delighted with the courteous treatment accorded them on all sides.

The Quartet Monday Night.

A fair sized audience assembled in Gerrard Hall Monday night to hear the Schubert String Quartet, of Boston. The entertainment was secured by the University Musical Association, with a twofold purpose in view: to furnish a source of entertainment and, incidentally, to make some money. As an entertainment it was a success, as a money maker it was far ahead of its accomplishments on the company's previous visits—the Musical Association this time lost only $7 or $8.

The personnel of the company was as follows: Walter E. Loud, violin; H. Faxon Grover, violin; Edward J. Schiller, violin; Frederick Blair, violoncello. The program rendered was enjoyed by an appreciative audience—for mark you, the gathering was a cultured one. Even the hopelessly barbarian brother, whose idea of perfect music is ragtime, voted it "pretty blame good;" those who are versed in such matters pronounced it the best ever heard on the Hill.

Did anyone ever know a football season here to advance as far as this one has, with as many lost games as are recorded, with such an almost utter lack of that adverse criticism of the team which usually characterizes such periods? We do not mean at all the free discussion of the football situation, the team, the work and the ability of the different players, which takes place even after each practice game. We refer to the carping, unreasonable sort which says contemptuously, "If the Scrubs were sent against Virginia I believe we'd win." Apparently the University has been in sympathy with the team since the beginning of the season.

We challenge, not Southern athletic history; but athletic history, to produce examples of more magnificent stands than those made by North Carolina's team last Saturday, when, weakened by the loss of veteran players, facing one of the strongest teams in the South, one capable of playing our team even when at its best an interesting game, with lowering defeat not a foot away, it stemmed the tide and saved the day.

That score which the Navy made against Carolina doesn't look so bad since Bucknell, who was barely defeated by Virginia, suffered defeat at the hands of the Navy Saturday 34 to 0.

For vividness and rapidity of movement that News and Observer writeup of Saturday's game was, in some parts at least, a hummer.

After all, wasn't it simply another case of "teasing" A. and M?

And Virginia has really beaten us in something once more.

Plain Talk From Charlottesville.
College Topics.

The student body should see that we never play V. P. I. again. By their actions they have shown that they are unworthy to play with gentlemen. They showed us last Saturday that they feared an investigation, they admitted that they were playing professionals, and although they won the game they won also the entire contempt of every unprejudiced spectator.

[It is probably fortunate for the preservation of amicable relations among the Virginia brethren that V. P. I. is not so sensitive to the editorial utterances of College Topics as Georgetown proved herself.]

A Dialogue.

"What is that?"
"Celery."
"What's it for?"
"To eat."
"To eat?"
"Yes."
"Eat it raw?"
"Yes."
"I never saw anybody eat it raw before. Don't they sorter cook it with vinegar?"
"I don't know; they might. Won't you have a piece? How do you like it?"
"It's not much good, raw."
And he edged for the window, where he remained a minute or so, and returned without his celery.

That Norfolk Trip.

An excursion train will be run by the Southern Railway from Chapel Hill to Norfolk on Thanksgiving Day. The train will leave here at 5 in the morning, arrive in Norfolk about noon and, returning, leave at midnight. The round trip fare will be $3.00.

There is every reason why 650 students should go on this trip. If one waits for cheaper rates he will make his first trip in a flying machine. It has been only a few years since the practice of running excursions from Chapel Hill on these occasions was first instituted. Why has it been continued? Because in every case the presence of the students and their whole-hearted backing has been reflected in the playing of the team.

Those of us who have seen football games need no other inducements. Those who have not will always regret it if they do not take this opportunity. The University of North Carolina is going to win from Virginia. The Carolina team has already decided that; they are going to put up a winning article of football. If the students believed this firmly they would pack the train. They do believe it and they will pack the train.

But that is not all they will do. They are going to make their presence known in no uncertain way: by making the spectators clap their hands to their outraged ears and wonder where the opposing rooters are.

"In the center of Africa lives a tribe whose governing assembly has adopted the strict rule that no member engaged in debate shall be allowed to speak longer than he can stand on one foot. We respectfully recommend this plan to the different literary societies in the hope that it may be of some help to them."—Alabama Crimson-White.

LOCAL NOTES

—The postponed Sophomore banquet will be pulled off at the usual place Friday night.

—Manager Bahnson, of the football team, is again ill at his home in Winston, with rheumatism. He was taken sick Saturday at Raleigh.

—"Doggie" Trenchard, the famous end, of former days, on the Princeton eleven, is on the Hill helping Coach Warner put on the finishing touches for the Virginia game.

—Dr. Thomas Hume left last Friday for Warrenton, where he delivered an address Saturday before Warrenton High School. The subject of his address was "Morals from Shakespeare."

—The boys from Guilford have recently organized a Guilford County Club with Mr. A. C. Dalton as president and Mr. W. D. McLean as secretary-treasurer. There are twenty-one charter members.

—Georgia was heard from yesterday. In a letter to the secretary of the Debaters' Union she states that fuller information as to the meaning of the query proposed, before agreeing on a choice of sides, is desired.

—No continuous report of the A. and M. game was received, as half the students were in Raleigh. A continuous report of the V. M. I. game in Winston will, however, it is understood, be received next Saturday.

—The time for the Soph-Junior debate has not yet been agreed on, but it seems probable that it will be postponed until January. This was done last year and the debate made an agreeable break in the monotony of a dull month.

□—Dr. F. P. Venable left last week on a trip to Washington, D. C., where he attended a national meeting of the presidents of State Universities. Dr. Venable delivered an address on, "Loan Funds for Needy Students."

—Manager Miller, of the baseball team, has under consideration a proposition to play one of the series of contests with Virginia next spring in Richmond, instead of Greensboro as hitherto. The move has not been definitely decided upon as yet.

—On account of the failure to secure lights, no regular meeting of the Phi society was held last Saturday night; but the few Di men who were on the Hill met and discussed the advisability of colonizing the negro. The negative won and Mr. Pryor made the best speech.

—The Magazine management are desirous of making the alumni department of that publication a leading feature. To this end they request the assistance of everyone who has any items of interest. Boxes will be placed in several places about college, into which items may be dropped.

—The Young Men's Christian Association is preparing to issue this fall an innovation in the form of an up-to-date University Calendar—meaning by up-to-date not merely that it's to be a 1906 calendar, but also that it is to be handsome and worthy of the place. It will contain pictures of various organizations and scenes in and about the place.

—Reserved seat tickets for the Virginia game are now on sale at the University Drug Company's store, at $1.50 apiece. The number allotted for sale in Norfolk has already been exhausted and many more are in demand. Those in this section who desire them will do well to procure them at once, as those unsold will be soon returned.

—Prof. M. C. S. Noble delivered an address before the students and faculty of Oak Ridge Institute last Saturday, his subject: "A Summer in Great Britain and a Comparison of the Spirit of British and American Popular Education." Prof. Noble spent the past summer abroad, making a study of educational methods, and his address was based upon the result of his observations and investigations.

—Another organization has made its debut into University life. It goes by the name of the Odd Number Club. Its membership is composed of persons specially interested in doing creative literary work, who come together for the special purpose of developing themselves on that side. It does not propose to interfere with the working of any other organization, but to confine itself strictly to its chosen field. Expediency has rendered it necessary to limit the membership. Prof. E. K. Graham is president.

—The Di Society has inaugurated quite a radical change in adopting the idea of an inactive list, to which those who have been members for two academic years are eligible. The Philanthropic society has had such a system for years, but in the Di while such a move had been under discussion at various times conservatism always prevailed and the plan had never been put into effect. The greatly increased membership of the society, together with the limited seating capacity of the society hall has of late, however, rendered some such action imperative. It is thought that by the elimination of the compulsory feature interest in debate and in the general work of the society will be stimulated.

The Hoodoo Shaken Off.

'Tis done. 'Tis done. A class team in a championship contest has crossed the goal line of a rival twice and the championship problem is somewhat nearer solution. This feat was accomplished by the Sophomores Tuesday afternoon, their opponents being the Seniors, who were playing their first game of the season.

A windy wind, which was also cold, and which dashed threatening flakes of snow in one's face ever and anon, was responsible for a very small attendance, but the game was not lacking in interest.

The first touchdown was made by the Sophomores on a fluke in the first half. The Seniors had the pigskin on their own 40-yard line and had bucked the line when the ball was fumbled and Cowles, before the others knew what was doing, had secured the ball and was gone for a touchdown. Cowles kicked goal and the score was 6 to 0.

In the second half the Seniors carried the ball to the Sophomores'

5-yard line, where it was lost on a fumble. The Sophs. after several gains kicked to the middle of the field, soon secured the ball on a fumble and punted it to the Seniors' 5-yard line. The Senior who received the ball also fumbled it and the Sophomores had it again. After the Sophs had been twice held for no gain, Emerson circled an end for a touchdown. Ross kicked goal. This ended the scoring.

The Seniors showed their lack of training, their good work being constantly offset by costly fumbles. The Sophs played a steady game throughout. For the Seniors, Cheshire and Emerson, for the Sophs, Cole, Emerson, Raney and Ross were the stars.

President Hadley to Yale Students.

What is the pagan ideal of sport? To win, whether you play fair or not. What is the Christian ideal? To play the game fairly for all it is worth, and win if you can. If we hold the former ideal, every game is a training for fraudulent business, bad politics, and an unchristian civilization. If we play with the latter purpose in view, every game is a training for that public service in church and state for which Yale College was founded.

Thick and fast came and went the bantering sallies from the cohorts of the rival rooters, preceding the arrival of the teams. But to the biting sarcasm of the shrill-voiced and boyish cadets went back one answer from the cheeky usurpers of the A. and M. bleachers: "Ah! go home and milk the cows, you farmers? Don't you know it's milking time?" That query was never answered. In the intense silence it produced in the enemy's camp 19 cents could, with perfect distinctness, have been heard to strike the earth.

"We ain't no preachers," remarked Chief Cheerer Moore somewhat apologetically after the crowd on the bleachers, under the guidance of his spirited leadership, had risen to their feet as one man, at a critical stage of the game when things were looking gloomy, and had thundered forth: "R-a-a-a-y! r-a-a-a-y! rah! rah! God bless Carolina! God bless Carolina! God bless Carolina!" "but I guess we can ask that much." Carolina responded by holding the cadets for downs with the ball but six inches from her goal.

"Huh!" remarked one darkey to another contemptuously on the streets of Raleigh Saturday night, as a battallion of cheering cadets, pounding a drum and bearing aloft a single flaring torch, marched past, "de didn' do nothin' but tie de game to come marchin' up here wid all dat torch!"

Dr. Winston (to mass meeting of A. and M. students after the game) "Oh yes, you ought to have beat them 20 to 0, but those fellows actually made their band play just whenever you had the ball, and you couldn't hear the signals." Shades of Alphonso and Gaston! How indecorous of them!

"How is it that so many of those A. and M. fellows get knocked out?" queried a curious and red-nosed spectator, as the clearing up of the scrimmage revealed, as usual, the prostrate forms of several red and white players. Just then the attendant rushed upon the field as usual. This time as he knelt by a player and held something to his lips, the something flashed dazzlingly in the sunlight, a something which had a long neck. The face of him of the ruby-hued olfactory organ brightened understandingly at once, and then grew wistful. "Gosh," he whispered softly to himself as the players leaped to their feet and reentered the game, "gosh, I don't blame 'em."

DRAWN BATTLE.

soon tried for a goal from placement but the kick fell short, and Carolina kicked to the middle of the field. A. and M. advanced the ball 12 yards, lost three and the ball went over. Carolina, however, could do little better and kicked 30 yards to A. and M. who returned it 10. A. and M. failed to gain and then fumbled in Carolina's favor. With the ball on A. and M.'s 40-yard line, Story bucked the line for 10 yards. Carolina then put the ball on the 25-yard line and plunged through for a decisive gain but was called back and penalized on account of holding in the line. Roberson tried to kick but the kick was blocked and the ball was in possession of the enemy. In a moment, however, Carolina had it again on a fumble. Snipes came into the game then and advanced 5 yards. Carolina added 3 and then lost the ball.

Wilson kicked to Roberson who received the ball but fumbled it and a cadet fell on it on Carolina's 23-yard line. Then Steele took the ball and circled right end for 11 yards.

It was at this juncture that one of the time keepers announced that time was up and the crowd rushed on the field. As the time-keepers differed, however, one more rush was given A. and M. Steele took the ball and ran the width of the field in the attempt to circle Carolina's end for a touchdown. He was forced out of bounds, however, on the 2 1/2 yard line.

Oh! Those Freshmen!

The Freshman football team beat the Junior team yesterday afternoon by a score of 6 to 0.

Throughout the first half the ball went up and down the field without going between the goal posts. In the second half, however, something happened, something which made the spectators open their eyes, and this is what it was and how it happened: Patterson, the Freshmen's quarter, got the ball on a punt on about the Juniors' 30-yard line and got busy with it. He circled over to the other side of the field, got by the few who attempted to stop his mad career and ran almost the length of the field for a touchdown. Montgomery kicked goal. This was early in the last half, but no more scoring was done.

For the Freshmen, Patterson and Gaylord, for the Juniors, Stem, were the stars.

V. M. I. MEETS DEFEAT

PLUCKY CADETS OUTCLASSED

An Interesting Contest At Winston Results in a Decisive Tar Heel Victory—A Firm Stand and a Sensational Run.

Carolina defeated V. M. I. by the score of 17-0 at Winston-Salem Saturday. The day was a fine one for football, but only about four hundred people saw the game. Despite this fact and a hard, rough field, the contest was at all times interesting.

There were but two main features of the game—Carolina's stonewall stand on the four yard line and Abernethy's spectacular run of 80 yards for a touchdown. These were the main features. But the hard, steady playing by both teams was one continuous feature. Although outweighed, the cadets got real busy at times. On the first half, their line held well, but they were compelled to kick when they got the ball, and at this business they lost ground. They made their distance only once by bucking the line. In the second half, however, the Virginians showed up better. They hammered Carolina's line back to the four yard line. Here the expected happened. The Tar Heels planted their toes in the imaginary holes and held—held rush after rush of the cadets. Hit the line as hard as they might, there was no gain—the mass of men just bulged up in the middle and settled down again where it bulged. The ball could not be pushed over the line, and went to Carolina. A few rushes for steady gains were made, and then Abernethy got loose and made one of those long runs that President Eliot and Mr. Roosevelt have been talking about—open plays, they call them—and advocating. He ran 80 yards for a touchdown.

The god of luck favored Carolina, and she chose to kick to V. M. I. Roberson's shoe came in contact with the oval and it sailed away to V. M. I.'s 20 yard line. A Virginia player grabbed it and ran back 20 yards. After two ineffective attempts to make the distance V. M. I. kicked 25 yards. Carolina took the ball on her own 45 yard line and started on an irresistible march. V. M. I. failed to check it this side of her own goal line. Story, Abernethy, Snipes, Whitaker, Gardner, Thompson, each in turn, smashed through the light V. M. I. line with unfailing consistency for gain after gain, the longest being a 17 yard dash by Abernethy. Story went over centre for Carolina's first touchdown. The goal proved hard to kick and Whitaker missed it—the first time this season. Score Carolina 5, Virginia Military Institute 0.

Roberson, for Carolina, next sent the pigskin beyond the Virginians' goal line whence they brought it out to the 25-yard line and kicked 25 yards, a Carolina man securing it on V. M. I.'s 18-yard line and being downed in his tracks. Whitaker advanced the ball 5 yards, and Story, Abernethy and Snipes added short gains. When the ball was on V. M. I.'s 27-yard line Riley, the Virginia right tackle, was caught slugging and he retired from the game by special request. Gardner made 4 yards. The ball was fumbled but a Carolina man secured it. Whitaker then tried his hand at a goal from placement but the kick was blocked and the ball secured by the enemy. In attempting to gain, however, they lost and then punted 30 yards to Roberson. Then Carolina quit fooling and settled down to work again. Again and again the cadet line was penetrated by the Tar Heels for the unfailing, ever forth-coming gain. Naturally it was not long until Abernethy smashed through and over for Carolina's second touchdown. Whitaker sent the oval squarely between the goal posts this time and the score board bore the legend: Carolina 11, V. M. I. 0. And at the end of the first half that legend was unchanged. Only a short time remained to play. Snipes received the kickoff on the 15-yard line and trotted back 20 yards. Roberson, on a quarterback run, added 17 yards. Story made it 8 more and Roberson lost two. Here the whistle blew.

In the second half Carolina failed to pile up the score as she did in the Georgetown game and as it was rather naturally expected that she would do again.

V. M. I. started the ball rolling by booting it to Carolina's 5-yard line. Abernethy returned it 6 yards. It was still too close to our goal line for comfort so Reynolds got loose around right end for 22 yards. At this point Byrd, the Virginia quarter, retired from the game on account of a broken finger. After the ball had been carried to our 44-yard line Roberson kicked 50 yards. V. M. I. on short but decisive gains aided by off-side penalty brought the ball 30 yards and then, finding Carolina's detence too much, punted 30 yards. Reynolds made another dash of 18 yards around right end. Roberson soon punted 33 yards to the Virginians, who shortly after, resorted to the same method of procedure and Carolina got the ball on her own 53 yard line. She carried it to V. M. I.'s 53 yard line where V. M. I. got it as a present, in consideration of her stubborn resistance.

Then it was that the plucky Virginia team got in their work and showed that they could carry the ball. Again and again they bucked our line, the clearing up of the scrimmage showing it each time a little nearer the Tar Heel goal. When the ball was on her own 3-yard line Carolina woke up and did what she should have done before, presented for the benefit of her opponents, that iron wall which A. and M. had thoroughly tested the week before.

The November University Sermon—God Has Made Abundant Provision For Man, Who Has Only to Realize This.

The University Sermon for November was preached in Gerrard Hall Sunday night by Rev. H. W. Barnwell, of Petersburg, Va. A good sized audience, though not quite so large as usual on account of the threatening weather, followed his discourse with interest. The text was the 12th verse of the 3rd chapter of Phillipians: "But I follow after, if that I may apprehend that for which also I am apprehended of Christ Jesus."

"It is of vital importance," said Dr. Barnwell, "that man should have in his heart an abiding conviction in the love of God, one which cannot be shaken, but which in the darkest hours will sustain man. In religion, however, as in science, our modern conception is the product of an evolution. The first and most elementary form of religion was dominated by the idea of some powerful spirit which demanded propitiation. Gradually the idea of gentleness entered, as when the Moon-God began to be worshipped. The Hebrew laid even more stress on this idea. Finally we find Christ teaching the love of God, and the better we understand him the more does this become the central idea of his teaching.

"We have seen how the idea of the love of God has developed. Let us see how God has provided for man. The universe has been created for him, the atmosphere and vegetation sustain his life, the sea is for his commerce. Evil develops character and was placed here for that purpose. Even angels minister to our comfort.

"After all of God's munificent provision for man what did man do? He trampled under his feet moral, spiritual and physical laws, turning into utter chaos the order established by God. But did God abandon him? No. He came and lived this life and lived it righteously, though blasphemed and crucified. God did more. Knowing as he did man's innate human weakness he gave a divine strength which is all powerful in the battle with sin. No temptation is so alluring, no sin has so deep a hold, that the divine strength provided for man's reinforcement cannot conquer it.

"What more could be asked of God than what he has already done? Man has now but to avail himself of these blessings and follow after God."

ONE MORE BANQUET.

This Time It's the Sophomores Who Hold Forth Till the Tiny Hours—Theirs Too Was of Course the Best Ever.

The class of 1908 came together for the first time in its history last Friday night to participate in a class banquet. All banquets are enjoyable but this one was especially so, as it was an entirely new thing for the members of the class to come together en masse without being disturbed. Pickard's hotel, as of yore, was the scene of the occasion. By 8.45 an eager crowd was waiting outside and clamoring to get in and see "what a class banquet was like."

Promptly at 9 o'clock the toastmaster, Mr. B. F. Reynolds, started the ball a'rolling by making a few introductory remarks. Stewed oysters and crackers were then dealt out and disposed of very hastily, for the class was anxious to hear the speeches that were to follow.

Dr. Venable was the first speaker of the evening. He said that he was doubly glad to be present, as the occasion happened to coincide with his birthday, (he didn't say which one). He started off in a jocular manner, and ended up by making a strong appeal to the class to stand firm on the principles already laid down by them. This speech was responded to on the part of the class by Mr. O. R. Rand, who made a strong appeal for closer harmony among college students.

The second part of the menu was next in evidence. After this the toastmaster introduced the second speaker, Dr. E. K. Graham. Dr. Graham, in his usual attractive style, stated that he had discussed class unity, class friendship and the like subjects at the other class banquets which he had previously attended this year. In view of this fact he stated that he simply wanted to make a friendly, informal talk. He complimented the class on being so well represented and stated that it was a great thing to be a Sophomore in college. In a very impressive way he emphasized the fact that the class had a brilliant opportunity before them with the privilege of becoming closely associated with their fellow students.

The toastmaster asked Mr. Orr to respond to this address in behalf of the class. Mr. Orr stated that in view of what had already been said, it behooved him to change his tactics somewhat. He would dispense with his 30 minutes speech as Dr. Graham had already expressed his sentiments exactly.

Quail on toast, peach pickles and Saratoga chips then made their appearance for a moment only, after which Prof. Cain spoke. Prof. Cain said that the motive which prompted the class in assembling themselves there was a good one, as it has been said "that it is not

When THE TAR HEEL appears next week our football team will for the last time, have left the Hill, as the representative of the institution. The last time, but the most important time of all. Is it necessary to state that in the city by the sea next Thursday the Yale-Harvard game of the South is to be played? Surely there is none within the borders of our State or of our sister State so dead to the pulse-beat of popular feeling, as not to know that the Thanksgiving Day struggle in Norfolk is a battle, friendly but none the less desperate not merely of two great institutions but between two grand old States? It is for both institutions the grand climax to the entire athletic season, the final contest, to which every other is merely a preparation.

The question as to whether or not the present season shall be recorded as a success, hangs on the fate of next Thursday's battle. What the issue of that battle shall be, lies in the power of the Carolina team to say. Hundreds of students from this University, thousands of loyal Tar Heels from other sections of the State will be upon the sidelines to make manifest to the team and to the world that first last and all the time they are "Tar Heels born and Tar Heels bred."

It is needless to say that a hard game is waiting on the boards. Everyone who has kept up with the records of the two teams this season knows that so far as comparative scores are concerned the odds are with the Virginians. It is because we believe that the team is going to with the determination to win, if hard playing by legitimate means can win, and because we believe that College Topics was right when it said two years ago, "comparative scores don't count when the Tar Heels go in to win," that we believe we have a right to be hopeful of the result. But let us not forget that another team—the team from 'cross the way—is going on that field determined to win, a team that fights harder at the last than it does at the first. And when that team meets a Tar Heel team with blood in its eye for last year's defeat a tug of war is imminent.

We feel that we can say but little more than that which has been so often said: "The eyes of the Southern football world are centered on that Norfolk gridiron." As the Carolina Varsity leaves for the supreme contest, it carries with it the earnest best wishes of the students and the faculty of this institution, of every alumnus who has ever imbibed upon this campus the spirit of college loyalty, of every Tar Heel who leaves his State and her institutions. With students, with faculty, with alumni, with friends, whoever they be, wherever they are, there is one hope in every heart, one message burning on every lip—"God speed you! Here's to victory!"

T. Roosevelt, Jr., is playing end on the Harvard Freshman team. After each game the Associated Press sends out dispatches informing a waiting and dying world whether Mr. Roosevelt played a good game.

It helps an institution for its team to win games. It helps it more when its conduct is such as to evoke editorial comment like that of the Winston Journal, copied elsewhere.

In the Twinkling of an Eye.

Friday night. The hush of evening has settled over the darksome campus, lighted by a few faint rays from a cloud-obscured moon. No sound disturbs its passive serenity, save perchance an occasional snatch of a song from some restless spirit roaming within its borders.

The inhabitants of the various buildings have settled themselves to their evening's work. All save some sapient Sophomores, who are nervously fingering their watches in feverish anticipation of their first class banquet. The toastmaster is examining minutely for the seventh time the artistically printed menu, endeavoring to determine "just where the speeches come in." A prospective orator, with hands resolutely closed upon his bundle of written manuscript, is asking himself desperately, "How does that next paragraph begin?" while another with hands rammed deep in pockets, is attempting to find some apparently logical connection between two hopelessly isolated lines of thought.

The chronic grind has already taken up once more the "I man's burden;" the congenial spirits whose motto is, "Let not your studies interfere with your college education" have given the word to shuffle the cards; while the Freshman, no longer homesick, but glorying in the fact of his exalted position, is writing home of all the wonderful things that have come into his life, of how he won the decision in society, or of how somebody said he ought to have had it, of how his class team beat the Juniors, of how he blinded the Math professor. Over in the next room the lovelorn swain is just beginning his triweekly epistle to the "only onliest," racking his brain for some new adjective.

Suddenly the toastmaster drops his menu in astonishment; things oratorical, things logical, things epicurean flee alike from the minds of the banquet orators; the grind slams the covers of his book in disgust; the "congenial spirits," pause in the very act of dealing out their varicolored bits of pasteboard, while

MR. F. M. WILLIAMS DEAD.

Dies in Chapel Hill Sunday Morning After Brief Illness—Failed to Rally From an Operation.

Mr. F. M. Williams, Jr., of the Sophomore class, died in the infirmary early Sunday morning of inflammatory rheumatism after an illness of not quite three weeks. His condition while not so serious at first grew rapidly worse as complications set in and for more than a week he had been very low. Friday, however, it was thought that his condition was improved and his brother, Mr. R. R. Williams, of Newton, returned home. Saturday it was found, however, that an operation was the only hope and the best medical skill of the University both at Chapel Hill and at Raleigh were summoned, but in his weakened condition he could not survive the operation, which was performed Saturday night.

His mother, Mrs. F. M. Williams, who had been at his bedside for several days and his sister Miss May Williams, of Oxford, who arrived Saturday, were with him at the end. His father arrived Sunday morning, and the remains, accompanied by delegations representing the Dialectic society and the Sophomore class were taken to Durham Sunday afternoon and thence to Newton, where the funeral was conducted Monday.

Mr. Williams, who was 18 years of age, entered the University in September as a member of the Sophomore class. The year previous he spent at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, but, despite a splendid record, he was disqualified from returning there on account of color-blindness. He had entered into his college work with characteristic determination and concentration of effort and was proving each day in the recitation room that the brilliancy of the Williams family was his also. He had gone upon the athletic field and with but little previous experience had already won for himself by his grit and perseverance the proud place of a Varsity substitute. He had joined a literary society at the first opportunity and manifested a wholesome interest and a firm resolve to do his part.

Quiet and undemonstrative, yet full of healthful vigor; with nothing of effusiveness, yet always good natured in his friendly way; straightforward and sincere ever in speech and in action; ever to be found at the post of duty wherever that post might be, none was there who had ever known him who had not been inspired with admiration for the rugged manhood revealed in the cut of his youthful face or that spoke in the flash of his dark-brown eye. Scarcely three months had he been among us, yet the low-voiced groups and the quiet campus bore witness to the place he had won in University life and the shock to the whole

And what shall we say of him? We, who have known him, not merely in the class room, in the society hall or on the athletic field, but who have touched hands with him in the most intimate of personal relations. We who have been associated with him as he performed his duties as an employee in the office of the University Press and as a compositor during his spare hours upon this very paper.

The wheels of industry have resumed their turning in obedience to inexorable law, but the mantle of gloom cast over the office refuses to betake itself away. One thought, which defies realization but which will not down, comes back again with ever recurring insistence: "Yesterday the companionship of him, who had won a place in our hearts, contributing with his intelligent interest, wholesome good humor and originality to every conversation; playing well his part in the life of the 'shop'; today the silent voice, the absent presence, the empty place."

This we can say of him; tried by tests which are sure, under circumstances when the mask of self-consciousness is off and one is not on his guard, not once was he ever found to be wanting. Scorning hypocrisy, true to his convictions though the heavens fall, his was a strength of character which even while it proclaimed itself, fitted so perfectly with every lineament of his face, with every contour of his form that we marvelled not at it, but accepted it as a matter of course.

In Memoriam.

The Dialectic Society is in gloom. Once more are the ranks of our membership invaded and weakened this time by the loss of one who promised a career of signal usefulness to the Society, the University, the State. Whereas, the death of our fellow-member, F. M. Williams, Jr., is keenly felt by the Society as a distinct loss to it and to the entire institution, and has brought pain to all who knew him, the Dialectic Society resolves:

First, That the Society is deeply conscious of the loss which it has sustained.

Second, That the Society tenders to each member of the sorrowing family our warmest and sincerest sympathy.

Third, That as a tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased the Society Hall shall be draped in mourning.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our departed fellow member, to the University publications, to the Newton Enterprise, and that they be incorporated in the minutes of the Society.

THE FINAL TOUCH

A Vigorously Enthusiastic Gathering Cheers the Team to Its Final Contest—Confidence Manifested.

The largest mass meeting of the year was held Tuesday night in the accustomed place, Gerrard Hall, or to speak less ostentatiously, in the Chapel. The Chapel including the galleries was full of animated humanity and as the team marched in en masse the air was rent with a chorus of yells which caused the building to tremble to its very foundation. At any rate the cheers were good, and what more need be said? They were the sort that make cold chills run up and down one's back and make one feel that the possibility that anything in the world can beat Carolina is a very remote one indeed. For carrying power the "Ray Ray" and locomotor yells are hard to beat, anyway.

Roach Stewart, the king of mass meeting speakers, was then called on and responded. Advancing to the front, squaring his shoulders and looking the crowd in the eye he talked. "Virginia is the hardest team to beat South of the Potomac save one—and that one is North Carolina. Thorpe may play but what do we care. They all look alike to us. We ought to win but if we don't, the team is as much entitled to our admiration as if we had."

Dr. Herty had sought refuge in the gallery but was discovered and called on. He responded briefly, as did Dr. Whitaker, who had done likewise. After much solicitation he got up his nerve and said a few sentences. Max Gardner and Bob Reynolds then allowed themselves to be persuaded to speak, and predicted victory. Then the crowd clamored for Abernethy and refused to be comforted. But "Abby" shook his head with bull dog determination and hardened his heart. About this time Dr. Smith was called on and responded appropriately. His anecdote made the hit of the evening. Prof. Noble followed in his usual happy style.

Finally when everyone was fully convinced of the impossibility of defeat, the meeting adjourned, the crowd lined up and, in a mild, harmless and inoffensive way, proceeded to paint the town red.

Dr. Venable returned this week from a trip to Tennessee and left yesterday for Raleigh.

Messrs. R. L. Vernon and J. L. Craig, of Charlotte, representatives of the Southern Railway, were on the Hill last week on business.

The second team of Washington and Lee have rebelled and refused to report for practice. Two men who had not been out at work were promoted over their heads to the first squad and the scrubs accuse Coach Brown, our last year's coach, of favoritism.

CHAMPIONSHIP OPEN

Neither Team Scored Saturday in Lively Contest.

The Freshman and Sophomore warriors met on the gridiron Saturday afternoon to do battle one with another, but the result thereof was as heretofore. It has been proposed that as a possible solution of the difficulty these two teams should meet just as the first bright rays of the rising sun are gilding the canopied heavens and cease not their line plunging and ending running till the shades of evening fall. This has been proposed in the futile hope that by this means one team might prove to the satisfaction of the other and of the world its indisputable supremacy as old Sol would be the timekeeper he would be incorrupt unless there were a Joshua somewhere in the ranks of the rooters. But this is not telling about Saturday's game.

The Freshmen kicked the oval to the Sophomore's 20-yard line. The Sophomores proceeded to smash their opponents' line time after time for steady, consistent gains.

With the ball but about 20 yards from the Freshmen's goal Emerson tried a trick play which apparently surprised his own team more than it did the Freshmen and he was thrown for loss which gave the Freshmen the ball. McRae then shot around right end for 25 or 30 yards and followed it up with another dash of 10 yards. The Sophomores soon got it again, however, and brought it to the middle of field and then the whistle blew.

In the second half neither goal line was in imminent peril and the play was much like that of the first half. The Sophomores made gains through the line of their opponents almost at will, but could do little with their ends. The Freshmen found the Sophomore line a tough proposition, but circled ends repeatedly for long gains. With the ball in the middle of the field and five minutes yet to play, Coach Warner and the Varsity made their appearance, claimed the field and the third tie game was over. "You'll have to make the gridiron shorter or the time longer" said someone as the crowd filed out through the gate.

The line up was:

When THE TAR next week our foe for the last time, has as the representative of the institution. The last time an important time of a necessary to state that it is a sea next Thursday yard game of the Tar Heels played? Surely they have reached the borders of our sister State so dead-end beat of popular fame. We know that the Tar Heels struggle in Norfolk is friendly but none the less not merely of two games but between two great teams. It is for both institutions a climax to the entire season the final contest, and the other is merely a prelude.

The question at issue is not the present season but the fate of the Tar Heels for the next year. The Tar Heels on the sidelines to the team and to the Tar Heels last and all the time Heels born and Tar Heels.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, NOVEMBER 30, 1905.

No. 10.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

MR. F. M. WILLIAMS DEAD.

Dies in Chapel Hill Sunday Morning After Brief Illness—Failed to Rally From an Operation.

Mr. F. M. Williams, Jr., of the Sophomore class, died in the infirmary early Sunday morning of inflammatory rheumatism after an illness of not quite three weeks. His condition while not so serious at first grew rapidly worse as complications set in and for more than a week he had been very low. Friday, however, it was thought that his condition was improved and his brother, Mr. R. R. Williams, of Newton, returned home. Saturday it was found, however, that an operation was the only hope and the best medical skill of the University both at Chapel Hill and at Raleigh were summoned, but in his weakened condition he could not survive the operation, which was performed Saturday night.

His mother, Mrs. F. M. Williams, who had been at his bedside for several days and his sister Miss May Williams, of Oxford, who arrived Saturday, were with him at the end. His father arrived Sunday morning, and the remains, accompanied by delegations representing the Dialectic society and the Sophomore class were taken to Durham Sunday afternoon and thence to Newton, where the funeral was conducted Monday.

Mr. Williams, who was 18 years of age, entered the University in September as a member of the Sophomore class. The year previous he spent at the Naval Academy at Annapolis, but, despite a splendid record, he was disqualified from returning there on account of color-blindness. He had entered into his college work with characteristic determination and concentration of effort and was proving each day in the recitation room that the brilliancy of the Williams family was his also. He had gone upon the athletic field and with but little previous experience had already won for himself by his grit and perseverance the proud place of a Varsity substitute. He had joined a literary society at the first opportunity and manifested a wholesome interest and a firm resolve to do his part.

Quiet and undemonstrative, yet full of healthful vigor; with nothing of effusiveness, yet always good natured in his friendly way; straightforward and sincere ever in speech and in action; ever to be found at the post of duty wherever that post might be, none was there who had ever known him who had not been inspired with admiration for the rugged manhood revealed in the cut of his youthful face or that spoke in the flash of his dark-brown eye. Scarcely three months had he been among us, yet the low-voiced groups and the quiet campus bore witness to the place he had won in University life and the shock to the whole

And what shall we say of him? We, who have known him, not merely in the class room, in the society hall or on the athletic field, but who have touched hands with him in the most intimate of personal relations. We who have been associated with him as he performed his duties as an employee in the office of the University Press and as a compositor during his spare hours upon this very paper.

The wheels of industry have resumed their turning in obedience to inexorable law, but the mantle of gloom cast over the office refuses to betake itself away. One thought, which defies realization but which will not down, comes back again with ever recurring insistence: "Yesterday the companionship of him, who had won a place in our hearts, contributing with his intelligent interest, wholesome good humor and originality to every conversation; playing well his part in the life of the 'shop'; today the silent voice, the absent presence, the empty place."

This we can say of him; tried by tests which are sure, under circumstances when the mask of self-consciousness is off and one is not on his guard, not once was he ever found to be wanting. Scorning hypocrisy, true to his convictions though the heavens fall, his was a strength of character which even while it proclaimed itself, fitted so perfectly with every lineament of his face, with every contour of his form that we marvelled not at it, but accepted it as a matter of course.

In Memoriam.

The Dialectic Society is in gloom. Once more are the ranks of our membership invaded and weakened this time by the loss of one who promised a career of signal usefulness to the Society, the University, the State. Whereas, the death of our fellow-member, F. M. Williams, Jr., is keenly felt by the Society as a distinct loss to it and to the entire institution, and has brought pain to all who knew him, the Dialectic Society resolves:

First, That the Society is deeply conscious of the loss which it has sustained.

Second, That the Society tenders to each member of the sorrowing family our warmest and sincerest sympathy.

Third, That as a tribute of respect to the memory of the deceased the Society Hall shall be draped in mourning.

Fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of our departed fellow member, to the University publications, to the Newton Enterprise, and that they be incorporated in the minutes of the Society.

P. E. SEAGLE,
W. B. LOVE,
B. F. REYNOLDS,
Committee.

THE FINAL TOUCH

A Vigorously Enthusiastic Gathering Cheers the Team to Its Final Contest—Confidence Manifested.

The largest mass meeting of the year was held Tuesday night in the accustomed place, Gerrard Hall, or to speak less ostentatiously, in the Chapel. The Chapel including the galleries was full of animated humanity and as the team marched in en masse the air was rent with a chorus of yells which caused the building to tremble to its very foundation. At any rate the cheers were good, and what more need be said? They were the sort that make cold chills run up and down one's back and make one feel that the possibility that anything in the world can beat Carolina is a very remote one indeed. For carrying power the "Ray Ray" and locomotor yells are hard to beat, anyway.

Roach Stewart, the king of mass meeting speakers was then called on and responded. Advancing to the front, squaring his shoulders and looking the crowd in the eye he talked. "Virginia is the hardest team to beat South of the Potomac save one—and that one is North Carolina. Thorpe may play but what do we care. They all look alike to us. We ought to win but if we don't, the team is as much entitled to our admiration as if we had."

Dr. Herty had sought refuge in the gallery but was discovered and called on. He responded briefly, as did Dr. Whitaker, who had done likewise. After much solicitation he got up his nerve and said a few sentences. Max Gardner and Bob Reynolds then allowed themselves to be persuaded to speak, and predicted victory. Then the crowd clamored for Abernethy and refused to be comforted. But "Abby" shook his head with bull dog determination and hardened his heart. About this time Dr. Smith was called on and responded appropriately. His anecdote made the hit of the evening. Prof. Noble followed in his usual happy style.

Finally when everyone was fully convinced of the impossibility of defeat, the meeting adjourned, the crowd lined up and, in a mild, harmless and inoffensive way, proceeded to paint the town red.

Dr. Venable returned this week from a trip to Tennessee and left yesterday for Raleigh.

Messrs. R. L. Vernon and J. L. Craig, of Charlotte, representatives of the Southern Railway, were on the Hill last week on business.

The second team of Washington and Lee have rebelled and refused to report for practice. Two men who had not been out at work were promoted over their heads to the first squad and the scrubs accuse Coach Brown, our last year's coach, of favoritism.

CHAMPIONSHIP OPEN

Neither Team Scored Saturday in Lively Contest.

The Freshman and Sophomore warriors met on the gridiron Saturday afternoon to do battle one with another, but the result thereof was as heretofore. It has been proposed that as a possible solution of the difficulty these two teams should meet just as the first bright rays of the rising sun are gilding the canopied heavens and cease not their line plunging and end running till the shades of evening fall. This has been proposed in the futile hope that by this means one team might prove to the satisfaction of the other and of the world its indisputable supremacy as old Sol would be the timekeeper he would be incorrupt unless there were a Joshua somewhere in the ranks of the rooters. But this is not telling about Saturday's game.

The Freshmen kicked the oval to the Sophomore's 20-yard line. The Sophomores proceeded to smash their opponents' line time after time for steady, consistent gains.

With the ball but about 20 yards from the Freshmen's goal Emerson tried a trick play which apparently surprised his own team more than it did the Freshmen and he was thrown for loss which gave the Freshmen the ball. McRae then shot around right end for 25 or 30 yards and followed it up with another dash of 10 yards. The Sophomores soon got it again, however, and brought it to the middle of field and then the whistle blew.

In the second half neither goal line was in imminent peril and the play was much like that of the first half. The Sophomores made gains through the line of their opponents almost at will, but could do little with their ends. The Freshmen found the Sophomore line a tough proposition, but circled ends repeatedly for long gains. With the ball in the middle of the field and five minutes yet to play, Coach Warner and the Varsity made their appearance, claimed the field and the third tie game was over. "You'll have to make the gridiron shorter or the time longer" said someone as the crowd filed out through the gate.

The line up was:

To one reading the signs of the times it would appear that football, our greatest college sport, around which the memories of college men cling most tenaciously, to which their interest turns most unabatingly, as at present played—is doomed. Critics, the game has always had, unrelenting, implacable. Staunch adherents it has always had and ever will have. Ever will have, we say, because the game in its essentials will never die. It touches too fundamental a side of the human constitution not to have in it that which can successfully defie the rantings of unreasonable critics.

But it is significant that no matter of so limited a sphere has been the subject (or the object?) of so much discussion within the past months as this. President Eliot, of Harvard, led the way with a merciless arraignment of the game as at present played. True, some have been unkind enough to hint that Harvard's consistent record of defeats has not been without its influence upon the view of her venerable head. But be that as it may, the fact remains that President Eliot's speech was the spark to the powder of slumbering public opinion. Even college alumni, who would be the last to submit to the abolition of the sport are agreeing that certain reforms are imperative. The temptation to unnecessary roughness and to underhand methods of playing in order to win is declared to be great and growing.

Added impetus was given to the movement by President Roosevelt's decided stand, which brought the question into even wider prominence than President Eliot's criticism. As a result, it seems more than probable that some concerted action will be taken by the leaders in college athletics looking to a reformation of the game which, while eliminating all that tends toward the dishonest, the dangerous and the inexcusably brutal, will retain nevertheless all those elements which are instrumental in the development of an all-rounded manhood: the inspiration to feats of desperate courage prompted by college devotion, the severely rigid discipline of months of careful training, the active exercise of the mind in unison with that of the body, the development of the power of self control, the development of the power of physical endurance.

In addition to this, spectators who are unacquainted with even the fundamentals of the game, but who are accustomed to pay their good money for the privilege of witnessing the contests simply because it is fashionable to do so, are clamoring for a more open style of game—for less of the tame line-bucking and more of the sensational hair-raising runs. The coaches oppose the change, but since the public foots the bills, the public will probably have its own way eventually, provided it wants it bad enough to make the fight.

The football season closing today has again demonstrated that from a financial standpoint the game is a failure in the cities of North Carolina. It is true Charlotte and Raleigh furnish fairly good crowds, but there is in those places a large college element which, if discontinued, would make the attendance look as small as peanuts. In Winston-Salem and Greensboro the attendance is always small—because there are not enough local enthusiasts in those cities. The majority of the people do not understand the game, it has no interest for them, and they remain at home. In other words, football enthusiasts are trained, not born.

In Norfolk and Richmond there are enough trained men—by reason of their large population—to justify games at those places. Sometimes the managers lose, but one or the other team is lacking in prominence or is known to be in poor physical condition.

Chapel Hill, while it never turns out the thousands, always can be depended upon for a safe crowd at a football game. The management ought never to lose money on a game played here. Anyway, experience has proved that money is usually lost in other cities in North Carolina, and it seems to us that if there is any money to be lost on these contests, it should be lost in Chapel Hill, where the backing of the team exists. But we do not believe the management will lose money on games played here. The University has grown until it is a city in itself. It would be the part of wisdom, therefore, to always consider the claims of this place.

Freshman Debaters Debate.

That Freshman debate was held in the Di society Saturday night, the prize being won by Mr. MacIntosh. The debate was an eye-opener, the speeches without exception being surprisingly good, and evincing forensic talent which, were it only backed by a little higher training, would put many an upper classman to the bad. There was of course "to a certain extent" a tendency at times to soar aloft into such dizzy realms of oratory that the subject under discussion was lost sight of, but that was to be expected. It always wears off with time. The preliminary contests had narrowed down the number of contestants to eight and the result was closely contested. The judges were Dr. Herty, Dr. Graham and Dr. Henderson.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Tuesday was the 50th anniversary of the marriage of Dr. and Mrs. Battle.

—Examinations begin on Tuesday, December 12th and continue until December 22nd.

—There will be no services at the Methodist church next Sunday morning, owing to the absence of the pastor, Rev. M. T. Plyler, who is attending the North Carolina Conference.

—Quite a number of old alumni have been on the Hill the past week stopping by on their way to the Norfolk game. Among these were Messrs. T. D. Rice, W. Hearn, E. P. Holt and R. S. Stewart.

—Friday afternoon Dr. C. A. Smith delivered a lecture to the Freshman Class on "American Fiction." This is third of a series of monthly lectures to the class arranged by the English department. The first two were given by Prof. Graham on "Power through Self-Expression" and "The College Student and the Novel."

—The University souvenir calendars are already out and furnish a long needed Christmas and New Year souvenir which is distinctively "University". It is just the thing for an inexpensive Christmas remembrance, and the Y. M. C. A. will receive the thanks of the whole University for getting them out. It is said that they are among the handsomest publications of the kind issued by Southern colleges.

—The regular monthly meeting of the Shakespeare Club was at the residence of Dr. Hume Monday night. The program was as follows: "The Prologue to Shakespeare's Historical Dramas," by Dr. Hume; "A comparison of Basibus in Marlowe's Jew of Malta and Shylock in the Merchant of Venice;" by Mr. R. M. Brown; "Relation of Dr. Lopez to Shylock in the Merchant of Venice" by Mr. J. B. Palmer.

—The Economics Society held its second meeting of the year Monday night in the History room. Two separate phases of the Southern labor problem were discussed. After ways and means of increasing the efficiency of the Southern white laborer had been treated, Mr. J. W. Haynes made a report from his study of the Italian as a laborer. In this and in the discussion which followed, led by Dr. Raper, the fact was brought out that the Italian is of a much higher class of society and is far more desirable as an immigrant than most people usually suppose.

Life Work Lectures.

A series of very interesting lectures on the choice of a life-work is being arranged by the Y. M. C. A. The series will include lectures on the different callings, law, medicine, the ministry, teaching, etc., by strong, representative men, each one of whom can speak with interest and enthusiasm in presenting the advantages of his chosen field.

The first one of the series will be given next Tuesday night and will be, in a way, introductory of the series. At that time Prof. Williams will open the series with a lecture on the principles and motives which should control in the choice of one's life work. The address will be free and everyone is invited to attend.

Nothing Doing.

It was another scoreless game that the Juniors and Sophomores played Monday afternoon. For two 20-minute halves the ball was kept moving up and down the field—most of the time in the Sophomores' territory. In the first half it looked like a Junior victory, but a costly fumble on the Sophs' ten-yard line ruined all chances of scoring in that half.

The second half was specially remarkable for the fact that the ball remained with neither side for any length of time. There were more fumbles and misplays than in any previous contest. But this half was not without interest. Gardner, for the Sophomores, did some splendid tackling, and Tillett and Stem for the Juniors, made good gains around the ends.

The line-up:

Sophs.	Juniors
Ruffin, C.	L. E. Pemberton
Moser	L. T. Jenkins
Simmons	L. G. Hoyle
Eagles	C. Brinkley
Williams	R. G. Abernethy
Gardner	R. T. Farabee

In Favor of Carolina.

A number of traveling men have been heard to express themselves with reference to the Thanksgiving football game between the Universities of North Carolina and Virginia, which is to be played in Norfolk, Va., day after to-morrow. One drummer remarked in the lobby of the Central yesterday that he had $100 on Carolina at even money. He had just returned from a trip into Virginia and stated that the sentiment among the sportsmen in Richmond was that the contest would be the closest that has ever been played on a Virginia gridiron. The odds, he said, seemed to be in the favor of Carolina.

Resolutions of Respect.

Whereas, Almighty God in His infinite wisdom has seen fit to remove from our midst our dear friend and classmate, F. M. Williams, Jr., be it resolved,

First, That we, the members of the class of 1908, though bowing with submission to the divine will, do deeply grieve at the loss of whom we had learned, in the short time that he had been with us, to love and to admire.

Second, That we express our heartfelt sympathy to his bereaved family and assure them that his memory will remain with us.

Third, That a copy of these resolutions be tendered to the family of the deceased and that copies be sent to the University Magazine, THE TAR HEEL, and The Newton Enterprise.

Norfolk and the Game.

Norfolk is the Mecca of the Southern football enthusiast today. Beginning at early dawn, all day long packed trains with cheering thousands have been pouring into the city. Excursion trains have been run from Chapel Hill, from Durham and from Raleigh in this State, while special cars have been provided for many places. Reduced rates have been given on all railroads, and many are they who have taken advantage of them. In Virginia the interest taken is fully as great as in North Carolina and it is expected that 15,000 or 20,000 people will pour into the field this afternoon to witness the culminating, giant struggle of the two great Southern teams.

The scene has shifted since last year. Then it was at Richmond that the drama was being enacted. And the individual who starts off even now with "Are you going to—?" winds up more often with "Richmond" than with "Norfolk." But it's all the same. There will be at Norfolk the same thronging crowds, the same delegations of college students waving their banners and parading the streets, the same lobbies filled with excited sportsmen. And then out at Lafayette field at two in the afternoon there will be, as formerly the dashing upon the field of the two opposing teams and the repeated crashing together of the lines of battle.

A great day and a great game 'twill be. A hard game but a clean game, and whatever be the result victors and vanquished will cheerfully accept the arbitrament of fate.

A Morning Tonic

A. and M. Correspondence Wadesboro Messenger.

Just a few more words should be said about the game between A. & M. and University of North Carolina. The game was really won by A. & M. by the score of twelve to nothing, but one of the officials just simply cheated us out of it. It could be clearly seen from the beginning of the game that he was determined that A. & M. should not have the game. It was the most daring piece of robbery ever seen in daylight. It has been reported that the University paid him not to let us win the game. I cannot vouch for the truth of this statement, but we all have strong reasons for believing it. The Carolina team played good, clean ball, and our team just walked all over them, but we couldn't defeat them and one of the officials too. Another instance of what money can do. All of this would have been said last week, but it would have been impossible to have been impossible to have kept from saying too much at that time. Every student here was as mad as blue blazes, and not without a cause, either. Carolina can't feel good over this game. She knows that we deserve the game, and her conscience is bound to hurt her.

THE TAR HEEL has never engaged in and does not now propose to enter into a newspaper controversy. It believes that the instances in which good is accomplished by them are rare and that invariably they leave a bad taste in one's mouth. It departs from its custom long enough to call attention to the above because it believes that the bounds of propriety have been far overstepped and that silence in this case would be no virtue.

We shall not debase ourselves by entering into any denial of the charge made against this institution above, one which if true is sufficient to damn it forever in the minds of all right thinking people. But as the authorized spokesman for six hundred and fifty student who resent an attack upon the honor of this institution as an attack upon their own honor we do that which under the circumstances the dignity of the management of the University will not permit it to do, in calling the attention of the Agricultural and Mechanical College to the above clipping, copies of which have been appearing in many State papers, in order that that institution may put itself right before the public. We should regret very much to, and we shall not, believe until we are forced to do so, that the sentiments expressed above have the sanction and the approval of the faculty of A. and M. It is in all probability a mere childish outburst from a thoughtless, irresponsible youngster. But until a statement is made to the contrary the people of the State will regard the quoted utterance as an accurate representation of the feeling of the institution from which they emanate. In the view of the public the A. and M. College has spoken.

CAROLINA THE VICTOR

Virginia Crushed on Lafayette Field Thursday by Overwhelming Score of Seventeen to Nothing—Worst Defeat Inflicted in Many, Many Years.

GREAT DAY IN NORFOLK'S HISTORY

Old Dominion's Team Outclassed at Every Point of the Game—Carolina's Perfect Team Work and Fierce Linebacking Smashes Virginia's Line at Will—Varsity a Team of Stars.

The proud and far famed eleven of the University of Virginia, outclassed at every point but fighting to the last, went down in defeat before the irresistible onslaught of the prouder and more far famed eleven of the University of North Carolina at Lafayette Field in Norfolk last Thursday. Eleven Tar Heel football players, sworn to uphold the prestige of their Alma Mater, bearing as a sacred trust the honor of the Old North State, with the scent of battle in their nostrils, went in to win and won—won fairly, won squarely, won gloriously. At the end of seventy minutes of terrific line smashing and impregnable stands by the Carolina eleven the score, momentous in its meaning, historic in its importance, joy-inspiring to the Carolinians by its very one-sidedness, stood North Carolina 17, Virginia 0.

Never did more inspiring surroundings urge contesting teams to victory. On every side of the white-ruled gridiron rose tier on tier of seats packed by a mass of cheering thousands, while at the feet of the grand stand and bleachers the vast crowd overflowed upon the grounds and from side to side and end to end elbowed and struggled for standing room. On the left, occupied by the ranks of the resident "down homers," swelled by the influx of the preceding days until they even outnumbered the supporters of the Old Dominion team, the white and blue colors waved in riotous confusion, and the staccato Yackety Yacks and the far-carrying "Ray Rays" played havoc with the chill November air. On the right, loyal while confident at first, loyal though disheartened at the last, sat the Virginia rooters, and no matter how great their disappointment at the undoubted outclassing of their team by that from the rival State, never did a brilliant Virginia play fail to produce its share of appreciative Virginia applause.

The first few minutes of the play sounded the knell of Virginia's hopes. Two facts stood revealed: Carolina could hold Virginia; Virginia could not hold Carolina. Again and again the Virginians charged our line—they found there Parker, Gardner, Thompson, Seagle and Story. They tried our ends, and found at one an ex-all-American, Brown; at the other an all-Southern, Townsend. Again and again the Virginians fell back helpless before the terrific charges of the Carolina backs, Abernethy, Whitaker, Snipes, Roberson and Reynolds. Outclassed both in defense and offense, defeat for the Virginians was inevitable. But to the last second of the game it was hard and pluckily fought; fiercely fought but cleanly fought, and between the teams as between their supporters while there was ever the keenest rivalry, there was ever the most cordial of hearty good feeling.

At 2:20 the Virginia eleven appeared on the field, followed shortly

The victory is ours. Months of painstaking, unceasing, selfdenying preparation, nights of sleepless anxiety for the fray have received their just and righteous reward and victory, triumphant, undisputed victory has perched upon the banner of as clean, as deserving, as hardworking, as gritty a set of gentlemen as ever went upon a gridiron. The University rejoices and the State rejoices with her.

Magnificent as was the victory which thrilled North Carolina from border to border with joyous pride, a yet prouder record the scoreboard failed to tell. The players of the University of Virginia came to the Carolina team after the game, shook hands with them and said: "You have played us the cleanest game we've been played, not merely this season, but the cleanest in all our lives."

All honor to the Varsity of 1905! Defeated at times by stronger Northern teams, weakened at times by unavoidable accidents, backed by the confident support of a loyal body of students, not once did they ever relax their determination to win the final, supreme contest and thus vindicate the confidence of the University and the State. Right steadfast was their determination. Right nobly did they fight. Right gloriously have they won.

Open, ye doors of our Hall of Fame! Room for the Varsity of 1905!

Speaking of celebrations, judging from their work as it appeared in the papers next day, the newspaper correspondents at Norfolk must have done their share. The accounts of the game were the limit. If you don't believe it take five or six, or, we'll be generous, take a dozen of them and see if you can get any two of them to agree on any single point in their detailed account of the game.

Here for instance is a sample of four consecutive sentences from one account: "Townsend downs man on 37 yard line. Virginia's ball on 1 yard line. Carolina's ball on 32 yard line now. First down 17 yard line." And again: "Ball on Virginia's 6 yard line. Whitaker makes two yards. Story goes through line for 47 yards. Ball on 32 yard line." And it was all that way. Here is a sentence that will do to ponder over: "Today's victory was so sweeping that a criticism would be either a reflection on a vanity," and this: "Thousands of Carolinians are celebrating with characteristic magnanimity."

But, after all, we won, and the rest doesn't make much difference.

With this issue THE TAR HEEL appears for the last time this term. A glance backward over the past few months shows few things to regret and many of which to be proud. The largest body of students in the history of the institution have gathered themselves here and applied themselves to work in earnest. The conduct of the students has been exemplary—all that could be desired, and as to athletics, what need to speak of that? All in all, the fall term has been a notable, an inspiring success, which gives promise of even a more brilliant future.

And now as our little college world prepares to enter into its semi-annual sleep and its inhabitants to betake themselves North, South, East and West, THE TAR HEEL extends to each and every one of its circle of readers the greetings of the season: a safe survival of the next two weeks' ordeal, a Merry, Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Suppose the Navy or the Pennsylvania teams could have been substituted for Virginia without apprising Carolina of the change, wonder if the result would have been different.

Yes, we're carrying a "scare head" this week, but you certainly can't call us "yellow." We provided against that. Besides, we don't beat Virginia every day in the year, you know.

And the Indians can't claim any of the credit this time either.

The Fortunate Ones.

At a meeting of the athletic advisory committee Monday afternoon the following football players were given the right to add a star to their sweater: Roberson, Townsend, Seagle, Winborne, Story, Whitaker.

The following were awarded sweaters: Gardner, Thompson, Sader, Parker, Brown, Snipes, H., Snipes, E., Abernethy, and Reynolds.

Mr. J. H. D'Alemberte was elected manager of the track team. Mr. R. R. Reynolds was elected captain of the track team a few days ago.

Captain Gardner

At a meeting of the Varsity football team Tuesday night Mr. Max Gardner was chosen captain of the next year's team. The choice is one that will meet with general commendation. Mr. Gardner has played with our team but one season, but has demonstrated that he is a capable, experienced player, who will make an efficient captain to lead our team to victory next year.

LOCAL NOTES.

—The Eubanks Drug Company gave a box of cigars for every touchdown, the cigars to be divided among the team.

—Your subscription to THE TAR HEEL is now due and the management is financially defunct. This is a gentle reminder to pay up.

Mr. L. F. Abernethy, who played such brilliant football during the past season, has been initiated into the Golden Fleece. At the close of the game last Thursday the colors of the order were pinned on him by Messrs. Townsend and Winborne, the other members of the order who played on the football team.

—Capt. Foy Roberson is like Carpenter in one respect: he has beaten Virginia and says he has written the last page of his history as an athlete. He will be in college next year but, however much he would like to play, he has decided to cut it out for good and no amount of persuasion can dissuade him.

—A pleasing feature of the team's trip to Norfolk was their reception at Portsmouth. Here they were met by the private yacht of Mr. Robt. Denning, which was exquisitely decorated in white and blue, and conveyed across the bay. The party consisted of Mr. Dan G. Fowle, a University alumnus, Mr. T. G. Miller, of the Carolina management, and Mr. Fowle's friends, Mr. and Mrs. Robt. Denning, of Ohio, Mrs. Lumsden and Miss Burrows.

—Much confusion resulted in Norfolk Thursday night from the unexpected failure of the number of theatre tickets allotted to the Carolina students to meet the demand. This confusion was increased by the placing of burly policemen, every one of whom could have made the All-American team with ease and by the side of whom Coach Warner (who is no mosquito) would have turned pale and withered away, at the entrance of the Monticello and the refusing to permit any one to enter. President Howard, of the Athletic Association, asks THE TAR HEEL to "sorter splanify" things. The crowd was so dense that he gave the tickets to the students just as he happened to meet them. When all were gone he tried to make arrangements for the admission of the students who had no tickets, but found that this was impossible, as only a certain number of seats were reserved.

Raleigh Times.

All of us in North Carolina are delighted that President Roosevelt did not issue a proclamation to stop all football games before the University of North Carolina succeeded in whipping so great an institution as the University of Virginia. It was a clean, straight victory, honestly and magnificently won. Our team was the best, the men were in excellent training and they played without resorting to brutality. The ease with which they covered themselves with glory yesterday proved that North Carolina is greater than her rival. The whole State is proud of its young men and proud that they know how to play a decent game and that they neither countenance nor sanction the tactics which have brought the sport into disrepute.

Abernethy hurdled the line for 2 yards, but he was thrown heavily on his face. His injury was very painful, and he was unable to resume play for several minutes. Whitaker was the next called upon and he took 3 yards through left tackle. Virginia was penalized 5 yards for another offside play, which placed the ball on her own 15-yard line. Snipes was sent through right and Abernethy also made a small gain. On the first down Whitaker plunged through left tackle for a gain of 4 yards, and Abernethy made two, placing the ball on Virginia's 1-yard line. Story was shoved over for the third touchdown, and the goal was kicked. Time, 3.35.

Score: Carolina, 17; Virginia, 0. Randolph kicked off to Roberson, who was thrown in his tracks by Barry, on the 20-yard line. Thompson made a yard and Roberson punted out to Crawford on Virginia's 55-yard line. Virginia here took a spurt and by a succession of line plunges by Waples, Johnson and Crawford, gained 16 yards. In attempting a trick play around left end Waples was thrown back for a small loss. On the next play Johnson got three yards through center, and in failing to gain on the following try at center the ball went over to Carolina on downs.

Carolina got 5 yards on an offside play. At this juncture Crawford was put out of the game for slugging, and Maddox went in as his successor. Towards the latter part of the game Carolina resorted to kicking to a considerable extent and kept the ball well out of danger line. Roberson punted to Randolph on Virginia's 28-yard line. Johnson plunged through center for 4 yards and then darted through left tackle for 7 more. Waples fumbled and Carolina got the ball.

In the next scrimmage Whitaker was hurt but was able to resume play after a few moments. Then Abernethy was sent through center for 10 yards. Whitaker was injured again and sent to the sidelines against his will, Reynolds replacing him. On third down with 6 yards to gain Roberson punted. The ball struck Barry who was running back to catch it, and a Carolina player fell on it. The ball was on Virginia's 13 yard line. Snipes made 5 yards through right tackle and Thompson took 2 in the same spot. Story went through center for 3 yards and Carolina was penalized 15 for holding. In the next play Virginia lost 5 for being offside. The ball was fumbled and Virginia got it on her 8 yard line.

Johnson, who had done most of the gaining for Virginia up to that time, did some brilliant offensive work in the remaining few minutes of the game. He circled left end for 10 yards, and followed it up with a like gain on a bluff at kicking. He tried the same trick again and added 12 yards. Virginia fumbled but the ball was regained, Johnson capturing it and making 2 yards. Johnson kicked and the ball sailed out of bounds on Carolina's 30 yard line. Roberson kicked the ball back to the center of the field. Virginia made another fumble, but succeeded in keeping the ball.

Johnson kicked to Abernethy, who was thrown by Barry on Carolina's 20 yard line. Barry was hurt but refused to give up. In the next four plays Carolina advanced 9 yards and kicked to Johnson, who fumbled and Townsend fell on the ball. Reynolds hurled himself against center for 7 yards. Barry was forced to retire. Story on two rushes made 8 yards and time was called with the ball in Carolina's possession on Virginia's 20 yard line.

after by the North Carolinians, both teams receiving tremendous ovations. Signal practice followed for a few minutes after which the teams lined up for the kickoff, Virginia defending the west goal. In the very centre of the gridiron stood the leathern sphere poised on end. Back of it stood Roberson, his arms akimbo, his eyes upon the ball. The multitude in grandstands and on the sidelines ceased cheering and leaned forward to see the first act of the drama. Suddenly Roberson ran forward and with him charged down the field the two opposing lines. The toe of his shoe struck the pigskin squarely and it soared aloft, dropping to earth on the Virginians' 2-yard line. Crawford grasped it and dashed back for 15 yards before a Carolina man hurled him to the earth. Then Crawford took the ball and smashed through left tackle for 4 yards. Again Virginia bucked the line but Carolina's strong defence held her to a gain of barely a yard. The Tar Heels in the next play were too eager and lost 5 yards for offside playing. Randolph fumbled the ball but recovered it for Virginia. An effort through centre was met with magnificent defense by Carolina, Virginia failing to gain. Virginia then tried holding and lost 15 yards at this. On the third down Virginia punted for 30 yards to the 40 yard line, the Carolina man being downed in his tracks.

On a tandem play Whitaker bucked the center for 6 yards. Snipes followed with two short gains and Abernethy added 4 yards more through the line, the necessary distance. Carolina was crushing the Virginians' defense as with a battering ram. Whitaker on the next play went through left tackle for a good gain but Carolina also had tried the holding tactics and the ball was carried back 15 yards. On the second down Abernethy came smashing through center for 7 yards. The loss on the penalty was too great to be made up however, and Carolina punted to Virginia, who brought the ball to the 35 yard line. Once more she tried center and once more she failed. Then Waples went through for 1 yard gain, and Virginia punted out of bounds at the 30 yard line and Carolina got the ball.

Then Carolina settled down to work. Plunge after plunge was made into the Virginia line for short but steady gains which carried the ball across the field. Abernethy was the star buckler, but every man was in every play. In vain did Virginia rally ever and anon and throw herself desperately in front of the plays. On came Carolina, steadily, steadily, every man in his place, like some grim, inexorable machine. Exactly at 2.52 Story went through and over for the first touchdown.

The crowd on the Carolina bleachers rose to their feet in a frenzy of delight, waved their Tar Heel pennants and rent the air with Tar Heel shouts. Over on the opposing bleachers deathlike silence reigned. Whitaker failed to kick goal, owing to the strong wind, and the score stood: North Carolina 5, Virginia 0.

For the second time the teams lined up, having changed positions, and Johnson, for Virginia, kicked out of bounds. The ball was brought back and he sent it to Whitaker on the 10 yard line.

Whitaker was sent through center for 3 yards and Thompson followed with 2 more through left tackle. Whitaker, Abernethy and Snipes made small gains in the line, followed by a good gain by Thompson over center. Virginia was offside and lost 5 yards. In the next play Carolina was guilty of holding and lost 15 yards. Roberson punted to Virginia's 30 yard line and Crawford fumbled the ball, but recaptured it.

Johnson tried the Carolina line for three small gains and in a desperate scrimmage Hopkins was hurt and retired, Woods taking his place. Crawford tried to punt, but he was too slow and the ball was blocked.

The oval bounded over the side line and a Carolina man fell on it. The ball was on Carolina's 30 yard line. Snipes skirted right end for 4 yards, and was followed by Abernethy and Whitaker, who plunged into the line for 5 yards. Both teams were playing fiercely. Abernethy tried center but lost 10 yards. He repeated the effort and got 5 yards. With the ball on the enemy's 5 yard line Snipes made 1 yard and Snipes was carried over for the second touchdown. Whitaker kicked an easy goal. Score, Carolina 11, Virginia 0.

Again the teams lined up and Randolph slammed the sphere to Carolina's goal line and Whitaker returned it 14 yards. The ball after changing hands more than once was brought to Carolina's 35 yard line and the first half ended with the ball here in Virginia's possession.

After a few minutes' rest the battle was resumed and Johnson kicked to Abernethy, who brought the ball back 20 yards before he was downed. Abernethy shot through left tackle for 7 yards, and Snipes came around right end for 5 more. Abernethy took advantage of another hole in the line and plunged through for 10 yards. Whitaker was called upon but failed. The ball was in the middle of the field and Snipes ran around right end for a 5 yard gain.

Abernethy hurled himself against the Virginia line and had gained 10 yards before he was stopped. The Tar Heel boys were tearing the Virginia line like paper. Snipes failed in an attempt to skirt left end, being beautifully tackled by Barry. Abernethy came against center for 3 yards and Thompson added 2. Thompson dashed through right tackle and covered 5 yards.

THE TAR HEEL.

Vol. 14.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, JANUARY 11, 1906.

No. 12.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

THAT BASEBALL TEAM.

Just a Glimpse Into the Future, Don't You Know?—Outlook for a Winning Team Good.

A tradition which has come down through the years and which has gathered so much momentum that THE TAR HEEL dares not violate it is that its first issue in the spring should contain a writeup of the baseball prospects for the coming season. So, despite the fact that two months must elapse before the first contest, and the fact that in North Carolina baseball is anything but a January sport, here goes.

The first essential for a good team—a good coach—is on the Hill in the person of Dr. Lawson, who officiated in that capacity last year and delivered the goods in the shape of a team which shut out A. and M. and twice lowered Virginia's colors, thus establishing its claim to the Southern championship. Dr. Lawson at once took rank among the best coaches Carolina has had and his presence is a guarantee that the best team possible will be developed from the material at his disposal.

Coach Lawson thinks that the prospects this spring, while not so bright as they were last year, are, nevertheless, good, so far as it is possible to judge thus early in the season. Captain Stem, last year's crack first baseman; Sitton, who won for himself last spring a reputation second to that of no twirler on the Southern college diamond; Thompson, the champion hitter of the 1905 Varsity and all round "athletic bull," outfielder and pitcher; Calder, Winborne, and James, J. B., outfielders—all of the 1905 Varsity, and James, W., substitute catcher, are back and will play, presumably, for their old positions, though shifting is always in order.

In addition to these several new men who promise well are, Cunningham, pitcher, Montgomery, infield and pitcher, Shull, outfielder, and Fox, infielder. In addition to these, several of the players on last year's second team who showed up well are back, Emerson, second baseman, and Patterson, pitcher, who were in college last fall, will not return this spring.

Regular work has not commenced and is of course impracticable for a while, but Coach Lawson has been practicing his pitchers and catchers in the gymnasium throughout the fall. More regular practice will begin about the first of February.

When and Where We're Going to Do It.

Below THE TAR HEEL publishes exclusively and for the first time the baseball schedule for the coming season, as arranged by Manager Miller. Some changes will probably be necessary from time to time. Another game will probably be played with A. and M. but the date has not yet been agreed on.

It is customary to refer to each new schedule arranged as the best ever, but this schedule will speak for itself. Seven of the games already certain are to be played in Chapel Hill, thus giving the students a chance to see for themselves how their team can play. Especially also does the Northern trip with its eight games do credit to the manager's skill. A noteworthy departure from previous schedules is that the last one of the series of three games with Virginia for the Southern championship will be played in Chapel Hill instead of in Charlottesville as previously.

Why the Bible Should Be Studied.

The Young Men's Christian Association held a mid-term Bible study rally in the Chapel Sunday afternoon, 7th. A good crowd was present.

Dr. C. Alphonso Smith spoke first. He stressed three facts which enhance the desirability of a knowledge of the Bible: the strengthened power of appreciating literature; the feeling of confidence inspired by an accurate knowledge of the Scriptures and unchallenged ability to use it to advantage under all circumstances; the moral uplift resulting from a study of Scriptural ideals. Dr. Venable next spoke. He enlarged upon the points made by Dr. Smith and showed the superior advantages possessed by a University which has an effective Y. M. C. A. organization. Messrs. Mann and Hughes, of the association, then discussed the work in detail.

JUST RANDOM REMARKS.

Considerable interest is always felt in the making up of an All-American football team at the end of each season. It is, in each case, an imaginary team composed of the men who, in the opinion of its sponsor, are the eleven best players on the American gridiron. In the weeks following Thanksgiving, authorities on the national college sport say unto themselves: "Lo, I will make out an All-America," and with confidence begin the task, passing with impunity on the merits of players whom they have never seen. Naturally, therefore, such teams are sometimes colored by a more or less sectional spirit or of regard for one's Alma Mater. The Westerner knows little of Eastern teams save by hearsay, while the Easterner knows equally little of the Western and Southern teams. For instance, so far as we know, no Southerner has ever won a place on the team of Walter Camp, which is generally recognized as being the most official. But it is highly unreasonable to suppose that out of the thousands of Southern students not one player has ever been developed who is preeminent in his position.

There is one gentleman in particular who judging alone from what he has done to our team on two occasions, as compared to our showing against Northern teams containing three or more All-Americans, would, to the layman, appear to have won his position indisputably. Mr. Carpenter, of V. P. I., probably the first half back in the world, is, in the case of all the teams save one, conspicuous only by his absence. The fact that he has nearly doubled the four year limit which governs Northern colleges probably accounts for his being passed over in silence.

But did you know that Carolina had an All-American last fall? The full back on Staffer's team is no other than Abernethy, our own star full. Mr. Staffer is of the University of Pennsylvania and was one of the officials in the Virginia-Carolina contest, where he was visibly impressed with Abernethy's brilliant line smashing. This honor to a Carolina player is highly gratifying to all who are interested in the least in University athletics. Carolina men who are judges of football playing believe that if the other experts had seen him play, they, too, would have chosen him. At any rate it is an honor well and worthily won.

The football season is over but here is an incident that will bear telling. It was over in Mississippi and happened towards the close of the season. Cumberland was engaged in a match game with the A. & M. College of Mississippi, being well in the lead. The ball was in Cumberland's possession in her own territory. Suddenly one of her halfbacks took the ball and made a brilliant dash around an end, clearing almost the entire team. Only the quarter remained. At him the quarter flew — and missed him! The hearts of the Mississippians on the sidelines sank within them. He was clear! And gone for a touchdown! But lo! as with panting breath and with eyes that saw not the halfback charged down the length of the gridiron another form clad in the paraphernalia of battle dashed to meet him. The halfback saw him but it was too late. Together they closed, together they struck the earth, and the Cumberland man's "mad career" was as effectively as unexpectedly checked. Who was the late arrival? A Mississippi substitute, who, standing on the sidelines, was unable to restrain himself as he saw the enemy rushing unchecked to victory. The referee came running up and penalized Mississippi 15 yards but the touchdown was saved for her.

Nobody knows how it happened. Dr. Klutz's bandaged hand bears eloquent witness that something happened somehow, and on Christmas eve at that. The loafers in and about the store had private boxes at the performance, as it were, but seemed not to enjoy it. They have, they say, a vague and confused recollection of rushings hither and thither, of a general bustle and confusion, intermingled with the deafening thunder of exploding giant crackers and the fizz and glare of ascending roman candles.

The first act of the drama took place in the store when some coon, identity, fortunately for him, unknown, surreptitiously dropped a match into a huge box containing innocent looking fireworks. Then it was that something happened. The fireworks, innocent looking though they were, were loaded for business, and the pyrotechnic display which followed bade fair to render the store unfit for business or anything else save an advertisement for fire insurance. Then it was that confusion reigned. Then it was that a prominent official of the Phi Beta Kappa, they say, made a dash for the rear entrance in common with the others. On reaching it he found it jammed by a crush of frightened Ethiopians. Twice he bucked the line for no gain, and on the third down with 5 to make he hurdled the line beautifully, including the rear platform and alighted in a pool of muddy water.

Meantime in the front the doctor's heroic efforts had landed the box in the middle of the street where the crackers thundered and the rockets soared aloft to the terror and amaze of the populace. In a few minutes, however, the ammunition was exhausted, quiet once more reigned, and "the tragedy of a day was over."

Among the proudest of the records established by the sons of the University is that of the almost unbroken series of victories which they have wrested from able opponents in the arena of debate. These victories have answered perhaps more effectively than any other one thing the criticism that "the University teaches only football and baseball." In the all-round training which they have imparted, in the credit which they have reflected upon the institution far and near most abundantly have they vindicated their establishment.

At present the annual contest with Georgia is the only one on our schedule this season. The first two debates of this series have been won by North Carolina by unanimous decisions. If this means anything at all (we think it should mean something), it ought to mean that we have a good chance to win the final contest. A good chance, but one which like all others is, in itself, absolutely worthless, deriving its first, last, and only value from one's earnest, tireless efforts towards its adequate and worthy improvement.

The debate with Georgia can be won in one way, and in one only: by the active participation in all the preliminary contests of every person interested in debate, who can by any possibility enter; and by work, hard work and plenty of it from now till April 12th. It is keen inspiring competition, making a man fight for his place, which has played a large part in winning our success in the past. It is to this same sharp competition, thrilling the contestants with the spirit of fight, demanding of them accurate knowledge and unspared effort, that we must look for our success in the future.

Widespread recognition of the desirability of spirited competition in this branch of education, combined with a genuine desire to repay participants in debates for their efforts, has led to much discussion in various quarters of inducements which it is proposed to offer to successful debaters. Two of these stand out most prominently: to allow to members of Varsity debating teams credit for a specific amount of work counting toward a degree; and to award to them in common with the members of other teams which represent the institution the privilege of wearing on sweaters or elsewhere the monogram or initial of the institution.

The principal objection to the first of these, that of credit-giving, is that of the precedent which it would set. There could be no question as to its being deserved by the recipients. Many debaters, perhaps a majority, spend more time in the study of their subject and in the preparation for the fray than they spend on all their college studies combined. But granting the truth of this, a moment's thought will reveal the fact that this is true also of other fields of college endeavor. Various and multiform are the branches of work, much of which is purely literary, done by students, work of which the University, as such, takes no official cognizance. In the realm of the purely literary, both creative and critical, the University Magazine and the Yackety Yack claim their share, while tutoring (to use a term more properly applied to athletics, "Coaching"), and discharging the duties of innumerable executive offices, entailing responsibility and worry, are illustrations of other branches of work.

The explanation for this state of affairs is not hard to find. It lies in the nature of institutional education. The class room work gives a special line of training—one indispensable to success in its noblest form. But including within its scope the class room but sweeping beyond it and lying outside of it, is the broader domain of the University world, demanding of each of the units of its citizenship the performance of certain duties and imparting to each a general training valuable according to the degree of faithfulness with which he answers the call. One can, therefore, scarcely do himself justice as a citizen of the University, can scarcely avail himself of his opportunity to play a part in the life of a great organization without doing almost as much work for which he receives no credit on the Registrar's books, as that which is accredited to him. It is somewhat difficult to see, therefore, just why the debater has a firmer claim on special credit than the participants in other branches of work.

In regard to the second proposition, however—Pennsylvania is now discussing it—there would seem to be little room for difference of opinion. The argument in its favor is too irresistible, too unanswerable.

At Princeton a short time ago a group of Sophomores while crossing the campus met a couple of new men and stopped still in their tracks. Not that there was anything unusual in running across new men. But what attracted the attention of the upperclassmen was that the newcomers were strolling along with a self-sufficient air, with their heads adorned with derby hats, apparently blissfully ignorant of or callously indifferent to the fact that they were trampling ruthlessly upon a tradition sacred to every son of Princeton. The Sophomores explained the status of affairs to the offenders, but they appeared disposed to defend what they considered their rights in the premises. The upperclassmen, then, gently explaining the difference between absolute and relative rights, accommodatingly removed the tabooed headgear for the wearers and moved on, thinking the incident closed. They opened their eyes the next day when, at a meeting of a faculty committee there appeared to prosecute their case their freshmen of the day before—not freshmen, but new instructors who had just arrived. And now the drinks are on eight Sophomores, who were each suspended for a month.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Registration at 11:00 o'clock this morning—675.

—The Modern Literature Club will meet tonight at 7.30 in the Alumni building.

—The election of Chief Ball Manager will take place in the chapel Saturday afternoon at 3.30.

—Question: To whom of the scrubs were the sweaters and suit of clothes offered last fall awarded?

—Mrs. W. H. Hester, mother of Mr. F. E. Hester, of the Junior class died of pneumonia after a two day's illness at her home near Ralceigh last Thursday.

—The members of the Yackety Yack board met Tuesday afternoon and did honor to themselves and the University by dedicating the annual to Dr. K. P. Battle.

—At a meeting of the Athletic Advisory Committee soon after the close of the football season Mr. J. M. Robinson, '07, was elected manager of the 1906 football team.

—At a recent meeting of the first Pharmacy class the following officers were elected: Messrs. C. M. Fox, president; C. T. Council, vice-president; L. Birdsong, secretary.

—At a meeting of the Dialectic society Saturday night Mr. L. R. Rudisill, '04, was elected as that society's orator for the Washington Birthday exercises. The Phi has not yet selected its representative.

—At a meeting of the members of the track team Tuesday afternoon Mr. W. H. M. Pittman was elected captain, Captain-elect Reynolds having left college. Earnest efforts will be made to turn out a team that will bring victory this spring.

—The final steps looking towards the debate with Georgia were concluded sometime in December when Georgia chose the affirmative of the query, "Resolved, That the tariff policy of the United States should be revised upon the basis of a tariff for revenue only." Carolina will therefore, defend the negative.

—A rather important change has been made by the Faculty in the grading system. Beginning with the next year the meaning of a "5" will be "from 60 to 70 per cent." instead of "from 50 to 70 per cent." as now and heretofore. This means of course, that those receiving 59 or lower will please accept the grade as a request from the Faculty for an encore.

—Dr. Charles L. Raper delivered a lecture before the American Historical Association in Baltimore, December 27 on the subject: "Why North Carolina at First Refused to Ratify the Federal Constitution." On December 29 Dr. Raper at a meeting of the American Economics Association in Baltimore led the discussion of the subject: "The Economic Future of the American Negro."

—The societies met in regular session last Saturday night for the first time in the new year. "Resolved, that Japan would have been justified in accepting Russia's treaty," was handled by the Di. The decision for the best speech was awarded to Mr. W. H. Jones, and the negative won. In the Phi the question was "Resolved, that taxes for school purposes should be distributed among the races according to the taxes paid in by each." Mr. J. W. Umstead was voted the best speaker and the decision was won by the negative.

Fair Warning.

The board of editors of the Yackety Yack for 1906 have gone to work in thorough earnest, determined to get out a publication worthy of this institution, and to get it out on time. In order to do this the material must be in the hands of the printers by March the 1st next. This makes it necessary that cuts of all pictures for the Yackety Yack, whether of individuals or groups, be back from the engravers by that time. This will be impossible unless the pictures are in the hands of the business managers by February the 1st. To give the photographers time in which to get these pictures ready, the negatives must be made next week. Mr Holladay will be on the "Hill" next week from Monday until Saturday. He will be in his studio from 8 A. M. to 3 30 P. M. for the purpose of making negatives of individuals and after 3.30 he will be on the campus to take groups.

All persons are hereby notified that unless their negatives are made sometime next week their pictures will not go in the Yackety Yack. This can work no hardship on any one, and we are forced, under the contract with the engravers, to make this regulation.

YACKETY YACK BOARD.

Christmas on the Hill.

"Christmas on the Hill?" You look surprised. It had not occurred to you that there was any Christmas on the Hill? Or perhaps you thought that if there were any it would be like the case of the proverbial oak falling in the primeval forest. If there were any Christmas there would be no one to bear witness of its having graced the place with its presence.

But in either case you are wrong and lamentably far from the truth. There was Christmas in Chapel Hill, and the village was not wholly uninhabited.

True, the day was much like any other. The sun rose and set according to his custom. It was not a "red day" as McNeill's kid complained that it should be. Its bleak matter of factness compelled one, in order to realize it, to assure himself over and over again, "This is Christmas." There was really, however, no getting around the fact. The calendars were unanimous in asserting it. The colored natives lost no opportunity to remind one of it, making one feel as if he could sympathize with the author of that famous ragtime classic: "You Must Think I'm Santa Claus."

Nothing exciting occurred beyond Doc Kluttz's free fire works exhibition Saturday night, and the occasional starting up of the heating plant. The train, it is true, was so late coming in, on several occasions that, like the traveler in the crooked road, it met itself going back on the return trip, but this was not unexpected.

the deserted campus and the empty dormitories? 'Twas as cosmopolitan a bunch as the University boasts. Some were from the ice-locked regions of the North, some from sunny Florida, some from the chilly mountains of the West. Some stayed because their homes were far away. To some the Hill was as home, and they stayed from choice. Some had not their fill of work and stayed to get it. Some were "strapped" and waited for checks that never came.

Gifts.

Dr. Isaac E. Emerson, of Baltimore, has given to the University the sum of $5,000 to be used as an endowment for the library of electrical and mining engineering. The gift is timely, and most highly appreciated. It will prove of the highest usefulness in helping to equip the new library and in emphasizing the importance of special departments, so essential for a library adequate to the needs of a great University.

Coming upon the heels of this gift is the establishment by Mr. Shephard Bryan, of Atlanta, of an annual prize of $25, in the University Law School. This will be known as "The Henry R. Bryan Prize," and will be awarded annually to that candidate for the degree of Bachelor of Laws who presents the best thesis on the law of insurance. For this also the University is grateful. It is expected to stimulate interest among the law students.

Yackety Yack Board Organized.

Stipulations governing the publication of this year's Yackety Yack have been drawn up and agreed to by the two literary societies and the ten fraternities. As formerly each society has one business manager and three associate editors, each fraternity one editor, and the fraternities as a whole the editor-in-chief.

The positions have been filled as follows: editor-in-chief, Archie C. Dalton, Beta Theta Pi; associate editors: Q. S. Mills, H. H. Hughes, Fred M. Crawford, Di; E. M. Highsmith, W. H. M. Pittman, J. S. Kerr, Phi; John M. Robinson, Zeta Psi; A. T. Morrison, Sigma Alpha Epsilon; Max Gardner, Sigma Nu; T. H. Sutton, Kappa Sigma; Barnard Vinson, Kappa Alpha; Hampden Hill, Delta Kappa Epsilon; J. T. THE FAR TRAVELER BOBS UP.

He Stops for a Few Minutes, Re-lates His Experiences, Lights a Cigarette and is Off Again.

The Far Traveler quickly alighted from the slowly moving train and joined a group of idle men in front of the station. "I've had all sorts of experience," quoth he, as he shook hands all round. "Been in Mexico, Panama, and engaged in several revolutions in Hayti. My doings on this trip would make a volume."

After he had given the crowd time to catch their breaths, he burst forth with, "You didn't know I was a lady-killer, did you? Well, I am. I was out in Yellowstone Park just five months ago and as I was passing along I heard shrieks of distress. I turned quickly from the beaten path. To the left sat a young woman. She was holding her foot in her hand and softly moaning. I quickly approached and learned that she had stepped into a hot spring and had burned her foot so badly that she could not walk. I gathered her up and carried her to the hotel and there left her. But," and The Far Traveler surveyed his friends quizzically, "paradoxical as it may seem to you who have long known me, I could not forget that face. I will not bore you with a description of my feelings. She was a vision and I was caught."

"I had to leave the hotel—it costs to live out there—and did not see the young lady for a long time—to be accurate, three weeks. I saw her then at church. I glanced up at the choir and my eye was at once caught by the image of that girl. She was playing the big pipe organ and raised her head and glanced into the beautiful mirror placed before her. I recognized her and thought that she was aware of my presence too. She gave no outward sign of it, however, save lowering her eyes to the keys."

"I determined to renew our acquaintance after service and with that end in view waylaid her. But, boys, she cut me dead. Rabbits' blood and feathers! but I was weak! I straightway prepared for revenge. I forgot my love. I burned to do something fierce. I could not sleep. I just thought, thought, thought! At last an inspiration struck me—I would exchange the mirror in front of the organ for one of these things that makes a person look like his first ancestor. That would fix her. I would change it for next Sunday's morning service. She would be playing and would suddenly glance up and presto! what a change would come over her. How she would feel! How I would laugh to myself! I had it all mapped out. It must work—and it did."

"I bribed the janitor and we arranged everything brilliantly. I substituted the hideous mirror for the beauty and prepared for the show. The time came and along with it the exhibition."

"Now, I had calculated on the girl's keeping silent until after church. But she didn't. She just leant over the rail and whispered something to the preacher. He never appeared as if moved. He merely scanned the congregation, and when the deacons came up with the cash, he gave them instructions. I became uneasy. And when all six of those brethren camped right near me, I just knew there would be something worth witnessing after a while.

"The congregation was dismissed. I started to leave, but a deacon requested me to remain for the after-meeting."

"I lingered a few minutes, and thinking the audience nearly out of sight, I dashed for peaceful valleys. But it was no go. I got a good start, but was soon caught. A crowd collected and that confounded old preacher and his deacons put feathers on my legs and marched triumphantly with me through the streets—and that on Sunday."

"What did you do about it?" asked one of the listeners, as The Far Traveler lit a fresh cigarette.

"I was so humiliated to think that Christian people could act so that I left town at once and went to Mexico and Panama. So long!"

Not waiting for a reply, he caught the southbound train and was off.

And a certain elderly man in the crowd of idlers about the station repeated for the hundredth time his prophecy made twenty years back that The Far Traveler would be hanged some day. "I tell you, fellers," said he with an ominous look, "it ain't as far off as it was, either."

Professor Williams on Life Work Choosing.

In yielding to the demands made upon its space by the Thanksgiving championship contest THE TAR HEEL failed inadvertently to mention the strong and thoughtful address of Prof. H. H. Williams in opening the series of "Life Work Lectures," inaugurated by the Y. M. C. A. early in December.

Prof. Williams took as his subject: "The Principles and Motives Which Should Govern a Young Man in the Choice of His Life Work." The principle governing choice, said he, lies within the nature of the man himself. He has but to study himself, his inclinations and qualities, in order to determine whether he is intended by nature for a doctor or lawyer or preacher.

The question of motives is different. Motive governs not the choice of one's vocation, but the eminence to which he shall rise in that vocation. It is optional entirely with the individual. He cannot decide arbitrarily whether he will be a lawyer or doctor; he can decide what sort of lawyer or doctor he will be. In going into any work, therefore, the young man should see to it that his motives are of the purest and the highest. The man who enters upon that work for which he is fitted, with whole-hearted earnestness and actuated by the highest motives need not fear for success.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

NEW COACH SECURED.

The University Athletic Advisory Committee Fortunate in Securing the Services of Willis S. Kienholz for Coach.

The efforts of the athletic advisory committee to secure a good coach for next season's team has met with splendid success. They have signed for this position Mr. Willis S. Kienholz, whose record as a coach is a brilliant one. A Denver paper said recently of him: "Western colleges will be unquestionably the losers if they permit Kienholz to go east." Carolina secured him as a matter of fact, in spite of the efforts of several large western colleges.

Mr. Kienholz is a graduate of the University of Minnesota, 1901, where he played four years on the Varsity football team, at the positions of half and quarter. His record is quite brilliant, being chosen quarter on the All Western Eleven in 1901. Besides football, Mr. Kienholz is a track and basket ball man, being a member of the Minnesota basket ball team which defeated Yale, Columbia, and Harvard. In 1902 he assisted Coach Williams at Minnesota in the development of that great team. In 1903 he coached Lombard College, where his team won the championship of the Illinois colleges.

In 1904, Mr. Kienholz came to the A. & M. College in this state, where he revolutionized athletics, being largely instrumental in placing that institution where it stands today in football. As a coach, all the men who have ever played under him are very enthusiastic and devoted to him. That he will make Carolina a great coach is the prediction of those who know his ability and record.

The Prizes Awarded.

MESSRS. EDITORS:

No doubt the members of our faithful 1905 scrub team have been wondering why something has not been said about the suit of clothes which Mr. Pearson, the clever tailor from Durham, offered to give to the best scrub man, and the three sweaters which Mr. Schillipsie, Jno. R. Lemmert's representative, offered for the 3 scrubs making the most improvement during the fall. The delay, however, is due to the fact that I did not know what course to pursue, since Coach Warner left without expressing his opinion about the matter. And, as he and myself were the ones chosen to decide to whom these articles were to be given, I felt rather a delicacy in awarding them to the men without someone to help me. But since it seems agreeable that I should do so, I shall award them impartially and with pleasure to the men whom I think most deserve them.

The suit of clothes was to be given to the best man on the scrub team. This man, I think, is Jim Davis. Davis came out at the beginning of the foot ball season an entirely green man as far as his knowledge of the game was concerned, but by the end of the season he had developed into a valuable man. Davis is Varsity material and if he is in college next year he will be hard to keep off the Carolina eleven.

There were four other men on the scrub squad who made about an equal amount of improvement. Those men were: John Hall Manning, Dickson, Rogers, and D'Alemberte. However, since there are only three sweaters I shall have to remember the fact that D'Alemberte had the advantage of several trips, while neither of the other three did. So I take great pleasure in awarding the sweaters to Manning, Dickson and Rogers.

The Lawyers.

The law class has elected the following officers:

Mr. W. T. Wilson, president.
Mr. J. R. Moore, vice-president.
Mr. J. H. McMullen, secretary and treasurer.
Mr. W. B. Smoot, judge.
Mr. Sykes, solicitor.
Mr. James S. MacNider, clerk.
Mr. W. V. Pryor, sheriff.
Mr. T. B. Higdon, coroner.
Mr. J. W. Winborne, class representative on the University Council.

Ball Managers.

The Senior class and the German Club Saturday afternoon elected the following: Chief Ball Manager, Mr. Bennette Perry; sub-managers: Messrs. S. T. Nicholson, John M. Robinson, Holt Haywood, H. C. Jones, A. T. Morrison, Hubert Hill.

The Forsyth Boys Combine.

The Forsyth County students have formed—no, not a trust, but merely a county club, with 17 charter members. Officers were elected as follows:

Mr. Chas. T. Woollen, president.
Mr. J. B. Goslen, first vice president.
Mr. J. B. Douthit, second vice president.
Mr. James A. Gray, Jr., secretary.
Mr. J. B. (for the third time) Davis, treasurer.

Modern Literature Club.

At a meeting of the Modern Literature Club Thursday evening the following papers were read:

"Folk Lore in Southern Literature"—Mr. J. T. Cobb.
"Some Moral Questions Suggested by Tolstoi"—Mr. T. B. Higdon.
"Minor Poets of the South"—Mr. W. H. L. Mann.
"Contemporary Poetry"—Mr. E. K. Graham.

—Mr. S. Y. McAden, '08, has gone to his home in Charlotte to serve in the capacity of a witness in the Wadsworth-Gardner case.

AN OBSERVER'S OBSERVATIONS

One of the familiar characters of the town is a colored preacher, one of the old fashioned type, who works six days in the week and preaches on the seventh. He is none of your new-fangled, "high-lar'nt" preachers, with professedly advanced ideas, pompous ways and beaver hats. His manners are courtly, his demeanor humble, his dominant idea—religion. You can begin conversing with him on almost any subject but in a few minutes, probably before you are aware of it, he will have shifted the topic of conversation to something concerning or bordering on his favorite theme.

A group of upperclassmen, more for pastime than for anything else, engaged him in conversation the other day. They were students of philosophy, they had dipped deep into the insoluble questions of life, and turned to the colored leader of his people's spiritual life, to compare with theirs his point of view. To the Observer it was an intensely interesting conversation. The students, while careful not to say anything in a light or irreverent way which was calculated in any way to undermine his simple faith, plied the old man from time to time with questions which have baffled the intellects of the philosophers and divided the theologians since time began. With ease and fluency of speech the preacher held his own in the discussion.

In some respects his point of view was new. In the majority of cases, however, he relied for his proof on Scriptural quotations. Did not such and such a verse declare so and so? Had he not seen it with his own eyes? preached from it, perhaps, in his own pulpit? Occasionally when enunciating some truth which, in its universality, seemed to sweep beyond all racial distinctions and include all humanity, a new light flashed in his eye, his voice was that of one speaking with authority. He was no longer one of a despised and alien race, conversing with superiors, but a human being, on a footing of absolute equality with every other. And then the light in his eyes vanished as suddenly as it had appeared, his voice fell to its habitual pitch. He was once more an inferior, a hewer of wood, a drawer of water, polite, obsequious, respectful.

"No wonder," thought the Observer, "that the negro clings to his religion, since it is the only thing in all the world which gives him hope of ultimate recognition by his fellow-creatures, the only thing which recognizes him as a being of intrinsic worth, capable of infinite development."

Finally the negro turned to go. "Now, gentlemen," said he, "You've been askin' me questions and I've answered them the best I could. I want to ask you just one.

You all are educated and I am ignorant. You've studied the books, while I don't know nothin'. Tell me this," his eyes flashing with an eager light, "What is the human soul?"

Only one question in all the realm of theological speculation had risen to perplex him. To solve it was the consuming desire of his life. He appealed to the students, to their knowledge, their learning, for light, and they were silent. He had answered, in some sort, their questions. They dared not attempt to answer his.

Ever since 'way back in the long, long ago when the staid old fathers of the University met 'neath the spreading branches of the historic poplar and made their decision as to the location of this institution, Chapel Hill has been regarded as a village. The primeval forest fell beneath the vigorous blows of the pioneer woodsman. A solitary building arose on what is known as the University campus, bearing witness that culture was not yet dead, prophesying eloquently of the future. With the erection of the building came as its accompaniment, a store, which round grew up a ragged settlement. A forest road was laid off and called a street, and the village of Chapel Hill was born. This, mark you, was in the long ago, before even Dromgoole waged his mystic fight, ere Patton taught in penmanship or Miles dreamed of a singing school.

During the years that have rolled on the campus buildings have doubled, trebled, quadrupled—increased finally eighteenfold. But the village, people said, was standing still. Fifty years built a Chicago, why is a hundred wasted on Chapel Hill? In truth, its growth was nothing phenomenal. A new dwelling erected in '23, another in '51. Small wonder that the impetuous, the precipitate, the impatient, soon dispaired.

But through all the years the village held its peace—and grew. There is nothing that does not fall before unceasing progress. The voice of the bantering critic is hushed, his withering glances fall before the predestined death of the village, the impending birth of the city. Who is there in recent years who has not marked the transition? What lover of the old order but blanched at the appearance of the automobile, and shivered at the blast from the chauffeur's horn? Who has failed to hear the sound of the hammer and the saw, as they are transforming the Durham road into Faculty avenue? What progressive Chapel Hillian does not feel a thrill of pride at the fires and the firecracker explosions which follow each other with a rapidity which places the town in a class with New York City, as an inexhaustible source of excitement?

Does it not produce each year a

In the article on "College Honor" by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, published in the November number of the Educational Review one educator is quoted as opposing the honor system on the ground that "it nourishes a false sensitiveness on the part of the student in respect to a sort of oversight to which he must sooner or later accustom himself."

The statement starts an interesting line of thought. While we do not believe for a moment that the statement is true in any sense or to any degree which would make it a valid and dangerous weapon in the hands of an opponent of the honor system, we do believe that it is possible to make one application of it in a way which may be useful. We have long felt (we may be wrong) that in many financial matters among the students there prevails a certain looseness, a lack of the accuracy, of the strict supervision and the accountability which prevails in and is inseparable from the conduct of any business. We had never exactly placed the cause, until we read the sentence quoted, and this caused us to wonder if this state of affairs was not an outcropping, a misapplication, as it were, of the honor system.

The subject is a difficult one to treat and we hesitated awhile lest lacking the skill its successful treatment demands, we should blunder and thus do more harm than good. We interpreted the honor system last fall to be "broad enough to include every situation and every relation sustained by the institution to the student." Of all things we do not wish to be understood as limiting the sphere of its operation now. But suppose we put it this way (we developed substantially the same idea in another form last week): In the scheme of education the University is an organism, each part of which must perform its function in order that a well-rounded, educated man shall be produced. Since character is the bed-rock on which manhood rests, since the honor system has for its purpose (so far as it is a thing decided upon by premeditation, and not a spontaneous up-growth) the development of character, the logic of the situation demands that the honor system, in spirit and in practice, shall permeate in the fullest degree University life. But though character is always at a premium the individual who has it and it alone as his capital stands scant show of success. The business world demands men of ability trained in all the ways of business.

This training it is the function of certain parts of the University organism to impart. Just as, therefore, in the world of business, though character is the foundation of it all (for lack of mutual confidence would paralyze any system of business the world has ever seen) those methods commonly known as business methods prevail, so should the corresponding department of the University organism, while resting as a basis on the honor system be, nevertheless, dominated not by sentiment but by business methods.

So much for the theoretical side of it. Of the practical it is hardly necessary to speak. We have no particular case in mind as we write. If you think we have, it merely goes to prove that our remarks are not wholly out of place. Probably someone else is thinking about something else. At any rate we give the idea as possible food for thought. Take it for what it is worth.

We don't know whether it has occurred to you or not but right now is the best time of all to get in some of those strenuous licks of work you've been promising yourself all year. The pigskin chaser is a thing of the past. The man with the bat is a thing of the future. In fact, 'tis a grievous admission to have to make, but there is really little to amuse you now except your books.

Croakers will "sit up and take notice" that the dull season is on.

An Observer's Observations.

small pox scare and a compulsory vaccination ordinance which for non-enforcedness defies the production of its equal elsewhere? Verily, the village, as such, is doomed. The "march of civilization" is indeed unceasing, irresistible, all-conquering. Ye lovers of the virgin forest, ye clingers to the sequestered solitude of the distant past, nerve yourselves for the clang of the trolley bell, the rattle of hoofs on the paved street, the jam and crush of the hastening throng, the towering oppressiveness of the giant skyscrapers—nerve yourself, for they're coming and will be here—some day.

At Virginia.

The faculty committee on athletics at the University of Virginia has drawn up a rigid set of rules governing the eligibility of students to play on the Varsity teams of that institution. Among the most important of the provisions are:

No professional coaches shall be employed at the institution after 1907.

All successful candidates must give satisfactory proof of their amateur standing and eligibility to the team.

No one shall represent the institution who has not been a student at the University of Virginia for at least five months.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Buncombe County Club tonight, 7:15; Geology room.

—Mr. Geo. McKie took a trip down to Raleigh last Thursday.

—Mr. J. Sprunt Newton, one of our old star half backs, was on the Hill for a few days last week.

—Picture taking at the Holladay studio began yesterday and will continue throughout the remainder of the week.

—The date for the Soph-Junior debate has not been definitely agreed upon yet, but the debate will probably take place about the first of February.

—Mr. Joseph Bascomb Huff and Miss Cornelia Von Degroff Orr were married December 26th and are now at home in Dothan, Ala. Mr. Huff received the degree of A. M. here in 1904. He is engaged in teaching.

—Mr. Robert L. Hutchison, of Charlotte, has returned to the Hill to resume his studies in law. Mr. Hutchison was graduated here in 1902 and since that time has devoted his attention to the milling business in Concord.

—The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society will meet next Tuesday evening, Jan. 23. Dr. Coker will speak on "Tropical Notes," describing his recent trip to Cuba. Dr. Henderson's paper will be on "A Group of Cross Ratios."

—A packed house listened to a very able address by Dr. Royster, dean of the Medical faculty at Raleigh Tuesday evening, his subject being "The Social Evil." Dr. Royster, treating his subject from the standpoint of the physician, handled it in an entertaining yet forcible style.

—The open air concerts which the band is again beginning to give occasionally on the Alumni steps makes one feel as if spring were coming, for they are associated in the mind with pleasant half hours spent loafing on the green sward, (what is a sward, anyhow) in the neighborhood of dusk last spring.

—Club formation seems to have become epidemic on the Hill. Lately Edgecombe county, Horner, A. M. C., Forsyth county, and Florida representatives are preparing to organize. The Florida club is the latest State club formed and is composed of Dr. Herty, Pres., D'Alemberte, V. Pres., Osborne, Sec., Rice, Treas., Clontz, Edwards and Noble.

—The next Star Course attraction will attract next Monday night at the usual place. The name of the attraction is the Otterbein Quartette. We know little of its ability save that which is guaranteed by its presence on the program. The general opinion seems to be that a Star Course would "go good" now, as the last was on October 20. At any rate, since the seats are, in most cases, already paid for, the company need not fear for a crowd.

—The Historical Society met in regular session Monday night, presided over by Dr. Battle, who on this occasion held a staff presented to his son while in the marine hospital service. Dr. Battle made a talk on "Political History in North Carolina during Gov. Worth's Administration and the Beginning of Reconstruction Measures of Congress." Dr. Battle was State Treasurer during Johnson's administration and hence could give many points from personal observation.

—Mr. J. L. Reily, Georgetown's famous coach of last year, and a former star halfback on that aggregation, was on the Hill the first of the week in the interest of getting Carolina represented in an indoor track meet that is to be pulled off between all the leading colleges in Richmond February 10th. Trinity, A. and M., and the University are the purposed representatives from this State. Mr. Reily's proposal met with favor and an attempt will be made to have Carolina represented in this meet.

The First Chapter.

And it came to pass in the first month, in the third week and the seventeenth day of the month (which being interpreted is, yesterday) about seven of the clock and just after the crowing of the cock, many members of that tribe known to themselves as First Year Academic Students and to outsiders by various and sundry other names, did arise from their beds and with little ceremony did take their stand on the front steps of that building which is called Alumni to this day. And there was much perturbation of heart among the First Year Academic Students, for their consciences were guilty and each blast of the wind as it listed affrighted them and they did shake in their shoes.

Now one man of the assembled ones was a great chief and him they called Red Buck. In the silent watches of the night this chief had sent messages to each member of the tribe to assemble himself with the servants of his household, including Bill, the son of McDade, and all the rest, to the purpose that a certain man named Holladay might make an image of them to be transcribed in a roll of parchment known as the Yackety Yack.

But for an exceeding long space did stand on the front steps of the building which is called Alumni to this day. And when they perceived that the man called Holladay was continuously a minus quantity, the First Year Academic Students began to murmur together, saying: "Did not Red Buck, the son of Bryant, deliver unto us a message to assemble here, that our image might be transcribed? The hour groweth late. The rising time of the tribe called Sophomores approacheth. Why, then, doth the man Holladay delay his coming?"

And it came to pass that while they were murmuring one to another, a messenger did arrive post-haste and said unto them: "Cheese it! The man Holladay is even yet in Durham, and the tribe which is called Sophomores is awaking!"

Then did the First Year Academic Students disperse straightway, but they were exceeding wroth, because their image was not transcribed.

And thus endeth the first chapter.

curing, through the efforts of the International Committee of Young Men's Christian Associations, a visit from Mr. Charles D. Hurrey, who will speak to the students on Friday night of this week, giving his address, "Behind the Scenes in University Life." Mr. Hurrey graduated from the University of Michigan in 1900, and as a student there he was prominently identified with the Christian Association and with the oratorical and debating work of the University.

For the last two years he has traveled among the colleges, mainly the large universities of the Middle West, where he has spoken to hundreds of college men, making deep impressions and many friends wherever he has gone. He is a close student of University life and is no doubt prepared to make some revelations to men the most observing. Every man in the University will do well to hear this address.

By Way of Diversion.

The attention of late risers as they were hastening to breakfast last Saturday morning was attracted by the sight of dense volumes of smoke spreading over the part of the campus adjacent to Pickard's hotel. They heard the clang of the alarm bell, and though they saw no lurid glare, they pinned their faith to the ancient adage and, renouncing breakfast, hastened their footsteps in the direction of the smoke. The distant sound of human voices in the imperative mode stimulated their stride into a dog-trot which changed into a run when they turned the corner at Pickard's and dashed into full view of the thrilling spectacle. On the northern side of the street opposite the residence of Squire Barbee stood a wooden building, occupied as a combined dwelling and shoeshop by colored inmates; a building of uncertain age, of mediaeval architecture and of wood. Pouring in jet-black gusts through doors and windows was smoke; rising in compact rolls of inky darkness from dripping roof and sides, unwinding itself again in majestic sweeps, dissipating first into circling ringlets and finally into a shapeless, stifling mass, permeating the neighboring atmosphere—was smoke. But the fire—no fire there seemed to be. Apparently there had been an attempt at one, which had failed.

The crowd which lined the opposite sidewalks and filled the streets began to turn away. Fire fighters, were already clambering down ladders and preparing to leave, their faces animated with the lust of victory. Scarcely had they ceased their efforts, however, when the roof leaped into flame, malicious, devouring flame, which seemed to say mockingly, "I knew my chance would come."

The gauntlet had been cast down and the fight began anew. The scene which followed would baffle the pen of a DeQuincy. The fire department, under the efficient and commanding leadership of some twenty-five or thirty, renewed their efforts. A hose—the hose—was brought into requisition and the burning building, adjacent buildings and the crowd—especially the crowd—were deluged with drizzling dripping, drowning dampness. The single hose would be directed at one point, when some one in the crowd would shout, "The other side" and straightway the whole company would rush pell mell without question to the other side, dealing out cold baths freely, without charge and without respect of persons. Talk about uncertainties. The man who could have foretold the direction which that stream of water was going to take next—that man, if he lives, should be made a Doctor of Prophecy instant.

About this time the hose, perhaps because it was not being treated with the respect due its age, sprang a leak and sent a column of water skyward as if in eloquent protest to heaven against the turn matters were taking. People in neighboring houses began to move out their furniture. Suddenly a cheer burst from the crowd as Drane rushed from the second story of an adjacent house, bearing triumphantly, alone and without any assistance a pair of gloves. A moment later another cheer, thrilling, spontaneous rose from the assembled gathering as a rift in the smoke revealed the manly form of Y. M. C. A. Jackson astride the roof of an adjoining dwelling, covering it with blankets. He was cheered again and to the echo, when he held to his post for several seconds after the ubiquitous stream of water came his way, merely taking refuge under one of his blankets, before sliding ignominiously down the ladder.

And thus it went. 'Twas a battle of the elements and finally water, much water, wet water and plenty of it, backed by the Chapel Hill fire department won out, and little more than the roof of the building was burned.

Undoubted heroes: Strain, Jackson, Louis Webb, John A., honorable mention: Pittman, Drane and Shull; umpire, Brockwell; referee, Pickard; drownings, everybody; Attendance, 1,000; time of game 45 minutes.

Doings in the Societies.

The Dialectic society Saturday night discussed the query "Resolved, That the Federal Government Should Exercise Control over all Life Insurance Companies." The affirmative won and Mr. Lynn made the best speech.

The Philanthropic society elected as its representatives on the annual Commencement Debate, Messrs. J. B. Palmer and E. M. Highsmith. It elected as its Washington's Birthday orator Mr. James Small MacNider. The Di elected as its Commencement debaters Messrs. Roby Day and Stahle Linn. It elected also as its Freshman-Sophomore debaters Messrs. Marmaduke Robins and C. E. McIntosh.

Junior Election.

The Junior class Saturday afternoon elected the following officers to represent the class at Commencement: Chief Marshal, Mr. Charles L. Weil; sub-marshals; Messrs. L. W. Parker, J. B. Palmer, W. A. Houck, E. M. Highsmith, J. H. D'Alemberte, Thomas O'Berry.

Mr. Henry L. Sloan was elected captain of the class baseball team and Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr., was elected manager.

The Odd Number Club.

The Odd Number Club met Friday evening. Organization was completed by electing Mr. H. H. Hughes, secretary.

The following productions were read:

MR. HURREY SPEAKS.

Young Michigan Leader of Students Delivers a Series of Earnest and Helpful Addresses

The visit to the University the latter part of last week by Mr. Chas. D. Hurrey, of the University of Michigan, in the interest of the religious life of this institution was much enjoyed and highly appreciated by the students. Mr. Hurrey was secured through the efforts of the Young Men's Christian Association here. Mr. Hurrey delivered three addresses, one in Gerrard Hall Friday night, one in the Presbyterian church Sunday morning and the third in Gerrard Hall Sunday night. He is a young man, thoroughly acquainted with the ups and downs of college life and in perfect sympathy and touch with college students. He is a ready and fluent speaker, an entertaining talker, and the impression made upon his hearers was that of a strong man and a forceful character.

The subject of his lecture Friday night was, "Behind the Scenes of University Life." Without self-conscious oratory but with engaging frankness and a candid straight-from-the-shoulder manner did he handle his subject. At this, as at all the other services a large crowd of students was present.

Sunday morning in the Presbyterian church his subject was: "Men of Mettle." He realized, he said, that he was not speaking to children or to men with childish conceptions. He came not in an attempt to frighten them by appealing to their imagination nor to persuade them by drawing for them a picture of a city with golden streets. His plea was that they realize to the full the possibilities of manhood, possibilities realizable only through Christianity and the entering actively into all the fields of Christian service.

Sunday night his subject was: "Why Strong Men Follow Christ." Strong men are drawn to Christ by three things: first, for what he was; second, for what he taught, that matchless system of ethics, that comprehensive and satisfying philosophy; third, for what he has done and is doing. The millions of people all over the world who were in church at that very moment, he said, illustrated the strength of the power he is exerting every day.

The address Sunday evening closed the series of services which Mr. Hurrey had come to conduct. Several conversions resulted and much good was done.

The Quartette.

The Otterbein Quartette was the drawing card in Gerrard Hall Monday evening. A large audience was present and the entertainment fairly well enjoyed. There were some excellent voices in the company and the members entered into the spirit of their renditions with zeal.

The company was unfortunate in following so closely the Chicago Glee Club of last spring and in having a programme so nearly similar. Most of the numbers had been heard by the audience before, but the company, of course, was not to blame for that. Opinion differs on the point, but the general consensus of opinion seems to be that the company suffers slightly by comparison with its immediate predecessor in the glee club line.

To Name the Athletic Field.

It has probably occurred to many students to wonder why our athletic park has no name. When we think of Virginia we think of Lambeth Field or of Norfolk we think of Lafayette Field, etc. For some reason or other, perhaps because it was thought best to get the park into its final and completed form before naming it, no name has ever been given it. Of late, however, the matter has been under consideration and the athletic advisory committee appointed Professor E. K. Graham and Messrs. J. K. Wilson and T. G. Miller a committee to consider ways and means for naming it. It has been decided to ask the University publications to open up the matter and invite suggestions from the students as to suitable names. The method of deciding upon the name has not been definitely decided upon as yet but it is probable that the advisory committee will select from the names suggested that which they consider the most suitable. It is desired to secure the best possible name for the park and to this end everyone is invited to hand possible names to either of the gentlemen on the committee.

Speaking of the Track Team.

The work of training the track team has been begun in some degree, Coach Lawson directing the work, which is being done in the gymnasium. He will devote as much of his spare time as he can to this work.

The outlook is considered fairly good this spring and the team is going to put up a hard fight to win. Carolina will probably participate in a meet at Pennsylvania in addition to a State meet at Raleigh with Davidson, Trinity, and A. and M. and the inter-State meet at Richmond mentioned last week, in which Virginia, Georgetown, V. P. I. and A. and M. would be among the participants. In addition to these will be the annual contest with Virginia at Charlottesville.

A partial list of probable candidates, with the places for which they will presumably try is: Pittman, relay; Thomas, 100 yard dash; McNeill, high jump; Phillips and Curtis, hurdles; Hampden Hill and Reid, mile run; Crawford, pole vault; Curtis, broad jump.

AS ONE SEES IT.

If you're asking for information about the quality of a "show", and really want to get at the truth, never forget to ask your man where he sat. If the god of luck smiles upon him when he draws from the miscellaneous assortment of tickets thrust at him by the society secretary, assigning him a place in some favored locality "below decks", where he sits back in nonchalant and unconcerned ease and takes things as they come, the chances are, if the entertainment be barely mediocre, that he will vote it at least "pretty good." But ah! let the questioned one have been banished to an obscure place in the crowded and heated gallery, where the rostrum and the things transpiring thereon are to him as a closed book, one to be opened only at the cost of physical exertion and much "rubbing"—beware of that man if you're wishing a favorable report. The company that gets it from him must be good sure enough, for the individual is prejudiced against the whole outfit on general principles, all the presumptions are against it, and it must fight for the favor it gets. The psychology student would call it a case of "arrest."

The writer, who had had some experience along this line himself, made a poll of the opinions of divers attendants on the last star course entertainment. Not once did the rule break down. The opinions ran all the way from "all right," in that enthusiastic tone which seems to mean that the speaker would use a stronger term, if he did not feel that he had reached the limit of his vocabulary, to the other extreme "sorry", in unapologetic candor. In each case the warmth of the commendation varied directly with the favoredness of the location of the seat.

But, after all, there are compensations in a gallery seat, if it gives you half a chance. You may not be able to see the rostrum but you can see the crowd that is watching the rostrum, and oft' times your show is the best. Four hundred people of every type of mind, the jovial, the ascetic, the cynical, the happy-go-lucky, the serious minded, those determined to have a good time, those determined not to, the man who is hearing it for the first time, with his unfeigned and eager enjoyment, the man who has heard it before, with his unconcealed (perhaps feigned) ennui—they are there en masse.

To watch the impact of an idea on four hundred different minds, caught up at once in sympathetic appreciation by some, forced to beat its way by main strength into others, and to give it up as too hard a job in other cases; to foretell the threatening joke, to interpret by reflected light the transpir-ings on the stage—this is the lot of the gallery man.

"Dixie!" Where lies the magic in that song? Its words are the merest doggerel, the tune a jerky ragtime. Where lies in it the power that brings the thrill to the heart and the cheer to the lips? The problem is yet to be solved—probably will never be.

We can understand, in a way, why it is to the Southerner the legitimate expression of the highest patriotism. It is twined round his heartstrings because of its association with the most critical period of the life of the South. But why—just why it has been possible for it, from being the song of the enemy, to be caught up by our Northern brethren and transformed into a national song as powerful in the North as it is powerful in the South is beyond our comprehension. Surely there is something more than mere association there.

But whatever the explanation, the fact remains, and if the American were as excitable as the Celtic French Dixie would be prohibited in America by law as "La Marseillaise" is in France. And that would be hard on musical organizations. For the weather may be against them, the audience may be above them, the programme may have exceeded the age limit, for any one of a thousand reasons their show may not be taking, but their case is by no means hopeless. They trot out Dixie, and the old song never fails to make good, or to deafen with the cheers it brings forth.

But really—why, oh why, doesn't somebody get up something new? The old things are all right when they're classic. One of the tests of classicity is its power to endure time and repetition. But from the old things which are professedly comic—the things which are absolutely dependent for their humor on the suddenness and unexpectedness with which the climax breaks upon you, good lecture committee deliver us!

Did you ever go, for instance, to a minstrel and listen for hours to the hoary-with-age deliverances of the end man, punctuated only by his own fits of crocodile laughter (permit it, if you please), without asking yourself this same question? When people are willing to pour out their money freely and unstintedly for such entertainments, with so much creative ability in the American people, why is not some of this ability withdrawn from other channels and put into this one? It must be simply because of the proverbial long-suffering of the American public, which makes the best of everything cheerfully, even to the point of being imposed upon.

Mr. K. P. Nixon, '05, now of the Trinity law school, was on the Hill Saturday and Sunday shaking hands with his many friends here,

The six-day week which, as announced elsewhere, will go into effect next fall (meaning by the six-day week not, however, the abolition of Sunday) will mean no more work for anyone, but really an economy of time. 'Twill mean the abolition for some, perhaps, of an unused Saturday morning, the breaking up of a few social games, but it will mean also fewer men who can't go to the gymnasium or to a lecture at night because "I've got five straights tomorrow." It will mean fewer men worn out by those five straights on the morrow and incapacitated for effective work. It will mean fewer men who are compelled to forego courses they wish to take because they "can't get them in" and are thus found taking Freshman work in their Senior year. Not all of the latter is to be blamed on the arrangement of courses, however.

As to the objection that the change will interfere with the working of the literary societies, we scarcely think that this will prove true enough to justify grave doubts as to the wisdom of making the change. There is, of course, a difference between sitting down to work on a subject in the blissful knowledge that five uninterrupted hours are all your own, and sitting down, on your guard lest the ringing of the bell should escape you; there is a difference between the finishing of your subject before you stop, and the stopping ever and anon to intersperse a little Latin, Greek and Math., with perhaps a sprinkling of Chemistry, for variety's sake. But hardly any one will have more than one recitation on Saturday, or two at the most, and probably few members of the societies would care to spend more time in preparation for their Saturday night debates than is left for them on Saturday. If they ever do, the time is available earlier in the week. A consideration of all the elements involved, therefore, inclines us to believe that the faculty has acted wisely.

The announcement made elsewhere of a movement on foot to bestow upon the Carolina athletic field an appropriate and fitting name is one that should arouse interest in every University man. So important is this task of bestowing a name which will live as long as the University (and the University will live as long as the state) that it is desired to get the benefit of everyone's suggestions. Such an opportunity might be fittingly utilized to honor some distinguished alumnus of the institution, some one who has been closely identified with it and its work or some of those whose giant figures loom up in the history of our State. As to this, opinions will of course differ, but every name submitted will receive the careful consideration of competent judges before a decision is reached.

Referred to the Psychologist.

A certain young man who is given to dreaming dreams dreamed a dream the other night which particularly impressed him. He was telling his roommate about it the next morning. "I dreamed," said he "that I was a Baptist preacher. When I went into the church I was unexpectedly called on to preach.

"I agreed, but when I went into the pulpit I had not the slightest idea what my subject was to be. I waded in though somehow and got along swimmingly. In a few minutes I had the sinners going and the old people (I remember one old sister particularly) were shouting at me: 'Go on, young man. Give it to 'em!' After the sermon the people crowded around me and declared that they had never heard such preaching."

"Well," said his roommate with pardonable pride, "I can match that. I also dreamed that you were a Baptist preacher and that I went to hear you preach."

Both the gentlemen concerned are members of the Y.M.C.A. and one, till this week, was a leading official.

—Good morning. "have you had your picter took?"

—The Soph-Junior debate is billed for Friday night, February 9th.

—The Florida Club was entertained last night by Dr. Herty at his home on Franklin street. A delightful menu was served.

—Messrs. John A. Parker and P. E. Seagle spent Saturday in Raleigh in the interest of the Yackety Yack. They report the business side of the annual in a very satisfactory condition.

—The usual delegation which is drawn to Durham by anything good that comes along in the shape of a show went over yesterday to hear Sousa's band. They returned last night highly pleased.

—At a union meeting of the Freshman class Monday afternoon the following officers were elected: Captain Class Baseball Team, Mr. W. F. Gaylord; Manager, Mr. R. D. Eames.

—The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society met Tuesday night in the chemical lecture room. The following papers were read: "Tropical Notes"—Professor Coker; "A Group of Cross Ratios"—Professor Henderson.

—The chemical laboratory is rapidly nearing completion. It will not, however, in all probability, be occupied now until after the closing of the spring term. It is thought that the moving would cause too much confusion and loss of time.

—A large part of the law class is preparing to go before the State Board in February. Two or three quizzes are held by members of the class, in addition to the extra hard work being done by Judge MacRae and Mr. McGehee.

—The Yackety Yack offers a prize of one copy of the annual for the best dozen photographs of characteristic University scenes—campus scenes, groups of buildings, walks, some typical member of the faculty or something that suggests the University. In addition to the gift of the annual the management will pay all the expense of making the pictures.

Y. M. C. A. Election.

The annual election of officers in the Young Men's Christian Association took place Tuesday night. The officers elected were as follows:

- Mr. G. F. Leonard, president.
- Mr. E. C. Herring, vice president.
- Mr. E. C. Judd, recording secretary.

The Shakespeare Club.

Shakespeare Club met Tuesday night, Jan. 24, 1906. The following papers were read:

1. "A Discussion of the Portraits of Shakespeare."—Dr. Hume.
2. "Some Interesting Facts about the Life of Shakespeare."—Mr. J. S. Kerr.
3. "A Discussion of the Mystery Play: 'The Procession of the Prophets.'"—Mr. F. M. Crawford

Saturday "Allee Samee Other Days."

The faculty has announced that beginning with next year lectures and recitations will take place in the academic department on Saturdays, the same as on other days, with the exception of the first and fifth hours. The second, third and fourth hours are the only ones which will be occupied in this way.

This decision has been reached by the faculty after a long and careful consideration of both sides of the question and has been settled upon as the only practicable solution of the difficulties presented by the present arrangement. The curriculum is now so large, the number and variety of courses, as well as the number of students, so great that no possible schedule which crowds all the week's work into five days can be made without entailing hardship and inconvenience which renders the best work impossible of accomplishment. At present, for instance, many students are forced to take five straight recitations in one day, too much work for anyone, especially if, as is often the case, the students have not yet received the discipline of the higher training.

Almost the only consideration which has caused the faculty to hesitate was the fear that the change might operate to interfere with the effective working of the literary societies, but, on consideration, they have concluded that this is unlikely. It is said that lectures and recitations are conducted on Saturday at by far the majority of other leading American institutions.

Musicians and Songsters.

The orchestra and glee club, which was such a success last year, will be reorganized again this spring under the directorship of Mr. C. T. Woollen. The orchestra has already begun practice and the glee club will begin the work in a few days.

Urgent invitations have already been received from the Normal College in Greensboro and from Salem Academy in Winston-Salem. The club visited both of these places last year and were most cordially received.

The prospects for a good orchestra this spring are especially bright. Nearly all the members of last year are back and there are in addition to these a number of men who promise well. The success of the glee club depends more largely on the student body. Nobody who has been using his ears in the least will attempt to deny that there are quite a number of men in college who are really gifted in the line of singing—men who have never made any attempt to make a place in the glee club. The management issues a cordial invitation to all these men to enter for a place in the contest.

So since in the first place, you'll have a chance to develop your innate talent; and since, in the second place you'll have a chance to charm the outside world (Normal College and Salem Academy included) with the irresistible manifestation of its undoubted existence; and since, in the third place you'll be contributing to the excellence of a University

The Athletic Park.

The committee in charge of improving the new athletic field have decided, owing to the nearness of the baseball season, to postpone further work until after the close of the baseball season, when it will be pushed to completion. Otherwise it is feared that the work would be but partly completed and the field in anything but the proper shape for a baseball diamond. The difficulty of securing teams to do the work has also hampered their efforts somewhat.

The management propose to make several changes in the present arrangement which will be undoubted improvements. Among these is the placing within the park of a race track, worthy of the institution, and good enough for an intercollegiate meet. Heretofore, although we have had a track, we have had to forego inviting teams from other colleges to contest with us on our own grounds, because the track was not enclosed, and there was, consequently, no adequate means of raising revenue to defray the expenses of such a meet.

The fence on the northern side of the park will be placed further back from the diamond, thus increasing the area of the park. The diamond itself will be brought nearer the northwestern part of the field and the grandstand will be removed to a point in the vicinity of the large tree in the immediate rear of the northern fence. Just beyond the grandstand the track will be placed. Just beyond the track the diamond.

The University has never received any large donations to be used in the fitting up of its athletic park. It is unendowed. The administration has been compelled to provide for it from time to time as best it might by rigid economy. The policy of the administration has been and is to build it up gradually in such a way as to conform to the University's financial situation. Judging by the success which has attended this policy in the past, and from present indications, the time is not far off when the University will have an athletic park worthy of the institution and worthy of the State.

Association Football.

The period between the close of the football season at Thanksgiving, and the opening of the baseball and track season is usually termed the "dead season", owing to the fact that during this time there are no forms of outdoor athletics in which the student may participate. But there has recently been introduced into the University a game which, it is to be hoped, will, within a few years fill this vacuum. This game, known as association football, is the game played in England today, and is played to a considerable extent by all of our Northern colleges. Harvard, Princeton, Cornell, Columbia, Pennsylvania, and Haverford have organized a league and annually have very close intercollegiate contests. This game gives the active fellow who is too light to make a place on the regular football team, a chance to make a varsity team and to make several good trips.

The game was introduced here just after Thanksgiving by "Little" Snipes and since the holidays regular games have been played every afternoon from 4:30 to 5:30. A varsity and scrub team has been got out, and the varsity team will have a cut in this year's Yackety Yack. It was thought best not to arrange for any game with other colleges this year, as the game was entirely new to the men, and a game could not be secured with any Southern team. At the close of this season, however, a captain and manager will be elected for next year, and several games will be arranged, possibly with the leading Northern colleges. Mr. Snipes in arranging for a match game this spring between the varsity and scrub elevens and a small admission fee will be charged to help pay the expenses of the team. All who are in any way interested in the game are urgently requested to come out every afternoon at four-thirty and try for a place on the team.

Addendum.

Manager T. G. Miller has added the following three games to the baseball schedule for this spring, published in a recent issue:

March 30th, Oak Ridge at Chapel Hill.

April 5th, A. and M. at Chapel Hill.

April 18th or 19th, William and Mary at Chapel Hill.

With Di and Phi.

At the regular meeting Saturday night the question debated by the Di was: "Resolved, That the public school system of North Carolina should be supplemented by the establishment and support, by the State, of one public high school in each county." The decision was given to the negative and Mr. Miles made the best speech.

"Resolved, That the interests of industrial peace would be subserved by the incorporation of labor unions" was the subject discussed in the Phi. The affirmative won the question and Mr. J. K. Wilson was voted best speaker.

THE REIGN OF ICE.

Unprecedentedly Heavy Fall of Sleet Works Havoc With Campus Trees and Entails Much Inconvenience.

The dawn of last Friday morning found the University campus, in common with the surrounding country, in the clutches of a sleet storm, probably unprecedented in the century of its existence as the University campus. The sleet had begun to fall about 7 o'clock Thursday night and continued to fall without cessation. That which reached the earth melted and none was visible on the ground by morning, but that whose fall was checked by the superabundant trees and wires melted not, but clung with undiminished tenacity.

The scene presented to the eye by the campus Friday morning was one of an indescribably majestic beauty blended with touching pathos. Beautiful, to see almost a veritable forest of stalwart giants laden so heavily with the brilliantly glistening ice that their highest boughs touched the earth, rising again, round heaped upon round in prodigal profusion, into a veritable tower of silver; pathetic, to see, in other places, other mighty sons of the forest, victorious though battle-scarred perhaps, in many a hard fought struggle with the elements, lying prostrate upon the earth, or, stripped bare of their proudest branches, standing, yet tottering at their foundation. The terrific strength of the lightning's power, the irresistible rush of the angry tornado—these, for decade upon decade, they had fought and withstood. But in an evil hour, unexpected and unannounced, unaccompanied by the lightning's glare, the thunder's peal or the warning roar of the tornado came the sleet, and silently, unostentatiously it waged its war.

With what effectiveness? The campus, changed in a night from the pride of the State to a wilderness of uprooted trees and poles, broken branches, and other trees bent to the earth at such an angle that their branches impeded progress, mingled with a maze of telephone, telegraph, and electric wires answer the question. Some trees which were forked were split by the weight of the clinging sleet into two parts all the way to the ground and measured their length on the earth. Some trees as much as three feet in diameter were uprooted bodily and many of the branches severed from the body of the mother tree by the tremendous weight were from one to two feet in diameter. The tree in the immediate vicinity of the Beta Theta Pi fraternity hall was uprooted Thursday night and hurled against the building, striking the roof of the front porch and damaging it (falling, however, it is said, to wake one of the inmates who occupied a room adjacent to the porch).

This was the scene Friday morning. All during the day and night the sleet in a drizzling rain continued to get in its work. Scarcely half of the damage had been accomplished. All day and all night came at intervals the "k-r-a-a-k" of breaking branches and the groan of uprooted trunks. And nery indeed was the pedestrian who failed to cast upward ever and anon apprehensive glances and who started not at the ominous sound overhead. And well might he start, for the falling timber gave scant warning of its coming, while its size and weight guaranteed death or serious injury to him who perchanced to break its fall.

The grounded wires and fallen poles created their usual havoc. The telephone company abandoned service, telegraphic communication with the outside world was cut off and the question of whether the University buildings would be supplied with electric lights became a mooted one. The Chapel Hill Unlimited (in point of time) was several hours late in arriving and since telegraphic communication was cut off, the wildest rumors were afloat. Some said that so many trees had fallen across the track that the train crew had despaired of reaching their destination and that consequently the engineer had turned his engine around (!) and was coming back. Another was that a man who had promised to bring the engineer a bunch of birds at Robson had failed to show up, thus necessitating delay.

At Commons it was announced at dinner that supper would be served at 5 instead of 6 o'clock, on the ground that a supper at Commons in inky darkness would tend toward confusion, disorder, and perhaps (who knows?) biscuit throwing. This announcement was taken to mean that there would be no lights anywhere, and rife indeed was the speculation precipitated by it. Would "no lights" be a valid excuse for unprepared recitations or a half-suspected quiz? It looked reasonable but—there was a whole afternoon. What about that? And Saturday? The case looked doubtful and the wise virgins began to trim their lamps while the foolish, who had none, comforted themselves with the reflection that if the worst came—well, they could at least go to bed.

But when night came the situation proved not quite so bad as it had appeared for awhile. Lights came on as usual in three of the buildings, the South, the Old East, and the Old West. The occupants of the Mary Ann Smith and Carr buildings, however, groped their way without the aid of electric illumination and over all the campus and town darkness prevailed.

The falling of timber continued throughout the night but by Saturday morning the weather changed for the warmer and the worst was over.

FOOTBALL MADE HUMANE.

A Few Suggestions Regarding Proposed Changes in the Rules—Extreme Roughness Eliminated.

The following, ostensibly the work of Mr. George Ade, has appeared. The article says:

It is hoped that these rules will be approved by that vast army of editorial writers whose knowledge of the game has been obtained by reading the headlines.

Selection of players—The eleven players constituting the team shall be selected by the faculty, and the student who has received the highest grade in Greek mythology shall be captain of the team. No student shall be eligible for the team unless he is up in his class work and has a reputation for piety.

Preliminaries—When a team appears on a field for a contest, it shall greet opposing team with the Chautauqua salute, which consists of waving the handkerchief. After this a few friendly chats concerning books and writers may precede the opening of the game.

Substitute for "the toss"—Instead of tossing a coin to determine which side gets the ball, the two captains shall be called upon to extract a cube root of a given number provided by the professor of mathematics. The captain who is first to hand in the correct solution gets the ball.

Advancing the ball—The ball having been placed in the center of the field, the umpire, who must be a professor of geology, exhibits to the team having possession of the ball a fossil. All members of the team who think they can name the geological period to which the fossil belongs hold up their right hand.

The umpire selects a player to name the period. If he answers correctly he advances the ball two yards. If, in addition, he gives the scientific name of the fossil he advances the ball five yards. If no members of the team can answer the questions propounded by the umpire, the opposing team shall be given a trial. If successful it is given the ball.

Offside plays—Any player who makes a grammatical error, mispronounces a word or seeks assistance from a fellow student, shall be deemed guilty of an offside play and his side shall be penalized at least five yards.

Substitute for kicking goal—After a touchdown has been made, the team making it shall be credited with five points and the captain of the team shall translate 500 words of Caesar's Commentaries. If he does so without an error his team is given an additional point, the same as if a goal were kicked. If he falls, the ball goes to the opposing team on the twenty-five yard line.

Conduct during game—No pushing, scuffling or boisterous conversation will be permitted. Both players and spectators must maintain absolute silence during the mental tests.

Another Slight Diversion.

A horse attached to wagon (both the property of Green McDade, a colored man who lives in the west end of the village) on becoming convinced that things needed livening up, conceived the idea that the task was his and, accepting the responsibility cheerfully, straightway set about its execution. This was down town on the main street of the village about 8:30 Monday morning.

Taking one last glance about him, the horse closed both eyes, took a deep breath and proceeded to annihilate simultaneously both space and time. What cared he for the speed limit? He was no blooming automobile. He was the latest make of a thirtieth century flying machine. At least this was what he fondly imagined and what he whispered confidentially to himself as he clove the atmosphere into two equal parts. What cared he for street or sidewalk? He was no patent leather-footed dude, but just to show that he could and that he didn't give a whicker one way or another, he turned upon the sidewalk near MacRae's store and like a whirlwind traversed it up the street.

We said the horse's purpose was to create a diversion. He created it. A half-dime novel would inform you, while you were holding your breath, that the "hoarse shrieks of frantic women, mingled with the terrified cries of panic stricken children [perhaps with a few "enraged barks of frightened dogs" for good measure] rang out upon the clear morning air." Well, that was what really happened. Although it was early in the morning, quite a crowd was on the streets and the people fled headlong hither and thither. The horse smashed both rear wheels of the wagon, overturned boxes and barrels and left a scene of destruction behind him. But "not a moment stopped or stayed he." At the Brockwell corner he crossed the street and chose the opposite sidewalk.

When did he stop? when he had arrived safely home, and not before. But, as a matter of fact, after he had left the business section of the town he slowed up to get his breath and settled down to a trot. But the thought of the havoc behind him, the recollection of the "tumult and the shouting" his little stunt had occasioned was too much for him and all the way home, ever and anon, he chuckled to himself.

—The following gentlemen will leave here Saturday for Raleigh, where they stand the Supreme Court examination on Monday: Messrs. Carter, Brothers, Hoyle, Bean, Sherrod, Simmons, Townsend, Elliott, Gash, Philipps, Hassell, and Sorrell.

Commencement ranks in importance among the very first of the events of any college year. The Hill is the scene of a gathering of cultured and influential people from every section of the State; a gathering of people who have come here to see for themselves what the University is, to judge for themselves of the institution and its work and to form their own opinions as to the rightfulness of its claim on the State for maintenance and its claim on society for support. They have in the main, no other means of judging save those afforded by what they see and hear. There is, therefore, a vital relation between the welfare of the institution and its annual showing at Commencement.

The question then is, How can the best showing be made? The answer is plain. Make Commencement a University affair. The occasion has, of course, a peculiar significance to the members of the outgoing Senior class. But this is but one side. The Seniors by no means are, the Seniors by no means should be, the whole show. The main interest will probably always center around them and, in the nature of things, we think that this is right. Our point is that the importance of this class should not be so unduly emphasized at Commencement as to shut out all other classes from some degree of participation. So long as this is true in any degree, so long will it be that the lower classes will fail to take that interest in Commencement which they should and to derive from it that entertainment and that inspiration which is there for every one of them.

Much improvement has already been made. The establishment quite a number of years ago of the debate, in which the participants are Juniors, and, only three years ago, of the Intersociety Banquet were both steps in the right direction and have exercised a helpful influence. But there is room for more recognition of the lower classes. All of Monday and much of Tuesday afternoon is available for this.

In a case of this sort the best results are obtained from free discussion. THE TAR HEEL's columns are open to communications of reasonable length on this subject.

The steady inroads being made into our space by the industry of the advertising managers serves to emphasize a need of considerable standing—a larger paper or a semi-weekly. We see no reason why at an institution of this size, if an entire editorial board does its duty, a much larger paper could not be issued weekly. It is true that there is not such pressing need of it just at this period of the year, but in the midst of an athletic season, with two or more games a week, the need of it is most keenly felt. Even now there is scarcely a week that columns of matter are not crowded out and this was true last fall when advertisements were so little in evidence that we were enabled to give twelve columns or more of reading matter.

It is rather a remarkable fact, by the way, that owing to someone's carelessness or lack of foresight there is, so far as any one can find, no regulation in any stipulations governing the publication of the paper, establishing any maximum ratio between the amounts of space devoted to the two departments. So far as any provision to the contrary is concerned, therefore, by Commencement the reading matter may be limited to the heading and date line on the first page.

A local editor stated last week, and the censor permitted it to pass, that quite a number of law students were preparing to go to Raleigh in February to "stand the State board." Nothing wrong about that? No, nothing specially wrong on its face save that the language is rather loose, since it's an examination and not the board they are preparing to stand. But that's a colloquialism, so let it pass.

But certain of the lawyers, ever alive and on the alert for technicalities, ever searching for the undotted i and the uncrossed t, were unspeakably shocked at the declaration. They are not going to stand any examination before any old State board, they say; they have to do with no less august a tribunal than the very High and Mighty Supreme Court of North Carolina. Leave State boards for the powder prescribers and pill makers. They threaten a libel suit for damages sustained by reason of the alleged unjust classification of them by THE TAR HEEL.

Oh, well. THE TAR HEEL has consulted its regular attorneys and they state that inasmuch as the words used are not actionable per se, actual damages must be shown; and furthermore, that if the plaintiffs appear to have derived benefit rather than suffered injury from the alleged libel, action will lie in the defendant to recover remuneration for its efforts in producing for the plaintiffs said benefits. This being true and the probable outcome of such an action and attendant investigation being at best no better than a toss-up, THE TAR HEEL declines to be bluffed but would actually welcome litigation.

LOCAL NOTES.

—The Magazine for January is out.

—February 1st. A '09-der was heard to remark this morning, "Only one hundred and twenty-five days till Commencement will be over."

—The preliminary contest to select the University's representatives in the Georgia-Carolina debate will take place Friday night, February 16th.

—All those who are getting up literary or artistic contributions for the Yackety Yack will please hand the same to the Editor in Chief before Saturday. Competitors for the kodak picture prize, must hand unmounted pictures.

—The German Club met Tuesday afternoon and elected Mr. J. B. James leader of the February german, which will take place February 23d. The following new men were received: Messrs. Blackwelder, McLeod, Muse, Alien, Humphrey, Whitaker, McBrayer.

—The Debating Union has been making an attempt to secure a debate with Tulane University, of Louisiana, for this spring. Tulane states, however, that it will be impossible for them to meet us this year, but they hope for the privilege next year. In all probability, therefore, the Georgia-Carolina debate will be the only one we will have this year. It will take place in Chapel Hill on the night of April 13th.

—The last of the tennis tournament which was begun last fall was pulled off several days ago between Messrs. G. M. Fountain and John M. Robinson. Mr. Fountain won 6-0 and 6-1, thus getting the $7.50 racket offered by the tennis association to the winner of the tournament. With the exception of the Varsity team and four contestants for the team, all of whom were ruled out of the contest, Mr. Fountain is now college champion.

—The query for the annual Commencement debate has been agreed upon and is as follows, "Resolved, That the interests of industrial development would be furthered by the extension of the trust system as it now exists in some branches of industry into all other branches of industry." The Phi debaters, Messrs. J. B. Palmer and E. M. Highsmith, will uphold the affirmative and the Di debaters, Messrs. Roby Day and Stahle Linn will defend the negative.

—The Economics Society met Monday evening in the History room in the Old West, as the lights in the Economics Seminary in the Alumni were off the circuit. The subject discussed was "The Economic Future of the Southern Negro." Mr. Jeffress read a summary of the statistical study on this subject by Du Bois. The consensus of opinion appeared to be that his figures were woefully inaccurate and that really the economic future of the negro is less bright than his present. It was thought that by the coming in flux of Italian immigration the negro will be driven to the very lowest places in all the branches of industry.

—The Press Association has been enlarged by the admission of all the members of the editorial board, including business managers, of the University Magazine, and also those of THE TAR HEEL. A constitution and bylaws has been drawn up and accepted and the organization is perfected. The former club members are the various newspaper correspondents on the Hill. The organization represents highly important interests and should play an important role in University life. It is expected that the perfected organization of the club will facilitate the accomplishment of its purposes. These purposes are to bind the newspaper men together for their mutual advantage and to aid in keeping the University and its publications prominently before the people of the State. Mr. James A. Gray, Jr., has been elected secretary.

The Chemists.

The Chemical Journal Club met Monday evening, 22nd, and the following papers were read: "A Comparison of the Atomic Weights of Tellurium and Iodine"—Messrs. George C. Johnson and R. P. Burns. "Reactions of Liquid Ammonia"—Dr. Herty.

The Geologists.

The Geological Journal Club met Tuesday evening. Papers were read as follows: "Yampa Coal Fields"—Mr. Jos. E. Pogue, Jr. "Topographical Features of the Southern Appalachian Basin"—Mr. C. B. Brown. "Silver Mining in New Mexico"—Mr. S. H. Wiley. "Transformation of Vegetable Matter in Coal"—Mr. E. B. Jeffress.

The Weather and Baseball.

The unusually warm weather for January which has prevailed for the past few days has been very favorable to the baseballists, who have not been slow to take advantage of the opening offered them. A number of candidates have been out practicing on the diamond in the rear of the gymnasium and are getting limbered up in good shape. If this kind of weather could only continue, the effect on the baseball team would be most marked, for it is unusual that an opportunity for practice comes so early in the year. Last year, it will be recalled, a spell of snowy and sleety weather set in just about this time and held out with no apparent intention of giving up for several weeks. As a result of this state of affairs the team last spring was seriously handicapped at the very outset. They recovered from it, however, and made a most creditable record.

The men who have turned out thus far are an energetic set and promise well. As remarked previously, however, the material is not so promising as that with which the season opened last spring. The students, however, have the fullest confidence in the ability of Coach Lawson to turn out a ball-playing aggregation and know that it will be done if possible.

Immediately after the death of President Harper of Chicago University, a rumor was published in some of the Virginia papers to the effect that President Alderman, of the University of Virginia, had been offered the position of president of the Chicago University at a salary of $15,000 a year. Dr. Alderman indignantly denied the report, pronouncing it "too silly for anything." No later developments have appeared.

A weekly paper has been established at Trinity College, called the Trinity Chronicle. The Wake Forest News is the name of one established recently at Wake Forest. It will be published throughout the baseball season.

BIG BOYS AND LITTLE BOYS.

Just a Glimpse of an Ordinary Scene on the Campus.

There was amusement in the air Sunday afternoon, if so be it that a crowd of college boys can have amusement. It was a small, one-act melodrama, the setting: a usual crowd of question-firing boys. There were Charlie and Jim and Simmons and Hoyle and Houck and a score of others—college men—and White and Tucker and another kid or two—little imps about town—all out on the sunny side of the Old West. The kids were playing football—one Virginia, the other Carolina. For many minutes did these pygmies tackle one another, fall in a heap, and double up and squeal "Down!" in a piping voice. But the college men soon tired of this divertimento—they noised it around that Tucker said White had ancestors, whereupon White waxed wrathful and denied the charge. He had no "ancestors"—"and it's a lie"—and would have fought but it was Sunday. Tucker, however, who just loved a fight, didn't keel if 'twuz Sunday and would lick White for five cents. Another urchin then offered to lick Tucker with one hand, with the other in his pocket—for nothing, but Tucker was real feathery and a large part of his blood was rabbit's, and he'd been beat in a fight before by the urchin, and there was no go.

But Tucker, who had whipped White, wanted somebody to give White a nickel, so he could take it away from him. It was done. Tucker proceeded to do so, and incidentally to land a left to the ribs to emphasize what a fighter he was. Then White made off, as if in search of rocks and clubs, and Tucker closely pursued him. At the chemical laboratory both stopped, had a very short talk, and putting their arms around each other's back, they unconcernedly marched off.

Coach Brown, of Washington and Lee, who officiated as coach for our team in 1904, has made out an All-Southern football team. It is the only one which has been made out thus far and so we print it, merely as part of the literature of the times. Most of the players, it will be observed, wore V. P. I. sweaters last fall.

The Philanthropic gathering in the New East were entertained by a discussion of the query, "Resolved, That the law school should not be removed to Raleigh, but should be kept at Chapel Hill." The affirmative won and Mr. J. S. Kerr made the best speech.

Over in the New West the Di strove to reach a decision on a brand new question: "Resolved, That the dispensary is the best solution of the liquor question." After a warm discussion during which one could see, as it were, "with his mind's eye" the blind tigers creeping about, the judges awarded a decision in favor of the affirmative as winning and in favor of Mr. Duls as making the best speech.

The news of the final abolition of football at Columbia University, was the occasion for a daily paper, the Columbia Spectator, to go into mourning; the rules between columns being turned over and the paper being published with heavy black borders until the close of the fall term. The student sentiment, expressed in a huge petition, was disregarded by the faculty and the latter ordered football abolished.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, FEBRUARY 8, 1906.

No. 16.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

THE NASHVILLE CONVENTION.

National Gathering of Student Volunteers—Full Delegation from This University Desired.

The Fifth International Convention of the Student Volunteer Movement will be held in Nashville, Tenn., from February 28 to March 4. These Volunteer Conventions are held but once in each student generation—that is, once every four years, and constitute the largest, the most representative, the most powerful, the most fruitful, and the most notable gatherings of college and university students of North America.

The University of North Carolina delegation should be as strong as that of any other Southern institution with the exception of Vanderbilt. We have the privilege of sending eight students besides the faculty representatives. Let us be well represented.

The Nashville Convention will be attended by 3,000 official delegates. Fully 500 universities, colleges, and seminaries will be represented by leading students, both volunteers and non-volunteers. Professors as well as students are invited. It is expected that at least 200 missionaries will be present from nearly forty of the mission fields of the world. The secretaries of the foreign missionary societies of the United States and Canada and other leaders of the aggressive forces of Christianity in North America will be present. The national leader of the various movements for work among young people, as well as editors of the religious press are invited. Fraternal delegates from Europe will also be present.

The convention will have four prominent features. In the first place, the main program will occupy the morning and night sessions, and will include the strongest speakers of Christendom on the various themes to be presented. In the second place, there will be held in the afternoon some forty-five special conferences, each with its own complete program. For example, on one afternoon there will be conferences on the interesting and important mission fields of the Church; another afternoon on the various phases of work and the different classes of workers; and on still another afternoon the delegates will meet by denominations to consider the world's evangelization from their particular point of view. The third feature will be a large and impressive exhibit bearing on the progress of Christianity in the world. The fourth feature will be the exceptional opportunities for intercollegiate, interdenominational, and international fellowship.

The benefits of this great gathering are limitless. Held at the most opportune time in the history of the Church, bringing together so many of the leading spirits in all the centers of learning, as well as the responsible leaders of the forces of Christians, the Nashville convention, with inexhaustible Divine resources available, will give a mighty impulse to the religious life of the colleges, stir the entire Church to greater zeal and sacrifice for the realization of her missionary objective, and make possible a truly remarkable onward movement in the world's evangelization.

Championships for Last Year.

College Topics has compiled a list of the championships in all the college sports last year. One thing which impresses the average Southern reader, at any rate if he is a Carolinian, is the large number of sports which are entirely unknown here. It is because of the lack of these that weeks are passing on the Hill right now with absolutely nothing doing, save an occasional meeting of a literary club.

Yale University proved to be the most proficient in all branches of sport, for the Elis won four and one-half championships to four for Pennsylvania. Harvard and Cornell follow with three each. Columbia comes next with two and one-half. Harvard with two, and Swarthmore and Annapolis bring up the rear with one each. The fractions are necessary because of several ties and other cases, like football, where Pennsylvania and Yale each went through the season undefeated, but did not meet, and rowing, although Cornell's victory over Harvard when contrasted with Yale's hard won victory, gives Cornell much the stronger position. Yale may have been superior to Pennsylvania or vice versa, but reduced to mathematics the only thing the reviewer can do is to split the championship.

The following table shows the holders of the various college championships East and West:

EAST.
Track Athletics	Cornell
Baseball	Yale
*Football	Pennsylvania, Yale
Rowing	Cornell, Yale
Association Football	Haverford
Cross Country	Cornell
Cricket	Haverford
Chess	Pennsylvania, Harvard
Fencing	Annapolis
Golf	Harvard
Gymnastics	Columbia
Hockey	Harvard
Lacrosse	Swarthmore
Shooting	Pennsylvania
Tennis	Pennsylvania
Wrestling	Yale
Water Polo	Yale
Swimming	Penn., Columbia
WEST.
Track Athletics	Chicago
Football	Chicago
Baseball	Michigan
Cross Country	Chicago

*Tie for first.

Two separate championships.

FALL OF THE TRIBE OF HORNER

Chapter the Second—Wherein is Told of a Morn Misspent in Self-Adornment—Nixy on the Ducats.

Now it came to pass that after these things had transpired, certain men of the tribe of Horner conspired one with another, saying: "Go to! Are not the tribe of Mecklenburg, the tribe of Wake, the tribe of South Carolina and even the other tribes having their likenesses made, for that the maidens of the land may look upon them and admire? Lo, as to our faces, are we not as comely as they? And as to our bodies, are we not full strong? Let us assemble with our brethren at the tabernacle of the man called Holladay, in order that it shall not be said of us 'They are weak in spirit,' or 'They are wanting in comeliness.'"

And forthwith Thomas, who was the son of O'Berry, and Edgar, who was the son of Seagle, caused a proclamation to be made to all their brethren, how that on a certain day in a certain month and at a certain hour of the day they should band themselves together and proceed to the tabernacle of the man Holladay.

And when the members of the tribe heard the proclamation they rejoiced exceedingly with great rejoicing and hastened to obey. On the morning of the appointed day they rose ere the rising of the sun and began to adorn themselves, saying to themselves, "Will not the maidens of the land gaze upon our image? Is it not meet therefore that we should look comely?"

So they assembled and met together at an early hour, for they were glad in spirit because of the thing that was come to pass among them. And they held their heads high and shouted with exceeding great shouts as they proceeded on their journey. So great was the noise of them that men marvelled greatly, pointing with their fingers, and saying, "What manner of men are these, so proud in spirit and albeit so noisy?"

But the men of Horner only held their heads higher and shouted the louder, "Are we not sons of Horner? Are we not mighty men of valour? And is not our likeness to be made?" And when they were arrived at the tabernacle, they formed in battle array and stormed it with great violence shouting, "Where is he that doeth wonders, even he that maketh images? Let him come forth, for, verily, the men of Horner await him!"

Now it so happened that among the race of image-makers there was a law that they should make no likeness except they receive in payment thereof six pieces of silver. So the maker of likenesses answered and said unto them, "Men of Horner, I perceive that in all things ye are truly valiant. While, therefore, ye procure the six pieces of silver, I will make ready to do this thing which you ask of me." And he disappeared.

And a great silence fell upon the gathering, for their silver was dear unto them and they had recked not of parting with it. And with the silence came also a great despondency of spirit, for that their desire had been kindled within them to no purpose.

And it came to pass that one, who was stationed nearest the door of the tabernacle, said unto himself, "Lo, I have an engagement with a friend, and I must needs go keep it." And straightway he departed through the door and was gone and the place thereof knew him no more. And another who had seated himself in a window communed and said unto himself, "My work lieth undone and I must needs go do it." And he departed forthwith through the window and was gone and the place thereof knew him no more. And yet another said unto himself, "I have bought myself a bird-dog and I must needs go prove it." And straightway he, also, departed through the window and was gone and the place thereof knew him no more.

And as did these so did all the sons of Horner and as with boisterousness and mirth and pride of spirit they did come, so even with humility of spirit and by stealth took they their departure, each for each.

And after a brief space the maker of likenesses came again to the place where he had been, but looked only upon empty space. Then was his soul filled with wonderment and he cried aloud, saying, "Where are they who were proud in spirit? Where, Oh, where are the sons of Horner?" And only the echo answering said, "Where, even where, are the sons of Horner?"

Dr. Mitchell to Preach.

The University has succeeded in securing Dr. S. C. Mitchell, professor of history in Richmond College, Virginia, to preach the annual sermon before the Young Men's Christian Association on Sunday night of Commencement week. Dr. Mitchell is president of the Cooperative Educational Committee, of the State of Virginia, which is arousing much interest in the work of bringing about proper relations between the higher educational institutions and the public schools. He is also an editor and contributor of literary and historical articles to the organ of his denomination.

He is a comparatively young man, only 38, but is widely traveled and his treatment of his subjects while always on a high plane and possessing marked literary charm, is, nevertheless, intensely practical. He was secured largely through his intimate personal relations with Dr. Thos. Hume.

Something ought to be said. We hardly know what that something is that should be said or how we should say it. We do know that conditions demand action. The subject is one upon which one would much prefer to remain silent for the sake of the good name of the student body; but the unceasing theft of the money and valuable articles of the students in the college buildings has passed the point where passive endurance is demanded by the proprieties of the situation. These thefts have gone on until they have reached a number scarcely dreamed of by those on the outside. One struggles against the idea that a student or students are concerned in the matter, but one cannot help feeling that there is ground for the suspicion. Somebody should take the matter in charge and see that the malefactor or malefactors, whoever they be, are punished. If they are students, they should be cast out from our midst in short order.

The naming of a college annual! Did you ever think what a task that must be? Unbroken custom and sacred tradition, don't you know, demand that no name which has the slightest meaning to it shall be adopted. If it suggests to you without at least a half hour's research the institution from which it comes, it is a dead failure as a name. It simply won't do at all.

Here for instance are a few names chosen at random: North Carolina, Yackety Yack (sounds all right to us, of course); A. and M., Agromeck; Leland Stanford, Quad; Tulane; Jambalaya; West Virginia, Monticola; Western University of West Virginia, Murmurmontis; Syracuse, Onondagan; Ohio State, Makio—and so on, not ad infinitum perhaps, but at least ad finem.

Moral? We're not pointing a moral. We're simply at our old game of looking on and wondering at the things which happen "as the busy world spins round" (with apologies to Col. Fairbrother for infringement of his copyright).

Our exchanges for the past weeks have been bringing to us as from afar off the echoes of examinations. One can see as he reads, the crowded examination room, the blinded student feverishly racking his brain for a forgotten date or an unremembered formula; the days of "spotting" and the nights of "cramming."

More institutions than one on the outside would suppose have their examinations not at the end of the term just preceding Christmas, but in the latter part of January or the first of February. The reason for this is not quite clear, the only perceptible effect being to prolong the agony, and to cast, in some cases, a foreshadowing gloom over the holidays. But the best part of our lot is that they are having them and we are through with them. One paper, recently established, and which has got out five issues pats itself on the back, saying, "Thus far, we have not missed an issue."

Others can take them when they wish, but as for us, we'll take 'em the same old time and in the same old way.

In the faculty room of the Alumni building is a table and in the table is a drawer. This drawer is known as the press drawer and an ancient myth has it that news items are dropped in it from time to time for the benefit of local newspaper men. The writer has heard this myth and has often pulled open the drawer when in search of news—only, however, to gaze into empty vacancy.

The purpose for which it was instituted was that persons who happened to have rather exclusive possession of a bit of news might impart it to others. For instance, if a professor is invited away to deliver a lecture, this is a matter of general interest, but it is quite often the case that his going and coming is unknown to any one save himself. The purpose of this article is to urge a more extensive use of the press drawer. If one's innate modesty (and this is often the case) causes him to hesitate in such a matter, he can steel his nerves with the reflection that "the others do it." It is but just to himself as well as to the University that his work should be made public.

The V. P. I. 'Tech in announcing that an event is to take place "tonight" adds parenthetically "We are writing on the supposition that the 'Tech appears Friday."

Judging from the doubts which appear to lurk in the editor's mind there must be either a stringency in the copy department or a strike on in the 'Tech print shop.

THE TAR HEEL is far too modest to boast, but we don't mind saying that the latter cause will never bother its head. It has never had a strike to contend with, but the members of the board, on more than one occasion, have had opportunity to show that they can do something besides merely reeling off copy and have proved equal to the emergency. So if the paper should ever fail to show up on Thursday morning its readers can rest assured that it will be because there is no press in any reasonable distance to print it. It wouldn't wait an hour for a speech from President Roosevelt.

Well, this is the latest: "Cornell, Columbia and the University of Pennsylvania will hold a triangular

LOCAL NOTES.

—The athletic association came out of the football season $2250 to the good.

—The Modern Literature Club will meet tonight at 7:30 in No. 16, Alumni building.

—At the regular monthly meeting of the Guilford County Club Friday night, Dr. Raper spoke on the "Achievements of the County."

—Mr. H. H. Hughes, '07, was called home yesterday by the news of the death of his father, who died suddenly at his home in South Carolina Tuesday night.

—The University Sermon for February, and the first of the current year, will be preached in Gerard Hall next Sunday night. The preacher will be Bishop Strange, of Wilmington.

—At a meeting of the Press Association Thursday night it was decided to have a banquet on the night of Thursday, 15th. The office of vice president being declared vacant, Mr. V. L. Stephenson was elected to that position.

—Dr. K. P. Battle presided over the Dialectic society Saturday night, as is the custom one night each year. His son, Mr. Thomas H. Battle, of Rocky Mount, was on the Hill on a visit and, being an alumnus, addressed the society. To make the cycle complete his son, Mr. Kemp D. Battle, of the Freshman class, was on duty and spoke.

—All those who wish to submit drawings to the Yackety Yack must hand them in by Saturday night, for the last shipment to the publishers will be made Monday morning. The only thing the board is short on is humorous literary work, and the editors would like to have some humorous work submitted to them. It must be pointed and of moderate length.

—Immediately after the service at the Methodist church Sunday night an Epworth League was organized. Officers were elected as follows: Mr. W. L. Mann, president; Miss Blanch Raney, second vice president; Mrs. O'Neal, third; Mr. J. F. Spruill, secretary. The league is non sectarian and students are invited to join. It organized with 36 members. The meetings will be held every Sunday night in the Methodist church, from eight to eight-thirty o'clock.

—The annual Sophomore-Junior debate between the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies will take place in the Chapel Friday night. The query for discussion is, "Resolved, That the United States government should own and operate the railroads of the United States." The affirmative side of the question will be presented by the Di representatives, Messrs. R. C. Day, '07, and B. F. Reynolds, '08. The Phi debaters, who have the negative, are Messrs. W. A. Jenkins, '07, and Oscar R. Rand, '08.

—The prospects for a creditable annual this year are bright. The editors are a hard working set; the business managers are pushing their side of the management with vim and energy. A much larger per cent. of the students have subscribed than ever before and many alumni are doing likewise. The comparatively small number of alumni purchasing annuals in previous years has been largely due to the fact that their attention has not been called to it. No stone is being left unturned, however, to present the matter to them.

Rev. N. M. Watson, who was for several years pastor of the Methodist Church here, now pastor of Grace Street Methodist Church of Wilmington, passed through Saturday on his way to Chatham county.

Messrs. Platt Covington and Chas. E. McBrayer left yesterday morning for Richmond as delegates to the Phi Chi convention.

Mr. Francis Gudger, who will be remembered as first tenor of the well known University quartette, is on the Hill, stopping at the Beta house.

The University of Pennsylvania committee on athletics refused to ratify election of Vincent M. Stevenson, the star quarterback, to the captaincy of the team of 1906. Though the committee declined to give its reasons for the action, it is generally understood that Stevenson's weakness in his studies has caused his practical disbarment.

There is a chance that Harvard may abandon tennis this fall. While a game was in progress one of the spectators was struck in the eye with a peeled lemon, hurled from some unknown source.

The eye is a total loss, but the lemon will recover. This accident, however, has convinced President Eliot and the athletic board that tennis as now played must either be reformed or abolished in toto. Harvard Crimson.

The Harvard catalogue for the year 1905-1906 which has recently appeared, shows a total enrollment in the university of 4,878 in comparison with 5,143 last year. The faculty numbers 554 and the freshman class this year 488. 118 colleges are represented in the law school and forty nine in the school of medicine.

Philological Club.

The Philological Club met Tuesday night. The following papers were read:

"A Review of 'The Canterbury Pilgrimages'"—Dr. L. R. Wilson.
"Is the Bible Ungrammatical?"—Dr. C. Alphonso Smith.

"Die Entwicklung des Prefixes ver- im Germanischen: Eine Breslauer Dissertation"—Prof. W. D. Toy.

The Societies

The Philanthropic society on last Saturday night wrestled with the much discussed football problem. The query was, "Resolved, That football rules should be so changed as to render the game less brutal." The committee decided that the rules should not be amended, and gave Mr. Hester the verdict for being the best speaker.

The Di society debaters disagreed on the price of cotton. "Resolved, That the Cotton Growers Association should not try to force the price of cotton above twelve cents," was the query. The negative won and Mr. Grier made the best speech.

A LITTLE TALE ABOUT DOGS.

The Which Relates to Betsy and Tito, Two Frolicsome Shepherds About the Campus.

Betsy and Tito, the two shepherd dogs belonging to Dr. Alexander and Professor Cobb, have ceased, to a marked degree, their waggish pranks. No longer do they go racing and barking across the campus. No longer do they squat beneath an electric wire, spin around, bark, and jump at a rag dangling therefrom. Their sharp yaps still rend the air; their companionable fellowship is still for their friends; but their lot is not as it once was. Tito has sprained his ankle. In one of his mad dashes with Betsy he struck it against a rock, or else some unfeeling boy hit it with a stone.

In whatever manner this calamity occurred, the fact remains that Tito is trotting on three legs. Tuesday morning he ambled up to a friend, put his injured foot forth for inspection, and sadly limped away. He is bearing his misfortune with a stoic fortitude. He exhibits none of your human weaknesses. You would not know of his ill were it not that he no longer races about the college grounds. And Betsy, too, is changed. Her staccato yelp she still gives; but she finds little pleasure without her race with Tito.

Ah, Betsy and Tito, how low have you fallen! You were not born for your waggish lives. Your missions were to watch the flocks and drive the cattle. How grand you would look marching a flock of sheep across the mountains! How readily would you respond to the drover, as he commanded you to hike to the gap and prevent the sheep from overrunning the field! Instead you have fallen so low you have actually associated with a mean black cur. For many weeks you apparently struggled against this degradation: you made the cur pace fifty yards behind you; but here of late you have actively identified yourselves with it. And misfortune has been yours. Tito is a cripple and Betsy is sad.

Magazine Prizes.

The University Magazine will, as heretofore, offer the following prizes for the present year:

The Hunter Lee Harris Medal (given by the University) for the best short story.

Ten Dollars for the second best short story.

Five Dollars for the best essay.

Five Dollars for the best poem.

Five Dollars for the best sketch.

All these prizes are open to any student of the University. Contributions are welcomed by the board of Magazine editors.

The Aftermath.

The electric light people have about got their wires in shape after the damage of the recent sleet storm, and the lights came on in the Mary Ann Smith and Carr buildings and also in the stores downtown Thursday night.

The campus has been cleared of the debris and a very respectable looking pile of wood, as a result, lies on the southern outskirts of the campus.

The studio of Mr. Holladay, the photographer, which was damaged by the falling of a tree across the skylights, has been repaired and Mr. Holladay reopened the studio yesterday as usual.

Chemical Journal Club.

The Chemical Journal Club met Monday night. The following subjects were discussed:

"Recent Progress in Organic Chemistry"—Dr. Wheeler.

"A Delivery Funnel for Introducing Liquids Under Increased and Decreased Pressure"—Mr. Jos. E. Pogue, Jr.

"Chimney Draughting and Connecting Flues in Chemical Works"—Mr. Hill.

DIALECTIC WINS SOPH-JUNIOR.

Spirited Contest on Government Ownership of Railways Won by the Affirmative.

The annual Soph-Junior debate between the Di and Phi societies took place in Gerrard Hall Friday night, before a good-sized audience. The query was: "Resolved, That the United States government should own and operate the railroads." The affirmative side was presented by the Di representatives, Messrs. B. F. Reynolds, '08, and Roby C. Day, '07 and the negative by the Phi debaters, Messrs. Oscar R. Rand, '08, and W. A. Jenkins, '07. The president of the debate was Mr. J. S. Kerr and the secretary, Mr. E. S. Stewart, both of the Philanthropic society. The judges were: Dr. T. J. Wilson and Professors W. D. Toy and Collier Cobb.

The debate was one of the sort that you like to hear. Each speaker leaped into the light with zeal and earnestness and stayed in until the end. The speeches showed power of analysis, ability of presentation and, in some cases, swiftness of repartee. At the conclusion of the debate, the judges returned their decision in favor of the affirmative.

Mr. B. F. Reynolds was the first speaker for the affirmative, and some of the points he made follow:

Government is the exponent of our social and economical life, and being such, it is bound by its nature to protect its citizens industrially as well as politically. It is also the proper business of government to develop all the national resources and to promote those institutions upon which the social, political and industrial welfare of society most vitally depends. Government in its organic capacity can assume control of an industry upon two conditions: First, there must be industries in which comprehensive social interests are involved; second, there must be industries in which social evils arise as the result of unregulated private administration.

The speaker next showed that railway transportation is a function of government. First, in its legal relation, in its constitutional warrant which has already been exercised in the purchase and operation of the Panama railroad; second, in its analogy to public highways—the sole justification of its erection and existence; and, third, in its comprehensive social and economic interests—in that our civilization and our very existence itself depends directly upon the railroads.

The railroads, which possess almost the exclusive control of the intercourse of the country, including the conveyance of persons and every necessity of life, the service of the postoffice, and the movements of the troops, have none of the qualities, and ought to have none of the privileges, attaching to private commercial establishments; therefore, it would be an outrageous error to regard the American railways as business ventures important to none but the shareholders; they, on the contrary, involve interests social, political and industrial of the greatest magnitude; and, in short, it is incumbent upon a government of the people, by the people and for the people to own and operate such an industry.

Mr. O. R. Rand, first speaker for the negative, presented this line of defense:

The essential difference between a democratic and a paternal government lies in exalting the individual and encouraging individual initiative. Paternal governments are characterized by governmental initiative. This spirit of individual enterprise has been the greatest factor in our rapid industrial development. It brought forth our splendid system of railways. Government ownership and operation would deaden individual initiative and lead to paternalism.

By concentrating enormous power in the hands of the Federal government, the ownership and operation of the railways by the government would lead to centralization. In the United States the powers of government are divided between the Federal, State, and local governments. The Federal government has authority to regulate inter-State commerce, while the States have power to regulate intra-State commerce. If the nation tried to operate the railroads it would come in conflict with and override the State's powers, thus concentration of greater power in its own hands. Furthermore, the railroads would of necessity become a political issue and political corruption would ensue.

Transportation is not a function of a democratic government. Industry is a function of an individual. Anything which produces wealth is an industry. Transportation is a factor in the production of wealth in that it gives to articles place utility. It is therefore, an industry. The proper position of the government toward its industries is to regulate, not to own and operate.

Mr. R. C. Day, of the Di society, second speaker for the affirmative, said in part:

I propose to show you that government ownership and operation are both practical and necessary.

In the first place the purpose of Federal railroad ownership and operation would be to furnish, at least necessary expense, the most efficient service to the greatest possible number, and thereby strive to promote the entire industrial and social welfare.

Federal ownership would provide a national railroad department, employing the most responsible operatives through a branch of the civil service, and thereby promote a strong, unified service to all classes of people and of industry, an impartial service, since the fundamental principle of government service embraces the "square deal."

In the second place the corporation operates its road for the accumulation of wealth. In pursuit of this purpose the public welfare, when inconsistent with it, is constantly neglected. The corporations resort to discriminations, rebates, disregard of law, public bribes, and through these to restraint often to the ruin of personal business initiative as is shown by abundant evidence.

Finally government ownership and operation will remove these evils, which for over thirty years of attempted government regulation under private control has grown more serious, by substituting the one government policy of most efficient and thorough service instead of the personal selfish purpose of the private corporation.

Since the cause should be removed to cure the disease and as a more absolute private monopoly cannot be expected to bring that result, government operation only can be expected to remove the dangers and at the same time provide a strong, unified, and impartial system of travel and transportation.

Mr. W. A. Jenkins, for the Philanthropic society, closed the first round, speaking along the following lines:

If the proposed system excelled the present one it would have to give lower rates and better service. Could the government give lower rates? At the very lowest estimate the government would have to issue seven and a half billion dollars' worth of bonds to purchase our railroads. The annual interest on this immense debt at 4 per cent would be $300,000,000. The net profits of the railroad business last year amounted to $188,000,000, or $112,000,000 less than the interest on the bonds which the government would have to issue. The annual deficit would have to be drawn from public taxation, else the government, instead of lowering rates, would have to increase them.

Could the government give better services? The annual interest on the bonds, as already seen, would be $300,000,000 per year. After the dividends, amounting to $188,000,000 were declared last year, there were between $92,000,000 and $93,000,000 set aside for improvements and extension. Granted that the government would give the same rates that we now have, and make the usual amount of profits and surplus for improvements and extension, it would first have to pay the interest on those bonds before allowing anything for improvements and extensions; but the profits, plus the surplus, would not pay the interest on the bonds by $20,000,000. How then could the government give better service?

A DRAMA IN ONE ACT.

Wherein Bill McDade & Company, Sleep Dispellers, Do Their Daily Stunt—Conversation as a Test of Lung Power.

Scene: any one of one hundred rooms in the South, Old East and Old West; the time: some time in the tiny hours just before dawn any old morning in the year. Darkness and intense silence prevail and the inmates are sleeping the sleep of the sleepy.

Suddenly the sound of a pump vigorously manipulated breaks forth. For a half a minute it continues and then a blood-curdling sound, half shout of triumph, half roar of defiance greets the ear: "H-a-a-a-r-d luck! h-a-a-r-d luck!" It strikes the eardrums of the slumbering ones and converts their peaceful dreams into nightmares. They toss restlessly as if in the grasp of some insatiable demon. Again comes the cry, "H-a-a-a-r-d luck!" This time it is taken up and answered from other portions of the campus in varying words but with unceasing vociferousness. A Babel of sounds in which each voice seems striving to drown all others ensues.

(The sleepers toss more feverishly. One half-opens his eyes.)

The pump appears gradually to become the center of the sound radiations. Bursts of Satanic laughter follow sentences shouted at the top of the speakers' voices.

(The other sleeper now opens his eyes. The first half-raises himself on his elbow.)

The pump is now ceasing to be the center of the group of voices, which is scattering again to different parts of the campus, but the conversation is being continued with unabated vigor. Questions and answers, satiric comments punctuated by appreciative merriment are hurled back and forth. As the distance between the parties to the conversation increases, a reserve of lung power is called into play, which overcomes this disadvantage. Suddenly the conversations close for a brief space.

Both slumberers are now wide awake. "What was that?" asks one, apprehensively. "Confound those loud-mouthed coons!" cries the other, hotly. "How in thunder and by all that's eternal——!!!
Curtain.

Furthermore, Government employees would not render efficient service. If directly appointed by the government, they would be changed whenever a new party came into power. If some scheme of civil service examinations were adopted, how could you test the fitness of one million, six hundred thousand employees, representing every degree of intelligence from a spike-driver to a railroad president? The rejoinders were apt and witty.

We have been struck, at times, by a curious lack of balance in the way we go at things and in selecting the things which we do go at, contrasted with other universities. When the football season arrives there is scarcely an institution anywhere more keenly interested in the sport. When the intermittent sleet, snow and rain of a North Carolina winter disappear finally and the ball tossers are here, there and everywhere, we know only the all-absorbing game of baseball. The forensically inclined in the proper season take quite an animated interest in debate. In fact, there are few institutions which excel us in the attention paid to this branch of our training.

But take these three: football, baseball and debate and you have the things and all the things in which the University in a large way is interested. Basketball? We made a feverish and fitful attempt to get up a basketball team last year and the year before but apparently it has gone glimmering this year. Tennis? We have a tennis association which has sent out a number of tennis teams, but how many would feel great enough concern to attend an intercollegiate meet held upon our own grounds? Track work? We have put out a team every year for several successive years, but have never aroused interest enough to put out a winning team. Orchestra and glee clubs? Quite a deal of interest is being taken and there are excellent prospects for a creditable aggregation, yet when have they ever played or sung to a packed house on the Hill? And at our sister institution, the University of Virginia, the first night of practice brought out double the number of candidates that turned out here.

We could continue the enumeration indefinitely, but the examples given are sufficient to illustrate our point that we are, in some respects, a one-sided aggregation of folks. It is not thus at other places. We published last week a list of the championships in college sports. Many of the games on this list were calculated to cause the average Carolinian to scratch his head disconsolately if he were asked their nature. We confess we have not analysed the cause of this state of affairs to our own satisfaction. We have merely observed the defect and direct attention to it.

How about a baseball game for Monday afternoon of Commencement week? If the Varsity could keep in pretty good practice during examinations a game might be secured with some neighboring college team. Georgetown, it will be recalled, played Virginia at Charlottesville on a similar occasion last summer as late as June 15. Such a game would be a tremendous drawing card.

If this proves impracticable, however, there remain various other ways to get up a game. The faculty (who had a red hot team at last accounts) might play the students or the students might play the alumni or two teams could be picked from out the Varsity and the scrubs for a match game. Something should be done to fill up that boresome vacant day.

A system which separates the editorial and business departments is sometimes productive of some slight confusion, but here is a case where an oversight on the part of someone was productive of a piece of satiric literature too good to be passed unnoticed. We do not believe the author will object to our reproducing it here. It comes from a sparkling contemporary in Washington, D. C.

Editor of THE TAR HEEL.

Sir:

If you will not exchange with us even, how would it do for you to send your paper and let us pay you the difference between the intrinsic value of yours and that of ours? A committee could estimate it.

Yours truly,

An editorial in a recent issue of the Magazine dropped a tear for the passing of the old and simple regime of University life, substituted now by a complex life split up into manifold divisions. A glance at the Bulletin for this week illustrates this point. Not all the skill and careful foresight of the date-makers could prevent conflicts between the various attractions. But such is life at a great University and we who have been ambitious to have this a great one should have no kick coming if our wish is granted.

Lol the voice of the debater in the society halls. The season is upon us. Come forth, therefore, ye theorizers on governmental functions, ye expounders of the law of relativity, the law of progress, the law of growth, the law of harmony, —the law of Boyle, the law of Gresham, the law of diminishing returns—come forth and show the spirit that is in you.

The News and Observer suggests that the young men who invent the wild and woolly names for the college annuals would be valuable assistants to Miss Pullman in naming the Pullman cars. They could deliver the goods all right, but it would take a bigger job than that to keep them busy. It would be the merest pastime.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Mr. R. P. Carson, '08, has been confined for several days in the infirmary with rheumatism.

—Mr. John Cheshire, '05, has recently accepted a position as teacher in the graded school of Tarboro, N. C.

—Miss Hume entertained a number of her friends at a Valentine party at her home on Franklin avenue last night.

—Messrs. John A. Parker and A. C. Dalton spent Saturday in Greensboro in the interest of the Yackety Yack.

—Dr. Thomas Hume will lecture before the Oxford Shakspeare Club next Saturday and speak in Burlington Sunday night.

—Prof. M. C. S. Noble will deliver a lecture in the chapel Thursday night at 7:30 on "Visiting Schools in Great Britain."

—Mr. Robert Primrose Noble, catcher on our last three baseball nines, has signed up with the Richmond league for the coming season.

—Mr. O. Max Gardner has accepted an invitation to deliver an alumni address at the commencement of A. and M. College, of Raleigh.

—There is now a movement on foot in the second year medical class to obtain an examination before the State board after the completion of the first two years' work.

—Dr. F. P. Venable and Prof. M. C. S. Noble attended the meeting of the city school superintendents of the State in Greensboro last week. Dr. Venable addressed the meeting Thursday.

—Mr. Wendling, who was billed to appear here Saturday night as a Star Course lecturer, will be unable to come, owing to the sickness of his wife. He will fill the date sometime in March.

—The University Sermon was not preached Sunday night as was announced last week. Rev. A. W. Hogue, of Wilmington, who (instead of Bishop Strange, as also announced) was expected, was prevented from coming.

—The Moot Court will be held in the law room Saturday afternoon at 2:30, instead of in the morning, as customary. The change is made on account of an examination on criminal law which will be held Saturday morning.

—President Venable has accepted an invitation from the University of Alabama to deliver the address at Commencement day May 30th. The occasion will be the celebration of the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of the institution.

—At the regular meeting of the Philanthropic society Saturday night, Mr. J. K. Wilson resigned his position as editor-in-chief of the University Magazine on account of pressure of work, and Mr. H. L. Sloan, '07, was elected to succeed him. Mr. T. W. Dickson, '07, was elected to succeed Mr. Sloan, who had charge of the exchange department.

At the regular meeting Saturday night the Phi discussed the query: "Resolved, That the legal system of the United States should be changed so as to provide for trial by a committee of judges instead of by jury." The decision was in favor of the negative and Mr. J. F. Spruill made the best speech.

—A union service was conducted by the Young Men's Christian Association at the Methodist church Sunday night. The meeting was in the interest of the University's representation at the Nashville International Convention. Messrs. R. C. Day, R. W. Herring and A. F. Jackson, and Dr. L. R. Wilson spoke, outlining the purpose of the convention and explaining points in regard to it. A good crowd was present and heard the addresses with interest. It has been since announced that eight students will go from here. Dr. Hume, of the University faculty, will also go.

A Social Event.

On last Thursday night Prof. and Mrs. J. W. Gore gave a highly enjoyable reception at their residence to the members of the Kappa Alpha fraternity and a number of the young ladies of the town. Prof. and Mrs. Gore give a reception of this nature to the chapter every year. During the evening various amusements were resorted to and delicious refreshments were served.

Those present were: Dr. and Mrs. C. H. Herty, Dr. L. B. Newell, Prof. L. P. McGehee; Mr. L. T. Moore with Miss Mary Graves, Mr. Frank S. Hassell with Miss Louise Venable, Mr. H. P. Gibson with Miss Nellie Roberson, Mr. F. B. Daniels with Miss Bessie Roberson, Mr. B. B. Vinson with Miss Penelope Cobb, Mr. J. B. Nichols with Miss James; Messrs. Foye Roberson, Frank Gillam, J. S. Mann and Basil Muse.

Levv, the tailor, of Durham, will be at Pickard's Hotel next week. Wait for him.—Ad.

A Call.

TO ALL BASEBALLISTS:
Only five or six weeks remain before our first intercollegiate baseball game. It is necessary, therefore, that the candidates for the team begin work at once. Every student who can play baseball at all is requested to show up for practice this afternoon at 2:30. You may not think you are Varsity material, but come anyway. The coach will decide about that. We must have two strong teams and no one has any idea who is to fill the positions on either one.

If you come out and display the necessary and proper ability, nothing can keep you from filling one of those places.

FRED B. STEF.
Captain.

Messrs. W. H. L. Mann and F. E. Hester spent Saturday and Sunday at the home of Mr. Mann in Alamance county.

Reward for the Gymnasts.

At a meeting of the advisory committee last Monday it was decided to award the right to wear a monogram N.C. on jerseys to those who attain to a certain degree of proficiency in gymnastic work. This is done at all the large colleges and will undoubtedly be an incentive to hard, steady work in the gymnasium.

Baseball Once Yet Again Already.

Elsewhere is published a call from Captain Fred B. Stem, of the baseball team, for all candidates for positions on the teams, to present themselves this afternoon.

This will mean the regular opening of the season of practice and from now on the work will proceed with more regularity. Just what the weather man has in store for us is not yet apparent, excepting, of course, the adverse prophesy of the woodchuck (we use the term deliberately, the term in ordinary use not being of sufficient dignity).

Time and again for the past few weeks just as we were congratulating ourselves that the gentle touch of spring was being felt in the land our expectations were rudely shattered by a lightninglike transformation which replaced the balmy languor of the February sun with chill winds, overhanging clouds and the blackest of black mud. Consequently matters have been at almost a complete standstill in the baseball department of athletics. The only consolation is that the weather is no respecter of institutions and that the conditions prevailing here are identical with those prevailing elsewhere.

But the weather will take care of itself. Come out. The pledge will be administered today.

Behold the Lawyers.

The following law students of the law class of the fall term, 1905, passed their examination before the Supreme Court on the first Monday in February and were licensed to practice law in North Carolina.

Messrs. E. H. Bean, Rowan; H. S. Brothers, Cumberland; H. C. Carter, Jr., Hyde; A. C. Elliot, Rutherford; R. L. Gash, Transylvania; F. S. Hassell, Martin; J. W. Osborne, Mecklenburg; R. L. Phillips, Graham; W. J. Sherrod, Martin; T. W. Simmons, Sampson; D. W. Sorrell, Durham; and N. A. Townsend, Roberson.

This constitutes a majority of the candidates for license at this time, law students of the University.

Mr. C. A. Jones, of Lincoln, who was sick of typhoid fever and unable to apply at the August, 1905, examination, and Messrs. Walter Clark Jr. and Branner Gilmer, B. L., at the last commencement but not of age in August and Mr. Lee Wees a student in 1900 were also examined and licensed by the Supreme Court.

With the Debaters.

The Di society debated the advisability of municipal ownership: "Resolved, That municipalities should own and operate their electric light plants and street railways." The affirmative won and Mr. Chas. P. Tillett was awarded the "gold medal."

The preliminary contest to select the University's representatives in the Georgia-Carolina debate will take place Friday night in the Di hall. The debaters are Messrs. W. B. Love, '06 and W. S. O'B. Robinson, '07, affirmative and Messrs. J. J. Parker, '07 and K. C. Sidberry, '07, on the negative. The query is, "Resolved, That the tariff policy of the United States should be revised on the basis of a tariff for revenue only."

The contest will be the first under the new system and considerable interest attaches to the experiment. Those two whom the judges pronounce the best debaters will be Carolina's representatives, irrespective of which society or societies they are members. Heretofore they have been chosen, one from each society, in separate contests.

ACROSS THE WATERS.

A Characteristic Lecture Friday Night by Prof. M. C. S. Noble —Wealth of Experiences.

The announcement that Professor Marcus Cicero Stephens Noble would lecture in the chapel Thursday night on "Visiting Schools in Great Britain" was sufficient to pack the hall with an expectant audience. Nor were they disappointed. It was an interesting lecture delivered in Professor Noble's own inimitable style. Some one told him after the lecture "You have Mark Twain 'skinned' a mile" and the words were truly spoken. Scenes, situations, conversations, which would have been tame under the treatment of many, were so presented as to be laughably humorous.

He began at the beginning: how when he started off last summer for his trip to Great Britain he walked to the wharf in New York "All by myself" and embarked; how he arrived at Glasgow, Scotland and proceeded to take in all the schools, examining them in a characteristically American way; the female teacher who said "closs" for class and "commence" for commence, in putting the class through calisthenic exercises for his especial benefit; his interview with the gruff and high and mighty Canon who was willing to give everybody's views as to educational ideals but his own; the teacher who persistently declined to be impressed by his setting forth of the process of sending children "to the board" in North Carolina; rejecting the scheme because "you don't have to go to the board out in the world;" the beautiful German maiden who, knowing but one English sentence (and not knowing what that meant) proceeded to practice it on him and how he felt when he heard it: "How are you, my darling?"—his trip to the land of "Bobby" Burns, as the country people affectionately call him; his visit to the scenes immortalized by Scott in "The Lady of the Lake": Loch Katrine, Loch Lochrine, Uam Var and the rest—these and many other things he told, following his travels until his arrival home. Never till the turreted church spires and tall skyscrapers of New York loomed up in the distance, had the words of Scott been to him so pregnant with meaning: "Breathes there a man with soul so dead he never to himself hath said, 'This is my own, my native land.'" —The Chemical Journal Club met Tuesday night. Subjects of a chemical nature were discussed. Dr. Royall Davis, Mr. Hubert Hill and Mr. G. F. Leonard read papers.

Ohio State is going to send a woman on her debating team against Illinois. Evidently there'll be something done in the way of articulating.

NEWSPAPER MEN BANQUET.

Speech-Making and Other Things While Away Pleasant Hours At Hotel de Pickard.

A congenial crowd gathered in the dining hall of Pickard's, the scene of so many festivities of late, for the banquet of the reorganized Press Association. The members are students engaged in all branches of literary work, combined for mutual helpfulness and a closer acquaintanceship.

Prof. J. E. Latta, who is closely identified with the work, gracefully acted the part of toastmaster. Dr. Francis P. Venable and Professor Collier Cobb were present as guests of the association.

After a brief address by the toastmaster Professor Cobb, who has done quite a deal of newspaper work, was called upon for an address and responded. He chose for his subject: "The Stay-at-Home Newspaper man." He emphasized the importance of the country newspaper, and its opportunities to be a power for good in the community. But the extent to which the country newspaper is used and is capable of being used as a steppingstone to political advancement, said he, has been immeasurably underestimated. He cited statistics to prove this, showing among other things that a large part of the membership of the present Congress are newspaper men.

Mr. J. K. Wilson, of the association, was the next speaker. His subject was "College Literature," but he went out of his way to pay a compliment to the "ubiquitous strenuousness" of the newspaper men, a phrase which Mr. Louis T. Moore (known more familiarly to his intimates as "Bully") straightway jotted down in his notebook to palm off on the Industrial News as original. The paucity of college literature, said Mr. Wilson, is due to the intensely critical atmosphere of a college, which frightens many from attempting to write, who may have possibilities for development. The novice should receive not cynical discouragement but hearty and sincere encouragement. Dr. Venable spoke next. The work of newspaper men was of vital importance to the University, he said, and consequently the interest of the University in them has ever been keen and it attempts to facilitate their efforts in every possible way. His advice was to run a country newspaper and stay at home if you can make a living at it—not use the paper as a stepping stone to the realization of political ambition, nor run off to New York.

Mr. John A. Parker, president of the association, responded. He explained the method of organization and urged the members to see to it that every paper in North Carolina, daily, weekly or otherwise, had a correspondent here next year, in order that the University might be kept before the people.

SELF MASTERY AN ESSENTIAL.

Rev. A. W. Hogue, of Wilmington, Preaches An Able Sermon in Gerrard Hall Sunday Night.

The University Sermon for February was preached in the Chapel Sunday night by Rev. A. W. Hogue, of Wilmington, rector of an Episcopal church there. Mr. Hogue is a young man of forceful address, clear enunciation, and an easy control of language. His hold upon his audience is illustrated by the fact that so rapidly did the time pass that the sermon appeared to the audience to be unusually short.

Mr. Hogue began by a pleasant reference to the cordial relations which have always existed between his own university, Sewanee, and this one, and to the days when they used to meet each other on the diamond and the gridiron. He took a prominent part in athletics when he was in college.

He chose for his text the twenty-sixth verse of the ninth chapter of first Chronicles: "I therefore so run, not as uncertainly; so fight I not as one that beateth the air."

The sermon was a plea for self mastery. Paul had used the athletic similes of running and fighting because the Olympian games were warm in the interest of the people and the figure appealed to them strongly. We who are also interested in such athletic sport as football and baseball can understand the analogy between these sports and life. For success in any of them a period of rigid discipline and self denial is a prime and absolute requisite. The same is true of success in any form or in any phase of life. He who cannot conquer himself stands scant show of conquering the world.

Football Game Today.

A game of association football will be played on the athletic field this afternoon at 2:30 sharp. It's a holiday, a snappy game is expected and he that goeth not will miss part of his education. Your presence will lend encouragement to the institutors of the game. Admission 20 cents, to raise money with which to buy equipment for this and next year. Ladies free. Music by the band.

HENRY THE FACTOTUM.

A Sketch of a Familiar Character. —His Conversational Ability and the Power of Onions.

Henry is the bell-ringer, he is the library's mail man, he is the President's servant; in fact he is a sort of limited factotum for all the college officers. Henry is black, too, coal black. Being what he is and doing what he does, Henry has acquired a varied vocabulary and a distinct manner of expression. He is widely read in the topics of the day. He seeks not to conceal his knowledge, and every day he may be seen informing Rufus and Bill and Long Bill—less fortunate than himself—of current events.

The other day a TAR HEEL man had a talk with him. Henry had come over to the office for something or other, and had stopped in his philosophical way to watch the typo at the case.

"Those manifestations of labors are effective in bringing about the education of one's mind," he asserted, "but I should prefer to acquire my intellect in a manner not so similar." He pronounced these words softly but distinctly. The typo remembered that some judge or other had declared printers to be artisans and not laborers. But he held his peace. The sound of the seven o'clock bell again rang in his ear; he saw Henry with his basket of mail; he thought of Henry, Jr., dressed in his full large red sweater; he realized at once what all Henry stood for: the head of a family of thirteen, the nonhypochondriac eater of cabbage for supper, the real philosopher among his associates, the personification of cheerfulness, and the awaking of his race to the beauties of English language. After these thoughts—

But here Henry pulled out of his pocket a big blue onion and began gnawing the peeling therefrom.

"Doesn't that burn you?" he was asked.

Henry was stumped. He was not prepared for the question. He is not a romanticist except when he has to be; he belongs to the conventional school.

"Doesn't that burn you, Henry?"

"No, sir, not when I am afflicted with a cold. This onion is as sweet as sugar now. It does not require water from the bucket. But," and Henry's set speech was ended; he was compelled to turn in a measure to the tongue of his fathers, or else forego a dissertation on the merits of onions. "But onions certainly does make me cry at other times, and that's no mistake. But they are sweet with a cold and cure them. If you possess a match about your person I shall smoke."

He left the office with his corn cob pipe in his mouth.

—A plentiful number of new paper bound hymn books have recently been placed in the University Chapel.

THE TAR HEEL begs to assure its esteemed contemporary, the Virginia Tech, that no comparison between New York and Blacksburg to the detriment of the latter was intended in our recent reference to a possible strike in the domain of its printshop. But if it's true that "Blacksburg is becoming more like New York every day" we're sincerely glad to hear it and extend congratulations. Here's hoping, Mr. Editor, that some of these good days she'll grasp the end of a telegraph wire so we can get continuous reports from there down this way once in awhile.

But before we ring off we'd like to congratulate the Tech on its latest exhibition of journalistic enterprise: a writeup of a hop in which a minute description of the apparel of each fair one follows her name, thus: "blue crepe de chime over silk," "blue accordion plaited crepe de chime," "cream colored voile over silk, carnations," and so on, throughout the entire list of guests. It's nice and real interesting, but what we want to know is, who coached up the the reporter?

The new system of selecting intercollegiate debaters has been given its first trial, with what degree of success it is somewhat difficult to say. The fact that both successful contestants were from one society vindicates that part of the system, if indeed, it ever needed vindication at all. But the tremendous numbers of contestants which it was predicted would be incited to enter failed, for some reason or other, to show up. Only four men, as contrasted with nine last year, entered the contest, despite the fact that there were two debates last year. How many, if any, remained out of the fight because of disinclination to subject themselves to the possible inconveniences of the new system it is, of course, impossible to say, and the effect of changing sides in the twinkling of an eye is a thing to be determined only by experience.

We notice every now and then that some institution is discussing the abolition of the custom of giving football and baseball sweaters with monograms complimentary to the managers of the respective teams. This is a queer custom, to say the least, and one wonders on what ground it could be defended. The managers do a tremendous amount of work, of course, but so does nearly every one else, and the monogram is supposed to represent a certain standard of athletic skill. In the case of the managers, as in not a few other cases, the "honor" is deemed sufficient compensation.

The faculty lecture Thursday night was the first in quite a time and the interest manifested justifies the contention that more of these would be welcomed. There is an abundance of material in our own faculty as good as much that is imported from the ends of the earth for our delectation. Each is a specialist in his own line, whether it be science, literature or humor, and so on, and most can speak interestingly on some subject in their peculiar sphere.

Messrs. Love and Parker the Men.

The preliminary contest to select Carolina's representatives in the Georgia-Carolina debate took place in the hall of the Di society Friday night. Mr. J. K. Wilson of the Phi society, presided, and Mr. W. H. Duls, of the Di was secretary. The judges were Drs. Eben Alexander, E. K. Graham and Archibald Henderson.

The query discussed was that which will be debated with Georgia, "Resolved, That the best interests of the United States demand that our tariff policy should be revised on the basis of a tariff for revenue only." The first speaker on the affirmative was Mr. W. B. Love, '06, of the Di society; the first on the negative, Mr. J. J. Parker, '07, of the Di; the second on the affirmative, Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson, '07, of the Phi; the second on the negative, Mr. K. C. Sidberry, '07, of the Phi.

After a spirited debate the judges rendered a decision in favor of Messrs. Love and Parker. Both are experienced debaters and hard workers and will make it interesting for Georgia. The negative is the side which Carolina will defend.

Changes in Chemical Department.

Mr. George A. Johnston has been appointed Collaborator in the U. S. Forestry Service to assist Dr. Chas. H. Herty in the investigation of resins. This work will be carried on in the chemical laboratory of the University. Dr. Herty, who is at the head of the department of chemistry in the University, is recognized as the foremost man in the country in this field.

Mr. F. P. Drane has been appointed assistant in chemistry to fill the place which Mr. Johnston vacates, because of the appointment mentioned above.

Mr. Ray Henry, a student in the department of chemistry, has accepted a position as chemist for the Virginia-Carolina Chemical Company. Mr. Henry's work will be in Richmond.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Dr. James D. Bruner is delivering a series of lectures at Antioch on "The Life of Christ."

—Mr. T. W. Simmons received a telegram Monday, informing him of the serious illness of his mother. He left for home Monday afternoon.

—At a meeting of the Geological Journal Club Tuesday night a paper was read by Mr. R. B. Hardison and two by Professor Collier Cobb.

—Mr. J. S. Kerr, of THE TAR HEEL reportorial staff, has left college to take a similar position on a new paper which is being started up in Atlanta. He carries with him THE TAR HEEL's best wishes for success.

—Work has been resumed on the University Y. M. C. A. Building. The plastering inside the building will be put on within a few days, and it is hoped that when this is done money will be available to push the work further.

—Dr. Hume lectured at Oxford on Saturday night last on "Shakspeare's Mob and Its Leaders." He spoke Sunday Morning on "The Consecration and call to Service of the Young People in our Colleges and Schools."

—At the February meeting of the Historical Society Monday night a paper was read by Mr. R. M. Brown on "Reconstruction Days in North Carolina" and one by Prof. Noble on a "Personal remembrance of Sherman's march through North Carolina". After these papers Dr. Battle continued the discussion of Reconstruction days, a subject that the Society has been discussing practically all year.

—The party for the Nashville convention will leave Tuesday afternoon. At Salisbury it will connect with a special containing students from eastern Virginia colleges. The party will consist of Dr. Hume, who goes to represent the faculty, Secretary A. F. Jackson and about eight students, unless the number allowed us is reduced. Among these will be Messrs. Ross, Leonard, Day, Herring, Gray, Upchurch and Bryant.

—Mr. Henry Blount, the well known orator, will lecture in the chapel Friday night on the subject, "Wit, Humor, Eloquence and Oratory." The lecture will be under the auspices of the Y. M. C. A., the object being to raise money to defray in part the expenses of the association's delegates to the Nashville Convention. Those who have heard Mr. Blount know that they can expect all of his subject in the lecture. And the price of admission is very low: 35 cents for the middle row; 25 for all the others.

The Phi debated the query, "Resolved, That we should free the Phillipines, instead of holding them as dependencies." The affirmative won and Mr. Wiley Pittman made the best speech.

The Di society solved this question: "Resolved, That United States Senators should be elected by the direct vote of the people." The committee decided that the negative won, that Mr. Moon made the best speech and that Mr. Moutsinger deserved honorable mention.

Miss Hume's Valentine Party.
One of the pleasing social events of last week was the Valentine party given by Miss May Hume to a few of her friends at her home on Franklin street. It was postponed from Wednesday until Saturday night. A number of games were indulged in, the principal one being that of "hunting hearts." In this Mr. Hampden Hill won the first prize and Mr. Hubert Hill the booby. Delightful refreshments were served. Those present were: Miss Venable with Mr. Hampden Hill; Miss Graves with Mr. T. The course covering four years begins during the last week in September and continues until June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

YE SENIORS DO MEET.

Not a Prehistoric But a Twentieth Century Affair This Time—Strictly a Business Meeting.

An announcement that the Seniors would have a meeting was posted in public places Saturday and in obedience thereto a bunch of '06's gathered in the chapel Saturday afternoon. At first there was no one present save the chairman, but finally one after another came strolling lazily in from different directions till the chairman said a quorum was present and the meeting was open for business. "The object of the meeting," it was stated, "is to decide upon the nature of our class gift."

"Mr. President," a ruddy faced gentleman of an athletic turn and a reputation as a business manager was the speaker—"since every class tries to do some original stunt along this line, I move we give no gift this year."

"Second the motion!" shouted a closefisted member of the academic faculty. The prospects of the bill seemed bright, but a sudden motion to table quenched its aspirations effectively.

"Mr. President"—the ruddy gentleman was on his feet again, his face wreathed in a beneficent smile, his eyes radiating a generous light—"I move that the class contribute the $15,000 remaining to be raised before we get the Carnegie library."

The poverty pinched "faculty member" rose to his feet, gesticulating wildly, but his feeble utterances were drowned in the chorus of "Ayes!" which signified overwhelming assent to the motion, which was passed and ordered recorded.

Question 269 was then called: "What about the Senior benches?"

Silence reigned for a moment till "I think we ought to have 'em" some sentimentalist volunteered. Apparently all agreed on this point, but Question 270 remained: "How are we to get them?" Soon again the silence of meditation was broken by the utterance of one inspired as it were by an idea. "Since we're going to do ourselves proud on this class gift business it would be well to economize along other lines and I move that a committee be appointed to be known as the Committee for the Surreptitious Securing of Lonesome Lumber." The motion was passed unanimously. But then the trouble began again. A talkative assistant in one of the scientific departments, who has a reputation as a wag, was appointed chairman, but his appointment was bitterly contested by his fellow associates on the ground of professionalism. They failed, however, to show in what professionalism consisted and the meeting was adjourned until they meet again.

The Baseballists Baseballing.

The testing and practice of candidates for the baseball team has been progressing merrily the past week, and the men are evincing a lively interest.

For pitcher, Thompson, Cunningham, Patterson and Montgomery are the candidates, and are doing good work. Cunningham (Coach Lawson states) is improving, his weak point now being his batting. Patterson has been at home sick, but is back and will be used as infield and pitcher. Thompson will be used as pitcher and outfielder.

Among the infielders, Stem has been tried at second and showed up well. He would have played this position well, but will go back to first. Patterson will be tried at second on account of his hitting ability. Holt at short, James, J. B. at third, James, W. behind the bat. Harris will probably be back this week and will have it out with Holt for second.

The greatest fight will be in the outfield. Thompson, Calder, Story, Hanes, Thomas, Whitaker, Shull, Sutton, Orr, Lloyd, Hart, Montgomery and Cunningham are the most promising out-fielders.

Stem, James, J. B., Story, Patterson, Thompson, Hanes, and Calder show good position at the plate. Most of the others show bad position. This will be corrected as soon as possible. Shull shows lack of knowledge of the outfield, but is a good hitter.

Thompson has departed from our midst for a visit home and Stem and Rogers are contemplating a similar vacation. All candidates must come out at 3.45 and remain as long as the coach desires.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

AN APPROPRIATE CELEBRATION

Good Speeches And Splendid Music Mark the Occasion of Washington's Birthday.

Washington's Birthday received its usual appropriate and enjoyable celebration on the Hill last Thursday, the order of exercises being that announced in the last issue.

The celebration, which took place in Gerrard Hall, began at 10:30 o'clock Thursday morning, Mr. W. B. Love acting as president. After prayer by Rev. Marion T. Plyler, of the Methodist church, and music by the University orchestra, which was secured for the occasion through the joint action of the societies and the University, and a brief address by the president of the exercises, Mr. L. R. Rudisell, orator for the Dialectic society, was announced and spoke.

Mr. Rudisell had chosen for his subject: "The Curtained Corner in Washington's Life" and his speech, well wrought out and valuable for the new insight given into Washington's character, was especially noted for its beautiful language and well turned sentences.

Mr. Rudisell pictured the youth of the Virginia schoolboy, his love-making days, the dreams of future greatness in which every healthy boy indulges. He followed his career throughout the war, lifting the curtain here and there to portray important situations typical of those trying times, illustrating especially the simplicity and heroic fortitude under the bitter criticism of his policy directed at him by the supporters of General Gates, who was a candidate for the position Washington then held as Commander-in-Chief.

The next speaker was Mr. James Small McNider, of the Philanthropic society, who spoke on the subject: "From the View Point of the Carolina School Boy." His oration was a well sustained and timely plea for the instillation into the North Carolina school boy of the feeling of pride in his native State which the achievements of her sons so fully warrant.

The Massachusetts school boy, the South Carolina youth, the son of Virginia—each believes his State is preeminent in all things, always has been and will be for all time. Why is it? Because his teachers from his earliest youth have related to him the stories of his State's history and taught him to reverence and love it.

Mr. MacNider reviewed briefly some of the bright pages in our State's glorious history and touched upon some of the obscure and neglected points which are misunderstood or not noticed at all. No State has a grander record. Why shall not our youth be taught this fact?

Here the orchestra played and the audience, standing, sang with feeling, "America."

Then came the faculty address delivered by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, who took for his theme, "Individuality." Dr. Smith sustained his reputation and his speech, an original treatment of no common subject, while intensely practical and helpful was, nevertheless, polished, replete with thought and thoroughly enjoyed.

The development of individuality, said the speaker, has been a process of evolution. In the earliest stages of civilization the clan, the tribe or some other organization was the unit. But the coming of Christianity, the religion of the individual, was the greatest victory for individuality in the history of the world and the Sermon on the Mount was its grand Magna Charta. Then after a time the influence of absolutism began to be felt again and this time it was Martin Luther who stepped forth and won a second victory.

The germ of an individuality is born within each one of us and it is a priceless gift which awaits improvement. Individuality is the basis of all character and only in so far as one develops it can he make himself felt in the world of action. Its education is a letting out and not a pouring in process.

There are three faculties which are of prime importance to success and which lie latent in each one. The first is the power of concentration. Concentration is the cutting edge of personality and the education which fails to give it is a failure. The second is the power of confident and resolute belief, a faculty which the world seems to be losing. Believe something and adhere to it. The third is the power of bearing responsibility. There two kinds of people in the world. One can stand responsibility and attains success. The other class is composed, perhaps, of brilliant and gifted people but, lacking this faculty, they fail. Cultivate, therefore, this power, if you would win.

After a prolonged selection on which the orchestra did itself proud, the exercises were declared completed and the crowd wended their way to the postoffice.

No.

To the Editor of The Tar Heel:

Is it true that Messrs. Drury Philips and James A. Gray, Jr., are going to start up a new magazine? I have heard that they are and should like to know.

READER.

Our correspondent is misinformed. The gentlemen in question, while fully capable of undertaking such an enterprise, have at present no such project in view. They are merely working out a plan for the publication of a special issue of the University Magazine by the Sophomore class. Presumably it is this which has occasioned the rumor of which you speak.—THE TAR HEEL.

THAT ASSOCIATION GAME.

The Game Comes Off On Schedule Time and One Side Beats the Other, Two To Nothing.

The game of association football, announced for last Thursday afternoon came off on schedule time, and was apparently what it was predicted to be, a snappy game. The crowd might have been a good deal larger without taxing the powers of the athletic park beyond its limit of endurance. It might also, possibly, have been more vociferously enthusiastic without great danger to its nervous systems or vocal organs.

This, however, does not apply to the players. They went into the game with uncooling ardor, undiminished vim and unweakening energy, and paused not to catch their breath from a half's beginning until its end. It is the sort of game, anyway, which is more exciting to the player than to the onlooker.

But if it lacked anything of interest to the crowd, this was atoned for by the novelty. It was so like and yet so unlike a regulation football game. There were the two teams of eleven men each, lined up opposite each other. There were the officials. There, looming up at opposite extremes of the field, were the goal posts. There was the leathern sphere, always "the cynosure of all eyes" and the recipient of all kicks.

But with the beginning of the game the difference became apparent. Instead of a player grasping the ball in his arms and dashing around an end or darting through a hole in the group of human forms, each endeavoring to lay hands on him and fell him to the earth—instead of this there was kicking, running and kicking again. To touch it with the hands was forbidden. When the ball found itself in the midst of a group of a dozen players, each of whom strenuously strove to send it toward his own goal, then it was that the game to the uninitiated [which, being interpreted, is the crowd] became humorous. Apparently shins received more of the kicks than the ball. As it darted hither and thither one wondered how the football players on the teams could keep from picking up the elusive sphere and, making a sensational run for a touchdown, settle the business in short order.

"Who won?" asked an interested spectator of one of the players as he leaped over the sidelines.

"The other side," was the disconsolate reply. "The other side" was Captain Stevenson's and the score was 2 to 0. The heaviest man in the game was 185; the lightest 110; the linesmen were Messrs. Gardner and J. K. Wilson.

—Governor Glenn has accepted an invitation from Judge McRae in behalf of the law class to deliver an address before that class in the early part of April.

THE PRIDE OF WEST END.

A Fourteen Hundred Pound Specimen of Hog Flesh Submits to an Interview.

West End boasts the biggest hog in seven counties, or maybe eight, for all that anybody knows to the contrary. It is the property of a middle aged negro who lives just this side of the depot. It is not merely of late that the animal has attained his unusual size. For months he has been an attraction for the scores of youths who daily stroll depotwards, seeking rest and inspiration.

A TAR HEEL man was in a group of sightseers that visited the place the other afternoon.

"We're looking for the big pig," volunteered the spokesman, to the colored individual who met them at the gate.

The man proudly escorted the party to the rear part of his yard where, in different compartments, and in diverse postures of repose various specimens of the genus swine reclined.

The negro pointed to one pen, partitioned off from the rest. "Dere he is, suh; dere he is."

The crowd rubbered. And, sure enough, there lay his hogship, calmly taking his ease, oblivious of the petty cares of this trivial, one-horse world.

"Get up, sir," ordered his owner, rudely breaking into his majesty's meditations by punching him with a miniature fence rail which, with a fierce growl of disapproval, he seized in his teeth. He clambered to his feet awkwardly and with difficulty and stood, like a mountain of flesh, glaring sullenly at his tormentors.

"Gosh, a reg'lar buffalo!" ejaculated one of the group.

"More like a rhinoceros," interjected a second. "Look at the face and snout."

And, in truth, there was a striking resemblance between the beast which stood lowering before them and the awesome creation which yawns at one from circus posters or from the cage of the menagerie.

"What does he weigh, uncle?" was next in order.

"Well, suh, I give him 'leven hundred, dressed," was the reply in a conservative tone.

"How about the way he stands now, without his clothes on." The inquisitor was the same individual.

"Fourteen hundred, suh, at least. Not an ounce less."

The brute, by this time, appeared to divine the fact that there was nothing going on which demanded his immediate attention and sank clumsily back to the earth. The inquisitive spectator opened his mouth to ask yet another question, but what that question was, no human being will ever know. Just at that moment there came clanging over the hills the clarion note of the supper bell. Hurriedly but not disrespectfully the party departed, leaving the hog king to his dreams.

To hold up a certain clearly defined standard of attainment for others to reach in any line of endeavor, without providing a means by which it may be attained is useless, because it serves no end. To set up the standard, to provide the means which shall test the skill of the candidates for approval, then to delegate the right to apply the test, and to place the stamp of approval or disapproval upon the contestants to others whose standard is different from the one held up may not be useless; it is unjust.

This, as we see it, is a patent inconsistency in our debating system. The standard of debate and even of oratory which this University has erected is, in the opinion of those who have studied it, unequalled by that of any other institution of learning. Yale and Harvard train their men to speak extemporaneously, to compile arguments on one's own side and anticipate those of one's opponents. But their speeches (so far as one may judge from reading them) have none of the warmth and inspiring flavor of Southern oratory, born with every Southerner, craved alike by Southern and Northern ears. Their debating logic is more of a study in the effective massing of static facts and "points" than in the presentation of a natural development of a process of thought leading irresistibly to a given conclusion. Other institutions specialize in word painting, some in oratory, while still others boast that their speeches are delivered "in an unimpassioned tone of voice." None of these is perfect of course. Ours, while we believe it the most nearly perfect, is not perfect. It cannot be, so long as it permits the delivery of memorized speeches and often of memorized rejoinders. But, even though it be wholly wrong, whether it is perfect or not is irrelevant to our point, which is this: "the rules of the game" whatever they are, should not be changed after it begins. The standard should be the same throughout.

It is impossible in all cases to conform to this. When we meet a sister institution on the platform of debate we must submit that an outsider play the role of critic and render judgment. But in absolutely no other case is such procedure necessary. It may be said that the outsider's view point is best; and that by objecting to it we betray lack of confidence in ourselves. Our reply is that if this be true "Long Bill" should grade the papers in Greek, or be asked to award the Worth prize. The illustration is extreme, but the principle is the same when, for instance, the faculty having raised its standard and perhaps coached the contestants, stands aloof while the Mangum Medal or some other contest is decided by those whose only claim to consideration is that way back, some time in the long ago the dean of the academic department handed them a sheepskin and a Bible which they hugged to their bosoms as they went their way.

We believe not only that all contests in debate and in oratory between University students should be decided by a committee of the faculty of the University but that committee carefully selected, should be a standing one. Today the half cynical watchword among debaters is: "Get your committee and your debate's half won." To this end all their powers of shrewd diplomacy, all their knowledge of human nature, is brought to bear. "This man believes in our side. We want him. That one is a good man but—the other fellow has two courses under him"—and a blue pencil mark ruthlessly settles his fate. This is a glimpse behind the scenes, but the picture is a true one.

Surely such a process of selecting as this cannot prove beneficial to the cause. In theory it is illogical, in practice, it must fall short of the mark.

The Baseball Situation.

The past week saw much development in the baseball material. Coach Lawson has had three diamonds loaded every afternoon from 3 o'clock to 6 with eager candidates, all of whom, it is hoped, will make good. The first team, composed of Stem at first, Patterson at second, Holt at Short, James, B., at third, with Thompson, Story, Calder and Hanes alternating in the outfield, lined up against the scrubs Saturday afternoon for a short practice game.

Holt, in sliding to second, wrenched his ankle, and had to be assisted from the field. He will be back in the game again in a few days. The season is too early to have accidents yet.

Captain Stem received a letter from Harris last week in which he stated that he might turn up any day. Harris is just the man who is needed to strengthen our infield and with his hitting ability will add much needed strength to the team.

Much interest is being taken in the scramble for outfield positions. Thompson, Story, Calder, Hanes and Whitaker are the most promising Varsity material, while Sutton, Lloyd, Willis, Thomas, Raper, and Orr are fighting it out for positions in the scrub gardens.

Coach Lawson has promised THE TAR HEEL to write for its next issue a criticism of the individual candidates for positions on the teams, so that each man can see what kind of a baseball player he is in the coach's estimation.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Mr. John P. D. John, will deliver the next Star Course lecture in the chapel Friday night. Mr. John (not meaning to plagiarize the country newspaper style, but it's unavoidable in this case), has quite a reputation as a lecturer and a pleasant hour is anticipated.

—The University's representation at the Nashville convention left the first of the week. Dr. Hume and Messrs. Roby C. Day and F. E. Hester leaving Monday and Messrs. A. F. Jackson, James A. Gray, Jr., E. C. Herring, G. F. Leonard, O. B. Ross and Stanley Winborne leaving Tuesday afternoon.

—The January issue of the South Atlantic Quarterly contains a sketch of the life of Governor James Morehead by Dr. C. Alphonso Smith. The article is a mingling of the historical and the appreciative, dealing with the chief events of his life and the things which stand out in a large way as characteristic of his work.

—The monthly meeting of the Odd Number Club was held Friday night in the English Conference room. Productions were read as follows: "An Attempt at Wealth," by Mr. L. W. Parker; "A Poem" by Mr. H. H. Hughes; "On a Certain Melancholy in Bachelors," by Dr. E. K. Graham; "A Logical Inconsistency," by Mr. V. L. Stephenson.

—The leading article, with frontispiece, in the February Arena is by Dr. Archibald Henderson, who is a frequent contributor. The article, which is entitled, "Maurice Maeterlinck: Symbolist and Mystic," is an analysis, in Dr. Henderson's vivid style, of the things for which Maeterlinck stands and of his relation to contemporary literature.

—Dr. Royall Davis, of the chemical department, is in Greensboro, where he is the bright, particular star witness in the famous Matthews case, in which a prominent Greensboro physician is on trial for the alleged poisoning of his wife some months ago. Dr. Davis's testimony will be relative to a test made by him two or three weeks ago on the syringe used in making the injections. Newspaper dispatches indicate that Dr. Davis's testimony may revolutionize the course of the case. Apparently it is the case of the accused that will be strengthened.

Gimghoul Banquet.

The Gimghouls, a secret order of the Junior class, gave a banquet at their lodge Friday night from eight to ten o'clock, in honor of the young ladies from different parts of the State. A number of young people from the town and several members of the faculty were present.

Beautiful souvenirs of the occasion were presented to the ladies by the members of the organization.

In the Realm of Gaiety.

The annual midwinter dance of the German Club was given in Commons Hall Friday evening from ten till three o'clock.

Mr. J. Burt James, of Greenville, dancing with Miss Alice White, of Greensboro, led the german. Messrs. Manlius Orr, of Charlotte, and T. H. Haywood, of Haw River, were assistant leaders of the german. Those dancing were:

J. B. James with Miss Alice White, of Greensboro; F. B. Stem with Miss Lillie Ferrall, Raleigh; F. Gillam with Miss Alice Spruill, Louisburg; W. P. Emerson with Miss Bessie Gore, Wilmington; J. T. McAden with Miss Josephine Boylan, Raleigh; T. P. Cheshire with Miss Nina James, Greenville; J. H. D'Alemberte with Miss Nina Wheeler, High Point; T. H. Haywood with Miss Mary Graves, Chapel Hill; T. O'Berry with Miss Louise Venable, Chapel Hill; Hampden Hill with Miss Allen, Chapel Hill; Hubert Hill with Miss Annie Bright, of Washington; O. M. Gardner with Miss Nell Skinner, Greenville; T. H. Sutton with Miss Willie Lee Stem, of Darlington, S. C.; E. V. Howell with Miss May Hume, Chapel Hill; N. C. Curtis with Miss Dora McRae, Chapel Hill; J. S. Mason with Miss Rosa Skinner, Raleigh; F. M. Weller with Miss Nell Nelson, Halifax; B. L. Blackwelder with Miss Lilly Skinner, Raleigh; A. C. Dodson with Miss Pearl Heck, Raleigh; C. T. Woolen with Miss Bessie Roberson, Chapel Hill; T. G. Miller, Miss Mary G. Cowper, Raleigh; W. S. Bernard with Mrs. Holahan, Durham; Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Faison, of Washington, D. C.; Dr. and Mrs. C. S. Mangum, Chapel Hill; Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Lilly, Fayetteville; Dr. and Mrs. A. Henderson, Chapel Hill; Dr. and Mrs. Geo. Howe, Chapel Hill.

Chaperons: Mrs. C. L. Raper, Mrs. J. W. Gore, Mrs. R. S. McRae, Mrs. Eben Alexander.

Stags: Messrs. Dave Kelley, Rob. Brockwell, Albert Hart, F. A. Sutton, M. H. Allen, T. P. Cheshire, T. F. Hickerson, M. Orr, S. P. Nickols, J. W. Winborne, J. G. Wood, E. S. Burwell, J. E. Pogue, Jr., J. M. Roberson, F. Roberson, B. K. Lassiter, F. Hutchison, W. M. Boylan, H. C. Jones, F. Daniels.

Henry Blount Speaks.

The lecture of Mr. Henry Blount, of Wilson, came off at the expected place and time — Gerrard Hall and Friday night — before a well filled house. The subject for the evening was "Wit, Humor, Eloquence and Oratory." Mr. Blount was rather at a disadvantage because of a cold, but not withstanding this the crowd appeared fairly well pleased — and that is about as enthusiastic as a University crowd ever gets over anything in the way of a lecture.

CONCERNING COMMENCEMENT.

"A Student" Enters a Plea for Its Fuller Observance, Giving Reasons Therefor.

To the Editor of The Tar Heel:

How many mass meetings have you ever attended? How many times have you ever heard the old cry for college spirit? How often have you heard the plea, "Get behind your team"? Doubtless you have never attended such a meeting without hearing this demand; for it is just as impossible to hold a mass-meeting without a plea for college spirit (just what that is, it is hard to say), as to have a mass meeting without a mass. All this is well and good, but stop a minute and think. Did you ever even hear anybody pleading for patriotism for the college?

There is a time when the University student can better help to build and uphold the name of his institution than when Carolina is to play Virginia, and that is when people from this and adjoining States are gathered here, not simply to see a game of ball, but to get a glimpse into the workings of the University. If you ask me what I mean, it is this:

Commencement is the best index to the University. Many people judge from the index the contents of a book. A large and extensive index means a large and extensive book. I don't know what an idea most people who attend Commencement form of the University; but whatever may be their opinions, let us not in the future allow them to grow less. Rather let us all stay and see, and at the same time make of it a greater and grander success, thereby affording a truer index and a grander conception of the University.

But you say, "There's no use of my staying. There's nothing here at Commencement to interest me." Right there is where you are wrong. On the contrary, there is everything here to interest you and make the occasion enjoyable.

It is true that heretofore Commencement has not been of so much importance to underclass men as to Seniors. It never will. But it is true that future commencements, even the one for this year, will be of importance not only to Seniors, but to Junior, Sophomore, and Freshman as well. Will they have a part in it? Yes; plans are on foot and being discussed providing for the active participation of members of every class.

A Senior ball is given every year. This year, a new feature is proposed, a Junior dance to take the place of a class frat dance. The annual banquet, which the societies propose to give free to members, is a permanent feature, as well as the faculty reception. In addition to these is proposed a Junior-Sophomore-Freshman reception, a very good idea indeed. These are only a few attractions. To give all the rest would be to fill THE TAR HEEL, and would require some master hand to picture them in their true light. The mingling of youth and old age, of trial and success, of the student of today and of yesterday, can be but inspirations to any student who intends himself to be of service to his fellowman and to his state. As a student and one who loves to see the advancement of the University, I shall be glad to see the students banded together to make a greater success of Commencement, and thereby to greatly benefit the University. I am glad to have a chance to say something in regard to this all-important subject, and hope that it will be more fully discussed.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, MARCH 8, 1906.

No. 20.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

DR. JOHN P. D. JOHN.

"The Worth of a Man" is the Subject Presented in the Chapel Last Friday Night.

Dr. John P. D. John, former president of De Pauw University of Indiana, and platform lecturer for the last ten years, delivered an interesting lecture in Gerrard Hall last Friday night upon "The Worth of a Man."

"The worth of a man depends upon our standard of greatness, upon the unit that we take as a measurement, upon the view point from which we see man." Here Dr. John gave two viewpoints from which man may be judged; first, through the small end of a telescope and second, through the large end.

"Looked at through the small end of a telescope man is seen in comparison with the universe of which he is an infinitesimal part. We see his utter insignificance as compared to the great solar systems and his miserably short life of three score and ten as compared with the unmeasured flow of eternity. Thus man limited by space and duration is insignificant, but limited by the law of God he is helpless, for the law of God is no respecter of the strong or the frail, but all must alike obey its inexorable commands."

Here Mr. John gave some startling, but interesting statistics regarding the effects of the cigarette habit upon American youths. Next he discussed man and his moral acts. "Whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." A Biblical, but also a true scientific saying. Mr. John then gave a number of short concise statements which are well remembered: "Pay day will come for every deed and to every doer;" "The inner act right at one time is right forever;" "Winking at sin never transformed it into virtue;" "What is wrong in a prayer meeting is wrong in a saloon;" "What is right in hell is right in heaven."

Mr. John next looked at man through the large end of the telescope. Here man is seen as greater than space and duration and law, of infinite dignity and possibilities. Man subjecting law to his masterful genius is wonderful; limiting space is supremely great; as a law maker he is God-like.

Thanks, Awfully; We're Sending One By the Next Train.

We are sorry we cannot gratify THE TAR HEEL'S feminine curiosity about our society editor. His, her, or its identity is an editorial secret, one that we cannot divulge even for the pleasure of displaying the many accomplishments of that gifted individual before an envious and admiring public. But our society specialist has consented, after much persuasion, to attempt to train a TAR HEEL understudy. So send us up your most promising candidate and we will see what can be done.

BISHOP STRANGE PREACHES.

The Always Interesting Question Receives an Interesting Treatment at his Hands.

Right Reverend Robert Strange, of Wilmington, preached the University Sermon for March in the chapel Sunday night. The sermon was easily one of the ablest heard here this year.

Bishop Strange chose for his subject: "Salvation." This is the word most characteristic of Christ. He is spoken of not as an example but as a Saviour. This raises the question: "Saviour from what?"

The modern idea of Christianity is too much like fire insurance. You go through a certain form, agree to believe certain things, agree to do certain things, and in return therefor you will escape burning in the other world. Nowhere in the New Testament is the word salvation followed by the word fire. In every case it is followed by the word sins. It is from these that Christ came to save us, to purify us for Him.

Man looks on sin as a luxury, God looks on it as a curse. Look backward over our history, witness the work of sin and decide for yourself, "Which is right?"

Salvation is always concerned with sin, past, present and future. Christ snaps the cord between cause and effect and stands between the sinner and the consequences of his sin. Power is the thing we need and Christ gives it to us.

Great as is the negative side of salvation, the positive is yet greater. It gives us the power to grow on forever toward the highest ideals, approaching as a limit, yet never attaining, God himself.

Philologists Meet.

The Philological Club met Tuesday night. The following papers were read:

"The Infatuation of Ruy Blas" - Dr. J. D. Bruner.

"Christian Names from the Greek" - Dr. Eben Alexander.

The Modern Literature Club will meet tonight at 7:30, No. 16 Alumni building.

In the Societies.

There was no regular debate in the Di society last Saturday night. The meeting was given over to the reading and adoption of the revised constitution.

Before the Phi Society the question "Resolved, that the University should have recitations on Saturday as on any other day of the week" was handled with considerable ability and won by the affirmative. Mr. Giddings making the best speech.

Mr. W. S. Bernard who had been invited by the society to speak to them on this occasion responded with an excellent talk on "Industrialism and Education in North Carolina."

NOT ON THE PROGRAMME.

A Bold Bad Band of Seniors Add a Fitting Climax to Dr. John's Stirring Lecture.

The lecturer ceased speaking. For an hour and ten minutes he had held his audience, painting for them vivid pictures, transporting them by sheer force of will upward through limitless leagues of space, onward mid countless worlds which whirled and spun with speed unmeasured and unmeasurable. In a tense stillness broken only by the sound of his voice he had risen round upon round to the climax of his peroration, then, altering his manner and dropping his voice he said simply, "This, Ladies and Gentlemen, is the Worth of a Man."

Slam! Bang! came simultaneously from the two sides of the hall, as the windows were hurled upward. S-s-s-h Bump! and before the eyes of the electrified audience a hideous creature, clad in a robe of white and with face unspeakable, shot down a dangling rope from the small balcony overhead and alighted squarely in the center of the rostrum, where he leered about him. The people in the audience caught their breath. Those with sufficient presence of mind pinched themselves. The others sat transfixed. With lightning-like rapidity other ropes were cast down and swinging from these and leaping through the open windows on either hand, dozens of white clad figures rushed upon the rostrum. The lecturer had started to seat himself in the rear of the stage, but as the first form loomed above his head he changed his plans and as a dozen others came into view he fled precipitately, ten feet at a leap.

Over the four hundred minds of the audience there flashed ten million thoughts. Was it a visitation from the beings of some of those worlds which had been so aptly described a few moments before? Was the lecturer a magician and this the result of his wonderworking? Were they the shades of the once terrible Klu Klux? Or spirits from the lower world.

But in less than a minute after the first arrival, the rostrum was full, the incoming ceased and the usurpers gathered together. The spectators breathed more easily. It really looked as if they were going to give a yell and thus establish the fact of their collegiate nature. And so it was. Forth from the distorted mouths and painted lips, reassuring by its very familiarity, yet thrilling by its intensity of feeling, came this deafening chorus: "Yack Yack-Ray-Ray Yack-Yack-Ray Ray Carolina Varsity! Boom Rah! Boom Rah! Carolina! Naught-six! Naught-six! Naught-six!"

There it was! No fiends from Plutonian regions could deliver themselves of a Yackety Yack with that ring to it. And the windup gave the first clue to the identity of the ghostly forms.

THE PASSING OF BETSY.

Her Passion for Fun Proved Her Undoing and the Campus Knows Her Buoyant Self No More.

Betsy, Dr. Alexander's shepherd dog, is dead. Somebody poisoned her and she died Saturday morning. There were those who thought the spirited dog had not an enemy in the village, but the unfeeling act which caused her death proves such not to be the case. Those who saw her romping over the campus saw her at her best; those who saw her grab the cullud man by his trousers saw her at her worst. With all her good qualities - and she had many - Betsy had this one great fault. A cullud man doesn't like to have his pants gnawed, even though it be highly amusing to others, and so he simply poisoned her.

There was reason, however, in Betsy's tackling stunts. From a pup she accompanied her master to the football field. There she saw men grab at one another and fall in an intangible heap. There she heard loud applause. There she applauded herself. Why should she not imitate? She did. But the rules of the game were debarred against her, and the result of her imitation was death.

Only two weeks ago Tito, the companion of Betsy, recovered from a sprained ankle. Then together they marched again as of old, and again they made the campus merry with their pranks. From early morning till dark they roved when they, like the Arabs, silently stole away.

Aside from the one fault of tackling the cullud man Betsy was a lovable creature. She was particularly fond of "Happy," and was on good terms with everybody about the college. Though she did not love all the students, she was devoted to some. And all the students were friends and admirers of her's. Here's hoping she's in dog heaven.

Again they came together and a second yell resulted, this time a vigorous "Boom Rah Ray." A commanding figure waved a signal. Into line the company fell, wheeled and dashed out through one of the windows as silently as it had entered.

Disappearing for but a moment the Seniors reappeared, each bearing a flaming torch. Forming into a double line and holding aloft their torches they marched silently through the crowd which was pouring out of the chapel, down to the corner at Pickard's hotel, thence east to the next street corner. Pausing here and massing together with a veritable forest of fire overhead they woke the echoes with their cheers. Again the signal "forward", and the march back was begun. When Gerrard Hall was reached once more, torches were cast aside, masks and gowns were torn off and no fiends at all, but thirty five Seniors held a joyous Senior singing.

Our public school system was established because the fathers of the commonwealth recognized it to be a fundamental duty of the State to educate its citizens. That education did not mean to them merely an elementary training in elements is evidenced by the establishment of this University. It bears witness that the duty of the State has not been discharged until it makes adequate provision for the smaller number of those who seek and can profit by a higher training—provided for them by making possible the training of leaders in the work of upbuilding the State.

But glance at the system, as it exists today. We have a system of public schools which take a child at the age of six and train him until he is within three or perhaps two years of the point when he can enter college, and there it drops him.

We have a State University together with the other State institutions of higher learning, which are provided with costly equipment for the instruction of the State's youth. Institutions of learning, most of them are, which can give to him or her who is properly prepared as valuable training as can be secured anywhere.

A system of public grammar schools, a system of colleges—and between the two a yawning gulf.

What is the effect of this state of affairs? The would-be college students are forced to wander in the wilderness during the two or three years of preparation, scores give up the idea of coming to college, the others are forced to obtain such preparation as they can, much of which is inadequate. The result is not only a smaller enrollment in all our colleges, but less efficient work on the part of the students, many of whom barely squeeze by the entrance requirements and who, becoming discouraged, drop out before the completion of their course.

Now if it is right as a matter of principle that the State after providing for the education of the many should establish higher institutions for those desiring special training, it is certainly right as a matter of principle that the State should establish a system of high schools to bridge the gulf. It is certainly right as a matter of economy to establish it, that the greatest returns may be secured from the investment in the higher institutions.

It may be said that so imperfect are our public schools that every cent should be lavished upon them. The demand of the common schools is undeniably great; their need is pressing. But though this fact is an argument against the unwise expenditure of funds upon high schools, it cannot be an argument against their establishment. If so, rather would it first demand the abolition of the entire system of higher education. Justice, reason and economy demand public high schools. They must come, and the sooner they come the better for the Old North State.

Dr. R. O. E. Davis, the brilliant young instructor in chemistry, who figured prominently in the Matthews case at Greensboro, and who is justly proud of his name, has a legitimate cause for action against the State press. It has persistently and consistently murdered his name for the past few days, robbing it of all its euphony. The Wilmington Messenger led off by making it Dr. O. E. Davis, the Charlotte Observer and the Winston Sentinel followed with R. E. O. each; whereupon the Industrial News, of Greensboro, added insult to injury by crediting him with R. H. O. E. These are merely a few cases typical of the rest, which are numberless. It is true that the constitution of the United States guarantees liberty of the press, but when that liberty is presumed upon to such an extent as this, it's time to call a halt.

This old world is a selfish thing, calmly appropriating to herself every good thing that comes along and giving credit when she feels like it. Just take, for instance, that serviceable word "stunt". What does it mean? You can't define it, because there is not a synonym for it in the whole English language. And yet never a day passes that you do not pause for the proper word to denote some feat or other, cast your eyes helplessly about you, and wind up by saying "stunt". It may mean any of fifty different things, but it always fills the bill.

The world owes a debt of gratitude to the genius who invented the term. He should be retired on a competency or be made a Fellow in Verbefaction instead of being forced to drift around the world in the darkness of utter oblivion unpensioned, "unhonored and unsung."

The faculty baseball team have challenged the Seniors to meet them on the diamond during Commencement week. And the Seniors have said that like Barkis they're willin'. That contest will put all others hopelessly in the shade. One of the most entertaining features of a game like that is to sit on the bleachers and try to recognize the different devotees of the sport "in facultate," as they appear sans coat, sans hat, sans collar, sans "dignitate." If you are versed in "finding the man" in daily picture puzzles you'll have the advantage of your seat-mate, but you'll find this requires a much higher degree of skill than that.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Dr. and Mrs. George Howe entertained a number of their friends at dinner Friday night. Those who were present report a good time.

—Dr. F. P. Venable addressed a mass meeting of University students yesterday afternoon on the subject of athletics and athletic rules.

—President Venable will address the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society next Tuesday evening at 7:00 o'clock in the chemical lecture room.

—Mr. C. J. Lilly, of Fayetteville, who has been visiting his father-in-law Judge MacRae for two months has returned home. Mr. Lilly was here for his health and has recuperated very much.

—At the regular meeting of the Philological Club Tuesday night, the following topics were discussed: "The Infatuation of Ruy Blas," by Dr. J. D. Bruner, and "Christian Names from the Greek," by Dr. Alexander.

—The facilities of the department of law are being very greatly increased. Many new books have been lately purchased and added to the law library, and a new room is being added to the headquarters of the department in the South building.

—The Seniors have elected as captain of their baseball team, Mr. Fred M. Crawford. Mr. W. L. Grimes has been elected manager of the same. Mr. A. C. Dalton has been chosen class statistician in place of Mr. J. S. Kerr, who has left college.

—The Chemical Journal Club met Monday night. The following papers were read: "Recent Progress in Industrial Chemistry"—Dr. Herty. "Flour Mill Explosions and Dangerous Dusts"—Mr. S. W. Dickson. "Application of Electrolytic Chlorine to Textile Bleaching"—Mr. W. A. Houck.

—Prof. Allman, of High Point, who has been so successful in conducting the dancing school for several past years has been secured again this year and will start a class the fifteenth of this month. All those desiring to take lessons are requested to see any of the Commencement ball managers as soon as possible.

—Dr. John Berry, a prominent doctor of Orange county, died of heart disease at his home in Chapel Hill Tuesday afternoon. Dr. Berry, who was about sixty years old, had retired from the practice of his profession a number of years ago. He leaves a widow, three daughters and one son, Mr. John Berry, Jr., of the second year medical class. The funeral took place yesterday afternoon and the interment was in the Chapel Hill cemetery.

—Mr. A. L. Rohrer, electrical superintendent of the General Electric Company's factory at Schenectady, New York, lectured to the students in physics and applied electricity in the University Tuesday morning of last week. Mr. Rohrer is making a tour of Southern engineering schools for the purpose of becoming informed as to the character of laboratory work in electricity done in these schools. While on the Hill Mr. Rohrer was the guest of Prof. Latta.

—By joint action of both societies Saturday night the Commencement banquet was made free, the entire expenses of it to be borne by the societies as organization, instead of only part by the societies and the rest by those members attending, as heretofore. This action means much for the throwing open of Commencement. There have always been those, heretofore, who stay for Commencement and remain away from the banquet, one of the most enjoyable events of the whole occasion, simply because of the pull on their pocket books. Now the situation is changed. The Freshman or Sophomore will be actually making money instead of spending it by staying, since he would have to pay for it just the same. This means, probably, a doubled attendance and a much better banquet than ever before.

A very decided change for the better has recently been made in the schedule of the limited between Chapel Hill and University station. The evening train which has heretofore left Chapel Hill at 2:15 now leaves at 3:00, just giving it time to make connection with the east bound at University. The post office window will now close at 2:15 instead of 1:30. There will be no change in the schedule of the morning train but the above change in the evening train will likely be permanent. The change will be hailed with delight by all who have ever had to wait at the University Station, and who knows but that it will save the Southern Railway many a genteel cussing. It is reported, also, that a new car will be put on.

Commencement Program.

The Baccalaureate Sermon before the Graduating Class and the University audience will be delivered by the Rev. H. P. Dewey, D. D., Pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y., one of the most prominent representatives of the great Congregational Church of the United States.

Dr. C. S. Mitchell, professor of history in Richmond College, Richmond, Virginia, will preach the annual sermon before the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday night.

A sketch of Dr. Mitchell has already been given in a previous issue. He is prominent in the religious and educational life of Virginia, and is also an editor. He is comparatively a young man and an able and practical speaker.

Shepard Bryan, Esq., A.B. 1891, of Atlanta, Georgia, will deliver the address before the Alumni Association on Tuesday, June 5th.

THE DELEGATES RETURN HOME.

A Great Trip, A Fine Time and a Big Meeting They Say They Had, For a Fact.

The University delegation to the Nashville convention returned Tuesday and report that the convention was a great success in every way. There were at the convention 4,188 accredited delegates besides hundreds of students who came on their own responsibility with the hope of gaining admission to some of the sessions. Of the 4,188 delegates, 3,060 were college and University students, and 286 were representatives of faculties, 700 institutions of higher learning in the United States and Canada being represented. One hundred and forty-four returned missionaries were there and one hundred and forty-nine representatives of missionary boards and societies and young peoples' movements, were given delegates' credentials. Nineteen thousand people went through the missionary exhibit.

One of the most pleasant features of the convention for the University delegates was a meeting on Saturday night of all the University of North Carolina men who were at the convention. The alumni gave strong messages and sound advice to the delegation. Besides the ten delegates from the University, there were at the convention the following old University men: Dr. A. L. Phillips, of Richmond; Ralph M. Harper, Travelling Secretary for the Student Volunteer Movement; E. S. W. Dameron, College Secretary of the Kentucky Young Men's Christian Associations; W. J. Gordon, theological student at the University of the South; Geo. Stevens and Reid, theological students at the Presbyterian Seminary at Louisville; Starnes, medical student at Northwestern University; Hazleton, theological student at Vanderbilt University; Prof. J. R. Baggett, of Buie's Creek Academy; and Hall Johnson, lawyer at Asheville.

The delegates will make a report to the students at a special meeting on Thursday night, and it is hoped that a large number will show their interest by attending.

Concerning the Yackety Yack.

The contract for printing this year's annual has been finally awarded to Messrs. Edwards & Broughton, of Raleigh, the lowest bid having been made by them. This is the first time a State company has been given the contract, at least for some time, and it is confidently expected that the work done will be of a higher class than that done heretofore.

One thing appears to be certain. The annual this year is coming out without any deficit. Already more than twice as many have been sold as were sold last year and three or four times as much advertising has been secured. Many alumni and friends are sending in their two dollar bills, among them four of our Congressmen and Governor Glenn, who wants two.

The material is now in the hands of the publishers but those who have not given their names for a copy and those who want extra copies have still about four days to see the business managers and place their orders.

At a meeting of the faculty committee on athletics Tuesday the committee, considering the case a second time, reaffirmed their former decision, debarring Mr. W. D. James, catcher, from the Varsity. Mr. James testified to having received money as rewards for timely hits. The committee held that, even though the money was all spent during the trip, this was receiving pay for athletic services and rendered the receiver ineligible.

GET IN THE GAME.

Coach Lawson Talks About The Baseball Candidates, Finally Breaking Out Into Poetry.

To the Editor of THE TAR HEEL:

All is quiet except "Peg Leg" Moore and our team is struggling along so earnestly at their work that it doesn't seem just right for its coach to criticise, but THE TAR HEEL editor has been hot on his heels for a baseball article. So here follows, hoping the individuals will correct their many faults.

Rogers, Moore, and Rancy are working at the receiving end. Rogers takes coaching well. His greatest fault is his throwing. It is accurate enough, but oh! how slow in getting the ball away. Hustle. Get more energy and action into your play. Realize that it costs nothing in scrub games to take a chance to catch men "sleeping" on the bases. Watch the base runners every minute and you are sure to catch some of them taking a sun bath.

"Bully" Moore's coming should stimulate the infield. "Bully" is as good as he could be, minus the other part.

Rancy can improve in the hitting line. His throwing is somewhat better than that of the other catchers. His position should be directly behind the plate, not to one side. Remove your mask more quickly when a foul goes up, and hustle to get every one.

Cunningham is improving. His control is not yet good. He must get control of the fast high ball. Watch carefully, Cunny, or some speedy runner will have the laugh on you after beating a bunt out. You have much territory to cover. Do it more quickly when the ball is bumped around in it. Don't get careless, and try to catch a runner "off his base" when two men are out. Be more accurate in your throwing to first base. Your hitting is improving daily.

Thompson isn't the same old "Bull" that hustled for his place on the Varsity last year. His movements are slow, he returns the ball from outfield in a careless way, and is ever "hitting for the fence." It's a long distance old boy, so try to hit into the right territory occasionally. Your pitching is satisfactory to all. You fill your position in and around the box well. Do put forth the same energy in the outfield.

Patterson shows ability to play almost any position, and as long as no "false" bounds come his way, he is cool enough, but just a little fumble will send the blood rushing to his brain. He gets angry and throws the ball away. Steady, Pat. Do not lose your head so easily. We all make errors. You certainly can field your position in the box, (ask Stem). Go after everything. Don't put so many "good ones" over the plate. Keep them high and use that slow ball more.

Montgomery should use more "force." He has a good delivery, which he abuses in a careless, indifferent way. Get your weight behind your arm and shove 'em over. Let the ball leave from a higher point over your head. Your arm is doing lots of unnecessary work in pitching so many low, bad balls.

I refuse to criticise Capt. Stem. His infielding is fast and sure. He deserves better assistance from his team mates. Follow your captain, men. He is never seen loafing, but is a hard-working, conscientious player.

Fox, I suppose, runs as fast as he can, yet he's mighty slow. You must guard second base more closely. The outfielders are coached to throw all balls there. Be in place to receive them. Never let a stealing base-runner draw you out or away from your position until the batter has hit or hit at the pitched ball. It's hard to imagine a pitcher throwing 'em to high for you to reach. Remember the limit is at the shoulder. Yours are pretty high, but I have seen you repeatedly "go after them" over your head-- don't do it.

James is "almost" perfect. Anyway I feel like letting some other fellow tell him when he makes a mistake. Burt, really you are a good fast third baseman, you hit well, you have a good arm, your throwing is accurate. It's a pity to see a little thing handicap you so much--one so easily overcome--as, not knowing how to touch a base runner.

I have certainly had to scratch my head to find something wrong with that old war horse, Story, but I've got him. He made a foolish attempt to throw in from center field to catch a runner at first. A bad play, Story. Your worst fault is in not saying anything. No, I'm wrong, I did hear you say the other day, when a ball was hit into center, "I have it." Right you are. Don't get mixed up nor collide with one of the other men--"they" might get hurt.

Now if I possessed all the good qualities of a base ball player, as the majority of our mendo, I would make an effort to add the simplest and easiest one--that is, sliding to a base.

DR. VENABLE SPEAKS.

The Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society is Treated to an Address on "Chemical Research in America."

The chemistry lecture room was filled Tuesday night with a good sized audience to hear the address of Dr. Francis P. Venable before the Elisha Mitchell Scientific Society. His subject was, "Chemical Research in America" and was along the same lines as that delivered by him at the New Orleans meeting of the American Chemical Society in December. Dr. Venable was then retiring from the office of president of the association, the highest honor that can be bestowed on an American chemist. Dr. Venable said, in part:

It is to be expected that a people, thinly scattered over a vast area of new and unbroken country, confronted with the problems and difficulties of a nation just emerging from its birth throes, would have little time to devote to the arts and sciences, and yet the impetus from the wonderful discoveries of Priestly, Scheele, and Cavendish and the splendid works of Lavoisier, with his revolutionary deductions crossed the ocean and found its echoes in our wilderness. The appreciation felt of Priestly's work was evidenced by the offer to him of a chair in the University of Pennsylvania. This interest took active shape in the formation of the earliest known chemical societies. The Chemical Society of Philadelphia was organized in 1792, forty-nine years before the founding of the London Chemical Society, the first in Europe. The first president was Dr. James Woodhouse, professor of chemistry in the University of Pennsylvania, and Priestly was one of the members. In 1811 the Columbian Chemical Society, of Philadelphia first saw the light of day. Analyses were reported and methods of analysis devised, but synthetical research was lacking.

During the first quarter of the nineteenth century, the few American chemists who had access to laboratories were busied with the analysis of minerals and mineral waters. So meagre was laboratory equipment that lectures experimentally illustrated were rare things. With the founding of the American Journal of Science in 1816 at Yale University added and invaluable stimulus was given to scientific investigation. The period from 1830 to 1875 were largely barren years. One name, however, stands out prominently--that of J. Lawrence Smith, a tireless worker and a brilliant investigator. The spirit of investigation seemed lacking in our colleges during this period and few of our teachers were properly prepared for it.

A few years after the close of the great civil war American students began flocking in large numbers to the German universities, where they studied under the masters of the science. The marvelous development of organic chemistry offered a most attractive field of research. The most important work we had done was the determination of atomic weights, and Americans may well be proud of their contribution to this line of work, for it will compare favorably with that of any other nation.

The hundreds of young American chemists, finely trained and inspired by their contact with vigorous original thinkers, on returning, brought with them an enthusiasm and an impetus which has placed American research well to the front.

In 1877 Johns Hopkins University began its work, marking the beginning of a new era in research work.

In 1876 the American Chemical Society was established and it, with its journal has done much. American chemists today are becoming recognized as leaders.

The danger today is that the immense industrial development of the country will call away our most promising chemists to fields of greater material rewards. The investigators are the men who patiently and laboriously forge, link by link, the chain that leads often to economic revolution. Only by means of them can the science consistently progress.

New Baseball Games.

Three changes have been made in the baseball schedule during the last few days. The game with Bingham at Mebane has been moved up from the 24th inst, to the 17th, which is the coming Saturday. This game will be played here and it is needless to say that everyone is going. The admission is only 25 cents.

A game with Sharpe's Institute has been arranged to be played here next Wednesday, the 21st. The admission to this will also be 25 cents.

A game with Guilford has also been added. It will be played here Saturday week, March 24th. The admission to this game will be the regular price, 50 cents.

Vincent M. Stevenson, Pennsylvania's All-American quarterback and debarred captain-elect for next fall, has signed a contract to coach V. P. I. next fall.

Columbia University, of New York city, is arranging to build a new athletic field with a seating capacity of 35,000 people. This looks as if Columbia has not abandoned the idea of some day restoring football. It is not likely that such a crowd would assemble to see a game of college baseball.

The growth of this University's curriculum has been an evolution from narrowness to breadth, from a narrow survey of human knowledge supposed in some indefinite sort of way to be of assistance to everyone in every vocation, to a breadth which while including the first named studies, includes also others of more specific bearing upon specific vocations. It added first to the traditional Latin, Greek, and Mathematics which had been revered for centuries a sprinkling of chemistry and biology, perhaps elementary courses in modern languages. These were the first steps. Today we have the twentieth century University, with branches of study covering the major part of human knowledge. We have our departments of law, of medicine, of pharmacy, and in the not distant future it is hoped, a department of dentistry.

One blank there is, however, which none of these will fill. It is the need for training in journalism, a field which is of ever increasing wideness. We have English departments unexcelled for their efficiency by those of any other Southern institution. Our knowledge of conditions prevailing in Northern institutions is too limited to allow comparison, though our Southern collegiate journalism compares favorably with the Northern specimens which have come under our observation. But though the work of our English departments is simply invaluable in the training of future journalists, an extensive field remains into which in the nature of things the English departments cannot go. Their training must be, in a large degree, general. The technique of newspaper work, the training of the eye and the ear to work together unceasingly for the discovery of news, the development of the ability to recognize news at sight and to properly set it forth—these things lie within the scope of a Department of Journalism, under the direction of experienced journalists who devote their entire time to both a theoretical and a practical training in their profession.

The fact that few institutions have such a department as yet is no reason why Carolina should not take the lead in establishing it. With experienced men devoting all their talents to the course, with the English departments as supplementary to it, with the college publications in some degree as outlets for the developed journalistic talent the good that could be accomplished would be beyond calculation.

THE TAR HEEL directs attention to the statement, elsewhere in today's paper concerning the status of the Y. M. C. A. building project. A concerted effort is about to be made to raise the balance of the money necessary at once and rush the building to completion. It is difficult to realize what this building will mean to University life, and every moment it remains uncompleted the present generation of students is losing something helpful and stimulating. Many new students have come in since the last campaign was waged and no one doubts that their response, especially, will be as liberal as that of the students of the past few years. The mere fact that they will be among those who reap its benefits should be an inspiration.

A bulletin to THE TAR HEEL from the State department at Raleigh brings the warning, among other things, that the closed season for deer in Orange county began March the first and extends to November. We print this for information. No more rambling through the woods of Orange in quest of the nimble stag, the timid doe; no more midnight feasts on slaughtered venison. 'Tis hard times, my masters, but there's no help for it. The only consolation is that no mention is made of snipe hunting as among the sports tabooed. This much, at least, is left us.

The statement last week that Messrs. Edwards and Broughton, of Raleigh, had been awarded the contract to print the Yackety Yack because they had made the lowest bid was somewhat misleading. Their bid was not the lowest absolutely, but only relatively, the prospect for good workmanship and other things being taken into consideration in awarding the contract.

It is announced that Harvard has snubbed Pennsylvania by ruling the game with that institution off the list of those which count towards winning H's by those who play in them. The same is true down this way, by the way, but so far as is known the Dutchmen's feelings have not been hurt.

The present Freshman class continue to evidence their interest in debate. In the Di scrub contest Saturday night they furnished five of the nine contestants. Heretofore even one has been rather an exception. The scrub debaters, by the way, are being selected in the same old way.

We noticed in the Red and Black, of Georgia, a few days ago a reference to Herty field. The name sounded familiar, somehow, and then we remembered that the Georgia park was named for him, who now is our own Dr. Herty.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Dr. James D. Bruner delivered a lecture Saturday night at White Cross School House on "The Life, Work, and Character of Henry Clay."

—The question debated in the Phi Saturday night was the question of the direct election of United States Senators. The affirmative won and Mr. J. W. Hester made the best speech.

—Mr. Edwin Brush will be the next Star Course attraction, appearing here tonight at eight o'clock. Mr. Brush is a magician, so nerve yourself to see the impossible performed with ease.

—The next University Sermon will be preached Sunday night by Rev. William Lunsford, of Asheville. Mr. Lunsford is pastor of the First Baptist Church of Nashville, one of the largest in the south.

—Mr. Hal Harris, of last year's scrub baseball team, has returned to the Hill. He underwent an operation a short time ago, and is too weak to play ball for awhile. He expects, however, to be all right in a few days.

—The Modern Literature Club held its monthly meeting Thursday night. Papers were read as follows: "Poe's Art in the Short Story"—Mr. Q. S. Mills. "A Comparative Study of J. F. Cooper and W. J. Simms"—Mr. T. W. Dickson.

—At the regular March meeting of the Historical Society, Monday night, Dr. Raper delivered a brief discourse on the "History of Methodism in North Carolina." He was followed by a talk on the "History of the Baptist Denomination in North Carolina" by Prof. Collier Cobb.

—Misses Mary Graves and Dora McRae delightfully entertained the Green Lemon Quartette, Messrs. Crawford, McNeill, Burwell and Orr, at the home of the former Monday night from 9 till 12 o'clock. Delightful refreshments, in the form of a course supper, were served, and a most enjoyable time was reported.

—Mr. R. M. Harper, traveling secretary for the Students Volunteer Movement spoke to the students at the Tuesday night meeting of the Y. M. C. A. His speech was a plea for the translation into action of the visions which each one has caught at some time in the past and continues to catch from time to time. It was a thoughtful and helpful talk.

—Dr. W. G. Peckham, of New York, the founder of the Peckham prize in English, given for the best original work in the old English ballads or in Shakespeare, was on the Hill for a few days the first of the week. On Monday morning he spoke to a number of those interested in literature, on the aid to success which a knowledge of English literature is.

—The contest to select the Georgia scrub debater for the Di was held in that society Saturday night, the debate being held on the tariff question. These were nine contestants, Messrs. T. W. Andrews, G. L. Jones, R. N. McNeely, N. E. Huffman, Kirkpatrick, R. A. Wilkins, C. F. Spicer, P. M. Williams and T. L. Simmons. The judges, who were Dr. Eben Alexander, Mr. T. F. Hickerson and Dr. Battle, decided in favor of Mr. Andrews.

TO FINISH AND FURNISH IT.

Plans Are Now on Foot to Complete the Y. M. C. A. Building Without Further Delay.

The building committee is planning to finish and furnish the Y. M. C. A. building and have it ready for occupancy by the first of next September. The contract for plastering has been let, the work is being done, and the money is in hand to pay for the job. The plaster on, the next and final thing to do, as far as the building itself is concerned, is to finish up the interior wood-work, such as putting in the doors, window casings, stairs, etc. The contract for that is ready, but the money is not in hand to pay for that job.

All things considered, the building movement has had marvellous success. The way the University students, professors, and alumni have subscribed and paid their subscriptions has been indeed gratifying, as nearly $9000.00 (of the total $9866.00 paid in on the fund) has come from them. All the subscriptions made by the University people have been paid except $2974.52, some of which is not yet due and will be paid as soon as it becomes due.

As the subscriptions are being paid gradually, the committee has decided to call on the students of the University who have not yet subscribed to the fund for $800.00 cash to finish the interior wood-work, and put the money paid on subscriptions already made on the heating plant and furnishings. Eight hundred dollars from the students now will mean $1000.00 to the fund, as a friend in New York will send his check for $200.00 as soon as the $800.00 is in hand, and this $1000.00 will finish the building (with the exception of heating and furnishing). If the men here now respond as liberally as the students have in the past, the amount asked for will be easily raised.

The committee hopes that all whose notes are overdue will pay their subscriptions at their earliest possible convenience to Major W. T. Patterson, treasurer of the building committee.

Mrs. Lula Hendon, an elderly lady and for many years a resident of Chapel Hill, died suddenly from heart failure Friday about noon. She was a sister of C. W. Johnston, of near here and left three daughters. The funeral took place at 3:00 Saturday afternoon and the interment was here.

It is learned that Dr. Hume's visit to the convention in Nashville was made specially interesting by its associations with a family related to the University through distinguished alumni. He was entertained, along with a member of the Yale faculty, by Mrs. John C. Brown, widow of the late Governor Brown, of Tennessee and niece of Mrs. President Polk. Her father was Mr. Childress who, as well as President Polk, was an alumnus. Mrs. Brown is a perfect representative of the fine old Southern regime, while she has all the vivacious charm and freshness of spirit of youth. Her brother-in-law, Hon. Neil Brown and her son-in-law, Hon. Benton McMillin, were both governors of Tennessee.

The course covering four years begins during the last week in September and continues until June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. AND NAUGHT-FIVE AWOKE

A Ceremony Postponed From Last Commencement Takes Place With Variations.

There is a class on the Hill known as 1905. This may surprise you. It would have surprised most anyone a week ago, for if they were here they had given no signs of life. But wait. They have "awoken" and the time of their "awoking" was last Tuesday night and the manner of it was in this wise.

The Seniors of last year purchased for themselves certain pieces of lumber, out of which they fashioned themselves seats, which they placed under the Davie Poplar, their peculiar possession as Seniors, and upon which they did seek repose. And when the time of their graduation was nigh at hand they took counsel one with another and decided how that they would destroy the seats by burning them with fire some time during Commencement. For some reason or other, however, some of the seats were not burned with fire, but were left supposedly hidden in some convenient spot.

Now it so happened that the Senior class of this year (that which is known as the class of 1906) appointed some time ago a committee charged with the "surreptitious securing of lonesome lumber." By accident the strollers came upon the last year's benches and without a twinge of conscience appropriated them to their own use, and said nothing.

But certain members of the erstwhile class of 1905, a weak and scattered remnant, sniffed with their organs of olfactory sensation and became convinced of the presence of some carnivorous rodent. On Sunday afternoon last, in the open glare of daylight they conducted a post mortem examination of the seats and satisfied themselves that they were none other than their very own. That was all.

On Monday night a few minutes before twelve the lights went out as usual. For the space of some twenty minutes quiet reigned over the campus, deserted, and gleaming white in the moonlight, while the 600 inhabitants wooed the god of sleep. The majority had prosecuted their suit to a successful termination when the loud clanging of the bell and the shrill cries of "Fire" accompanied by a red glow on the campus brought them to their windows, through which they craned their heads.

But no building wrapped in monster flames greeted their eyes. Under the Davie Poplar were the flames, rising from the prostrate forms of the helpless Senior benches. Gathered round was a little group of instructors in English, in French and in German, together with sundry Law and Medical students. As usual, their identity had the crowd of angry and disappointed spectators guessing till a Yackety Yack with a long "Naught-five" three times made the onlookers look at one another. They were surprised. They had a right to be.

Round the funeral pyre the little company stood, shouting their yells and singing their songs as of yore, and ringing clear in every song and yell, like the bubbling over of uncontrollable class spirit come the strident voice of one John Kenyon Wilson, evidently a leading spirit.

When the flames had died away, the jubilant post grads marched up to the well and bombarded with countless skyrocket the windows of the neighboring buildings. This done, they quietly took their departure and again the god of sleep took charge.

CAROLINA WINS EASILY.

The First Game Of The Season Results In A Decisive Victory Of 18 To 1.

Carolina defeated Bingham in the first game of the season Saturday by the decisive score of 18 to 1. The result of the game was entirely satisfactory, for there were many who thought Carolina would have a weak hitting team, and her hitting in this game was the one feature. Carolina put up a splendid game both at the bat and in the field. Bingham, undoubtedly, was slightly affected with stage fright. Bingham made a right formidable appearance when she trotted on the field headed by Bill D. Legrande, Ben Moffit, and Tule Watson.

Watson, it will be remembered, played second base on Guilford last year and came near ruining us in the Guilford game with a hard smash over second for two bases. Watson is not a student at Bingham nor a member of the faculty nor an assistant in bookkeeping anything like that. He was carried by Bingham from Greensboro expressly to pitch this game. Bingham did not try to run him in, but came right out and told whom they intended to work in the box. Watson, however, was not allowed to pitch, thereby leaving Bingham in a bad hole for a pitcher. Moffit, one of the best little short stops in the state, had to assume the responsibility which he did very gracefully and artistically. For Moffit's benefit, the writer can say that he does not claim to be a pitcher.

Carolina realized this fact and as long as Moffit was on the rubber, had the outfielders chasing their tongues out. Hutchins, the big third baseman, relieved Moffit in the eighth and was not hit very bad, mainly because he could not locate the plate. He had an extremely puzzling delivery and threw only two balls, which according to Jack Donnelly, was "a slow ball and one slower than that."

Carolina went to bat first. Calder beat out a pretty bunt along the third base line. James did the same thing along the first base line, Calder going to second. Story skied out to third. Patterson walked. Thompson bunted to Moffit and Calder was caught at home. With the sacks full Harris followed with a hard single by short, scoring James and Patterson. Rogers ended the inning with a fly out to center.

Moffit flied to Hanes, in left. Ormond singled by third and went to second on a passed ball. Hutchins got in front of one of Cunny's fast ones and walked to first, rubbing his elbow. Redman fanned. Bill D. Legrande elicited applause by also fanning.

Second inning: Hanes fanned. Cunningham went out pitcher to first. Calder singled in center and stole second. Burt James hit to the left field for two bases, "Ducky" romping home. Story did the same thing, James scoring. Patterson out to center.

Armstrong flied to Calder, Harris and Andrews fanned.

Third inning: Thompson nearly tore a paling off of the left field fence, stopping at second. Harris' single to right sent Bull to third. Harris frotted down toward second, seemingly forgetting that Legrande was behind the bat. Of course he was thrown out. A single by Rogers sent Thompson across the plate. Hanes walked. Cunningham singled. Calder sent a high fly to left. Rogers could have scored easily after the catch, but didn't understand what "touch your base" meant until too late. The third baseman's error of James' ball scored him. Story went out pitcher to first.

Cocke fanned. Moffit went out third to first. Ormond again singled to left and Hutchins went out second to first.

Fourth inning: Patterson popped up to Legrande. Thompson went out pitcher to first. Flies from Harris and Rogers were dropped by the right and left fielders, respectively of the Bingham nine, but they did no material damage as Hanes flied to center.

Redman flied to Story. Legrande singled over second and stole second, where he remained, watching Armstrong and Harris fan.

The fifth inning bore no fruit for either side. In the sixth Patterson, on a single, aided by Thompson and Rogers, added one run.

With Redman on second, Legrande hit a high fly along left field foul line for two bases, scoring Redman for Bingham's only run.

In the seventh Carolina scored four runs on one hit, a single by Thompson, three bases on balls and four errors. Armstrong being the principal offender.

Harris fanned. Andrews hit by James on third. Harris got the ball in left field and by a beautiful throw caught him at first. And some one before the game said that Harris couldn't throw! Cocke grounded to first.

Eighth inning: Story's three bagger scoring James who had previously walked was the distinct feature of this inning.

Nothing doing for Bingham. Thompson made a star catch of Armstrong's foul in the crowd.

In the ninth five runs were scored by Rogers, Orr, Cunningham, Calder, and James, on four singles, two gifts, and a two-bagger.

Bingham's last chance: Harris popped up to Harris rather than to anyone else, Andrews fanned, Cocke walked and Moffit ended the game by going out short to first.

The Geologists.

The Geological Journal Club met at 7:30 Tuesday night.

Prof. Collier Cobb gave some account of the geological work of the New York state museum in the devonic area of that state. He also discussed the geology of water supply in the South Atlantic and Gulf States.

Mr. B. F. Royal gave an account of Asphaltic Coals in the Indian Territory.

Mr. H. W. McCain reviewed the work of Professor Krafft of Heidelberg upon the boiling points of metals, and discussed its bearing upon the problem of primeval atmospheres.

Dr. J. H. Pratt gave an account of artesian well conditions in eastern North Carolina, discussed the production of aluminum from bauxite and other ores, and the occurrence of sulphur in the United States.

Mr. Peckham's Speech.

Reported for The Tar Heel.

The distinguished New Yorker, Mr. W. G. Peckham, the owner of important interests in our community, addressing literary students in Dr. Hume's lecture room, captured all imaginations by his charming literary methods and won all hearts by his generous words concerning the University and Dr. Hume's tested work in it. His tribute to the flavor and richness of the mother tongue and to the efficacy of literary culture in the preparation for the lawyer's vocation, his expression of gratitude to his teacher, Francis J. Child of Harvard, his report of the many testimonies from successful graduates of the University to the practical impression of Dr. Hume's teaching and personal character on their lives, his exquisite selections from the ballads and other literature and the glow and eloquent charm with which he did it make it well

SERMON BY MR. LUNSFORD.

"Jesus And His Methods" the Subject—They are Unchanged Today and Men Must Yield to Them.

Rev. Wm. Lunsford, pastor of the First Baptist church of Asheville, preached before the students Sunday night the University sermon. He is a practical and earnest speaker.

The subject of the discourse was "Jesus and His Methods," the basis for it being the story of the healing of the blind man, as related in the ninth chapter of St. John. Christ, like every other great teacher, had his methods. And those methods by which he deals with men are the same today. The story of the blind man, while pathetic, is, nevertheless, fraught with meaning. He found not only physical light, but rose from spiritual darkness into spiritual light. There are three things about the story which command our attention: the crowd, the blind man, and Jesus.

Though the common people loved Christ, the crowd was very unfriendly and sought to bother him. They were actuated by prejudice, than which nothing is more unyielding and more dangerous. Especially has religious prejudice retarded the cause of Christianity.

The man himself appears as an object of pity, an object of the kind ministry of Jesus, an object of curiosity and of the gossip of the neighbors, next as an outcast, the object of the churchmen's ridicule. It was at this stage that Christ came by a second time. A striking characteristic of the afflicted one is his patience. Suffering produces patience. In the second place he was humble enough to accept Christ's method. There are countless men today struggling with the problem of salvation who are unwilling to submit themselves. You must yield or salvation will not be your part. God often offers you the bitter cup, but if you accept it you will feel the blessing of his touch. In the third place the man was obedient enough to act on what faith he had. Every one, whatever his experience, has some faith. If he acts on that the rest will come. In the last place he had the courage to confess Christ and this confession is always followed by a blessing.

The noticeable thing about Christ is the completeness of his work. The man who was healed was healed forever. Just so his salvation is one which saves a man for all eternity.

worthy of note in connection with the renewed offer of the fifty dollar prize for work in Shakspeare and the Ballads. The delighted company and all of us thank Mr. Peckham.

Leland Stanford, which has a restriction that at no time should over 500 women students be admitted to the University, has found it necessary to impose additional restrictions to keep the number from crowding too near the limit. It is evident to all that there is something radically different in the state of affairs here and at Stanford, but in the classic phrase discovered and perpetually gloated over by the Charlotte Observer as a linguistic masterpiece of expressiveness: "How come?" THE TAR HEEL usually has its nerve with it, and it claims credit for having heroically attacked many problems of late, but it throws up the sponge and sends up the white flag on this one.

'Twas not always exactly thus. A couple of years ago one of the societies was discussing the question, "Resolved, That the policy of coeducation should be abandoned by the University." One of the speakers on the affirmative grew exceedingly earnest.

"Look at the situation, gentlemen," said he. "Last year there were enrolled in our catalogue but three of the coeducational students. This year we have six: an increase, sirs, of fully one hundred per cent. At this rate of increase how long will it be until male students will be crowded out altogether."

The picture painted was indeed alarming, but the number of coeds even then had reached what up to this time is its high water mark and today the voice of the alarmist falls upon indifferent ears.

The athletic advisory board of West Virginia University passed a resolution the other day to this effect: "It is the sense of this board that anyone who has not earned W. V. shall not wear upon any article of clothing W. V. or any combination of letters containing W. V. or any part of it."

This reminds one that up to a very short time ago hats and caps bearing the monogram of U. N. C. were all the go on the Hill. They were worn to a great extent by Freshmen, to a less extent by Sophomores, and to much more rapidly diminishing extent by those of higher classes. Last fall a year ago a brief but plain spoken editorial on the subject appeared in this paper, wherein the advertisement of oneself after this fashion was made to appear, to say the least, out of place. Almost immediately the monogram headgear began to disappear from the campus and at last accounts the number of its unjustified wearers had been reduced to one, and he a Freshman. The great majority wore it merely because the others did, because it suited their style of beauty, was popular with the fairer sex and attracted favorable attention at home. But, as a matter of fact, at very few institutions of consequence would public sentiment have permitted the practice to have lived as long as it did live. Not only did it misrepresent the University in the eyes of strangers, but it cheapened the value of the Varsity monogram.

Since the last issue of THE TAR HEEL over three hundred and fifty dollars have been secured in cash and new short-time subscriptions on the Y. M. C. A. Building Fund. This means that four hundred and fifty dollars more must be paid or subscribed very soon to make possible the finishing of the building before next session. That the necessary funds will be easily raised no one doubts, as every student in the University is interested in furnishing this building and most of them appear willing and anxious to help do it.

When it is occupied, the building will fill a long felt and well recognized need in University life. It will be practically the club house for the students—a common meeting place where all can mingle socially. In it will be rooms for the various student publications and places where the various clubs and other organizations may meet when they so desire, as well as the lobbies, a reading room, a game room, and the auditorium. This building will probably do more to make student life more pleasant and attractive for the average man than any other building on the campus.

Nearly all similar ones at other institutions have been the gifts of wealthy friends. Ours is the result of a popular student movement. Most of the money has come in small subscriptions from students who gave self-sacrificingly for the good of future generations. It is, therefore, a student building, built by and for the students of the University.

Virginia Polytechnic Institute "by the unanimous suggestion of the four classes" has adopted a new set of athletic rules. They embrace among other features, the four year limit, the ruling out of all faculty members above the grade of assistant and the provision that a player must remain at least two thirds of the entire year in order to be eligible to athletic teams the following year. One by one the institutions seem to be dropping into line on the question of rigid athletic rules. The change will probably make for fair play, since the looser the rules the greater the chance that circumstances will permit one college to profit by them at the expense of the others.

day, contains a poem entitled "Casey's Revenge", a companion-piece to that ancient classic which for years has held undisputed sway as the epic of the diamond: "Casey at the Bat." A reading of the later production will not only gratify the friends of Casey who have been true to him throughout his years of humiliation but it will force the most ardent admirers of the old poem to confess that the new decidedly out-Caseys Casey.

The baseball season is now fairly opening. Two games have been played and in both of these our team showed up well. Next Saturday's contest will be a battle royal, with a team well worthy of our steel. It will be a game which must be fought to a finish if victory is to be ours. We shall deliver ourselves of no fervent exhortation to the students to "get behind the team." They are there already and are going to remain there till the close of a victorious season.

LOCAL NOTES.

—The Phi society held no meeting Saturday night because of the illuminating quality of no lights.

—The contest to select the Phi society's scrub Georgia debater was held in that society hall Wednesday night last week. The contestants were Messrs. Britt, Coghill, Umsted, and Sorrell. Mr. Britt won.

—Governor Glenn has written Judge MacRae that owing to his acceptance of the University's invitation to deliver the Commencement address, his speech before the law class must be postponed until next fall.

—Mr. J. J. Tyson, '05, returned to the Hill Monday expecting to remain the rest of the session. On receiving a message from Ensley, Ala., Monday night, offering him a position as chemist, he left to take the position.

—Dr Archibald Henderson delivered a short, but interesting lecture to a student gathering in Gerrard Hall Tuesday night. Dr. Henderson's lecture was upon "Profanity and Foul Talk," and was the second of the series to be given upon "The Evils of College Life."

—A meet with the University of Virginia at Charlottesville has been arranged for the track team. Ten men will be taken on the trip. If Carolina is ever to show Virginia that we can put out a winning track team, candidates and lots of them, must come out at once.

The campus for the past few days has been undergoing the first steps preliminary to its spring house cleaning. The leaves which were the accumulation of many moons have been ruthlessly raked into heaps and carted away and the fragments of broken branches left by the sleet storm have been lopped off.

—The regular meeting of the Chemical Journal Club was held Monday night in the Chemical Lecture Room. Papers were as follows: "Review of Recent Research in Organic Chemistry," Dr. Wheeler. "A New Method of Titration with Iodine Solutions," Mr. Frank Drane. "Distillation of Gold and its Alloys," Mr. R. F. Allen.

—The question debated in the Di society Saturday night was, "Resolved, That the United States government should provide for the teaching of mining, irrigation and road making in all State educational institutions." The committee was not kindly disposed towards the innovation and Mr. Grier made the best speech.

—The Economic society met Monday night in the Economics Seminary Room. The meeting was given over to the discussion of the Georgia debate question, that of the tariff. Messrs. Parker and Love, the Varsity debaters and Messrs. Andrews and Britt, the scrub debaters, presented the two sides of the question. It was then turned over to the members of the club for freer discussion and the time was profitably spent.

Mr. Edwin Brush Prestidigitates

An open eyed audience filled Gerrard Hall from rostrum to galleries Thursday night to meet Mr. Edwin Brush, magician and prestidigitator. The audience had come forth prepared for surprises, and were not disappointed. The first one came in the form of an announcement that the mystic one had been delayed in his preparations and hence craved the patience of the spectators for some thirty or forty minutes.

But about a quarter to nine, more or less, the curtain went up, the magician with his best smile and most courtly bow, presented himself, and the show was on.

As to the quality of the entertainment, the audience appeared very well pleased. If many of them had seen some of the feats before, it is safe to say that they knew naught of the manner of their doing and hence enjoyed seeing them again. At any rate they could scarcely afford to register a knock. To say, when asked how came the long string of sausages to be in Prof. McKie's pocket, that last year the man of the hidden art removed a rabbit from Dr. Alexander's coat, could scarcely be deemed, a sufficient, valid or over satisfying explanation. Only one individual, so far as is known, understood all the tricks. He avers that on the very front seat did he sit and not a detail escaped him.

Jerome and Loomis to Speak.

The Young Men's Christian Association has been most fortunate in securing two lecturers of the highest class to speak in Chapel Hill. The gentlemen are Messrs. Jerome K. Jerome and Charles Battell Loomis.

Both are of national, and one at least of more than national, reputation as writers and while not so well known as speakers their reputation as writers is sufficient to insure them a packed house. They will appear here on the night of April 2d

Mr. Jerome is a noted English writer, being best known perhaps as the author of "Idle Thoughts of an Idle Fellow," "Three Men in a Boat," etc. He is spending a few months in America and visiting only a few of the leading institutions of learning in the United States. Mr. Loomis is an American writer of repute.

A CLOSE GAME YESTERDAY

Sharp's Institute Springs a Surprise and Holds the Varsity to a Score of 4 to 3.

The game yesterday with Sharp's Institute was a surprise to everybody, Sharp's team itself not excluded. The game started off like a walkover for Carolina, but the visitors tied the score in the fourth and ran neck and neck until the end. The game was very interesting and at times exciting.

Howard, of some repute as a twirler, relieved Brandon after the first inning, and though hard hit by Carolina, managed to keep the hits so well scattered as to net but one. Had he pitched the whole game the result might have been different. Thompson pitched a good steady game for Carolina and deserved better luck than he had. The high wind made accurate fielding almost impossible, caused several errors and netted Sharp two runs.

Several pretty plays were made. Webb, of Sharp, put up a crack-a-jack game at short. Patterson did the same for Carolina. Calder and Stem led in the hitting for Carolina, while Sharp, J. for the visitors came near putting one over the fence. Thompson hit in tough luck, two of his line drives being nipped nearly off the fence.

Carolina scored three runs as a starter when Calder walked, and went to third and James to second when Brandon chucked James' bunt badly. Story's out, third to first, scored Calder. James scored after Sharp caught Patterson's long drive to right center. Thompson trotted to first, went to second on a passed ball and scored on Stem's double down the left field foul line.

Sharp's Institute scored in the third when Long, who had singled to left, scored on Sharp's two bagger. Sharp tied the score in the fourth when Webb and Ellington came in on Claybrook's high fly which the wind rendered unjudgable.

Carolina won out in the fifth. Old Story singled hard to right. Patterson and Thompson were caught out, and then Capt. Stem shoved Story across the rubber by a second two bagger. Fox singled to right and this time was not thrown out at first, but was put out at second. Previously he had hit out a clean single, but was beat out to first.

Patterson played short in place of Harris who has chills and fever. Cunningham has a sore leg and was unable to get in the game.

Carolina Wins From Lafayette

Fast Northerners Downed

Fast and Exciting Contest on Wet Diamond Results in Score of 5 to 3 in favor of Carolina.

Carolina met Lafayette Tuesday afternoon on a wet field and defeated her in a pretty game by a score of 5 to 3. The game abounded in errors, caused partially by the wet grounds and the heavy ball, yet it was full of interest and excitement. Carolina forged ahead in the first three innings and kept the lead until the end, but the daring base running of the Lafayette men made it extremely dangerous for us when they got on bases, and kept the lead until the last man was retired.

The same game with Bingham would not have been so interesting, but owing to the fact that it was Lafayette whom we were playing, and to the fact that we owe them several beatings—the game was especially interesting.

Carolina presented her strongest appearance, especially in regard to her battery. Cunningham did the twirling and James, W., the receiving. It will be remembered that James was ruled off by the faculty committee on athletics on account of his having received remunerations for playing summer ball. The regular Varsity catchers, Rogers and Moore, both being disabled, the committee reversed their former ruling in the case of Lafayette, on the ground that we had no special athletic rules with that institution. Lafayette consented to his playing. James filled up the gap well, and considering the fact that this was the first time he had had on uniform for a month, he handled Cunningham's delivery in excellent style.

Cunningham pitched a wonderful game for Carolina. Only 30 men faced him, he fanned 7 and allowed only three hits, one of these being a scratch. His five free passes were due to the slippery condition of the ball. NewBerry, Lafayette's star pitcher, also pitched fine ball, considering circumstances. He was hit rather freely by the Varsity, but kept the hits well scattered.

The game abounded in features. For Lafayette, the baserunning of her entire team, Snook and Schneider in particular, was spectacular, and the fielding of Hawk and Schneider was of the sensational order. For Carolina, the hitting and base running of Calder, a "squeeze play" executed by Thompson and Harris, and the work of Captain Stem at first bag were the prominent features. Thus runneth the story of the game:

First inning: Carolina takes the bat. Calder gets in front of one of NewBerry's fast ones and walks to first. On James, J. B.'s sacrifice, Calder goes all the way to third, making a beautiful slide under the third baseman. A passed ball lets Calder score the first run of the game. Story fans. Patterson and Thompson reach first on errors of the second baseman, and Stem is hit by a pitched ball. With the bases loaded, Harris fans.

Snook walks and goes to second on a passed ball. Kinsey fans. Hawk and Wack ground out to Stem, both being bad chances.

Second inning: James W. is hit by a pitched ball and runs to second while Cunny is being retired at first. Calder hits a fine drive to left and before the ball is returned he has crossed home plate behind James. His hit might have fielded on a dry diamond, but as it was back, the left fielder never touched it. Burt James places a pretty single in centre but is left as Story goes out short to first and Patterson on a pop to NewBerry.

Peters hits a slow teaser in front of the plate, beats it out, then steals second, goes to third. Updegrove out pitcher to first. Long flies to short left and NewBerry pops up to third.

Third inning: Thompson get a base on Updegrove's fumble, runs to second on a wild pitch, to third on Stem's sacrifice and scores when Harris is being retired on his bunt, pitched to first. Pretty work. James fans.

Brooke reaches first on Harris' wild throw of his slow grounder and steals second. Snook fans. Kinsey lines out to Story and Brooke is doubled up at second.

Fourth inning: Cunningham out short to first. Calder singles to center and steals second. James hits to short, who catches Calder going to third. Story succumbs on a fly to NewBerry. Hawk walks and steals second as Wack fans. Peters walks. Updegrove hits an easy one to James. James is at loss where to throw the ball as first and second bases are full. He finally throws it to left field fence, on which wild chunk, Hawk scores. Peters goes to third and Updegrove to second. Long attempts to bunt, but pops up to James who doubles Peters off third. Carolina was lucky to get out of a bad hole so easily.

Fifth: Patterson doubles to left. Thompson is out from short to first. Stem pops up to third and Harris dies from third to first.

NewBerry rolls out to Stem. Brooke fans. Snook reaches first on Harris's poor throw, steals second and third but to no avail as Kinsey again fans.

Sixth: James skies out to left. Cunny quits second to first. Calder's live drive to center is beautifully taken in by Schneider. Hawk and Wack ground out to first and Peters flies to left.

Seventh: James, B., goes out from third to first; Story, pitcher to first, and Patterson second to first.

Updegrove is out short to first. Long fans and NewBerry lines out to Patterson.

Eighth: Thompson is out short to first. Stem plants a solid single over second. Harris reaches first on Updegrove's fumble. James pops to third and Cunningham is thrown out second to first.

Schneider, who has replaced Brooke in center, singles to second for the first clean hit off Cunningham. Without compunction he steals second and third. Snook walks and steals second. Kinsey fans for the third time. Hawk is thrown out short to first. Stem throws wild to catch Schneider at home and Schneider scores, Snook going to third. Cunny throws Wack out at first.

Ninth: NewBerry slips down on Calder's infield hit. James's out, third to first, sends Calder to second. Story singles over second, scoring Calder. Story is caught going to second by a relay throw from Schneider to Snook, to Hawk. Patterson reaches first on Long's error. Thompson singles to center and Schneider by a wonderful throw catches Patterson at third.

Peters is out pitcher to first, Updegrove short to first, Long walks and goes to third when James overthrows second, and scores on NewBerry's single. NewBerry ends the agony by being nipped at second.

FREE PEANUT PICNIC.

Two Juniors Test Each Other's Nerve to the Enjoyment of the Crowd and the Peanut Boy.

The loungers' bench on the east side of the well was the scene of an unusual happening last Thursday afternoon, one which caused chance passers-by to look, to stop, to wonder, and finally to join the throng.

Seated on the bench was the ever present apple and peanut boy, his basket heaped high with bags of the fruit of eastern Carolina soil. By him stood two figures round which ebbed and swayed a crowd shouting with laughter and hurling at them flashes of wit as they parleyed with each other. One was the long, tall, spectacled individual whom the Juniors call "big chief;" the other was a short, squatty brunette with dreamy-eyes and also of the Junior persuasion.

In an evil moment such as comes at times to the best of us, "Bill," said Mr. Spruill, "here's a quarter for peanuts for the crowd, if you'll cover it with another."

"Done," said Bill, in a moment equally evil, yet feeling that in this case to risk nothing was to lose all.

Then the fun began, with the parleying. Each thought he knew just how much nerve the other had. Perhaps he did, but the presence of the cheering spectators raised the question as to which required the strongest nerve, to "back down" or to "set up". The climax came finally when the tall one with the most exsiccated of exsiccated grins flung down a shining quarter into the basket. With cheerfulness suspiciously boisterous the other followed suit. Grasping their ten packages in their arms they began casting them hither and thither among the crowd as if the quarters which had purchased them were indeed but paltry baubles. The faces of the onlookers, beclouded at first with utter astonishment, lit up with joy as the peanuts were flung at them, eager hands being laid on the plentiful bags, whose contents rapidly disappeared.

'Twas a joyful scene—joyful with a joy from which the presence of the philanthropic ones detracted not. As for the peanut boy, he was struck dumb by the greatness of his good fortune. He could only grasp the coins tightly and pinch himself to see if the adventure were real.

The Shakspeare Club.

The Club held a meeting of especial interest Tuesday evening, March 27. Papers were read on the following subjects:

"A Comparison of Moliere's Method and Shakspeare's, including some review of George Meredith's Conception of Comedy."—Dr. Thomas Hume.

"Technique in Shakspeare's Much Ado about Nothing and Jane Austen's Pride and Prejudice."—Mr. H. H. Hughes.

"The Relation of the Ballad and the Drama." Mr. J. M. Grainger.

Payable IN ADVANCE or during first term.
SINGLE COPIES, 5 CENTS.

The action taken last Thursday by the advisory committee in abolishing gate charges at class games is one of those things the wisdom of which can be vindicated, if at all, only by time and experience. And until it is so vindicated it is, of course, open to question. The situation is this:

For a number of years an admission fee of ten cents has been charged at all class games, the proceeds to go to paying the expenses of equipping the teams and any balance to be returned at the end of the year to the athletic association for the use of the grounds. So small, however, the attendance usually is, that no balance is ever returned and private subscriptions are called into requisition to make up the deficit. It is a fact which admits of no question that the small admission fee operates to keep away hundreds who might otherwise go and who would almost certainly go if the idea got into their heads that everybody else was going. And the first step towards enthusiasm for a game, especially in drawing out candidates, is the absolute certainty of a large and appreciative crowd to witness the match contests. Given this and the rest will probably follow of its own accord.

The only disadvantageous feature would appear to be the weakening of the ability of the individual classes to offer inducement to players on their teams. For instance, the Sophomore football team last fall under a notably untiring management probably broke all recent records by clearing $40 or more, with part of which sweaters were purchased and presented to the members of the team, and the Juniors did likewise. A closer analysis however, will show that if there is apparently such an effect, in reality there would only be a shifting of the burden from the shoulders of the game-attenders as a body to those of the members of the individual classes, thus giving emphasis to the personal equation in the case of each class and allowing it to contribute towards such rewards as it sees fit. And even if there is a decrease in the number and value of inducements offered, the prospect of large crowds and consequent fame should compensate for their loss.

But there is one point in this matter which should not be overlooked. To one who has eyes only for the latent possibility of development in our present system of class athletics it may seem absurd to warn against the over emphasis of this branch.

But with the rapid growth of a healthy class spirit which is finding expression, for one way, in giving inducements (not in money, but in the shape of prizes) to players on its teams, the possibility of an overshadowing of the scrub team, whose lot is not an unmixed joy, increases.

We have in mind now the case of one who, though certain of a place on the football scrubs last fall, was persuaded to remain off by some too enthusiastic classmates in order that he might be eligible to the class team. On the scrubs there was a possibility of winning one of three sweaters. The class team made a sweater a certainty. "But the scrubs get a trip to Norfolk." "That's all right. We'll see that you get a trip to Norfolk," and it was a go. As a matter of keeping facts straight, he did not get the trip, but he did remain off the scrubs until the last few days of the season, when, his college spirit triumphing over his class spirit, he went out.

Now there are two points illustrated here at once. In the first place such things can occur only in the case of a distorted perspective. The second team should be regarded in the eyes of the University as in very truth, second only to that of the Varsity, and the members should be allowed distinguishing privileges peculiar to them. The University is greater than any one class and the scrub team is a University affair.

The second point illustrated is of broader application than merely to our class teams, our Varsity teams or those of any one institution. It is this: to the average man who really wants a sweater, or a trip to Norfolk a $5 sweater or a $5 railroad ticket looks almost as big as a $5 bill. The danger is that the mercenary spirit, so incompatible with true amateur sport, may gain the ascendancy.

The Tulane Weekly, speaking of its professor of philosophy, says: "Dr. Smith has recently had a very high compliment paid him by a prominent paper. It was proved conclusively that he is one of the million wise men of the earth." We know nothing else about the gentleman in question save that he is a Southerner, but this fact alone is sufficient to produce a thrill of gratification at this vindication of our pride in the South. She may not get the next President, but that is a small matter now. It can no longer be disputed that her men are forging to the front. 'Rah for Dr. Smith! We're for 'im!

Two weeks ago we remarked that judging from appearances Columbia University might not have abolished football for good after all. It now appears that on the fifteenth of March a captain was quietly selected and it is whis-

LOCAL NOTES.

—Dr. Venable has about recovered from a rather severe attack of the grip which confined him at home for several days.

—Dr. C. Alphonso Smith has accepted an invitation to lecture before the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly which meets in Raleigh June 1 to 15.

—Messrs. N. A. Townsend and T. W. Simmons, of the law school, who received license in February to practice law, have suspended their board on Main street and were sworn in at Durham last Wednesday.

—The Phi society Saturday night discussed the Commencement debate query, "Resolved, That the trust system should be extended into all our industries." The negative won and Mr. Oscar R. Rand made the best speech.

—Mr. L. T. Moore, the well known substitute catcher, fractured a bone in his right hand last Friday afternoon. A runner in sliding to the home plate fell on his hand. The injury is quite a painful one.

—The Di society Saturday night discussed the query, "Resolved, That the legal system of the United States should be so changed as to provide for trial before a committee of judges, instead of by jury." The affirmative won and Mr. Roy Melton Brown made the best speech.

—The rain and subsequent sleet of last Saturday made impossible the playing of the game with Guilford. The team was communicated with by telegraph and instructed not to come. Wet grounds caused the cancellation of the second game with Lafayette billed for yesterday afternoon. As Oak Ridge and Wake Forest have both cancelled their engagements with Carolina the A. & M. game will be next on schedule.

—The Senior class at a meeting Saturday afternoon elected Mr. J. A. Parker, permanent secretary of the class. The class has voted to wait until the reunion of the class in 1916 to present their gift to the University, and will make yearly contributions to the fund up to that time. It is expected that it will amount to several thousand dollars. The permanent secretary will have charge of the collection and investment of these funds.

A Soph-Junior-Fresh Banquet.

To the Editor of THE TAR HEEL:

Much has been said in regard to our coming Commencement and several practical suggestions have been made, which seem to be worthy of serious consideration. Among these no better idea has been advanced than the one of a Soph-Junior-Fresh banquet. Sounds big, doesn't it? Probably sounds too big at first blush. Well, it is a big thing for the Junior, Sophomore and Freshman classes of this year, which means of course, the Senior,

Junior and Sophomore classes of next year. If this is done it will mean much towards helping us to have a creditable Commencement, which certainly seems to be due the University, and is unquestionably something that every man who has the interest of the college at heart desires.

To sum up the situation from these facts, it is a big thing for the University and every man in it. Now if this is true, it is incumbent on us to look into the matter and see if we are willing to take a step in this direction. We have outgrown that boyish idea "Once a Freshman, always a Freshman," and we are not ashamed of it; then why shouldn't we be willing to do the whole-hearted, square, manly thing and recognize the Freshmen as Sophomores at Commencement, on just the same principle that we claim to be and are Juniors, Seniors or graduates, as the case may be. It wouldn't be an expensive thing for the classes, for it would have that spirit and principle that does not require a garnish of artificial decorations, a dazzling array of plate over a Delmonico's puzzling menu to make it a success. A committee from the Junior and Sophomore classes and a small contribution from the members of these classes would assure success and establish a precedent to which all the participants would look back on with an ever increasing feeling of pride.

For years there has been a great cry for better class organization and more class and college spirit not that kind of college spirit that wishes well, provided the other fellow does the work, but a spirit which appeals to the deeper feelings of man and gives birth to a love and enthusiasm to help his fellow students, his class and his alma mater. A Soph-Junior-Fresh banquet promises more towards this end than probably any one idea that has been introduced during the past few years. It would become a prominent class feature during the first three years of academic life, and a custom which every class would in turn foster and profit by.

STUDENT.

It Certainly Looks That Way.

To the Editor of THE TAR HEEL:

Could not arrangements be easily made to have the college bell rung at a quarter to nine or, for that matter, half past eight on Sunday mornings? The only bell rung at present is the nine o'clock signal for the closing of the doors at Commons, and by it each Sunday dozens of students are awakened, only to realize that that which awakes them peals also the death knell of their chance for breakfast.

MORE ABOUT JEROME.

Facts About the Literary Career of the Noted English Author.

It is interesting to note in connection with the forthcoming appearance at the University of Jerome K. Jerome, that his first play was accepted and produced by Charles Hawtrej, after he had worried every manager in London to produce it. It was "Barbara," and it ran at the Comedy Theatre, London, for an entire year. His more recent successes, "The Maister of Woodbarrow," acted in America by E. H. Sothorn; and "Miss Hobbs" by Annie Russell, are fresh in the minds of theatre goers.

His most popular book, "Three Men in a Boat," passed through no less than one hundred and forty editions in three years, and has probably passed through as many more editions by now. It has been translated into every European language.

His American tour will include all the large cities between the oceans and several of the most important institutions of learning. He is anxious to see the native American on his own ground and he will probably gather some interesting material for future use. (Too bad that he couldn't have filled Mr. John P. D. John's appointment for him.) His engagements in Virginia and North Carolina run thus: Norfolk, Richmond, University of Virginia, Lynchburg, Danville, University of North Carolina, Greensboro and Asheville. At a recent visit to the University of Michigan, he had an audience of 2,800 students.

There are some who do not care for a humorous entertainment, but it is gratifying that the University is to be made one of his three stops in North Carolina and it is a great opportunity to hear one whose name is so well known among intelligent people of the English-speaking world.

Class Games to be Free.

The athletic advisory board at its meeting Thursday afternoon made the important ruling that hereafter no admission shall be charged to games played in the athletic park of the association between the different University classes. The rule has hitherto been that if admission were charged reports of the money handled should be returned to the advisory board by the managers of the teams. This rule has been laxly obeyed, only one manager making such report last fall. The board believed this to be an unhealthy state of affairs.

But the action taken was not so much on the ground that the classes had forfeited their right to charge admission as in belief that a much needed stimulus would be given class athletics, by making it possible for every student in the University to be present at every game instead of the seventy five or one hundred which have previously attended. Realizing that expenses for equipments of the various teams must be met, the board appropriated $10 for each class team, the balance necessary, if any, to be raised by private subscription among the different classes.

Wake Forest Goes Down

Carolina Wins By a Neck

A Hotly Contested Game Tuesday Results in a Carolina Victory, Score: 6 to 5.

Wake Forest, fresh from her victory over A. and M., at Raleigh Monday, was met and defeated by the University team Tuesday afternoon by the close score of 6 to 5. The game from the standpoint of how the national game should be played, was a farce, but the close score rendered it exciting and kept the interest humming high from beginning to end. It was one of the most exciting games seen here in a long time.

Wake Forest got the jump on us and kept an apparently safe lead until the eighth inning. The probability of Carolina's being beaten and by Wake Forest at that and on her home grounds was realized by team and supporters alike, and the hard work of the team, coupled with the playing of the band and the rooting was the thing that pulled the team out of the hole. The excitement ran high on all sides. The umpire could not suit both sides so he retired and a new one was substituted. Both did conscientious work and, though neither was a professional, did as well as anyone could have done under the circumstances. The man marking the score upon the blackboard in his excitement over-did himself and marked an inning too much. As Carolina needed this inning about that time very much, the official scorer happened to notice and correct the error. This caused a good deal of discussion.

But to the game. Thompson and Turner, E., were the opposing pitchers and pitched about the same game. Thompson was hit at more opportune times than Turner, but was much steadier. Both yielded four hits, a very small number considering the runs scored.

The game was, or would have been, a pretty pitcher's battle, had either team supported its pitcher. Carolina played dumb ball behind Thompson from the beginning and had it not been for a series of providential errors by Moore, Wake Forest's second baseman, we would have gone down in defeat before the visitors. Turner, E., didn't seem to have anything in the baseball line except a glove, but he certainly puzzled the Varsity sluggers. The four hits yielded by his delivery were widely scattered, and with a reasonable amount of support he would have let us down without a run. His feat of pitching two days in succession with such good results is a noteworthy one and reminds one of Sitton's record last year.

The features of the game other than the pitcher's battle were few and far between. Both pitchers tried to outdo each other in hitting each other with the ball. Turner, E., had a shade the better of it. Turner, E., got two three baggers, besides making half of his team's hits. Turner, E. and Benton played a pretty fielding game. The feature for Carolina was the fact that she played a hard uphill game and beat Wake Forest 6 to 5.

Carolina had a splendid chance to score in the first inning when Calder, having walked, reached third. He and James tried a squeeze play, but James let the ball go by without striking at it and Calder was made a sucker of. Patterson and Story were marked off and Carolina got her first goose egg.

The Baptists did decidedly better by scoring two runs in their half. A hard single through short by Turner, J., with Goodwyn and Richardson on bases, did the work, allowing both to cross the home plate.

In the second Carolina again failed to score, while the visitors increased theirs by one. Patterson made a mess of Holding's infield fly. Benton fanned and then Turner, E. hit a long one that Story got under only to fumble, Holding going to third and Turner to second. Goodwyn tried the squeeze play, struck at the ball but missed and Holding was thrown out between third and home. Turner, E., in the meantime, went to third during the chase, and scored when Rogers let a fast one get away from him.

The third inning was short even if not sweet. Hanes, Calder and James, trying to steal second, for Carolina, and Richardson, Smith and Turner, J., for the visitors, going out— one, two, three.

Carolina had better luck in the fourth. Story led off with a single by short. Patterson reached first and Story second, when Moore fumbled his easy roller. Thompson got hit by a pitched ball. Stem hit to second baseman, the ball went by undetained and Story and Patterson scored. Thompson was caught off second by a throw from Turner, E. to Benton. Harris was hit by a pitched ball. Rogers hit hard to pitcher, who fumbled, giving Stem a pass to third and Harris to second. Hanes flew to left and Stem scored after the catch. Harris took a nap off third and was put to the bad.

Hamrick fanned. Moore popped to Thompson. Holding singled over second and stole second. Benton fanned but Rogers dropped the ball and on his wild throw to first Holding scored and Benton went to third. Turner singled hard over first. Calder thought it a foul and took his time, while Benton scored and Turner went to third. Goodwyn ended the agony by lining out to Hanes. Two runs, two hits. The score was now 5 to 3 in favor of Wake Forest.

The fifth was a blank for both sides. In the sixth Carolina added one. Stem, having walked, was on third when Rogers hit a high fly to the right fielder, who made a comedian of himself by dropping it, and Stem scored. Wake Forest failed to make good in her half, leaving the score, 5 to 4.

In the seventh, Calder, James and Story came up—and went down. Turner, E., for the visitors swatted a peach to center field fence for 3 bases, but fast fielding by Story kept him on third till the close of the inning.

Carolina woke up and got busy on the bleachers and on the diamond. Patterson singled hard to right and Thompson did likewise to left. Capt. Stem advanced both on a beautiful bunt. Harris hit to third and Patterson was out at home. Cunningham was sent in to take Rogers's place and hit through second, scoring two. Hanes went out, third to first.

Smith popped up to Thompson, Turner, J., went out short to first and Hamrick fanned.

In the ninth Calder fanned before he knew it. James lined out to left and Story grounded out, short to first.

Wake Forest's last chance availed little. The Carolina team had come down from its balloon ascension and positively refused to get excited again. Moore went out to Stem, and Holding and White (substituted for Benton for hitting purposes) fanned the wind. Carolina's game, 6 to 5.

JEROME AND LOOMIS.

The Britisher and the Long-Faced American Show Up On Schedule Time.

The highest class entertainment of its kind that ever visited Chapel Hill was given Monday night when Jerome K. Jerome, English humorist and Charles Battell Loomis, American humorist, appeared on the same platform before an audience which filled Gerrard Hall, despite the formidable (for Chapel Hill) admission charges.

The fame of the two had spread far and wide. Few had not either read Loomis or read of him and perhaps none had not held their sides over the simple but irresistible humor of "Three Men in a Boat, to Say Nothing of the Dog." The name of this book, especially, appearing prominently along with the portrait of the Britisher on super-numerous posters was a drawing card not to be despised.

Probably not a few of the audience had gone out with the heroic intention of being bored with solemn laughterless British humor, simply to see and to say they had seen him who was starting in the transcontinental tour. They had seen, perhaps, one specimen of our English brother as a lecturer and had been not so favorably impressed as they might have been. He had been gracefully introduced, had plunged his head into a bundle of manuscript without even an introductory "Ladies and Gentlemen," and then, having raced through his manuscript, had turned and taken his seat, much as if to say he had earned his money and was not giving extras on this trip.

If such there were, however, they were reassured by the appearance of Mr. Jerome. His ruddy cheeks, his self-assured air as well as the half-supercilious glint of his glasses, proclaimed him an Englishman of the better class. But otherwise he seemed reassuringly like "folks."

He had the sympathy of his audience from the start, which was soon in a continual titter of merriment. There was no uproarious laughter. That was not the style of the humor. There were no striking climaxes to bring it forth. Most of his numbers were anti-climactic, abounding in little touches which were excruciatingly funny, and then suddenly coming to a stop.

Nothing was more gratifying to the crowd than when he would launch into an English dialect story with omitted h's, and they greeted it with a wave of smiles. No further doubt remained that he was the genuine and unadulterated article. Those omitted h's were to them the infallible ear marks of the bumptious Britisher and hence the feeling of personal gratification produced.

Then Mr. Loomis mounted the platform, and a wave of suppressed

If you have not previously thought about it you will perhaps be surprised to notice that of the men on the Varsity baseball team at least half, a year or two ago, were holding down positions on the various class teams of the University. Coming here, probably with but little knowledge of the game and less experience, by hard, consistent work wherever the opportunity presented itself and by availing themselves of the coaching provided for the Varsity and scrub teams they have developed themselves up to the Varsity standard, which is a high one.

We mentioned our present Varsity merely to make the case concrete. It has been true, in probably as large a degree, of the teams of the years which are passed. A few men come here each year developed well enough to make the team, but these men, in the future at any rate, will be greatly in the minority. The sentiment for rigid athletic rules, which is sweeping over the country and demanding obedience of all institutions which seek to meet others in intercollegiate contests, particularly the one year rule, sounds the death knell of the "tramp athlete."

Obviously, if our future teams are to be winning teams, winning players must be developed right here at home. It is equally obvious that the primary but indispensable training school is and must be that given by the class teams in inter-class contests. The institution which develops to the highest degree of perfection its class teams is the winning institution of the future.

At no educational institution in this section of America is class athletics developed so highly as here at the University of North Carolina. This, at least, is the assertion of well informed men. Our prospects, for the future, therefore, if improved, are bright. But their improvement or their non-improvement is optional with us. Our policy should be one not of specious self-flattery, which is the enemy of all progress, but of enthusiastic, energetic improvement.

The recent throwing open of the gates at the class games is expected to be one great step forward. But something is lacking: some means of distinguishing the man who in the heart of the battle struggles for the honor of his class from him who, less gifted or more lazy, eats peanuts on the sidelines. If each class in the University will delegate to its representatives on class teams the exclusive right to wear on sweaters or other distinctively athletic apparel the class numerals much will have been accomplished towards this end. The same rule is in existence at other leading American institutions and it has done wonders for the development of class patriotism and class athletics. We commend this to the consideration of the classes as a proposition eminently proper and expedient.

Mr. Wendling's justification of the civil war as a national policy on the grounds that it required a fight to cement the Cavalier and the Puritan into the composite American was made in an able and entertaining manner, but, we for one, are so bold as to believe that the cementing might have been accomplished in some far cheaper way than by a war which cost a million lives, thousands of millions of dollars, and retarded immeasurably the progress of the nation. The sectional bitterness which existed at the close of the conflict certainly transcended that which preceded it. If the people have been able to outgrow this in the process of time, and they have to a remarkable and gratifying degree, it is difficult to see why they could not have outgrown the other as their interests became more and more in common with the passing of the years.

We are, ordinarily, optimistic to a fault, but we see no reason for abandoning our previous conviction that the war was a colossal mistake.

The interest aroused in the University by our recent game with Wake Forest is apparently adding to the knowledge of the Baptist brethren concerning the Orange county Mecca.

"Which has the best team," the Weekly quotes a freshman as asking, "the University or Chapel Hill?" Even our valued contemporary is guilty of propounding this query; "Are you going to the Chapel Hill game in Raleigh?"

We are informed that way back in the misty long ago it was customary to refer to the University as Chapel Hill. We've outgrown it now, however, and we're "North Carolina" strictly, if you please.

The majority of the college magazines—ours, be it said to its credit, is an exception—have a department which they term "Locals", given up to bits of personal gossip, most of it decidedly personal. Here is a paragraph in an Ohio periodical which caught our eye the other day:

"Is it true that Mrs. Wilson [name substituted by us] sends little Geneva along with Miss Alice whenever she goes walking with Charlie Jones or "Ducky" Jackson?"

Now, really, between ourselves, isn't that getting somewhere near about the limit?

It is needless to say that the University has the fullest confidence in the men who are to represent her in the debate with Georgia Friday night. Both are clear thinkers and forceful speakers, and they have labored hard and faithfully. Whether or not they succeed in wresting the decision which we covet we know that they will acquit themselves with the greatest credit.

Today's game with A. and M. involves not only the championship of the State but that of the entire South. Let every student in the University be found on the bleachers this afternoon contributing his part towards victory. This game has got to be won and won by us.

A State contemporary of last week concluded a funeral notice with this statement: "Reserved seats on sale at the drug store from Thursday to Saturday." The price of admission our contemporary failed to state.

LOCAL NOTES.

—Mr. Jerome and his wife, who is accompanying him on his American tour, were entertained by Dr. George Howe, a personal acquaintance.

—Dr. C. Alphonso Smith has recently accepted an invitation to deliver the literary address at the closing exercises of the Winston graded school.

—Professor Collier Cobb has just received the gold medal won by the exhibit of the School of Mining of this University at the Louisiana Purchase Exposition.

—Rev. Henry A. McNulty, of Wilmington, conducted services at the Chapel of the Cross Sunday morning and evening. Sunday afternoon he spoke in the chapel to the students of the University.

—The social department of the Epworth League gave a social last Thursday afternoon at Mrs. Cole's. The excellent music, recitations and interesting games made the occasion very enjoyable to all present.

—The Geological Journal Club met Tuesday night. Papers were read as follows: "Copper Ores of Virgilina District." Mr. E. B. Jeffress. "Magnesite Deposits of California."— Mr. Hampden Hill.

—The Phi discussed the proposition that international arbitration should be used to settle all international differences. The affirmative won and Mr. William Smith O'Brien Robinson, junior, made the best speech.

—Dr. Chas. H. Herty, professor of chemistry, delivered a lecture Saturday night before the students of the A. and M. College at Raleigh on the subject of turpentine orcharding. The Raleigh papers speak highly of the lecture.

—In the Di society Saturday night the query discussed was the Commencement debate question, regarding the extension of trusts as at present controlled into all lines of American industry. The negative won and Mr. Moon made the best speech.

—The law school will open June 13th, with a full corps of lecturers. Judge MacRae, Dr. K. P. Battle, Dr. Thomas Ruffin and Mr. J. Crawford Biggs will lecture in the course. Mr. F. H. Busbee and other distinguished men will deliver special lectures.

—The Red and White, of A. and M. states that at the February examination for license before the Supreme Court Mr. Walter Clark, Jr., who received the degree of Bachelor of Laws here last spring, put up the first perfect paper ever handed in in the law examination in this State.

—Friends of the University throughout the State will be interested to know about the splendid standing which students from the medical department are taking in other schools. Last year there were in the Jefferson Medical College, at Philadelphia, nine young men who had taken the first two years of their medical course at Chapel Hill. Five of these men made the highest grades given at Jefferson and the other four the next highest, one of the four winning the prize in surgery.

Manager Miller has certainly bucked up against a tough proposition in the way of luck thus far this spring, though from his unperturbed countenance you would never guess that he wasn't coining money. First the Davidson game went the way of all the world, then V. P. I. cancelled all the games on her Southern trip. This was followed by the cancellation of the Oak Ridge and Guilford games, due in the latter case to the ill feeling of the weather man. His ill humor continued and practically lost, so far as the financial feature is concerned, both Lafayette games. The declaring off of Saturday's game with Wake Forest at Raleigh brings the list up to date.

A movement has recently been put on foot by the supporters of the college annual to hold the election of editors for next year's Yackety Yack. At present the editors and business managers are elected in the fall, and in order to get the annual to its readers before Commencement they have been forced to collect the necessary material in a very short period. On last Saturday night the Dialectic and Philanthropic societies appointed committees to confer with a committee from the fraternities to draw up stipulations to govern the publication of next year's annual. These stipulations, in many respects, will be similar to those in effect heretofore, the chief point of difference being in the article concerning the election of editors and business managers. The next editor-in-chief will come from the Dialectic society, while one business manager will come from the Phi society and the other from the fraternities.

A Misapprehension.

The peaceful quiet of a weekly Y. M. C. A. prayer meeting in the chapel was rudely interrupted the other night by the sound of shuffling feet clambering noisily up the gallery stairs, mingled with excited conversation and the cracking of peanut shells. A moment later half a dozen boyish faces peered curiously over the gallery rail. Somehow the ragged owners of the faces seemed out of place, and the puzzled way in which they regarded the speaker who was addressing the meeting indicated that they, too, felt instinctively that something was wrong.

Carolina that afternoon had won a signal victory and when the college bell rang out that night it meant to the minds of the village youngsters that a mass meeting was on the program. This they had come out to take in and to contribute their share to the general glorification.

But—the crowd was smaller than even at a meeting to raise money for the team, no sheepish looking group occupied the front row, no vociferous cheering was in the air, and the speaker had said nothing whatever about the team. So the youngsters looked, wondered, talked together in loud undertones, and looked again. You could search them.

The speaker stopped talking and the company rose to their feet. As the first line of a familiar hymn rang through the hall there flashed over the grimy face of the leader of the mob, as he leaned over the rail,

The course covering four years begins during the last week in September and continues until June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. Mr. Wendling Lectures.

"Stonewall Jackson" was the subject upon which Mr. George Wendling spoke to a University audience Friday night, and his lecture ranks easily among the most enjoyed in the lecture course this year. Gifted with a highly expressive face and a voice which he can pitch so as to bring out at times the most thrilling effects, he was able to hold the attention of the audience throughout the greater part of the time. Then, too, his subject was one which appeals to a Southern audience. Probably it was written for such exclusively.

Mr. Wendling prefaced his study of Jackson, which was interwoven with the leading events of the civil war, with what he termed a philosophical analysis of the causes which led up to the war. The war, he said, was inevitable. It was the clashing of two antagonistic forces, the Puritan of the North and the Cavalier of the South, to bring forth the finished and final product—the American. This, he said, was God's purpose in permitting the war. The idea, however, was not strictly original with Mr. Wendling, as every one familiar with Henry Grady's famous "New South" was aware.

Having thus justified the war Mr. Wendling launched into his treatment of Jackson. First he was pictured as an awkward Virginia professor just before the outbreak of the war. He followed him then, through the transformation wrought in his character by the events of the war, tracing out each situation and doing justice to the series of exploits of unparalleled brilliancy in military annals. He was within sight of final victory, almost ready to march upon Washington when God took him, and thus permitted to be consummated the union which he desired, that of the Cavalier with the Puritan. At least, this was Mr. Wendling's theology. And the right was conceded him to place his own interpretation on history.

The Georgia-Carolina Debate.

The ninth annual debate between this University and the University of Georgia will take place in the chapel Friday night. Carolina's representatives, in the order of speaking, are Messrs. J. J. Parker, of Monroe, of the Junior class and the Dialectic society; and W. B. Love, of the Senior class, also of Monroe, and also of the Dialectic society.

Georgia's representatives are Messrs. Van Wilhite and Lansing B. Lee.

The president of the debate will be Chief Justice Walter Clark, of Raleigh. The judges are Mr. C. W. Tillet, of Charlotte, Prof. Mordecai, of the law department of Trinity, and Dr. Hobbs, president of Guilford College.

The query, as has been stated perhaps a dozen times heretofore, reads as follows: "Resolved, That the best interests of the United States demand that our tariff policy should be revised on the basis of a tariff for revenue only." Georgia has the affirmative and Carolina the negative. Of the eight previous debates Carolina has won five. Of the first two of the present series of three Carolina won both. A lively contest is expected Friday night.

merriment swept over the hall. His preternaturally grave and "deliciously solemn looking" countenance was mirth provoking in the extreme, but no one was exactly sure whether it was in order to laugh or not,—just then. The point did not remain in doubt over long. Opening a book, with a graveyard look and in a sonorous and more than graveyard tone Mr. Loomis said: "My first selection will be found on page number seven." The selection on page number seven was a "fairy tale" in Irish dialect and was read by him to the King's taste — "entirely." All of Mr. Loomis's numbers were enjoyed in a quiet way though he was probably at his best in the Irish dialect stories. He can hardly, however, be said to be in the class of Mr. Jerome.

Georgia Loses Third Debate

Carolina Victorious Again

A Gaily Fought and Interesting Contest in Gerrard Hall Friday Night The Tar Heel Question Debated.

Before an audience which filled Gerrard Hall to overflowing, the ninth debate between this University and the University of Georgia took place Friday night, and for the sixth time victory by unanimous decision rested with the Tar Heel speakers. Though to most people the tariff question lacks the blood thrilling, hair-raising interest of "Diamond Dick, Jr.," or "Sherlock Holmes," it is all the greater compliment to the speakers that the interest of the audience never flagged. "Steel rails, wire nails, tin plate," old and familiar friends all, received the welcome due them. The debaters on both sides showed careful study of the limitless question and it is a matter of regret that only the barest outlines of their speeches can be reproduced.

The gentlemen from Georgia, Messrs. Van Wilhite and Lansing B. Lee, put up a game fight. They failed, however, to analyse the question so deeply and convincingly at the start and to clinch their points so clearly throughout as did Carolina's debaters, Messrs. J. J. Parker, '07 and W. B. Love, '06. Both were at their best and evidently ready for any turn affairs might take.

The hit of the evening was the analysis of the meaning of the query by Mr. Parker, in his rejoinder, in such a way as to show that two burdens of proof lay on the affirmative only one of which they had accepted.

The president of the debate was Chief Justice Walter Clark of Raleigh; the secretary, Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson; the judges, Mr. C. W. Tillett, of Charlotte bar; Prof. Mordecai, of Trinity law school, and President Hobbs, of Guilford college. Mr. Robinson read the query, "Resolved, That the best interests of the United States demand that our tariff policy be revised on the basis of a tariff for revenue only." Mr. Wilhite, of Georgia, opened for the affirmative.

Protection, if it accomplishes its purpose, must raise the price of goods to consumers. If the foreigner paid the tariff there would be no protection. The price could not be lowered under protection except through inventions, etc. The opposition must show that these would not occur under free trade. Every time the imported article is bought, the tariff goes to the government. When the home article is bought the tariff goes to the pockets of the favored individuals. For every dollar the government gets, four dollars go to the manufacturer. The consumer, then, spends two billions yearly of which the government gets one fourth. If they could spend it under the low prices of free trade their condition would be infinitely bettered. In international exchange goods and not money pay for goods. Protection, by diverting capital and labor from natural channels results in loss to society. The increase in wages under protection is only apparent, and is offset by increased prices. Our superior natural advantages make longer protection unnecessary.

Mr. John J. Parker, on the negative, followed:

We may follow any one of three tariff policies: a tariff for protection with incidental revenue, as at present; that of a tariff for revenue with incidental protection, or that of absolute free trade. That of a tariff for revenue only is the worst of the three, because it is a tax on the poorest classes, and besides this, it would not raise sufficient revenue.

Monotonous extractive industries tend to monotonous social life. The necessity for a diversified industry is therefore fundamental to our national wellbeing. Protection does not aim to produce unnatural results, but to aid nature, where some element of the cost of production, such as wages, prohibits the unaided existence of an industry here. Wages in this country are twice as high as in foreign countries. Protection is necessary to place our manufactures, the connecting link between agriculture, commerce and mining, on an equal footing with those of other nations. It thus guarantees to the American producer a home market, to the American laborer high wages, and insures the permanency of our industrial life.

Mr. Lansing B. Lee, of Georgia, spoke next on the affirmative:

My colleague has shown the unsoundness of the economic principle underlying protection. I shall consider first, three proverbial arguments for protection: first, that protection is necessary for the diversification of our industries. In 1846 to 1861 under a revenue tariff our industries made rapid strides. Second, that protection is essential to our economic independence. This is inapplicable to the United States because of our national resources. As to the home market argument, if it is more profitable for two Americans to trade together we can trust them to find it out for themselves.

I object to protection because it favors certain classes, is not scientifically applied, fosters trusts and its burden is unequally distributed. It has been a burden to the South. It has brought forth discriminating duties on American goods from abroad. It has restricted our foreign market.

Mr. Walter B. Love, of the negative, spoke next.

Every period of low tariff has been one of disaster, each period of protection one of prosperity.

Our industries are interdependent, and the life of manufacturing is essential to the life of all the others. As a result of high wages our laborer is able to live in comfort. To destroy protection is to reduce him to pauper level and deprive him of the just rewards of his labor. What profit is it to reduce a hat to the price of a shilling if you take away his means of earning that shilling?

Protection is enriching the South by enabling it to manufacture cotton. Protection has reduced the price of steel rails, wire nails, tin plate and many other things.

The duty is paid by the foreigner. In no case would he sell as cheaply as he could, but as high. If he could sell a suit for $10, which the American could manufacture for $20, he would sell for $19.75 until the American was ruined and then shoot up prices. Although protection has greatly increased wages it has also reduced the cost of living. Although it has increased our home market it has increased also our foreign market. The rejoinders were notably good.

Plucky Farmers Are Outclassed

No Match For Carolina.

Last Tuesday's Game a Carolina Victory By the Decisive Score of Seven Runs to Only, Only, Three.

Carolina has at last shaken off her hoodoo and succeeded in playing A. and M. something other than a tie game. Friday afternoon saw the visitors downed in a glorious game by a score of 7 to 3. The game was intensely interesting throughout. Carolina jumped in the lead early in the game and soon had the game on easy street, but the interest never lagged. A. and M. with her never say die spirit rallied at the very last.

McCathran was in the box for the Farmers, and he created consternation in the ranks of the Varsity during the first part of the game. For three innings he pitched fine ball, but his brilliant work degenerated somewhat in the fourth inning. Thereafter he was hit freely.

Old Reliable Cunningham pitched his same, heady game and had the Farmers at his mercy throughout the game. He was touched up rather roughly in the ninth, but the game was safe.

The game was replete with features. Frank Thompson, of A. and M., caught the whole game with a broken finger. His gritty work should not go unnoticed. Knox and Staples fielded finely and Knox and Harris got four of the five hits assimilated off Cunningham's delivery. For Carolina the feature was the wonderful improvement in Carolina's team work over that of the Wake Forest game. The whole team played as a unit, bringing a smile to Coach Lawson's face. James, Thompson and Story fielded finely, while Rogers's all around work was most commendable.

The first three innings netted goose eggs for both sides, the batters going down in order. The fourth, however, was strictly our inning. James, being patient, was rewarded by a free pass. Story singled hard to right and went on to second and James to third when the left-fielder let the spheroid elude him. Then Patterson scored both James and Story by a well placed single over second. Patterson kept on to third. Thompson hit one that would have cleared the center-field fence in Greensboro by 20 feet, and stopped running at third, while Patterson crossed the pan. Thompson's swat was magnificent. Stem hit to second and Bull was run down between third and home and finally put out by his namesake, Bull Thompson, of A. and M. Fox made a beautiful catch of Hal Harris's foul fly. Rogers hit a line drive to right, which Jordan misjudged badly. The ball rolled to the right field fence and Rogers perched on third. Stem's run made four. Cunningham ended the merry-go-round by going out pitcher to first. Four runs, four hits.

Harris fanned the empty air. Knox grounded to Stem and Shuford struck the atmosphere.

Nothing happened in the fifth, but in the sixth something did. Stem and Rogers, having walked, were roosting on second and third, when Cunningham let loose with a triple to the left field fence, scoring both.

Farmer singled to left and attempted to steal second. Rogers's throw got away from Patterson and Farmer completed the circuit.

No further developments then until the ninth inning. Then after Knox had thrown out Cunningham while sitting on the ground, Calder singled hard to left stole second and scored on Story's double to right fielder.

A. and M. went us one better in her half. Harris hit to left field for two bases. Knox's single bounced over Thompson's head, giving A. and M.'s captain second and allowing Harris to score. Shuford went out Patterson to Stem. Thompson hit a hard one to left field that Thompson made a wonderful catch of. The ball went nearly to the fence. Knox came dashing in home after the catch. Fox ended the game by succumbing to Cunningham.

A motion on the part of Georgia to make it unanimous would appear to be in order.

Carolina failed to defeat the Norfolk professionals but she gave them a run for their money.

The A. and M. game was won, and won in proper style. South Carolina is the next on the docket, her defeat being scheduled for Friday.

Governor Glenn is to deliver the Commencement address to the graduating class. Ex-Senator Butler is to deliver the address at the inter-society banquet. Now if a joint discussion can only be arranged, the success of Commencement will be assured. Special trains would have to be run to Chapel Hill every fifteen minutes.

No class championship games have been played thus far, but the attendance on the practice games of Friday and Saturday afternoons was as large and more spirited than those which often are present at intercollegiate games. The spectators, having invested no money, felt under no compulsion to remain till the games were over, but came and went as they pleased.

This is one of those weeks when THE TAR HEEL could be issued semiweekly or triweekly, the superabundance of material making it necessary to ruthlessly cut and slash in order to preserve the proper proportion of things. The logical forerunner of a semi-weekly, however, is a paid editorial force, such as Virginia and other institutions of our class possess. Of this we shall probably have more to say later on.

If the playing of winning ball by a Varsity team entitles it to appreciative support by the students our Varsity is certainly proving its title. The record made thus far, of not losing a single game to a college team, is one scarcely surpassed in recent years, and gives ground for confident hope that Carolina will maintain her proud position, won last spring, of the Champion of the South.

And Mr. Jerome had to spoil it all by butting in and giving his views on the Southern race question. He is reported as having said at Greensboro that the amalgamation of the races is only a question of time. Some papers seem disposed to regard the utterance as a joke, but that construction is out of the question. The utterance was in very questionable taste no matter how you regard it. If Mr. Jerome really looks at it in that way, he will probably gain added insight into the unsolved insoluble ere he embarks for Britain.

For several weeks Dr. Mangum has been wanting to know, "Why don't you stir up old man 'Pick' and have a dipper put at the well?" All in good time, doctor. We've been otherwise engaged. When Commencement becomes an assured success, when class athletics gets on its feet, when the "student body" gives expression to the "college spirit" that is in it, when the Y. M. C. A. Building is "finished and furnished," when the Sunday morning breakfast bell becomes an institution—we'll turn our attention to less weighty things.

Besides, the price of tin dippers has gone up to ten cents, so it might be well to defer the purchase of one until the price is decreased or our income increased by the Legislature.

"I think THE TAR HEEL treated Mr. Wendling real horrid," is the complaint of a young lady admirer of Mr. Wendling.

Now, that's just our luck. We thought we handled the gentleman in question with kid gloved fingers, ranking him among the most enjoyed lecturers of the season. But if we reserve not to ourselves the right to pass our own judgment on the things we talk about we'll be in trouble before we know it. And the Puritan-Cavalier conception really was borrowed, you know. Likewise, the simile by which the influence of the Jewish race is compared to the Gulf Stream. This was the basis of an elaborately wrought out peoration in the lecture on "Saul of Tarsus" two years ago. It belongs, by right, to Vance's masterpiece, "The Scattered Nation."

So there!

As a never failing source of interesting information our modern newspapers are hard to beat. Last week we noted the case of a funeral to which interest was lent by the reserved seat feature. The next day a Greensboro daily contained this note, simple yet touching in its simplicity: "George Washington, drunk and down, fined $2."

Poor old George. He is only human, after all. Perhaps it is best that the paper dismissed his case with a sentence, casting over his infirmity the veil of silence.

A Charlotte paper in an account of a mixup between a newspaper man and another citizen, says of one of them: "He called him a liar and then applied an epithet to him." Evidently didn't know when to stop.

The Washington Post's account of a baseball contest says, "The visitors were outclassed and this

LOCAL NOTES.

—The Historical Society met Monday night in the History room. Dr. K. P. Battle discussed the Klu Klux uprisings antecedent to the impeachment of Governor Holden.

—The Di society Saturday night discussed the question as to whether summer ball playing should debar athletes from representing the University on athletic teams. The negative won and Mr. Duls made the best speech.

—Ex-Senator Butler has accepted the invitation tendered him by the joint committee of the two societies to deliver the annual address at the intersociety banquet Monday night of Commencement week. This fact is sufficient guarantee of an interesting time.

—Kittredge, the well known leaguer who has been coaching A. and M. says he has been catching in the Big Four (New York, Washington, Philadelphia and Baltimore) for nineteen years, beginning when he was nineteen years old.

—Dr. Hume spent Sunday and Monday in Burlington, where he preached Sunday morning and night. In the morning he spoke also to a class of young men and in the afternoon to the Young People's Union. Monday morning he addressed the children of the graded school.

—Chief Justice Clark, who presided over the Georgia debate, was entertained by Dr. and Mrs. C. Alphonso Smith; Mr. C. W. Tillett by Judge and Mrs. MacRae; Prof. Mordecai by Dr. and Mrs. C. L. Raper; and Dr. Hobbs by Prof. and Mrs. W. D. Toy.

—The charity and help department of the Epworth League took charge of the service at the Methodist church Sunday night. After a program of music, recitations, and a paper on orphanage work, a collection was taken to buy groceries to send as an Easter gift to the orphanage at Raleigh.

—Messrs. D. P. Stern and W. H. Swift, ex-intercollegiate debaters, dropped down from Greensboro Friday to attend the Georgia debate. Mr. Judge Buxton Robertson, '05, also dropped down safely from Graham. Mr. C. W. Miller, '05, stopped over Sunday and Monday with friends.

—The Georgia debaters, Messrs. Wilhite and Lee, arrived from Athens Thursday afternoon. An informal reception was tendered them in Pickard's dining hall after the debate. They left that night, driving to Durham through the country. Both are clever gentlemen who made numerous friends during their brief stay. Mr. Lee was editor-in-chief of the Red and Black last fall. The Georgia men say that Georgia will probably adopt our system of scrub debates next year.

—At the regular session of the Moot Court last Saturday morning Messrs. Chas. P. Tillett, of Charlotte, and D. P. Stern, of Greensboro, addressed the law students. Messrs. Capps, Allen, and Wheatley appeared for the prosecution of William Clark, contending for murder in the first degree. Messrs. Smoot, McDjarmid and Moon appeared for the defendant. The battle royal which packed the court room was between Messrs. McDjarmid and Capps. The defendant won, being acquitted.

Oh, Ye Lovers of Baseball!

The class game season is on. Friday afternoon the Freshman team met the scrub team in a practice game and were defeated by the score of 14 to 13. Everybody rooted for '09 till they apparently had the game cinched. Then the crowd let in on the Freshmen with the natural result that the scrubs scored 7 runs in the ninth inning, winning by a single tally.

Saturday afternoon from 2.30 to 3.30 the Freshmen defeated the Pharmacy team in an unofficial four inning contests. After this the Sophomores and Juniors did some track work resulting in a score of 26 to 10 in favor of the Sophomores. Heavy hitting and infinite both of errors and runs made were the features. The crowd was large, enthusiastic and thoroughly appreciative.

One of the Juniors, after the game, on hearing it said that he had failed to make an error indignantly denied that he had been so utterly out-classed in the error-making line as that.

A Rare Treat.

The University orchestra and the glee club, which start on their annual tour next Monday, will give an entertainment in the chapel to night at 8:30. This is something no one can afford to miss and something every one can thoroughly enjoy. Both the orchestra and the glee club have been practicing hard for weeks and are now in good form. The orchestra, especially, is stronger than last year. There are 14 voices in the glee club and 15 pieces in the orchestra. The admission is ridiculously low, 50 and 25 cents.

Entertainments will be given at Goldsboro, Monday night, Kinston, Tuesday night, Wilson, Wednesday, and Greenville Thursday. Three other dates will be added, closing with Greensboro and Winston.

Norfolk By a Run.

Carolina's team lost the first game of the season in Norfolk Saturday to the professional league team of that city. The score was 8 to 9. The game, of course, counts nothing and no one expected Carolina to win it, the close game being a pleasant surprise to us. In fact Carolina outhit the professionals 14 to 10, though the team failed to bunch hits as effectively as they. James scored in the first inning after the hit of Thompson, but, amid the hisses of the crowd, the umpire ruled it out, on the ground that he left the base before the ball was caught. This run would have tied the score. The tabulated score tells the story of the game in brief.

The course covering four years begins during the last week in September and continues until June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised. The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE

Undergraduate Department. The One Hundred and Forty-first Session will begin September 28, 1906. The course, which covers a period of four years, of eight and one-half months each, is eminently practical, and properly graded, beginning with laboratory instruction in the fundamental subjects, and concluding with a comprehensive system of clinical instruction, terminating in the Fourth Year with the assignment of students as clinical clerks in the Hospital.

A large proportion (at least 80 per cent) of the graduating classes secure positions as Resident Physicians in Hospitals.

Summer School for Graduates. The clinics and laboratories of this Department are open throughout the year for the benefit of those who wish to engage in graduate work. For those whose time is more limited, a comprehensive course is given, beginning this year May 14, and continuing for a period of six weeks. This course is designed to meet the needs of the practitioner.

Carolina 8, Bingham 1.

Carolina let down the boys from Bingham School, of Asheville, yesterday afternoon by the score of 8 to 1. The game was one-sided and rather uninteresting. Capt. Stem did the twirling for Carolina and did it to the Queen's taste, allowing only four hits and two of these being scratches. He was well supported, the team making only two errors. Bingham' single run was made in the seventh inning on a run in from third after the catch of an outfield fly. Harris, Bingham's slab artist, was touched up for thirteen hits, among them a three bagger each by Patterson and James, and two-baggers by Thompson and Story. Stem struck out 6 men, and gave no free-passes.

Earned runs, Carolina 5, Bingham 0. Stolen bases, Carolina 8. Left on bases, Carolina 10, Bingham 6. Bases on balls off Harris, 1. Umpire, Meade. Batteries, Stem and Rogers; Harris and Caraway.

The Track Athletes.

The preliminary trial for the annual dual track and field meet with Virginia was held Tuesday afternoon and the team that will represent Carolina Saturday in Charlottesville was selected. The successful candidates with their time and events are as follows:

- 100 yard, McNeil, 10, Davis, 10.4
- 220 yard, Davis, 25; McNeil, 25.4
- 440 yard, Winborne, S., 58.8, Pittman, 9.
- 880 yard, Bridgers, 2-23.2
- Mile, Hampden Hill, 5-20.
- High hurdles, Phillips, 17.6.
- Low hurdles, Phillips, 31.
- Shot Put, Pittman, 36 ft. 8 1/2 in.
- Hammer Throw, Dickson, 95 ft.
- Broad jump, Dunlap, 20 ft. 1 in.

The pole vaulting will be done by Crawford, and the High Jumping by McNeil, unless Singletary is in condition. With the exception of the hundred yard dash there was no exceptionally good time made, the majority of the men not coming up to previous records. The team is weaker than that of last year, owing to a number of losses. Virginia, however, is also weaker, by the loss of Council, Pollard, and Murphy.

Notice.

We wish to call attention to the advertisement of the Southern Life Trust Company of Greensboro. This company has formulated a splendid plan which requires the services of a number of first class young men who will be paid a regular salary, and the advertisement in this issue invites our good men to drop them a line.

This company is endorsed by the best men of the State and a number of University men are connected with it in profitable positions. It would be well to write at once and make your arrangements for the future.

Vol. 14.

UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA, CHAPEL HILL, N. C., THURSDAY, APRIL 19, 1906.

No. 26.

OFFICIAL ORGAN OF THE UNIVERSITY OF NORTH CAROLINA ATHLETIC ASSOCIATION.

CAROLINA VS. CAROLINA.

The Two Carolinas Contest on the Diamond in Chapel Hill and the Tar Heels Win.

North Carolina met South Carolina on the Chapel Hill diamond last Friday and lowered the colors of her sister State by a score of 14 to 3. The game dragged its length for two hours which were largely consumed in the making of runs and errors. Carolina (which is of course us) took Dubose's measure in the first inning and pummeled the spheroid for five hits and five runs. That was all, however, for the next seven innings, as far as we were concerned. The visitors got one in the second and two in the third and that was all as far as they were concerned. In the eighth Carolina resumed her batting streak and trotted around seven times, adding two in the ninth.

Patterson, in spite of the poor support, pitched a star game for Carolina allowing barely two hits. Perhaps it was because the boys thought it was no use to play hard that 6 errors were marked against us. Dubose, the visitors, twirler, was batted freely throughout until the eighth inning when he was injured by a collision with the first baseman and forced to retire in favor of Taylor. The feature for the visitors was the good work of Captain Heyward at second. Heavy batting was the feature for Carolina, Story and James leading.

Calder lead off by walking, stole second and tallied on James's two-bagger to left. Story smashed out a single, scoring James, stole second and scored on Stem's double, after Patterson and Cunningham had been retired second to first. Harris's single brought Stem in from third and Roger's bingle did likewise for Harris. Then with Rogers, Montgomery and Calder on bases, James went out second to first.

Swygert, for the Palmettoes, succeeded in getting hit by a pitched ball in the second inning, stole second and third and came in on Davis's single to left. In the fourth Belser reached first on the fumble of short stop, went to second when Wilds was hit by a pitched ball and scored, together with Wilds, when the second baseman fumbled Swygert's liner.

In the ninth, Calder, James, Story, Patterson, Cunningham, Stem [the first six up] and Montgomery added each a chalk mark to his credit. A double by Calder, singles by James, Story and Stem, aided by sundry errors and a base on balls, did the work. In the ninth Story's two-bagger brought in James from second, and Patterson's out, short to first, rendered a like service for Story.

The Claims of the Ministry

Rev. J. B. Scherer, president of Newberry College, preached the April University sermon Sunday night. Dr. Scherer stated that he had been asked to speak to the students upon the claims of the Christian ministry, and would therefore, choose no text. The best way to present its claims is to present its aims and the qualities it demands of those who enter upon it.

The ministry demands first of all that the minister be a man—one who will not succumb to the peculiar temptations of the ministry to unmanliness, neither hiding behind the minister's cloth nor confusing himself with his office. It demands that he be a religious man—not a religious man, for that counts nothing—but a man permeated with true spiritual life. It demands, further, that he be willing to minister to others rather than to be ministered to, to try to please, rather to be pleased. This is one of his great duties. If he fails to meet it, he is unfitted for his work.

The calling of the minister is the highest known to man. He who is seeking to answer the highest call that comes to him errs irretrievably if he leaves out of consideration this field of work.

A handsome new dipper, flashing and sparkling in the silvery sunlight, hangs at the college well.

The deciding game for the championship of the State will be played between Kittrell College, of Kittredge, and Shaw University on the Shaw campus this afternoon.

VICTORY THE SECOND.

Nineteen to Nothing Tells the Tale of the Merry-go-round in Favor of Us.

The second game with South Carolina College pulled off at Greensboro Saturday was—not a walkover but—a trot-around for the Tar Heel sluggers, the score at the ending of the ninth being indicated by "19" and beneath it a great round zero.

Cunningham pitched for Carolina and the two lonely swats allowed by him tell how well he pitched. Carolina gave him gilt edged support, making only a single error. Heyward was the Palmetto slab artist and the eighteen in Carolina's hit column tells another tale—a tale of merciless slugging of a raggedly supported pitcher. The slaughter was not long in beginning for in the very first inning, three complimentary passes, given to Calder, Patterson and Harris, coupled with a two base hit by James, and a single each by Stem and Rogers counted in four runs. The visitors failed to reach first.

North Carolina raised her stock two in the second. A hit by Calder scored Cunningham who had previously singled and gone to second on a wild throw to first. Calder took second on a wild pitch, "lifted" third surreptitiously and scored on Story's out at first. The visitors again failed to "make good."

In the third Harris "counted" on an error of third baseman, Rogers and Holmes on double by Calder and Calder on passed ball trot in. One more was scored by Story in the fourth, but the fifth and sixth were blanks. The seventh yielded five, Stem and "Cunny" raking in two baggers, while the eighth contributed three. Both sides appeared to be satisfied with the score and no change was made in it in the ninth. For more detailed information read the tabulated score.

THE NEW ATHLETIC RULES.

The Rules Governing Eligibility of Players, as Revised, Are Given in Full.

1. Before any student can become a member or a substitute member of any athletic team in the University, and take part in any intercollegiate contest, he must make application to the Committee on Athletics in the University and secure the endorsed approval of that Committee to his application. It shall be the duty of the Athletic Committee to have the executive officers of the University endorse such application to the effect that the applicant is a regular student of the University, registered within thirty days after the beginning of the fall session.

2. It shall be the duty of the Athletic Committee to inquire into and make a record of the athletic experiences of the applicant, and it shall be the duty of the applicant to appear before the Committee and answer on his honor such questions as the Committee may see fit to ask.

3. It shall be the duty of the Athletic Committee to require a pledge in writing of the applicant, certifying on his honor that he has never accepted directly or indirectly remuneration, compensatory gift, valuable consideration, or promise thereof, for his athletic services, and that he is in the proper and strict sense of the word an amateur player in collegiate athletic sports, before the Committee endorses his application.

4. No student of this University who has been a member or a substitute member of a baseball or football team at another college or university shall be permitted to become a member of either baseball or football team at this University unless and until he shall have been a student in residence at this University for at least five months.

5. No person whose name is in the faculty list or appears in the catalogue list of officers of instruction and administration of the University, and who received a remuneration therefrom, shall be a member of any athletic team representing the University.

6. Whereas a member of an athletic team of this University is a representative student and enjoys special honor in thus representing the University, this privilege shall be withheld from any student whose scholastic standing is discreditable.

7. Any student who has participated as a player on a college team in either football or baseball or track athletics, or all, for a period of four years shall thereafter be ineligible for such athletic contests of the University.

8. Struck out by Heyward, 0; by Cunningham, 7. Home runs, none. Three base hits, none. Two base hits, Story, Stem, Calder, James. Sacrifice hits, North Carolina, 3; South Carolina, 1. Hit by pitcher, James, Stem, Cunningham. Umpire, Mr. Lane, of North Carolina. Time of game, 1 hour and 45 minutes.

THE TAR HEEL publishes in full in today's issue the rules governing the eligibility of players to represent this institution on athletic teams in intercollegiate contests—as recently revised and as at present they stand. The fact that they have been changed has been known by the students for weeks and they have also been apprised of the general tenor and extent of the changes. The new rules were first read at a meeting of the advisory committee and later were explained to the students at a mass meeting.

This paper has not hitherto published them for the excellent reason that a copy had not been given it for publication. It refrained from commenting on them because one cannot discuss very intelligently unless his reader knows what he is talking about. They were not published, secondly, for the far better reason that the President was then in conference with a number of other institutions regarding the adoption of similar regulations there. The publication of them at that time might have handicapped his efforts by complicating the situation. Those negotiations have been closed, the last final touches have been added, and we present them herewith to our readers.

It would seem as if the familiar slogan of the anti-footballist: "Mend it or end it" might be applied to track athletics in this University. Not that that branch of our athletic sport is conducted in a manner dangerous to life, limb, liberty or the pursuit of happiness. But it is exceedingly doubtful if it is proving especially beneficial to either of these or to the reputation of the institution at large.

The defeat of the team by Virginia, who wholly outclassed us, is an illustration of this. But if anyone believes that Virginia had better material to draw from than Carolina had, he is badly mistaken. It is even said of the material in the meet last Saturday Carolina's was the equal of any.

The fault, then, must lie in the lack of adequate inducement offered to men to come out and in the lack of proper facilities for training the men when they have come out. As it is, perhaps a dozen and a half come out for a few days to fill a dozen places, there is little or no competition and the places go almost by default. The result is an untrained team of good material, foredoomed and predestined to defeat.

We are fully aware of the financial stringencies of the institution. We appreciate, also, the fact that at present track athletics cannot be self-sustaining, because no gate charges can be made. But these things do not affect the truth of the statement with which we began. They merely serve to show why these things are so. And if money is to be invested in this way at all enough should be put in to accomplish some results.

The fitting up of the athletic park with a suitable track, fitted both for practice and for intercollegiate meets with the admission charge feature should be a strong influence in increasing the emphasis laid on this much neglected branch of athletics. Let us hope that along with it will come all those other facilities for training, indispensable to the development of a winning team.

Says the Wake Forest Weekly:

"The Weekly recognizes the justice of THE TAR HEEL's claim for the State University. We agree that it has outgrown 'Chapel Hill' and should be called North Carolina. The Freshman knew no better, but the editorial writer did. It was due to thoughtlessness, and not to lack of respect for the institution. We are not too narrow to take pride in the growth, or better, in the development of the State University. Its record for the past few years in athletics, with the attempts it has made toward the purification of athletics, together with the up-to-date educational advantages which it offers in every way, have placed it in the front rank of Southern universities. Henceforth it shall be North Carolina and not Chapel Hill."

Gracefully said! The Weekly interpreted our remark rather more seriously than we intended, but its kind words are appreciated none the less.

Today's game will give the students and people of Chapel Hill their first opportunity in years to see a real professional team play on the University diamond. Come out and let's see if Carolina's fast team, even though amateur, cannot show them a thing or two about ball playing.

The football team of the University of Virginia has already begun spring practice in anticipation of next fall. This is somewhat reassuring to those who had begun to fear that they had seen their last game of college football.

The trouble with the modern musical entertainment is that it works the audience as hard as the performers.

Add three more to our string.

—Dr. James D. Bruner addressed the members of the Philanthropic society Saturday night, 7th, on the life of Henry Clay. The speech was an enlightening and inspiring character study.

—Mr. J. R. Hoffman walked off with the decision in the Di society debate. The question was whether or not Arizona and New Mexico should have been admitted as separate States. The affirmative won.

—Teams purporting to be those of the Sophomore and Senior classes played ping pong on the diamond Monday afternoon in a practice game. The resulting score was 19 to 8 in favor of the Sophomores.

—Coach Lawson is doing some artistic work in the trophy room in the gymnasium. Above the picture of each winning team baseballs or footballs are hung, each with the result of some important game painted on it by hand. Dr. Lawson is doing the painting also.

—The Atlantic and North Carolina Company announce that the Atlantic Hotel, Morehead City, N. C., one of the most popular resorts on the Atlantic Coast, will be open for guests June 15th, 1906, under new management, and that the hotel has been repainted and repaired and put in first-class condition. For rates and reservations, apply by letter to Manager Atlantic Hotel, Morehead City, N. C.

—Scores of students left Friday and Saturday to spend the holidays at home. The number on the Hill Sunday and Monday was appreciably smaller than usual, reminding one slightly of Christmas. Monday night and Tuesday they came trooping back in, each one fully persuaded that everyone else had gone home or that everyone knew of his going and had missed him. The old campus, however, though time had wrought numerous changes in it since Friday was, nevertheless easily recognizable. "Didn't you leave the Hill?" asked a returned Freshman of another student, with a rising inflection. At the negative answer a look of the most bewildered astonishment spread his countenance. Gradually it melted away into a look of the most supreme and heart-telt pity which his innocent young face could express.

St. Johns Defeated

Carolina won her third and last game of the Easter trip by defeating St. Johns, of Maryland, at Winston in a fast, exciting game by the score of 7 to 6. Patterson twirled for Carolina and held the visitors down well until near the last when they began to connect with his delivery too frequently to be pleasant. Carolina had it all her own way at first, but by the end of the sixth St. John's had brought the score up to 7 to 4.

When she added two in the ninth by a home run with one man on base, and this was followed by a two bagger, the excitement grew intense and Cunningham relieved Patterson after two men were down. A Marylander was thrown out trying to steal home and the game was over.

No tabulated score in full was kept and the papers contained only glittering generalities, making a satisfactory report impossible.

The score by innings:
Carolina 2 0 1 4 0 0 0 0 0 7 8 3
St. John's 1 0 0 0 1 2 0 0 2 6 8 4

Batteries: Patterson, Cunningham and Rogers; Reynolds and Rowse, Empire, Lane, of Carolina.

The Yanagans Today.

"Are you going to see the Yanagans this afternoon?" This is the query on all sides this morning. And the answer of course is "Yes".

Much curiosity has been excited by the unknown and rather suggestive name on our baseball schedule and rife rumors have been afloat. Some assert that the players are of the gentler sex and swear that Manager Miller told them so. Others aver that they are of the Ethiopian race, giving the same authority; while yet others have combined both theories.

Be it known, however, [this is a secret between us, you understand] that the Yanagans are Caucasian male players, and professionals at that. Really, truly, professionals. They belong to a Baltimore club, plays league teams and have been putting up a fast article of ball. You'll miss something if you are not on the field this afternoon.

Field Day.

Field day exercises were held yesterday afternoon and after close and interesting contests the following prizes were awarded the victors.

The course covering four years begins during the last week in September and continues until June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised.

The annual announcement giving full particulars will be mailed on application.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE

Undergraduate Department. The One Hundred and Forty-first Session will begin September 28, 1906. The course, which covers a period of four years, of eight and one half months each, is eminently practical, and properly graded, beginning with laboratory instruction in the fundamental subjects, and concluding with a comprehensive system of clinical instruction, terminating in the Fourth Year with the assignment of students as clinical clerks in the Hospital.

A large proportion (at least 80 per cent) of the graduating classes secure positions as Resident Physicians in Hospitals.

Summer School for Graduates. The clinics and laboratories of this Department are open throughout the year for the benefit of those who wish to engage in graduate work. For those whose time is more limited, a comprehensive course is given, beginning this year May 14, and continuing for a period of six weeks. This course is designed to meet the needs of the practitioner.

For further information, apply to the Dean of the Medical Department, University of Pennsylvania, Philadelphia.

7 to 3, 3 to 0; 6 to 1, 9 to 0. Such is the national game.

At any rate Chapel Hill gets the deciding game of the series for the Championship of the South.

Since thirty issues constitute a volume of this paper, and since, according to custom, a double issue will be got out after Commencement, next week's will be the last issue before Commencement.

The Washington Post account said: "The Carolina team proved themselves clearly the best team that has played on the Richmond diamond this year. Stem made the only error charged to them and this was more than atoned for by the otherwise great game he put up." And Harvard played there.

The result of the two games with our old rival Virginia was not what it might have been, but it will make the final contest at Chapel Hill much more interesting than it would otherwise have been. Virginia received a sound drubbing at the hands of our team in Richmond, but she paid us back royally in Charlottesville. The outcome of the second game is especially to be regretted, not because we were defeated, but because of the disagreement with the umpire, which resulted in the forfeiture of the game. It was a disagreement, however, not with Virginia but with the umpire, and should in no way disturb the good feeling between the two institutions.

The painting expedition Monday night in celebration of the victory over Virginia furnished an illustration of how college patriotism can be wrongly manifested. The score, along with other expressions more or less superfluous, was raggedly painted on the various buildings to their disfigurement. The consequence was that these will have to be scraped off and the buildings put in shape again. This involves an expenditure of two hundred dollars, coming, we presume, out of the damage fund.

After the baseball season of signal victories in 1903 a number of scores were painted on the west end of the South building so neatly that no one has had the heart to remove them. There have been numerous scores since then which have deserved perpetuation, among them two notable football and three baseball victories, but no one of sufficient skill has accepted the task. We understand that if the job were taken hold of by some one who knows how, as in the first case, and the work neatly done, the scores would be allowed to remain as inspirations to future teams and eye-openers to visitors as well as to future generations of Freshmen.

A. and M. Gets Even.

A. and M. administered to Carolina the first defeat of the season in a fast game in Raleigh Saturday. For the first six innings it was a shut-out for both sides, but one in the seventh and two in the eighth for the Farmers made the score three to nothing.

Patterson was in the box for Carolina and pitched a star game. The three hits registered against him speak volumes for his pitching and for the fielding of the team. The two lonesome swats of the Carolinians tells a similar story for McCathran, the Farmer slab artist, and for the Farmer team. Only three Tar Heels succumbed to his curves, but they were unable to hit him effectively.

In the seventh inning Knox, for the Agriculturalists, reached first on Calder's muff of a fly in left. He was stealing second when the umpire called the fourth ball on Farmer, entitling Knox to second. Rogers, seeing Knox stealing, threw to second. Neither Montgomery nor Story was expecting it so the ball went to center field, while Knox raced home. The next three up went down, leaving Farmer lonely on first.

The eighth yielded two more. Harris walked and batted to Montgomery, who failed to squeeze it, Harris going to third and Eskridge stealing second. Then Thompson broke loose with a two bagger to left, scoring both.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
A. and M. 0 0 0 0 1 2 x 3 3 1
Summary—Struck out, by McCathran 3, by Patterson 7; earned runs, A. and M. 1; bases on balls, off McCathran 1, off Patterson 3, three base hit, Knox; two base hit, Thompson; umpire, Noble; attendance 900.

Sophs Beat Juniors.

The first class championship game of the season was pulled off Saturday afternoon between the reputable Juniors and the more reputable Sophomores. When the umpire, Fox, said, "You're out!" to the last man up in the ninth inning the score stood 10 to 1—and the "1" was in the Junior column. The Sophomores completed the circuit four times in the first inning. In the second inning Farabee electrified the Junior supporters by smashing out a home run to right field. This was the second of the season, the first being Calder's line drive in the Lafayette game.

The other features were the fielding of Dunlap for the Sophomores, the hitting of the Sophomores and the errors of the Juniors.

Sophs 4 0 1 4 0 0 1—10 11 4

LOCAL NOTES.

—The Juniors and Seniors will meet on the diamond this afternoon at 3.30.

—The Sophomore class appointed a committee to pass on the matter of restricting the right to wear the class numerals.

—Dr. K. P. Battle left yesterday morning for Raleigh to attend the wedding of his niece, Miss Lewis to Dr. I. H. Manning last night.

—At a meeting of the Junior class Monday afternoon it was unanimously voted to adopt a class pin. The design selected, while different from that of any other organization on the Hill, is a very handsome one.

—Major H. A. London, of Pittsboro, Mr. J. W. Fries, of Durham, and Col. Benehan Cameron, of Raleigh, constituting the visiting committee of the Board of Trustees, visited the University the latter part of last week, investigating the needs of the institution.

—Mr. John Nolen, a well known landscape architect of Cambridge, Mass., has been secured for an illustrated lecture on "Outdoor Art." It will be delivered in Gerrard Hall Wednesday, May 9th at 8 o'clock. Students can obtain tickets without charge at University Drug Company.

—The Phi society at its last meeting reopened the Phillipine question: "Resolved, That the best interests of our country are opposed to the permanent occupation of any portion of the eastern hemisphere." The negative triumphed and Mr. Hester was awarded the palm.

—Up in the Di society Saturday night it was it worded this way: "Resolved, That the action of the State Department in sending a delegate to the Morocco Conference will prove beneficial to our European commerce." The negative won and Mr. Beam made the best speech.

—The Y. M. C. A. is making a special effort to get out the University hand book earlier than usual. Already a good number of advertisements have been secured. The copy will be sent to the printer before Commencement and the books are expected to be ready for mailing in the early summer.

—Continuous reports were received of the Richmond and Charlottesville games, and there will be a report of the Georgetown game Saturday. The continuous report is the next best thing to the game itself and the reports are being well patronized. Manager Gray is in charge.

—The glee club and orchestra returned Sunday from their trip east. They gave entertainments at Raleigh, Newbern, Kinston, Goldsboro, Wilson and Washington. They report a most enjoyable time, a most hearty reception and a most successful trip. They will probably leave next week for a western trip, visiting Greensboro, Winston and Charlotte.

—The Seniors proved that they were no "cheap guys" by having fashioned for them new seats of passing fine material and more prepossessing appearance than those which perished in the bonfire of the bad post-grads. For the first time they gathered 'neath the Poplar Tuesday night and made merry with their songs.

—Manager D'Alemberte, Capt. Pittman and Messrs. L. V. Dunlap, Davis and Winborne, who, with Pittman, ran in the mile relay race Saturday returned Sunday from Charlottesville. The relay was against St. John's and was lost by a foot and a half. Capt. Pittman again won the shot put from Virginia, throwing it 37 feet 6 1-2 inches, against 33 feet by Virginia.

—The colored man with the bucket patiently scrubbing at the walls of the buildings was the familiar and customary sight on Tuesday morning. "N. C. 6, Va. 1." "Mink and Freddy Forever" were some of the patriotic and enlightening phrases, in ragged letters, which greeted the eye. The authorities thought the work not sufficiently artistic, hence the scrubbing act.

At a student mass meeting Friday afternoon the question of allowing Virginia to count V. M. I. a "prep" school in the application of the four year and five months rules, in games with this institution, was submitted by the faculty. Monday night by unanimous vote the students declined to make an exception of V. M. I. A telegram to a student from the president of the S. I. A. A. declaring that the S. I. A. A. considers V. M. I. a college, was in evidence also.

—The reading by Prof. Slodd, of the chair of English in Wake Forest, before the Modern Literature Club last Thursday night was a highly enjoyable treat. The meeting was held in the chapel owing to the large attendance. Prof. Slodd, besides his reading, talked entertainingly and humorously. Prof. Slodd was invited by the club in pursuance of its policy of keeping in touch with with the creators of literature, especially in this section.

—The Shakspeare Club met Tuesday night. The following papers were read: "Editions of Shakspeare Inspected and Discussed"—Dr. Thomas Hume. "The Text of Hamlet. Disputed Passages Reviewed"—Mr. J. B. Palmer. "Fratricide Punished, the German Hamlet. How is it Related to Shakspeare's Plays?"—Mr. John Wood. "Does a Study of the Sonnets and the Plays Show any Relation Between Them and Reflect Light on the Personal Element in Shakspeare's Work?"—Mr. R. M. Brown. "An Examination of the Marks of Lyly; Influence on Shakspeare's Comedies"—Dr. Hume. The papers read excited interesting discussion.

DEPARTMENT OF MEDICINE

Undergraduate Department. The One Hundred and Forty first Session will begin September 28, 1906. The course, which covers a period of four years, of eight and one-half months each, is eminently practical, and properly graded, beginning with laboratory instruction in the fundamental subjects, and concluding with a comprehensive system of clinical instruction, terminating in the Fourth Year with the assignment of students as clinical clerks in the Hospital.

A large proportion (at least 80 per cent) of the graduating classes secure positions as Resident Physicians in Hospitals.

Summer School for Graduates. The clinics and laboratories of this Department are open throughout the year for the benefit of those who wish to engage in graduate work. For those whose time is more limited, a comprehensive course is given, beginning this year May 14, and continuing for a period of six weeks. This course is designed to meet the needs of the practitioner.

The Aftermath.

A TAR HEEL man was strolling along several miles from the village the other day when there burst upon him like an apparition a hatless and collarless student, his hair dishevelled, his eyes lighted with a gleam of desperation.

"Where—where is he? Is he gone?" he panted.

"Gone! Quite so!" the stroller, comprehending, said soothingly.

"Heaven be praised!" ejaculated the other, sinking loosely to the earth. "For seven days I have roamed these woods and no human face has greeted me till yours. Seven nights I have spent in Battle's Park. Seven days I have gone without food—"

"There, there, never mind," said the stroller gently. "It's all over now for another month at least. The Collier's Weekly collecting agent left on the morning train."

Fresh Defeat Sophs.

In the best class game seen here in several years the Freshmen defeated the Sophomores yesterday afternoon by the score of 4 to 3. Gaylord, although several errors were charged against him, really won the game. His two-bagger in the eighth scored two runs, putting the Freshmen in the lead. Graham also scored two runs on a timely single. Hassell, for the Sophs, drove a beauty between second and first and romped home on it. Both pitchers did good work, but Sudderth was more fortunate in keeping hits scattered. The game was characterized by quick fielding on the part of the Sophs and timely hitting by the Freshmen.

Catholic Curves Captivate Carolina—The Game Might Have Been Won But For Errors.

Georgetown took the last of the games on Carolina's Northern trip in Washington Saturday by the score of 4 to 1. Cunningham pitched his usual good game. The contest was close until the eighth inning when Georgetown cinched the game.

With one out in the first inning James got a free pass and stole second. Story failed to connect, but Cunningham rapped a grounder past first, and James returned to the starting point. This was Carolina's single tally.

Georgetown completed the circuit for the first time in the fourth. With Smith down, Mahoney was passed and Simon skied to center. Mudd singled to left and Monohan followed with a safety in same direction, which scored Mahoney, but Mudd was out at second on a return throw from home.

In the sixth with two out, Harris dropped Simon's high fly over second. The Georgetown man stole second, and counted on a pair of errors by Harris in attempting to field Mudd's chance.

In the eighth Capt. Smith led off with a clean home run smash, which rolled by the track in the deep left, Mahoney singled to center, and reached third where Hanes fumbled. On Simon's fly to center Mahoney came home. Carolina was in the dust of defeat once more.

DR. MANNING WEDS.

A Quiet Yet Beautiful Home Affair in Raleigh Last Wednesday.

A social event of particular interest to University people took place last Wednesday night in Raleigh when Dr. Isaac Hall Manning, of Chapel Hill, and Miss Martha Battle Lewis, daughter of Dr. and Mrs. Richard Henry Lewis, of Raleigh, were married. The News and Observer, 26th, said:

The wedding was a quiet but lovely home event, and there were in attendance only intimate friends and relatives. At Cloverdale, the suburban home of Dr. and Mrs. Lewis, the decorations in the room in which the wedding took place were in white and green, ferns, palms and smilax being used. The bay window before which the wedding took place was artistic in its decorations.

There were no bridal attendants, and for the happy event the bride was gowned in white silk, her bouquet being of bride's roses. After the wedding, refreshments were served and later Dr. and Mrs. Manning left for Washington and points north. After their trip they will go their future home at Chapel Hill.

The bride is a charming and talented young woman, and is highly esteemed by a large circle of friends. Dr. Manning is the son of the late Hon. John Manning, of Chapel Hill, long-time professor of law at the University, and is the dean of the Medical Department at Chapel Hill of the University of North Carolina.

The Juniors Laughed Last.

The Juniors defeated the Seniors in the game of the season last Thursday afternoon, the score being 16 to 15. The umpire said, "Play ball," some time in the neighborhood of four o'clock, and the shades of evening were rapidly falling around (without injuring anybody, however) when, in the ninth inning Houck crossed the home plate for the sixteenth and the winning run for the Juniors.

The game started off like a walk-over for the Davie Poplarites, having at one stage a lead of five runs. But the Juniors kept on playing and the crowd kept on leaving, a large portion making their exit at the sound of the supper bell. The few truly faithful on both sides, mingled with a sprinkling of Freshmen, Sophs and law students, remained and rooted to the last.

Crawford described the curves for the rope descenders, holding the Juniors to twelve scattered hits and sixteen scattered runs. He was accorded gilt-edged support, only eighteen errors being made behind him. Brinkley pitched six innings for the Juniors, giving way to Hutchison.

STUDENT CONFERENCE.

A Most Important Gathering up in Mountains, Where Balm Breezes Blow.

Every summer for the past thirteen years a large number of picked men from the Southern colleges and universities have met for ten days in the mountains of North Carolina in Southern student conferences of the Young Men's Christian Associations. This conference has been a powerful factor in moulding the lives of the men who attended, and in shaping the voluntary religious activities of Southern students. Attendance on at least one of these conferences during the four years in college is regarded by many Christian students as a very necessary part of their education.

This year the conference will meet from June 15, June 25, inclusive, at the Asheville Farm School, near Swannanoa, on an elevation commanding a magnificent view of some of the most imposing scenery in the Western North Carolina mountains.

The well known purpose of the conference is to deepen the spiritual life of students, to train them for leadership in organized Christian work in their institutions, and to open up to them larger opportunities for service in life. The speakers, teachers and leaders have been chosen because of their especial fitness in life, scholarship and experience to help college men grapple with problems which they are meeting, both in their own lives and in their associations. Prof. Edward J. Bosworth, of Obeslin University, Mr. Robert E. Speer, the great Princeton scholar and athlete and Rev. John Timothy Stone, of Baltimore, are among the leaders this summer.

The session of the conference are held each morning and evening. The afternoons are devoted to athletics and other forms of recreation. A series of baseball games, a track meet, and a tennis tournament will be "pulled off" to determine the conference championship of the South.

In 1904, Carolina had a delegation of fourteen men, which included a baseball team that won the championship. Last year Davidson College won the championship in baseball and V. P. I. came second.

This year the Association hopes to have about twenty men at the conference. Of course it will be a pleasure to have a baseball, a track and a tennis team that will win athletic honors for the University and bring back the handsome banners offered. But more important is the fact that the Y. M. C. A. work for next year will need conference trained men to work out the new problems that will arise because of the building and the enlargement of the work, and to make the association work the strong, vitalizing agency in the University that it ought to be.

Catholics Get Even.

St. John's College evened up things Thursday by defeating Carolina on the Annapolis grounds by the score of 5 to 1. The first game between the two teams this season was won by Carolina 7 to 6 in Winston on Easter Monday. It was an evening up also from another standpoint: St. John's lost to Carolina in Annapolis last year by the same score 5 to 1. Although the score this year was a good deal of a surprise there was no special reason why it should have been, for St. John's this year is a notably fast aggregation, downing Trinity twice on the Durham diamond.

Carolina started the scoring early, but stopped equally early, being shut out after the first inning. Rouse, the Marylander southpaw, was at his best and, backed by a speedy infield, he held down the Tar Heels well.

The Catholic boys didn't get started until the second, when they tallied one, but they kept the good work up till the last, adding one or two whenever the opportunity offered itself. In the third inning Rouse knocked out a clean home run, the longest hit of the game.

Score by innings: R. H. E.
North Carolina 1 0 0 0 0 0 0 1 5 1
St. John's 0 1 1 0 2 0 1 0 x 5 7 5
Batteries: Patterson and Rogers; Reynolds and Rouse.

Johns Hopkins Downed.

Carolina defeated Johns Hopkins 9 to 5 last Friday in Baltimore. It was a mysterious sort of game, somehow, and we wouldn't make affidavit that it was ever really played. It appears that THE TAR HEEL is the first paper to record it, even the Associated Press allowing it to slip by unnoticed. The only score kept was of the Carolina men.

Seniors Downed Again.

The Seniors met their Waterloo Saturday when they faced the Sophs on the diamond. It was a tragedy, with lots of slaughter, in nine acts—a cumulative tragedy, mathematically expressed by "22 to 9".

Four hits which netted a home run each, whatever you choose to call them, by Hassell, Dunlap, Rand and Singletary, combined with the playing of Fountain at short and Dunlap in center was the feature for the Sophs.

It's rather late to make the suggestion, but if it had been seen to that the class games came off at different hours from the continuous reports, the athletic association would have stood a better show of coming out even or of making some money.

This issue, with the exception of the Commencement number, completes the fourteenth volume of this paper. The TAR HEEL bunch will now proceed to take a breathing spell. We hope you are sorry, but a strict regard for truth forbids us to say that we are.

If any anyone feared that the abolition of gate receipts struck a blow at interest in class games he no longer thinks that way, if he was at the Freshman-Sophomore game last Wednesday. Class loyalty was much in evidence, both before and after the game.

Speak softly. A deep, dark plot of the Seniors has been unearthed. It is whispered that they intend to have all the members of the Faculty baseball team ruled off on the clause which forbids the receiving of compensation for any services from the University. This accomplished, it is supposed that the game will belong to the Seniors, 9 to 0.

The Press Association of the University is interesting itself in a matter of real import to the University: the devising of ways and means to induce a larger number of students to take up the work of corresponding with their county newspapers. Practically every paper would be glad to have this addition to its news service, and the benefit to the University would be incalculable. No one is going to a college of which he has never heard. Advertising, "as John A. says," is as essential to the success of a college as to the success of any business enterprise.

The team of University of Virginia, an ancient and worthy rival for leadership in the Southern educational world, is the welcome guest of the University today.

The deciding game of the championship series is scheduled to take place on the Carolina diamond this afternoon.

Judging from the previous scores today's game will go to the team that works hardest for victory. If Carolinians believe (and to a man, they believe it) that it is in our team to win, each one must contribute his share. If the past has shown anything at all it has shown this: our team, when supported, plays twice as good ball as it otherwise plays. It was the lack of such support in the first six innings which all but lost the Wake Forest game, it was its presence in the last few innings which tided us over the crisis, it was its absence which allowed the game with the Yanigan club to slip between our fingers. It is for us: the team and the students, to say who shall win today's game.

There has been nothing more significant in its way this year than the changed attitude of the students towards Commencement. Perhaps it is because the average individual has seriously thought about it and realized the folly of staying nine months at a place and then, just when he is in a position to enjoy himself, of rushing off, rather than wait a day or so to attend the most significant of the events of the college year. Perhaps he is afraid that it will make him feel like a "quitter." Perhaps it is because it is in the air that everyone else is going to stay, he wishes to be in the swim, and there is no night train to leave on. Whether only one or all of these considerations enter into the case the fact remains that the average individual (and what he does, seven hundred do) is going to stay.

No effort has been spared to make the coming Commencement eclipse all former ones in interest, entertainment and profit. Instead of the usual preliminary wait of several days things will begin to happen with bewildering rapidity, as soon as you have come off your last examination. Among these there will be an entertainment by the glee club Friday night and probably the Senior-Faculty ball game on Saturday afternoon. The coterie of speakers, for the various occasions, both individually and collectively, is one of unusual brilliancy, able to shine at any occasion.

This primarily is a student's University. If it is not a kindergarten, but a gathering of self-governing, responsible men. It should be, it is, a matter of individual pride to see that so far as concerns anything we can do by attendance and zealous participation, the Commencement of 1906 shall go down in history as marking a new and more glorious era in University Commencements.

The Office Holders.

The Press Association met Monday night and elected the following officers for next year:

Mr. S. H. Farabee, president.
Mr. J. R. Shull, vice president.
Mr. James A. Gray, Jr., secretary.
Mr. W. D. McLean, treasurer.

LOCAL NOTES.

—A new definition for "college spirit" — "Bo-he."

—Dr. Hume preached Sunday morning and evening at the First Baptist church of Winston.

—The Musical Association will give an entertainment, with revised program, in the Chapel tonight. The admission is 25 and 50 cents.

—The Economics Society held its last meeting Tuesday night. The subject discussed was the effect which our economic life will have on our future politics.

—The Phi question ran thus: "Resolved, That the United States should subsidize her merchant marine." The committee reported affirmatively and in favor of Mr. Umstead as best speaker.

—Dr. J. D. Bruner spoke to the Y. M. C. A. Tuesday night. His subject was, "The Kingdom of God." The Kingdom, he said, is here on earth, in us and among us. To realize it we must work and be faithful to the end for which we were created.

—Studies in English Syntax, a new work by Dr. Smith, has just appeared from the press of Ginn and Co., Boston. Language Lessons and Grammar, also by him, will appear from the press of the B. F. Johnson Publishing Co., Richmond, Va., the latter part of May.

—The president of the athletic association asks THE TAR HEEL to announce a mass meeting for tomorrow afternoon at 2:30. The purpose of the meeting will be to decide on the advisability of holding the fall elections of officers, editors, etc., this spring.

—The Di society analysed President Roosevelt's pet panacea of governmental rate fixing: "Resolved, That Congress should confer on the Inter-State Commerce Commission full power to regulate railway rates." The negative won and Mr. Stephenson made the best speech.

—One of the fastest and most important games of the entire season will take place in Chapel Hill Saturday, the contesting teams being Carolina and Guilford. Guilford has one of the best teams in the State, having defeated or broken even with every team she has played. It will take hard work to win. But win we must.

—Rev. H. F. Laflamme, of Canada, who was for several years a missionary to India, is now visiting the Southern colleges for the Student Volunteer Movement and will address the students in Gerrard Hall next Sunday night. It is understood that Mr. Laflamme is a speaker of ability and that a strong address may be expected.

—Dr. Smith has accepted invitations to make commencement addresses at Bethel, Pitt Co., May 3; at Winston, May 18; at Burlington, May 25. He will dedicate the new Carnegie Library in Greensboro, May 7, and address the North Carolina Teachers' Assembly which will meet in Raleigh, June 13. From June 19 to July 7 he will lecture before the Summer School of the South in Knoxville, Tenn.

—Placards posted around the campus affirm that the Yackety Yacks, not the "staccato" kind which will resound from the grand stand and bleachers this afternoon, but the rolls of parchment, will be here Saturday, but will not be delivered until all the space is paid for. This is an inducement for those indebted to pay up, for just think of all those brilliant literary productions and all those handsome photographs locked up in the Chapel Hill express office for lack of money to take them out, so near and yet——The preliminary contest to select the Commencement Orators of the Senior Class will take place Saturday morning in the Di hall. The judges are Dr. C. Alphonso Smith, Dr. Geo. Howe and Dr. Alexander. The contestants are Messrs. B. B. Blackwelder, subject: "The South as a Field for Romance;" Mr. W. R. Jones, subject: "The American Citizen;" Mr. J. A. Rudisell, subject: "The Emancipation of the Working Man;" Mr. P. E. Seagle, "The Opportunities for the College Man in the South;" Mr. William Arbitration, the Goal of Modern Civilization." These are all who have entered the race thus far.

—Chapel Hill has been free thus far from earthquakes and eruptions. Even the ominous look of the Volcano (with a capital V) which lifts its towering peak only four miles away has not sufficed to terrify the populace. The plague of the locusts, however, in a revised edition is upon us in the unprecedented swarm of bugs which make their appearance at night, cheerfully accepting the gleam of your electric light as a special invitation to them. Throw open your windows and seat yourself by your light determined calmly and philosophically to ignore them — and do it if you can. Close your window with a resounding bang and the tune they will play upon the panes from the outside — is tuneful. Bug mass meetings are nightly held at every entrance light, every street corner lamp, and hundreds assemble. "I've given over studying," quoth a youth recently, "and declared war against the insect kingdom. Thirty-eight unsuspecting light seekers did I hurl into a yawning eternity, in my room in the space of a single hour. There lie they now, piled in a funeral heap, mute witnesses of the uncertainty of life."

Philologists Meet.

The Philological Club met Tuesday night. The following subjects were discussed:

"Variations in the Text of Livy 1, xvii, 1—Mr. George Howe."

"Distributive Phrases in the King James Version"—Mr. J. M. Grainger.

"Shakespeare in France: A Review"—Mr. Thomas Hume.

The course covering four years begins during the last week in September and continues until June. A preliminary training in natural science is of great advantage. All the classes are divided into small sections for recitations, laboratory and clinical bedside instruction. Students are admitted to advanced standing after passing the requisite examinations. The successful completion of the first year in any College or University recognized by the Regents of the State of New York as maintaining a satisfactory standard is sufficient to satisfy the requirements for admission which have lately been raised.

Undergraduate Department. The One Hundred and Forty-first Session will begin September 28, 1906. The course, which covers a period of four years, of eight and one-half months each, is eminently practical, and properly graded, beginning with laboratory instruction in the fundamental subjects, and concluding with a comprehensive system of clinical instruction, terminating in the Fourth Year with the assignment of students as clinical clerks in the Hospital.

A large proportion (at least 80 per cent) of the graduating classes secure positions as Resident Physicians in Hospitals.

Summer School for Graduates. The clinics and laboratories of this Department are open throughout the year for the benefit of those who wish to engage in graduate work. For those whose time is more limited, a comprehensive course is given, beginning this year May 14, and continuing for a period of six weeks. This course is designed to meet the needs of the practitioner.

The Southern Championship.

Probably at no time within recent history of college baseballdom has the claim to the title of Southern champion been in such a state as it is at present. It has been a notable fact that the teams representing Southern colleges and universities have, for the past few years, been unusually strong. No team has successfully invaded Georgia; and yet no Georgia team has been able to win enough important games to substantiate its title to championship honors.

The A. and M. College team has lost a game to Carolina and Virginia, in the latter case by a heavy score, winning, however, one game each from Carolina and Georgetown. The Catholics in turn have beaten the University; and are not scheduled to play Virginia. Virginia twice defeated Georgia—whom Carolina does not play—and decisively won from A. and M. The other Virginia colleges, it is understood, are not in the race; and since Virginia twice downed Georgia and Carolina repeated the dose to South Carolina, these two institutions have been eliminated. The A. and M. College, while its team has been playing brilliant ball lately, met so many disastrous defeats earlier in the season that it may be fairly counted out of the running.

The title to championship honors then, has narrowed down to Carolina and Virginia. They are the only two institutions which have a series of three games to decide it. Virginia's title this morning is a little the better, though Carolina defeated Lafayette, who trounced the Virginians. At best, it is close figuring, and today's game means much to Carolina, much to Virginia, and much to Southern athletics.

Concerning Football.

To the Editor of The Tar Heel:

I noticed in The TAR HEEL a few days ago that the Virginia football team was already going through spring practice. Since this is a decided advantage to any team, would it not be a good idea for the captain of our next fall's football team to be putting his men through a similar training?

LAST ACT IN DRAMA

One Hundred and Eleventh Commencement Goes into History.

A Strong Baccalaureate Sermon by Dr. H. P. Dewey, of Brooklyn, N. Y. Eloquent Sermon Before Y. M. C. A. by Dr. S. C. Mitchell—Alumni Address by Shepard A. Bryan, of Atlanta, a Great Effort

Sunday morning, and the campus as if awakening from the slumber of the two days previous, was alive with people. Gathered round the well, the center of the gathering, were thirty-nine Seniors, clad for their first time in the scholastic garb of cap and gown, the emblem of presumed culture. None were more conscious of this fact than they, and they busied themselves with questionings, "Is my cap on straight?", "Don't I look cute?" and other important matters.

At 10:30 came the word to "Fall in". The unsteady group fell into line in double file, the doors of the crowded chapel were thrown open, and the Commencement of 1906 was on.

Professor H. H. Williams conducted the devotional part of the service. After the singing of a hymn, he offered an eloquent and enlightened prayer for the graduating class. Dr. Venable then presented to the audience Dr. Harry P. Dewey, pastor of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y.

He chose for his text: St. John I, iii:5. "And ye know that he was manifested to take away your sins, and in Him is no sin."

Despite the wide separation which the barriers of position, circumstance, race and locality effect in the lives of the various elements of society, certain basal facts operate on mankind to bring humanity to common ground in their recognition. Among these are the universal religious instinct, the inevitable inter-dependence of one class on another, the elemental emotions making for a kinship of sympathy, the common proneness of men to err the common danger of weakness and temptation. This last is the most fundamental of the traits of human kinship.

And of all basal facts that level the barriers, perhaps the one that most directly apprises us of our democratic standing, that most unequivocally declares our essential equality, is the fact of our moral infirmity. How wide-spread the malady is. Every philosophy of life in the brains of great thinkers has taken account of it. Every sociological movement looking toward the betterment of society has reckoned with it. Every government has dealt with it, and there is no state in which valuables are not kept under lock and key and policemen do not patrol the streets. Art, too, bears witness to this curse upon human life. The last Judgment upon the walls of the Sistine Chapel, the symphonies of Beethoven, the oratorios of Handel, the operas of Wagner, are in testimony that the master painters and musicians have felt constrained to wrestle with this baneful factor. What philosophy has called evil, sociology has called vice, and government has called crime, and art has called ugliness, religion has called sin; and whatever the form of the faith, Christian or Pagan, its supreme effort has been to find some escape from this malignant power, some means of curing the wounded heel of the giant who has gone limping through the ages because of the bite of the serpent.

Nor do we look on merely as spectators. We are not in a play-house watching a drama. We are ourselves participators in the performance and it is intensely real. The blight of sin is upon us all. And with the reality of sin is inextricably mixed that other reality of guilt. The confession is forced from us of its own motion. The result? Separation. This is not mere theology, but the philosophy of life. It requires but little sinfulness in life to darken the face of God from our eyes and to obscure and confuse our beliefs.

Sin, guilt and separation! Forgiveness remains the one refuge. There is no fixed theory of atonement, but the path lies over Calvary, in which exists the supreme witness that sin is the same for all time and to the universal moral principle that purification and uplift are attained only at the price of the sufferings of innocence.

But forgiveness is not the end. It frees, but it needs watchfulness to protect also. Man forgiven is still in danger. A word trembled in the prayers of Jesus and fell from the pen of Paul, "Sanctification"—the indication of a life long progress. Those who are added to the church are "being saved". We are in a process of becoming. What then are the means by which we may accomplish our sanctification? First is the steadfast gaze at Christ. Bring the Christian ideal into the shop, the office, the store, the schoolroom, the parlor, the club, the street; keep before you in your life the life of Christ.

Again we must take the divine life indirectly through these personalities which refract the rainbow hues of beauty as through a prism.

In conclusion Dr. Dewey pleaded for prayer as a means to sanctification: that it was difficult to understand prayer, how the One who beholds end from beginning can be influenced by a human petition. But if prayer is a great mystery it is also a great reality.

SERMON BEFORE Y. M. C. A.

Sunday night Gerrard Hall was again filled with a large and appreciative audience to hear the annual address before the Young Men's Christian Association. Dr. S. C. Mitchell, of the faculty of Richmond College, Richmond, Va., was the speaker of the evening. He is prominent in the religious and educational life of Virginia.

After a scriptural reading by Dr. James D. Bruner, and prayer by Dr. Thomas Hume, Dr. Mitchell was introduced by Dr. Bruner. He took as his text St. John 9:4, "I must work the works of Him that sent me, for the night cometh, when no man can work."

Jesus was an extremely busy man. He busied Himself, however, not with things for selfish ends or material gain, but with things which are universal, concerning and involving the welfare of all men. The unity in His work springs out of a conscious principle.

We think of the will of God as an external, unchangeable, inexorable, law. Christ conceived it to be purpose. He merely asks of us that we co-operate with the divine purposes which are at work in the world, in history, in art, in science. Such co-operation will set free all our dormant self-initiative and crown our efforts with the dignity and power of purpose.

There are two conceptions of the world, fixity, and fluidity. When the man passes to the conception of fluidity he steps to the world of fresh and vigorous creativeness,

Here boundless possibilities await one. Jesus wanted to arouse in us the spirit of energy. He was surcharged with it himself and affected all who came in contact with him, inspiring them to action.

All these reasons for Christ's activity are equally applicable to you and me. Christ did four things for the blind man: he restored his sight, opened to him the possibility of a noble career, sacrificed business interests to go to his aid at once, in spite of the fact that the Jews had cast him out and it took moral and physical courage to have dealings with him; he revealed to him God in his own person. These were the works of God which were to be made manifest.

Can we, then, draw from Christ's works an idea as to the relative value of the efforts which we are to put forth with varying aims? God's schedule of occupations in order of value would probably be, first, the pursuit of truth. Truth is different from traditions, which can accomplish and sustain nothing. In the South party solidity and slavery have crushed out spontaneity. The second occupation in God's schedule would be the exertion of personal influence. Third would be deeds of mercy. The pursuit of truth should come first. Fourth, and last comes business. Most of us, it is to be feared, place business first. Christ would reverse that order.

The race-problem, which is facing the Southern people is admittedly the most nearly insoluble of the problems existing today. Its solution will demand all the patience, all the forbearance, all the statesmanship which Christianity can give. By the use of these we cannot fail. But victory and success will come not by might or by the sword, but by justice, sympathy, and mutual helpfulness.

INTERSOCIETY BANQUET

Save for the giant contest on the diamond between the Seniors and the faculty Monday lived up to its reputation as a day unmarked by stirring events. The only other feature was the inter-society banquet Monday night.

At 8:15 a long line of hungry individuals, both intellectually and physically, was loitering patiently in front of Commons Hall and when the doors were thrown open two hundred and fifty filed in.

Down the entire length of the hall two long tables stretched, joined by another at the farther end of the hall. And never in staid old Chapel Hill was there just such a banquet as the one which followed. The attendance of alumni was noticeably smaller than usual, but this was atoned for by the doubled attendance of the students.

Mr. John A. Parker gracefully acted the part of toast master.

Four student speakers endeavored to overcome the obstacles of unlimited space and speak to one hun-

Nine months ago the present board of editors assumed what they considered the high prerogative of shaping for a year the life of our college paper. Nine months ago we bade you "Hail" at the entrance into a new collegiate year. Today THE TAR HEEL, our TAR HEEL, greets you for the last time, not on this occasion to salute you but to bid you farewell forever.

It is a distinguishing characteristic of the life of the journalist (to give him his high-sounding name) to devote his entire existence to the discussion of other people's affairs, to the entire exclusion of himself and his interests. To do otherwise is, ordinarily, to violate if not the ethics of his profession, certainly the canons of good taste.

Even to the newspaper man, however, there come times when the rule which has guided him for years can be thrown to the winds, and "shop talk" be indulged in to his heart's content. The passage of any notable milestone in his career gives him the indisputable and undisputed right to cast a backward glance over the days that are gone and the work which has been done.

Such a time and such an occasion is this for us, and we claim our right today. We entered upon our task last fall with keen appreciation of the responsibility which is ever coordinate with privilege, with high ideals of what the paper ought to be, the part it should play within its sphere and what it should mean to the University. With unbounded confidence in the paper's possibilities, brimful of enthusiasm for the work we were and are today.

The task of editing a college newspaper is by no means the sinecure which the Freshman who looks only at the free pass feature may imagine that it is. Routine work there is and plenty of it. The demands made upon the college man's time are many and exacting. Often indeed to the college journalist comes the time when some of those varied demands simply must go unheeded. Add to this the absolute knowledge that if the paper comes out on the appointed day it will be because and only because he is resolutely determined that it shall. Imagine yourself in his place in the dead of the dull season, when only the whispering of the chill winds of winter and the faithful, periodic ringing of the college bell break the deathlike monotony of general inactivity. Picture yourself in his position, stared in the face by ten blank columns of space, awed by lordly demands from the lordly typo for "Copy," with the thought ever before you of having possibly to answer on Thursday a half condescending, half critical inquiry from every passer-by: "Why didn't your paper come out today?"

Is it so much wonder after all then that, thrown thus absolutely upon his own resources, the college editor often falls back upon the time honored precedent and exhorts the "fellows" or the "student body" to evidence their college loyalty? (We have tabooed the conventional term and will not print it even in quotations.) And does not now the free pass feature look like the proverbial sum of ten-and-twenty cents?

But all this is merely of routine. The position of college editor has requirements peculiar to it. He should be able to interpret college life, and this phase includes a great deal. The power to do it, if it comes at all, can come only through years of residence in the nerve centers of college activity. It is the power to analyse conditions, to size up correctly each movement or manifestation of this activity and assign to it its proper place. The man who can do these things perfectly and without making mistakes is of course an ideal and does not exist.

Never during our connection with this University has there been a year so replete with difficult problems for the faculty and the students to solve as the year which has drawn to a close. More than once has the College tottered on the very brink of chaos, when the rash or untimely word might have precipitated an upheaval, the results of which could not be foreseen. In at least two cases THE TAR HEEL's stand was taken and for the most part understood, by its silence. In another case the question was never discussed in these columns because the very nature of the situation would not permit it. In another case, one of friction between members of the baseball team and the faculty committee on athletics, the affair received one-half dozen lines. If it had continued one day longer, it would have deserved and should have had unlimited space. As a matter of fact the trouble blew over the same day the paper appeared. In that case, at least, we had correctly judged the situation. If we had done as some evidently expected us to do and devoted four or five columns to it, we should probably have felt decidedly "small".

But all these things are in the past today. The policy of this paper in every single case has been shaped by our conception of what was right and what was best for the institution as a whole, after viewing the entire matter in as fair a way as we knew. When this is established adverse criticism but breaks monotony and adds to the gayety of nations.

Of the paper itself we are scarcely competent to speak. The ideals which we had for it, of course, have not been realized. If there have been defects rest assured that we detected them long ere you and would have corrected them had it lain within our power.

The one thing, and the only thing, we have worked for has been to give the institution a paper worthy of it, not more a thought moulder than a thought inspirer. We have seen to it that, at any rate, not once has it failed to appear on time. We have tried (and believe we have succeeded) to keep it from degenerating into the common scold which most college papers become, we have sought to brighten its pages, to make it a paper looked forward to with interest and missed when it ceased to appear. To what degree we have succeeded we do not know, but as we look back over the year which is gone we have absolutely nothing to regret. Not by any means that the paper has ever been all that we wished, but simply that, handicapped by lack of time, by lack of mechanical equipment, not for money, but because we loved the paper and loved the work, we have put into its pages in season and out of season just about the very best there was in us.

To those who have been kind enough to say nice things about us we can only say that their encouragement has been of invaluable aid. If in any degree whatever we have deserved them, we are more than satisfied.

The editor-in-chief cannot lay aside his pen without giving expression of his gratitude to the members of his staff for their faithful cooperation with him. The knowledge of their sympathetic backing has ever been an inspiration to him. Special mention should be made of Mr. Manlius Orr for numerous snappy baseball articles, Mr. S. H. Farabee for several sketches of campus life, and Mr. W. D. McLean for indefatigable news gathering.

That is all. Our retrospect is over. There now remains nothing save the parting word. To each one of our circle of readers—you who have followed faithfully with us athletic victories, athletic defeats; you with whom we have rejoiced over victories and with whom we have consoled ourselves optimistically when defeated—this is our last Thursday morning's chat. To each and every one, God speed you and farewell.

It has practically been decided that the subscription price of the University Magazine for next year will be seventy-five cents instead of a dollar and a half. The change will be in the nature of an experiment; one which can result in but little financial loss, for the number of subscriptions is infinitesimally small.

The situation of The Magazine is somewhat peculiar. It is supported or subsidized by the debating societies who pay all the expenses of publication, the members in their turn receiving The Magazine free. It is plain that the publication is bolstered up, and that this is undesirable, but how it can be managed otherwise doth not yet appear.

However much literary talent the University possesses, it is obviously impossible for it to compete with professional writers. It is equally clear that the publication from its very nature lacks the local touch which makes possible the independent existence of the college weekly. And it is also as indisputable as either of the foregoing propositions that The Magazine must live. Without it our literary life would decay and the institution lose caste irredeemably in the educational world. There, sirs, is the situation. What make ye of it?

The conferring of honorary degrees by the University on the able presidents of our sister institution calls to mind a class of men who though few in number are equally deserving of recognition. When at the outbreak of the civil war the threatened South sent forth its call for defenders of its firesides, scores of students of the University answered the call, bidding the University farewell forever. The long years of privation and danger they fought through and the circumstances following the war precluded the possibility of their returning to receive their degree.

What could be more fitting than the conferring by the University on at least those who were seniors when they answered their country's call, of the coveted degree, earned a thousand times over by the years of sacrifice, of suffering, won by the stern discipline of a war unparalleled in history, discipline beside which that of the classroom pales into utter insignificance?

It is not a question of Latin and Greek. Honorary degrees stand in a general way for achievement and intrinsic worth. Why not give to the honored veterans, then, also, on the records of the academic school full credit for work nobly done in the school of life?

Virginia Takes Third Game

Four to Three Tells Tale

One Heart-Breaking Inning Undoes the Work of Eight Innings of Fine Ball Playing.

Carolina and Virginia met for the third time on the diamond May 3rd, and Virginia won the deciding game of the series after a desperate struggle by the score of 4 to 3. Upon the outcome of this game depended the championship of the South, for the other two games resulted in an even split, Carolina winning the first in Richmond 6 to 1 and Virginia the second in Charlottesville 9 to 0.

An enormous crowd had flocked to the Hill to witness the contest, and the dampness of the weather and the slowness of the grounds served in no way to dampen the ardor of the rooters. Bally Moore had his rooters well lubricated, and no better rooting was ever heard on these grounds. He made a fatal mistake, however, in easing up after the end of the eighth. The teams went upon a muddy field at three o'clock, the sun popped out five minutes after, and everyone realized something great would shortly be doing. And so there was.

Carolina jumped into the game from the start, and played the visitors off their feet, and soon had a comfortable and apparently safe lead. The beginning of the eighth inning saw Carolina three runs, Virginia none, Susong, Virginia's pitcher, evidently in distress, and Cunningham for Carolina working steady as a clock. Walker scored Virginia's first run on a gift, two steals, and an error by Harris.

Then came the awful ninth, when Carolina was retired without a run, and Virginia scored three runs and won the game without a hit, not even a semblance of a hit. No such inning has ever been seen here before, and no one ever wishes to see such a one here again. The reaction, from victory to defeat, was so sudden that it was hardly realized. The Varsity must be censured for its poor field work in this inning, and in the same breath Virginia must be praised for her "never say die spirit."

The game was featured by several good plays. Cunningham's superb pitching would win 9 out of 10 times against Susong's, as 4 hits to 10 tells their contribution to the sport. Three base hits by Story and Graham, Virginia's superiority on the bases, a catch by Walker for Virginia, and Carolina's unfortunate bunching of errors were the other features.

Calder reached third in the first running on an error, a sacrifice, and a passed ball, but two were down and Story went out pitcher to first.

Even a harder variety of luck was in store for the second, when solid singles by Cunningham, Rogers and Hanes failed to net a run. And thus for the next two innings.

Calder leads off in the fifth inning by walking, is detected stealing third by Chandler and caught.

Stem singles hard to right and goes all the way to third when Graham fails to intercede the sphere. Had Calder only remained at second! James's single to left scores Stem amid thunderous applause. Story hits to the fence for three bases and James scores. Cunny pops to Susong. Patterson scores Story with a single to right. Rogers retires the side by grounding to pitcher. Three runs, four hits.

Chalk up four zeroes for the sixth and seventh and one for Carolina in the eighth, Graham robbing Patterson of a home run by a wonderful catch of his line hit. For Virginia, with two down, Walker walks, steals second and third and scores when Harris flings Graham's grounder over Stem's head.

Ninth: Harris singles to center and is caught napping off the first cushion by a quick throw from Chandler. Calder fans and Stem fouls out to Chandler.

CAPTAIN FRED R. STEM.

How can we write Virginia's ninth—that night-mare?

Maddux hits a short fly between James, Harris and Hanes, which should be fielded. The ball drops safe and Mr. Maddux congratulates himself on getting to first at least once. Hoff hits an easy grounder to Cunny. A double play should have resulted but Harris and Patterson forget to cover second, and Cunningham, with ball in hand, allows both Maddux and Hoff to reach their destinations. The sight of the uncovered second bag, when a double was so clearly the play to make, seemed to paralyze completely Cunny's thinking powers, for he still had loads of time to catch Hoff, but—well.

Johnson hits in front of the plate. Rogers gets the ball, and in throwing to first base hits Johnson on the back, the ball rolling far into right field. Maddux scores. Hoff goes to third and Johnson to second. Three to two in Carolina's favor, Virginia with two men on bases, none out, Carolina seemingly up in the air and everybody uneasy and worried.

Woodson goes in to bat for Chandler and grounds out pitcher to first, Cunny holding Hoff and Johnson on the bases. Susong, according to precedent, hits in front of the plate, and again the slow grounder aids the visitors to win the game. Cunningham nabs the ball and tosses to Rogers too late to catch Hoff, who ties the score. Susong takes second. Lowler hits a high short fly to left. Hanes makes the catch all right, and Johnson shows his nerve by attempting to score after the catch. He gets away with it all right, for Hanes's throw comes in a second too late for Rogers to touch that nervy Johnson.

Thus Virginia won the championship of the South, and Carolina's money. A deathlike silence pervaded the atmosphere, and everyone hurried away to supper as quickly as possible.

ATALE OF YACKETY YACKS

Wherein is Told of Expert Financing, Scientific Booming and Unsatisfied Desire.

To begin at the beginning, you know the characters in our story. You cannot have spent a week on the Hill without having come in contact with an athletic-looking gentleman with business ability and energy written indelibly and legibly on every portion of his ruddy face. It must be that you know "John A." Nor can the manly form and the smiling or troubled countenance (it is always one or the other) of the towering Seagle have escaped you.

Ah! You have guessed what we are about. Yes, patient peruser of this present unpretentious production, this is a tale of Yackety Yacks and business managers.

Now the University annual has always been a great financial success—for the publishers—when they could collect the money. This year the organizations backing the enterprise decided, resolved and determined to positivize, if possible, this hitherto negative success. To this end they turned themselves inside, out—metaphorically speaking—in their search for material, finally lighting on our heroes. A new provision was entered, to-wit, that any and all profits should go into the pockets of the two financiers. The societies and the fraternities smiled in their vest pockets as they did so. They builded several times better than they knew.

Immediately on receiving their portfolios of state the two financiers removed their coats and got busy. Previous systems of working were wholly reorganized. Freshmen and Seniors were held up alike at the point of a fountain pen, and ordered to sign away their library and damage fees, in return for which they were promised an annual, gratis and without charge. All succumbed. The number of subscriptions and advertisements was three times that of the preceding annual. On every hand it was boomed. Into every pocket went the fingers of the industrious collectors who quickly won for themselves the title of "grafters".

The weeks rolled rapidly by. Commencement came on apace. One bright May morning flaming posters ushered in the last act:

YACKETY YACKS

Arrive Saturday, But Will Not Be Delivered Until All Space is Paid For. PARKER AND SEAGLE.

Like a thunderbolt from unclouded heavens came this announcement wrecking fondly cherished hopes. Saturday came, but no annuals, as far as the public was concerned. The managers were besieged with solicitous inquiries as to the financial condition of the enterprise, while law students gathered in knots, discussing the points of law involved.

The days rolled on, but the imprisoned volumes continued to be the center of college interest, heightened by weeks of waiting. Rumors that stray copies had been seen and were creations of beauty increased the danger of assault by mob violence on the quarters of "John A.," where the books were in custody.

It was on another May morning, equally bright that another poster appeared, copies being posted conspicuously in prominent places.

YACKETY YACKS

Delivered Tonight, 7:30, at My Room in Old East Building.

JOHN A. PARKER.

Great was the joy of the multitude when this became noised abroad. At six-thirty the campus was deserted. At seven it was alive with annual-seekers. In groups and droves they came, with shouting and singing. One room in the Old East was the magnet which drew them. In front of it they assembled and made known their wishes in no uncertain tones—but no "John A." was there.

"Old West Building, Old West!" came a cry.

The crowd bolted. Someone had made a lucky find, locating both "grafters" at a committee meeting. In a flash the room was packed with a jam of cheering humanity, while less fortunate ones crowded about the doors and windows.

With manner firm and collected the senior partner mounted a table.

"Gentlemen," he said solemnly, "this is simply a business proposition. You want the books. I want you to have them. When you have paid over the three hundred dollars yet owing, the Yackety Yacks are yours."

So saying, he stepped down from the table. But his auditors, who had listened patiently, even enthusiastically, seemed not to understand but shouted continuously:

"Yackety Yacks! Parker! Speech!"

But the crowd, though it hardly realized what was happening, broke in two as if a cannon ball had struck it, and a Varsity centre dashed through the door and out into the night.

Another form loomed up on the table, the towering physique of the junior member of the firm, his face wreathed in smiles.

"If you want a speech, fellows, you'll have to see John A. about it. And if it's Yackety Yacks you're after, you'd better see Mr. Mills. He's the man who posted the notices."

Another convulsive upheaval swayed the crowd backward, and a Varsity guard leaped catlike through the window.

Then the crowd discovered also that they had lost him who was the main object of their search, and pandemonium—slected. To his room they rushed. They pounded upon the doors. They rent the air with shoutings, giving vent to this unique yell:

"Yack-yack Ray Ray!
Yack-yack Ray Ray!
Parker! Parker!
John A.! John A.!!
Yackety Yacks! Yackety Yacks!
Yackety Yacks!"

Even this failed to soften his heart, for he was not there. For hours the multitude thronged the campus, calling his name, and would not be comforted; dashing at every passer-by of husky build, following out faithfully every clue, made sport of by many false alarms. All in vain, for Yackety-Yackless

"A BUSINESS PROPOSITION."

Senior Class Entertained.

The most delightful gathering of the Senior class for the entire year took place Saturday night, 19th, at the residence of Dr. Eric A. Abernethy, who will take his degree with the class.

The meeting was called to order and Mr. W. B. Love, the present president was elected president of the permanent organization. Mr. John A. Parker had previously been elected secretary and treasurer of the permanent organization.

Then came ice cream, cake and punch, followed by cigars. Finally the party gathered on the piazza and there went floating out into the night air the melodious notes of "Who built de ark?" "Brother Noah, brother Noah;" "Goodnight, My Sweet," and the others of the Senior repertoire. Then "Shorty" Burwell and "Rooster" Rudisell performed their vaudeville stunts. The one rendered "The Gentleman of Eno County" with much gusto, while the other crowed so naturally that every chanticleer in the neighborhood hung his head in shame.

Besides Dr. and Mrs. Abernethy there were present: Miss Annie Susan Johnston, Miss Penelope Cobb, Mrs. T. J. Wilson, Mrs. A. A. Klutz, and Miss Minnie Stansill, of Rockingham; Messrs. L. F. Abernethy, R. T. Allen, B. B. Blackwelder, R. M. Brown, E. S. Burwell, R. E. Calder, T. P. Cheshire, F. M. Crawford, A. C. Dalton, F. P. Drane, J. B. Goslen, W. L. Grimes, A. H. Hoyle, W. R. Jones, W. H. Kibler, H. W. Littleton, W. B. Love, W. H. L. Mann, H. W. McCain, R. W. McCulloch, T. G. Miller, S. T. Nicholson, J. A. Parker, J. E. Pogue, Jr., B. F. Royal, J. A. Rudisell, P. E. Seagle, W. M. Upchurch, Ben E. Washburn, F. M. Weller, J. Wallace Winborne, John G. Wood, Jr., and Victor L. Stephenson.

Dr. Herty Entertains.

Dr. Chas. H. Herty entertained the members of the Chemical Journal Club at his residence Thursday afternoon, May 17th, from 5:30 to 7:00. The following members of the club were present: Messrs. M. Orr, W. S. Dickson, A. H. Hoyle, Fred Stem, W. A. Houck, G. F. Leonard, W. S. Hunter, J. R. Allen, Hampden Hill, D. P. Tillett, R. P. Burns, Victor Williams, E. E. Randolph, A. S. Johnston, J. E. Pogue, Jr., E. V. Hicks, W. A. Ray, J. R. Newell, C. L. Miller.

Besides the member of the club, Misses Davie Allen, Margaret Alexander, Louise and Cantie Venable, Penelope Cobb, Mary Graves, May Hume, Dora MacRae, and Dr. and Mrs. R. O. E. Davis were also there.

Dr. Bruner's Book.

Of the numerous editions of Hugo's famous drama, "Hernani," the one recently issued by the American Book Company, under the editorship of Dr. Bruner is sui generis. As the production of this drama was a new departure in French theatres, so this edition of it is in several respects unique.

It is well known to the readers of Victor Hugo that his works abound in literary allusions. With him these assume various forms.

Sometimes it is only a thought borrowed from another, whether or not expressed in the thoughts of that other. It is evident, then, that a vast field is opened to one who would assume the task of tracing up and identifying these allusions to the works of others. In his edition of "Hernani" Dr. Bruner has undertaken and successfully carried out this plan. Consequently the drama as edited by him is a monument of painstaking research and literary erudition.

Accompanying the movement of the play is a very full running comment upon the action. The laws of dramaturgy as seen by the classicists and by the romanticists are contrasted in the application. The earmarks of the new Romanticism are indicated,—in verse, in diction, in characters, and in situations. In addition to this, the book is prefaced by a monograph on the theory of the Romantic drama, an account of the first performance of "Hernani" the plot, characters and language of the play, as well as the author's preface. These, with the vocabulary appended, bring the number of pages up to 264. It is a handsome octavo, bound in cloth with fleure-de-lis, published by the American Book Company, of New York.

Advisory Committee Advises.

At a special meeting of the athletic advisory committee in the President's office Thursday, May 10th sweaters were voted to the following new members of the baseball team: Rogers, Harris, Cunningham, Patterson, Story, Montgomery and Hanes. Stars were voted to Captain Stem, James and Calder.

The election of manager of the 1907 baseball team was taken up and Mr. W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr., was elected to this position. Mr. S. Winborne was elected captain of the track team and Mr. T. McNeil, manager.

President Howard, of the athletic association, moved that, beginning with this year, the profits accruing from THE TAR HEEL be divided equally between the editor-in-chief and the business manager. At present they are equally divided between the manager and the association. Up to 1903-04 all profits went to the manager. The point was made that the average chief editor, if he issues a paper worthy of the institution, must do fifteen or twenty times the work of the average manager.

The opinion was expressed, however, and that view prevailed, that since the association had allowed its name to be printed free on the first page of the paper it deserved at least one third of the profits. It was ordered therefore that hereafter the surplus be divided equally between the three. Since the manager of this year was clearly entitled to his half, however, it was decided that the equitable distribution for the current year is, manager one half, chief editor one fourth, association one fourth.

EXAMINATION. ENGLISH I, III.

1. Name the principal streets in the town of Yazoo. What famous writers were born there, and on what streets?

2. In the sentence, "John strikes Mary for pie," name the kind of pie referred to, and also give as near as you can the ad valorem tax on mules under the McKinley bill.

3. How do you account for the difference between a chestnut horse and a horse chestnut, and if so, what is your opinion of the police force of New York City?

4. Name the author of "Where Am I At?", giving Sudermann's theory as to where he was at.

5. What was the state of Kipling's liver when he used the words:
Where the flyin' fishes play,
On the road to Mandalay.

Were the fishes playing poker or football, and if poker what was the ante and limit? If football, how much did their right end weigh, and was their full back as good as "Abby?"

9. Write your parents' names and your own name in full, and give sufficient reason for not being named otherwise.

Optional: What is the poetical derivation of the word "Bohee," and what has that to do with the waist measure of a tonsorial artist? Did "Seat" use Bohee or White Lightning?

Pledge.

dred and twenty-five faces and one hundred and twenty-five backs. These were Messrs. V. L. Stephenson, Di; T. W. Simmons, Phi; W. S. O'B. Robinson, Jr., Phi; and A. C. Dalton, Di. The best of the speeches was by Mr. Robinson. It was keyed high, but witty to a daring degree, and made a decided hit.

Then the toast master introduced the alumni orator, Hon. Marion Butler. Calm and composed, with that unruffled and imperturbable countenance which has so often puzzled those who sought to read it, ex-Senator Butler rose and faced the crowd, which deserted the tables and massed themselves in his front.

Senator Butler began in a leisurely sort of the pickie in which he found himself, not knowing enough to tell us what he knew, not knowing too much to tell us what he did not know. He solved the problem of how to begin by reading copious extracts from the oration he delivered when he graduated.

In this he predicted what is now the present industrial life of the South. This introduced him to a discussion of the South for the past twenty-one years. Statistics, in plenty, he quoted showing wonderful progress, especially by North Carolina, which had outstripped every other State in the Union. This means that the South, and especially North Carolina, is pre-eminently the place for the educated young man, for the opportunities which await him are unparalleled.

Then the Senator narrowed the scope of his remarks and discussed college life, emphasizing the value of student government. After this he talked particularly and sincerely to the students about success. The keynote of it all was "Have courage!" The man who has this must have sincerity, self-respect and all the other qualities.

It is not brains but work and determination that wins in this world. There is no such thing as being limited by what God gave you. "His parting injunction was, 'Don't get mad. Don't talk too much.'"

The address, though unpretentious as to form, was listened to with the greatest interest, and did good.

CLASS DAY.

Tuesday morning the Seniors arose full of the knowledge that this day was their very own and determined to enjoy it to the fullest. At 9.30 the line of dark clad figures formed in line and marched into the chapel for the private prayer service, touchingly and inspiringly conducted by Dr. Thomas Hume.

At 10:30 the lords of all they surveyed again assembled, marched up the aisles and took their seats on the rostrum.

Mr. W. B. Love, president of the class, then delivered the address of welcome to the visitors. The class had entered college, he said, raw and undisciplined. But four years under cultured influences had wrought many changes. They had imbibed the true University spirit and now cherish the high ideals for which this institution stands. Great problems confront the South, but the class of 1906 will do her part towards solving them.

The class history was then read by Mr. Henry W. Littleton. He reviewed the events in the class's past life, proving conclusively that it was the best class that ever donned cap and gown. It had rendered assistance to the movement for class unity and had put out the best annual in the institution's history.

Then the president announced that the class would be favored by the reading of the class prophesy by Mr. Benjamin Franklin Royal. Then indeed did all eyes open and all necks crane forward, for the mystery of the future is ever with us and fortunate are they to whom the veil is lifted. Especially gifted are those who can utilize geometry in this most difficult task. Suffice it to say that nearly all reached high positions in life, including Pogur, Ray and Drame, who were blown up in a chemical explosion. Some were happily wedded before the mind's eye of an exulting audience.

Then Mr. P. E. Seagle ceremoniously made known the last will and testament of the rapidly decreasing class.

The next thing on the program was the presentation of the class gift, and Mr. J. A. Parker, class orator, was equal to the occasion. He didn't present any gift, but told how, why, when and where the class would present one. The how first: The class adopted the system started by last year's class. Different amounts were subscribed by the individual members to be paid each year for ten years. In 1916 (this is the when) the gift will be presented here at the class reunion. One hundred dollars has already been collected. It is expected that by 1916 the amount will equal in the neighborhood of two thousand dollars or more. The class has effected a permanent organization and it will be the duty of the treasurer to collect and invest these funds.

ALUMNI TAKE CHARGE

This closed the morning exercises of the Senior Class. The meeting was turned over to President Cunningham of the alumni association, who presented to the audience Mr. J. B. Robertson of the class of 1905. Mr. Robertson then fittingly introduced the alumni orator, Hon. Shepard Bryan. Mr. Bryan graduated in 1891, and has since won distinction as a member of the Atlanta bar. He is gifted with splendid physique, a strong voice and a forceful delivery. His address was

Mr. Bryan began by telling of the pleasure it was to him to breathe again the air of his native State. All that he was, he said he owed to the State and especially to the University. He dwelt upon the glorious history which the state had made, of the giant statesmen she had brought forth, of her unparalleled industrial development of recent years. Excuses were formerly made for our backwardness in industrialism, but no longer is this necessary.

Mr. Bryan delivered a splendid eulogy of this institution which like a light house warning the mariner of dangerous sands warns the people of North Carolina against the folly of ignorance.

ALUMNI LUNCHEON.

Promptly at the ringing of the dinner bell at 1:30 Commons Hall became the center of another congenial gathering, somewhat more informal than that of the night before. Here all the alumni on the Hill, including the graduating class assembled. No toasts were proposed until the courses were no more. Then brief speeches were made by Judge R. B. Albertson, of Seattle, Wash.; Dr. C. D. McIver, of the State Normal and Industrial College; Mr. Pruden, of the University of Virginia; Hon. Marion Butler, of Washington, D. C.; Mr. R. H. Battle, of Raleigh; Mr. Josephus Daniels, of Raleigh; Major J. W. Graham, Shepard Bryan, of Atlanta; Col. Paul Means, of Concord; Dr. R. H. Lewis, Mr. John Sprunt Hill, of Durham; James E. Page, of Raleigh; Mr. George Stephens, of Charlotte. Dr. Venable made his annual report, stating that $5,000 was lacking ere Carnegie's gift could be got. A movement was set on foot which has since resulted in the raising of a tidy sum.

Probably the most important—certainly the most picturesque—event of the day came Tuesday afternoon. Shortly after five o'clock the class formed at the well and proceeded to the old Davie, round which cling so many memories and traditions hallowed by decades. There on their exclusive territory, surrounded by a circle of friends, mothers and sweethearts intently watching every action, the members of the class of 1906 seated themselves in a circle.

Mr. A. C. Dalton then read the class statistics compiled by him and the distinctions voted by the class. They were as follows:

- Most popular man, Fred Crawford; Love second.
- Most intellectual man, Stephenson; Brown, second.
- Best looking man, Blackwelder; Burwell second.
- Best thinker, Love; Stephenson, second.
- Greatest ladiesman, Winborne; Miller second.
- Best dressed man, Dalton; Miller second.
- Hardest student, Brown; McCain, McLain, Weller, second.
- Wittiest man, Royal; Washburn second.
- Pious man, McCulloch.
- Best athlete, Winborne and Abernethy tie for first; Seagle second.
- Most universal man, Miller, Mann and Seagle tie for first; Love, second.
- Most truthful man, Weller; second, Love.
- Most dignified man, Kibler; second, Weller.
- The average age of the class was 21; height, 5 feet, 8 inches; size hat, 6 7/8; size shoe, 7.

- Heaviest man, McCain, 210.
- Lightest man, Grimes, 120.
- Wearer of biggest shoe, Balinson, Burwell and Seagle, 9.
- Wearer of smallest shoe, Grimes, 4 1-2.
- Tallest man, Burwell, 6 feet, 6 inches.
- Lowest man, Nicholson, Dalton and Calder, five feet, five inches.
- Nicholson and Burwell wear the biggest hat, 7 3/8.
- Miss Lambertson wears the smallest, 6 1/2.

After the reading of these, the president lit the pipe of peace which was passed round the circle, each drawing in a goodly whiff of smoke. Some were in the group who had never indulged before, and their handling of the pipe was not as refined as a diamond; and yet there were others who, because of the presence of father and mother, pretended to be more awkward than they were. After this the Seniors rose, massed together and sang, sang with power and feeling the old songs which they were wont to sing in the twilight till gathering darkness fell. "Carolina, Carolina, Heaven's Blessings Attend Her," and other songs, humorous, patriotic and sentimental rang out. A new one which took well was,

Horace, Tommy, Charlie Lee,
What y'e goin' to do when you grade me?
Read my paper, give me a five;
I'll stand it off just as sure as you're alive.
You know, I know I want a four.
I don't want to fool with your stuff any more.
Horace, Tommy, Charlie Lee,
What y'e goin' to do when you grade me?

When the singing was over one mighty "Yackety Yack," one mighty "Boom-Rah-Ray," with the class numerals on the end of each three times was given. The '06 benches were gathered up and laid down in front of the South Building, where soon they made a royal bonfire. The taking of the last drink at the college well ended the exercises of the afternoon.

THE DEBATE

The debate was presided over by Dr. Kemp P. Battle, while Mr. S. Rae Logan discharged the function of secretary. The judges were Judge Albertson, Ex-Senator Butler and Dr. Eben Alexander.

The query was, "Resolved, That the industrial interests of the United States would be best subserved by the extension of trusts as they are now controlled into all industrial lines."

The debaters were Messrs. J. B. Palmer and E. M. Highsmith, Phi, on the affirmative and Messrs. Roby C. Day and Stahl Linn, Di, on the negative.

Mr. Palmer opened for the affirmative side, saying the objective point of this discussion is the attainment of a system of production and distribution as nearly perfectly as possible. Now an institution to have the right to existence must be a normal product of its phase of life. Changing and progressive industrial conditions have caused the evolution of industry from the individual producer to the firm and to the small corporation.

This latter has failed and must continue to fail to meet modern business demands. The trust supplanted the small corporation because its perfect organization solves the great industrial problem. It is a normal product of business life, in answer to whose demands it has come.

Mr. R. C. Day followed on the

negative, saying that our progress has been toward the development of the individual and largely as such must it continue. Industry along with meeting the primary demands of human existence, is a great field, in which individual development must be promoted through individual effort. We are not exclusively individual but social; therefore organizations are natural trusts. If properly controlled they would be a normal result of economic forces, but the people must exercise a rigid control.

Mr. Highsmith closed for the affirmative, saying that it has been shown that trusts are the normal product of business evolution. Hence their extension is logical. Further, trusts have solved our two great problems by making our industrial welfare safe and universal. The first it has done by preventing panics and securing a large export trade. Great organizations are necessary to overcome foreign cheap labor. Universality has been secured by lowering prices, by increased efficiency.

Next came Mr. Linn on the negative, holding that it had been shown that first the individual is of chief importance in the development of civilization; second, that industry is an agent of civilization; third, that the function of industry is to promote welfare and prosperity. We contend further that present control is inadequate and that extension into all industrial fields is impracticable. It is an obvious fact that so-called trust legislation is insufficient. It is treated with open defiance and contempt by the trusts. Extension, secondly is impossible by reason of economic and sectional differences.

The debate was won by the negative.

After the debate the annual reception was tendered to students and visitors by the faculty in Commons Hall. The affair was not formal, quite a large crowd was present and all who went enjoyed themselves.

COMMENCEMENT DAY

But after all Wednesday was and is Commencement Day. To the Seniors Tuesday afternoon with its formal severing of class ties, with its reviving of old associations, straining heartstrings to the breaking point—all this was inexpressibly sweeter-sad than any other occasion could be.

And yet—to the world and especially to Orange county, Wednesday was Commencement Day. The man with the hoe discarded it and in every form of conveyance the country people flocked to the historic spot, dotting the campus with white dresses.

And so when the Seniors, following the band, marched in triumphal procession in front of the faculty resplendent in their gorgeous robes, it is probable that they felt just a little wee bit prouder of themselves than ever before in their life. The procession filed into the spacious Memorial Hall and the first crowd swept in through the doors.

Thus was enacted the same old scene of scores of years. On the platform the faculty, with self-satisfied looks on their faces; the Senior orators nervously yet eagerly awaiting their turn, their faces lighting up occasionally at the encouraging smile from mother or sweetheart; the cosmopolitan crowd, the the infant, "mewling and puking in its mother's arms," rendering by its lusty wail at critical times invaluable assistance to the orator until—the conventional remedy.

After the reading of thesis subjects the orations of the Senior class were in order. They were:

"Individuality in American Life"—Walter Bennett Love.

"The Privileges and Responsibilities of Scholarship in the South"—Perry Edgar Seagle.

"The South as a Field for Romance"—Barrie Bascom Blackwelder.

"The Forces that Make American Citizenship"—Walter Raleigh Jones.

W. E. JONES.

All the orations were good and were delivered with fire and force.

Dr. Venable then announced that Governor Glenn had had to cancel his engagement to deliver the Commencement address. He sent his kindest regards and best wishes to the class.

Dr. Venable filled his place admirably, delivering an address, packed full of lofty sentiments, expressed in beautiful sentences. The responsibility resting on them as men educated at the State's expense to pay it back to the State was emphasized. The object of education was not selfish, but to help others.

The president announced the following promotions:

Dr. C. L. Raper, Professor of Economics.

Dr. J. D. Bruner, Professor of Romance Languages.

W. S. Bernard, Associate Professor of Greek.

The following are additions to the faculty:

Dr. David H. Dallev, Professor of Pathology and Histology.

SENIORS DOWN FACULTY.

Anyone who went out to witness the Faculty-Senior game Monday May 4th expecting a burlesque only were badly disappointed. Though the game, which was won by the Seniors 6 to 4, was at times very amusing it was full of plays that would do credit to the national game. The Faculty under the leadership of Professors Graham and Howell entered the game with a determination to win, and for the first six innings of the game it looked as if they would win. They certainly had a surprise up their sleeves for the Seniors. Had the sun not been so hot, the strain on the Faculty's nerves so great, and the "exhaust" capacity of the Faculty so "early" (as is said of a man who in these days wears a short coat), the Faculty would probably have won, for Dr. Howell twirled an excellent game for them, and for seven innings had the Seniors on pins to find his puzzling delivery. He should have won his game, had it not been for errors on the part of the Faculty mates.

The Faculty opened up with a tally when Dr. Henderson ambled to first after being lovingly tapped by Crawford, stole second and scored on James' double down the left field foul line. Mr. James, who, by the way, is not a member of the Faculty, strengthened their team by his clever catching and base throwing. Howell ended this incoherent inning by ballooning to left.

The Seniors tied the score in the second when Jones, W. R., singled and got around on a single by Littleton and an infield out.

Nothing was doing until the fourth when after Howell and Curtis had fanned, Howe got around on his single on an error by Winborne of Coker's crack, and a timely hit by "Toime's Up" Wilson.

In the Faculty's half of the sixth Howe got first on third baseman's error, stole second, and came home on two wild pitches.

Wood came up for the Seniors, showed himself not incorruptible by accepting a free pass, took second on Winborne's single to left, and scored on Ham Jones' two bagger to center.

Cheshire, in the seventh, singled, went to third on two sacrifices and scored on Winborne's single to left.

Dr. Herty tallied the last run for the Faculty in the eighth. The Seniors scored one also in this inning on a series of errors. After this no more scoring was done.

Mr. Brown and Miss Cole Wed.

The home of Mrs. Mary E. Cole, in south Chapel Hill, was the scene of a quiet but attractive home wedding yesterday afternoon when Mrs. Cole's daughter, Miss Julia W. Cole, was wedded to Mr. Roy Melton Brown. Only a few intimate friends were present.

At 2:15 Miss Mary Gibson, of Gibson, struck up the wedding march, and the bride, clad in a stylish blue traveling suit trimmed in white, entered the parlor with her sister, Miss Mary Cole. Then came the groom with his best man, Mr. Hoyd Taylor, of Boone. The wedding ceremony of the Methodist church, conducted by Rev. M. T. Plyler, made them one.

Immediately after the ceremony the happy couple left for the home of the groom in Watauga.

The bride is an attractive young lady of genuine merit and will make an excellent helpmeet. Mr. Brown, who is the first of his class to marry, has made a brilliant record as a scholar, winning the presidency of the Phi Beta Kappa. His classmates and friends wish them the happiest of futures.
